BERKSHIRE, an inland co. of England, bounded on he N. by the river Thames, which separates it from the s. of Oxford and Buckingham; on the S.E. by Surrey, the S. by Hampshire, and on the W. by Wiltshire. extends in length from E. to W. about 42 miles, and s greatest breadth from N. to S. is about 30 miles. s form is very irregular, the north boundary following he remarkably winding course of the Thames from near ochlade to Old Windsor, a length of about 105 miles. he co. is about 165 miles in circuit, and comprises area of 705 square miles, or 451,040 acres. It lies etween 51° 20′ and 51° 48′ N. lat., and between ′ E. and 1° 43′ W. long. The name of the county is aced back through the older form Barkshire to the axon Barocscire, and the Roman name of a tribe which cupied part of the district—Bibroci. During the riod of the Roman dominion in Britain, this county rmed part of the division called by them Britannia rima. Under the rule of the Saxons, it was included the kingdom of Wessex. Part of it was seized and ld for a time by Offa, the ambitious king of Mercia. uring the latter years of the 9th, and the early part of e 10th centuries, Wessex, of which this county again rmed part, was invaded by the Danes, who got possesn of Reading in 871. Three battles were fought ithin a very short period, at the last of which the anes sustained a great defeat. It took place at Aescesn (Ash-down), and the Saxons were led by Ethelred. fred also was present on that occasion. The invaders, wever, shortly afterwards gained a victory over the xons, and Ethelred received a mortal wound. The unty suffered severely from the Danes in 1006, when ey laid it waste, and burnt the most important towns. battle was fought near the Kennet, and the Saxons ere defeated. During the civil war in the reign of ephen, Wallingford Castle, which had been erected on after the Conquest by Robert D'Oyley, one of the orman nobles who came over with the Conqueror, was rrisoned for the Empress Matilda, and was frequently sieged by Stephen, who did not succeed in taking it. furnished a safe retreat for Matilda when she had to it Oxford; and when the armies of Stephen and Prince enry met in 1153 beneath its walls, a truce was agreed with a view to a lasting peace, the conditions of hich were settled shortly after at a great council held Winchester. The castle, erected at Farringdon by bert, Earl of Gloucester, was taken and destroyed by phen. The castles of Wallingford and Windsor fell o the hands of John, when, taking advantage of the ence of his brother, Richard I., he came over from rmandy to raise a rebellion against him. But he only d them a short time. Conferences were held between ng John and the barons, in 1213, at Reading and Wallingford. In 1263 the barons, under Simon de Montford, took Reading and Windsor Castle, the latter being already a royal residence. Richard II. met the barons at Reading in 1389, when a temporary arrangement of their disputes was made. Berkshire was the scene of important military operations during the civil war of the 17th century. Each of the contending parties held throughout the war one of the two fortresses in the county; Windsor being garrisoned for the parliament, and Wallingford for the king. Prince Rupert made an unsuccessful attempt to gain possession of the former place, which was not attacked again during the war. Reading was at first in the hands of the parliamentary forces, but came into the possession of the royalists in the autumn of 1642. They were then masters of the whole county, with the exception of Windsor. In April, 1643, they lost Reading, being compelled to capitulate to the parliament. Five months later, the first battle of Newbury was fought, in which the Earl of Essex commanded on one side, and the king himself on the other. The result was indecisive. It was on this occasion that the amiable Lord Falkland was killed. The royalists got possession of Reading immediately afterwards, and dismantled the fortifications. Donnington Castle, near Newbury, was then garrisoned for the king, and was the object of numerous attacks. In 1644 the whole county, with the exception of Wallingford, was in the possession of the parliament. A second indecisive conflict took place at Newbury in October of that year. Abingdon was twice attacked by the royalists—in 1645 by Sir Stephen Hawkins, and the following year by Prince Rupert; on both occasions unsuccessfully. At the Revolution in 1688, a skirmish took place near Reading, and an affair of trifling importance occurred at Twyford. —Berkshire is one of the most beautiful counties of England, presenting in its scenery a charming variety of landscapes: the noble river Thames, with border of green meadows, lofty chalk downs, rich woodlands and copses, many small streams and broad pasture lands, picturesque villages, scattered farmhouses, and a great number of villas and residences of the gentry. The highest grounds are in the north-west, the most wooded in the south-east. A range of chalk hills, part of the same chain as the Chiltern hills, crosses the county from the Thames south of Wallingford in a westerly direction to Wiltshire. Their elevation gradually increases towards the west, and they rise at some points to a height of nearly 900 feet. The well-known White Horse Hill, not far from the border of Wiltshire, is one of the loftiest in the range—its height is 893 feet. These hills are mostly sheep-walks, only the eastern part of the range being susceptible of cultivation. To the south of this range is the broad valley of the Kennet, and to the north the valley of the Ock, or as it is usually called, the Vale of the White Horse. A low chain of hills extends along the northern part of the county, between the Thames and White Horse Vale. Windsor Forest, which formerly extended over the whole southern part of the county, and into the neighbouring counties, is now limited to the eastern corner, and since 1813 has been partly brought under cultivation. Its present area is about 60,000 acres, and is mostly enclosed. The Vale of Kennet, many parts of which are still well wooded, was included in the Forest until the year 1226, when it was disafforested. Oak, beech, and ash, are the principal trees, and the copses consist chiefly of hazel or alder.—The rivers of Berkshire are the Thames, the Kennet, the Lambourn, the Loddon, the Ock, the Auborne, and the Pang. The Thames is navigable throughout its course, along the border of this county, and receives the waters of all the other streams. The Ock rises near the western border, and receiving several tributary streams, runs by Stanford and Lyford to the Thames at Abingdon, having a length of about 20 miles. The Lambourn rises among the Lambourn Downs on the western border, runs in a south-easterly direction by East Garston, East Shefford, and Boxford, and after a course of 15 miles, joins the Kennet below Newbury. The Kennet, rising in Wiltshire enters this county at Hungerford, and pursuing first an easterly course by Kintbury, Newbury, and Thatcham, to Aldermaston, and thence a north-easterly course to Reading, falls into the Thames a little to the north-east of that town. Its length from Hungerford to the Thames is about 30 miles, and it is navigable from Newbury. The Loddon, which rises in Hampshire, and for a few miles forms the boundaries of the two counties, runs from Swallowfield in a north-easterly direction, by Arborfield and Hurst, to Wargrave, where it falls by several channels into the Thames. The Auborne, also called the Emborne, rising near Inkpen, flows eastward between Berkshire and Hampshire, and from near Brimpton north-east to the Kennet near Aldermaston. Its length is about 18 miles. The Pang runs from the hills near East Ilsley, by Bucklebury and Bradfield, to Pangbourn, where it falls into the Thames.—The climate of Berkshire is considered very healthy,—bracing on the chalk downs, mild in the valleys, and pure everywhere. The numerous streams which flow through the county contribute to the purity of the air. Chalk, which rises into lofty hills in the north-west, is believed to form the substratum of the greater part of the county. In some places a very thick deposit of clay covers the chalk. Limestone underlies the White Horse Vale, which is famed for its fertility. The Vale of Kennet is less fertile, but highly cultivated. It contains a large extent of fine meadow land. A bed of peat is found below the meadows in the neighbourhood of Newbury. Large quantities of it are cut and burnt, and the ashes used as manure. The low hills between the Thames and the valley of the Ock consist of oolite and shell-sand, gritstone and clay; and detached blocks of gritstone are found scattered over the downs. They are called locally the "Greywethers." The poorest soil is found in the Forest division, especially at Bagshot Heath and the vicinity. The finest corn crops are produced in the Vale of the White Horse and the Vale of Kennet. There are large and very productive market-gardens in the neighbourhood of Reading, the asparagus of which is in great repute. The farms are generally of moderate size, and are let on lease for seven or fourteen years. The cattle are of various breeds —the Devon and Yorkshire being common. Many Alderney cows are imported. The Berkshire pig is a superior breed, of black colour spotted with white, of moderate size, and small of bone. The sheep are now mostly of the Leicester and South Down breeds, which have superseded the native coarse breed, and also the Merino. Large and important sheep fairs are held at Ilsley twice in the year.—Berkshire is divided into 20 hundreds, viz.: Beynhurst, Bray, Charlton, Compton, Cookham, Faircross, Farringdon, Ganfield, Hormer, Knitbury-Eagle, Lambourn, Moreton, Ock, Reading, Ripplesmere, Shrivenham, Sonning, Theale, Wantage, and Wargrave. At the period of the Norman survey there were 22, Windsor and Wallingford being the two additional ones. The county contains about 150 parishes, including the 12 market towns of Abingdon, Reading, Wallingford, Windsor, Maidenhead, Newbury, Wokingham, Farringdon, Hungerford, East Ilsley, Lambourn, and Wantage. Of these the first four are parliamentary boroughs. Reading is the county town. The assizes are held at Reading and Abingdon. The latter is the place of election for the county, the nomination of members taking place at Reading. The polling places are, besides Reading and Abingdon, Farringdon, Newbury, Wantage, Wokingham, Maidenhead, and East Ilsley. The first six of these towns, with Hungerford, Wallingford, Windsor, Bradfield, Cookham, and Easthampstead, are the seats of the 12 Poor-law Unions into which the county is divided. There are eight new County Court districts, these of Reading, Abingdon, Farringdon, Hungerford, Newbury, Wallingford, Windsor, and Wantage. Berkshire has a population, according to the census of 1861, of 176,103, and returns nine representatives to parliament: three for the county, two for Reading, two for Windsor, and one each for Abingdon and Wallingford. The government of the county is vested in a lord lieutenant, 40 deputy lieutenants, a high sheriff, and a body of magistrates about 150 in number. It is included in the Oxford circuit. It forms an archdeac. in the dioc. of Oxford, and prov. of Canterbury, and is subdivided into four rural deaneries, viz., Abingdon, Newbury, Reading, and Wallingford. It contains nearly 140 benefices, and 35,880 inhabited houses, according to the census of 1861.—Berkshire is an agricultural county, and has no important manufactures. There are, however, cotton factories and paper-mills at Newbury and Bagnor, a blanket manufactory at Thatcham, and several establishments for the making of sheeting, sail cloth, floor-cloth, ribbons, &c., at Reading. The antiquities of the county are numerous. The ancient Roman Road from Gloucester to London passes through Berkshire, from a point near Lambourn to Speen, where the road from Bath probably joined it. The course of Icknield Street, which also passed through the county, is uncertain. Several Roman stations existed in Berkshire, but their sites are doubtful. The village of Speen near Newbury, is, however, proved to be the Roman... There are many remains of ancient camps, of which the principal are Letcomb Castle, Uffington Castle, and Hardwell Camp. The first is a circular work with double rampart, on the downs near Lambourn, and extends over an area of 26 acres. Uffington Castle, on the top of White Horse Hill, is of an oval form, 700 feet in length from E. to W., and 500 feet in breadth from N. to S. A double rampart surrounds it. Hardwell Camp, quadrangular, with two ramparts, is near the former. Other encampments are found near Farnham, Easthampstead, Ashdown Park, Wittenham, and Lambourn. That near Easthampstead is of considerable size, and is called "Cæsar's Camp." That near Ashdown Park is circular, and is called "Alfred's Castle." The county contains tumuli, of which the most remarkable are Wayland Smith's Cave, and the Dragon Hill. The name of the former, and the popular tradition associated with it, of which Scott makes use in his "Kenilworth," are traced back to a Scandinavian origin. The barrow situated on the hills near Wiltshire is covered with massive stones, some being disposed in the manner of a cromlech. On the same range are the "Seven Barrows," and the singular "Blowing Stone." The latter is a small rough block of sandstone, with holes in it of unequal size. The sound produced by blowing into some of these openings may sometimes be heard two or six miles off. Berkshire has not many remains of feudal castles. For an account of Windsor Castle, see the article WINDSOR. The ancient fortresses at Reading, Newbury, and Farringdon, have so entirely perished that it is scarcely possible to determine where they stood. A gateway with towers is all that is left of the former castle of Donnington. Extensive entrenchments also exist at Wallingford, but of the castle nothing remains but a small part of the wall. Berkshire was the seat of many religious establishments, including three of the rank of "greater monasteries," but the remains of the buildings are generally slight and unimportant. The principal houses were the united abbeys of Reading and Abingdon. Other abbeys were founded at Bisham, Bradfield, and Farringdon, and priories at Bisham, Cholsey, Harley or Lady Place, Farringdon, Reading, &c. There were also two preceptories of the Knights Hospitallers, several colleges and hospitals. Of the churches, which are usually of small size, the following are the most interesting: Avington, an example of Norman architecture; Lambourn, of the same; Uffington, of the early English style; Shottesbrook, a very small and beautiful cruciform building in the decorated style, with a central tower and spire; Wolford, Barkbury, Great Shefford, &c. St. George's Chapel, Windsor, is the finest specimen of the perpendicular style. The county contains several interesting old mansions and manor houses. One of the most ancient is that of Appleton, partly belonging to the reign of Henry III. Others are at Aldermaston, Cumnor where the murder of Amy Robsart was perpetrated, Ockholt, Wickham, Little Shefford, &c. The White Horse, which has given name to a hill and the valley district which they form, is one of the most remarkable antiquities of Berkshire ) is a gigantic figure of a horse galloping, formed by moving the turf and surface soil, on the steep side of the hill. It is nearly 400 feet in length, and under favourable conditions is visible at a distance of ten or twelve miles. The "scouring of the White Horse," i.e. cutting away the encroaching turf, which takes place every three years, is the occasion of a rustic festival. A very high antiquity is assigned to this singular work. Besides the royal residence of Windsor Castle, Berkshire contains a great number of seats of the nobility and gentry. Among the principal of them are the following:—Wytham Abbey, the seat of the Earl of Abingdon; Ashdown Park and Hampstead Marshall, seats of the Earl of Craven; Coleshill House, the seat of Earl Radnor; Billingbear Park, of Lord Braybrooke; Sandleford Priory, of Lord Rokeby; Beckett Park, of Viscount Barrington; Basildon Park, of Sykes, Bart.; Benham House, of Rich, Bart.; Bear Place, of Ximenes, Bart.; Stanlake, of Dukinfield, Bart.; Warfield House, of Walsh, Bart.; Lockynge Park, of Martin, Bart.; Aldermaston House, Barton Court, Bear Wood, Binfield, Basham Abbey, Donnington Castle, Englefield House, Faldworth, Swallowfield House, &c. &c.—The principal Railway in Berkshire is the Great Western, which enters at Maidenhead, and passes by Twyford, Reading, Wallingford Road, Didcot, and Steventon, to Swindon in Wiltshire; running nearly parallel with the Thames as far as Didcot. From Didcot a branch line runs to Oxford and Birmingham. Several branch railways run from Reading: one through Theale to Newbury and Hungerford; another by Mortimer to Basingstoke, on the South-Western line; one to Guildford and Reigate, by the South-Eastern and Brighton railways; another by Wokingham to Staines. Windsor is connected by short branch lines with the Great Western and South-Western railways; and from Maidenhead a branch of the former runs to High Wycombe.—Berkshire is crossed by the great roads from London to Bath and Oxford, which enter at Maidenhead, whence the former runs by Reading, Newbury, and Hungerford, into Wiltshire; and the latter quits the county near Henley. Other roads are from Reading to Streatley, Wallingford, Abingdon, and Oxford, a distance of 28 miles; from the same place, by Streatley and Upton to Wantage, past the White Horse Hill, to Ashbury and Swindon, 41 miles; from Reading to Wokingham, and by Sunninghill and Windsor Park to Staines; and several others.—This county is intersected by two important canals, the Wilts and Berks, and the Kennet and Avon canal. The length of the former, from the Thames near Abingdon, where it commences, to the border of Wiltshire, is about 20 miles. Its course is through the Vale of White Horse, past Wantage, Uffington, and Shrivenham. It attains a level about 160 feet above that of the Thames at Abingdon, and meets the Kennet and Avon canal near Melksham. Of the latter, about nine miles are in Berkshire, from Newbury, where it meets the Kennet, to Hungerford. It is connected with the Avon near Bath.

BERKSWELL. See BERKESWELL, Warwickshire.

BERKSWICK. See BASWICK, Staffordshire.

BERMONDSEY, a par. within the borough of Southwark, in the hund. of Brixton, and co. of Surrey, forming part of the suburbs of London on the south-east side. It is situated on the south bank of the river Thames, and is intersected by the London Bridge railways. It is a very ancient parish, and its name is but slightly changed from its original Saxon form of Burmundeseye. At the time of the Norman survey it was a royal demesne, and became an occasional residence of the Conqueror and his successor. At that period it contained 25 villeins, or servile husbandmen, and 24 bordemanni, or cottagers. A Cluniac priory was founded here in 1082 by Aylwin Child, a citizen of London, as a cell to an abbey in France. It was endowed by William Rufus with the manor of Bermondsey, and by Henry I. with the manor of Rotherhithe and Dulwich, and the royal palace erected by his predecessor. Part of the palace was, however, retained; and King John afterwards occupying it, it acquired the name of King John's Palace. The wealth and importance of the monastery increased, and two hospitals, dedicated to St. Thomas and St. Saviour, were subsequently attached to it. In 1380, it was made denizen by Edward III., who appointed an English prior; and in 1399, it was erected into an abbey by Boniface IX. The establishment continued to flourish till the Dissolution, when it had a revenue of £548. The buildings covered a large space of ground, but there are no remains of them existing—the last portion, a gateway, having been taken down about 1810. Two queens spent their last days in this abbey—Catherine, widow of Henry V., who died here in 1437, and Elizabeth, queen of Edward IV., who, being deprived of her property by Henry VII., passed her last days in the nunnery in solitude and poverty. Soon after the Dissolution, the site was purchased by Sir Thomas Pope, who took down the abbey church, and built a mansion in its place. The mansion became the seat of the Earls of Sussex, one of whom died there in 1583. Several eminent persons were interred in the abbey church—William de Morton, Earl of Cornwall, in the reign of Henry I.; Margaret de la Pole, who died in 1473; and the widow of John, Lord Audley, in 1497.—The town gradually rose around the monastery. The inhabitants were numerous enough in the reign of Edward III. to require a church; and the prior erected one for their use. The town has two principal streets diverging from the church, and crossed by many smaller ones. Many modern buildings are now intermixed with the ancient houses, and the streets are paved and lighted with gas. According to the Official Tables for 1861, there were at that time, 8,211 inhabited houses, with a population of 58,355, showing an increase of 10,227 in the last ten years; the excess of registered births over deaths for that period being 7,903, and the remainder due to immigration from the country.—The neighbourhood is flat, and part of the land is laid out in market-gardens. Bermondsey is the seat of numerous important trades and manufactures, the chief of which are the leather and wool trade. In the preparation of leather and skins about 900 hands are employed. The Bermondsey tanners were incorporated by a charter granted by Queen Anne in the second year of her reign. Ship-building is carried on, and the connected branches of rope-making, sail-making, &c. Other manufactures are those of brushes, corks, glue, paper, parchment and vellum, &c. There is a spacious market for the sale of leather. Bermondsey is the seat of a Poor-law Union, which is co-extensive with the parish itself.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, of the val. of £300, in the patron. of Mrs. Ram. The church, a plain edifice with a low tower, was erected in 1680 on the site of one of great antiquity. It is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. Three new churches have been erected. One in 1829, in the Spa-road, dedicated to St. James, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £200, in the gift of the rector of the parish. The church was built from a design by Savage, and is in the Grecian style of architecture. The other two churches are dedicated to Christ and St. Paul respectively. The former was erected in 1848. The livings of both are perpet. curs., each of the val. of £200, and in the alternate patron. of the crown and the bishop of the diocese. There are chapels belonging to the Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, and other Dissenters. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £490 per annum. The principal foundations are the free school, and the united charity schools. The former was founded in 1709 by Josiah Bacon, for the instruction of 60 boys, and has a revenue of about £210; over the entrance to the school-house, which stands in the Grange-road, is a statue of the founder. The latter was founded a few years later, and is supported chiefly by subscription—its income from endowment being about £100 per annum. The pupils consist of 220 boys and 130 girls. The site of the pleasure-grounds, established on the discovery of a chalybeate spring in the Spa-road, in 1770, is now built over. A branch sewer runs from Bermondsey to join the main, and at the point of junction is a 5½ feet barrel sewer. Here is a new pier for the river steamboats.

BERMONDSPIT HUNDRED, one of the 48 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Southampton, situated in the north parliamentary div., and bounded by the hund. of Stoke on the N.; by the hunds. of Odiham, Crondall, and Alton on the E.; by the hunds. of Alton and Fawley on the S.; and by the hund. of Mainsborough on the W. It is divided into two parts, upper and lower. The upper div. contains the pars. of Bentworth, Bradley, Ellisfield, Herriard, Lasham, Upton Gray, Weston Corbet, and Weston Patrick, and has an area of about 16,000 acres. The lower div. contains the pars. of Candover, Drummer, Farleigh, Wallop, Nutleigh, and Popham, and has an area of about 10,200 acres.

BERNE, a quarter in the par. of Whitchurch Canonicorum, hund. of the same name, in the co. of Dorset, 4 miles to the N.W. of Bridport.

BERNERA, one of the islands composing the par. of Barra, Inverness-shire, Scotland. The lofty cliffs on the eastern side of this island are frequented by great numbers of sea-fowl, which furnish an abundant supply of food to the inhabitants. On Barra Head, on this island, stands a lighthouse, the light of which is 680 feet above the sea. It was erected in 1833, and displays an intermittent light.

BERNERA, an island in the par. of Harris, Inverness-shire, Scotland. It is situated 1 mile N. of North Uist. Its length is 3½ miles, by 2 in breadth. The minister of the church here has charge of all the islands in the Sound of Harris.

BERNERA, BIG and LITTLE, two islands in the par. of Uig, Ross-shire, Scotland. The former is 5 miles long by 2 broad, and is situated on the W. of Lewis. There are several remarkable Druidical circles.

BERNERS, ROOTHING. See ROOTHING-BERNERS, Essex.

BERRACH, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfihangel Aberbythych, hund. of Iskennen, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 2 miles from Llandilofawr.

BERRICK-PRIOR, a lib. in the par. of Newington, and hund. of Ewelme, in the co. of Oxford, near Berrick-Salome.

BERRICK-SALOME, a par. in the hund. of Ewelme, in the co. of Oxford, 4 miles to the N.E. of Wallingford, its post town. It is near the river Thames. The living is a perpet. cur. attached to the vic. of Chalgrove, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Helen. The charitable endowments, including the income of a small free school, amount to £12 per annum.

BERRIEDALE, BERRINDALE, or BARRYDALE, a vil. and quoad sacra par. in the par. of Latheron, in the co. of Caithness, Scotland, 5 miles to the S.W. of Dunbeath. It is seated on the sea-coast, at the mouth of Berriedale Water, which, after a course of about 15 miles from the confines of Sutherlandshire, where it takes its rise, falls into the North Sea at this place. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries. The living, of the val. of £120, is in the presb. of Caithness, and in the patron. of the crown. Here also is a Free church. Berriedale Castle, the ruins of which stand on a rugged rock near the village, was formerly the seat of the Sutherlands, to whom the district belonged. It gives the title of baron to the Sinclair family.

BERRIER and MURRAH, a tnshp. in the par. of Greystoke, Leath ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 7 miles to the W. of Penrith. There is a small school for girls, erected in 1828, and endowed by Mary Jackson with £5 a year.

BERRIEW, or ABER-RHIW, a par. chiefly in the hund. of Newtown, but partly also in the hunds. of Cawrse and Pool, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 3 miles to the N.W. of Montgomery. Shrewsbury is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Rhiw, at its confluence with the Severn, and contains the tnshps. of Allt, Brincamisir, Brithdir, Ffrydd, Garthmill, Keel, Kelcoedhwyn, Llandinir, Llivior, Penthryn, Trwstywelin, and Vaynor Issa, and Ucha. The Rhiw is crossed by an aqueduct of four arches, along which is carried the Montgomery canal. The manufacture of flannel is carried on by some of the inhabitants, but not to any considerable extent. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, of the val. £356, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, a modern edifice, is dedicated to St. Beuno. The Independents, and Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists have chapels here. There is a free school, originally founded by Humphrey Jones in 1652, which has an income from endowment of about £90 per annum. The parish has the benefit of several other charitable bequests, which produce about £35 a year. The principal seat is Vaynor Park, pleasantly situated on high ground, and well wooded. Other residences are Glan Severn and Heilin. Fine landscapes, river, valley, villages, woods and mountains lie within view from the high grounds of this parish. There are remains of two ancient encampments, and other ancient works. Petty sessions are held at the village once a month.

BERRINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kyloe, Islandshire, in the co. of Northumberland, 5 miles to the S. of Berwick-on-Tweed.

BERRINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Chipping Campden, hund. of Kiftsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, close to Chipping Campden.

BERRINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Condover, in the co. of Salop, 5 miles to the S.E. of Shrewsbury, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Severn. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £393, in the patron. of Lord Berwick. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

BERRINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Tenbury, in the hund. of Doddingtree, in the co. of Worcester, 2 miles to the W. of Tenbury. It is seated on the border of Shropshire, on the south bank of the river Teme, and has a station on the Shropshire and Hereford railway.

BERRON, a tnshp. in the par. of Llannefydd, hund. of Isaled, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 6 miles from Denbigh.

BERROW, a par. in the hund. of Brent with Winscton, in the co. of Somerset, 9 miles to the W. of Axbridge. Bridgwater is its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the east coast of the Bristol Channel, a little to the south of Berrow Head. It has a fine sandy beach, about a mile in breadth, and dry at low water. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the val. of £186, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Wells. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BERROW, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 7 miles S.E. of Ledbury, its post town, and 8 miles to the S.W. of Upton. It lies in a detached part of the hundred. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, of the val. of £100, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Faith, has a square tower, and was completely restored in 1850. There is a National school. The parochial charities amount to £13 per annum. In Berry Court, which is now a farm-house, there are some fine specimens of wood carving. The village is a meet for the Ledbury hounds.

BERRY GREEN, a hmlt. in the hund. of Edwinstree, in the co. of Hertford, near Bishop's Stortford.

BERRYN-ARBOR, a par. in the hund. of Braunton, in the co. of Devon, 8 miles to the N. of Barnstaple. Ilfracombe is its post town. It is situated on the south coast of the Bristol Channel, near the pleasant watering-place Ilfracombe. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £715, in the patron. of the bishop and others. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. This village was the birth-place, in 1522, of Bishop Jewell.

BERRY POMEROY, a par. in the hund. of Hayter, in the co. of Devon, 2 miles to the E. of Totnes, its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the eastern side of the river Dart, not far from the coast of Tor Bay, and includes the tnshp. of Bridgetown. This parish takes the name Pomeroy from a Norman family, to one of whom, Ralph Pomeroy, numerous manors in this county were granted by William the Conqueror. The manor of Berry was the principal one and was the head of the bony. A castle was erected here soon after the Conquest. The scenery of the neighbourhood is remarkably picturesque. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £360, in the patron. of the Duke of Somerset. The church, which contains a screen beautifully carved, a rood-loft, and several monuments of the Seymours, ancestors of the Duke of Somerset, is dedicated to St. Mary. The vicarage was held by John Prince, author of the book entitled "The Worthies of Devonshire," and who died here in 1720. The remains of the castle, consisting chiefly of the south front, stand on a hill rising steeply from a branch of the river Dart, which flows along a narrow valley, and a lofty ridge of hills richly covered with oak woods rises on the opposite side of the valley. This castle remained in the possession of the founder's family till the reign of Edward VI., when it was purchased with the manor of Berry by Edward Seymour, first Duke of Somerset, from whom it has regularly descended to the present noble owner. It was burnt down during the civil war in the reign of Charles I. The village is a meet for the South Devon hounds.

BERSHAM-DRELINCOURT, a tnshp. in the par. of Wrexham, and hund. of Bromfield, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 1 mile from Wrexham. It is situated on the banks of the river Clwydog. Iron, lead, and coal abound in the district, and a large number of hands are employed in the extensive works which have long been established here. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, of the val. of £90, in the patron. of the bishop. The church bears the name of Capel Madam. A free school was founded in 1762 by the Viscountess Primrose, for the education and maintenance of ten girls. The endowment produces £206 per annum, part of which is for the support of the church. Wat's Dyke passes near this township.

BERSTED, NORTH, a tythg. in the par. of South Bersted.

BERSTED, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Aldwick, rape of Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, 5 miles to the S. of Chichester. Bognor is its post town. It is situated on the coast of the English Channel, and includes the market town of Bognor, and the tythgs. of North Bersted and Shripney. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, of the val. of £214, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, and contains a monument to Sir R. Hotham, by whom the town of Bognor was founded in 1790. In addition to the parish church there is a district church at Bognor, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £107, likewise in the patron. of the archbishop. Bersted Lodge is one of the principal residences.

BERT. See BURT, Donegal.

BERTHLWYD and BRYNHAFOD, hmlts. in the par. of Llangathen, hund. of Cathinog, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 3 miles from Llandeilofawr.

BERTHOLEY. See LLANTILLIO PERTHOLEY, Monmouthshire.

BERTRAM SHOTTS. See SHOTTS, Lanarkshire.

BERVIE, or INVERBERVIE, a par. and market town in the co. of Kincardine, Scotland, 88 miles to the NE. of Edinburgh. It is situated on the south bank, and near the mouth, of the river Bervie, which has a course of about 15 miles from Glenbervie, where it rises, to the S. This town is about to be a station on the Scottish North-Eastern railway. The par. includes the vil. of Gourdon. Bervie was constituted a royal burgh by a charter of David II., granted in the year 1362, and renewed by James VI. The occasion of granting the charter is said to have been the kindness shown the king by the inhabitants when he was shipwrecked on their coast. The government of the burgh is vested in a provost, 3 bailies, a dean of guild, and 9 councillors. Its revenue is about £150. It is also a parliamentary burgh, one of those contributory to Montrose in the election of one representative. The town is very irregularly built, and some of the inhabitants are employed in linen-weaving and the fisheries. The river contains trout and salmon, and is crossed by a one-arched bridge. Bervie Brow is a promontory at the mouth of the river, opposite the town, and is locally called Craig David, in memory of the king's landing at that spot in the storm. Bervie Hill rises to the height of about 400 feet. The living, which is of the val. of about £142, is in the presb. of Fordoun, and in the patron. of the crown. Hallgreen Castle is the principal seat. The market is held on Wednesday, and fairs on the Thursday before the 19th May and September, the Wednesday before the 22nd November and Christmas (old style).

BERWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanelly, and hund. of Carnwallon, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, not far from Llanelly. It contains some ruins of a church.

BERWICK, a vil. in the lib. of Frampton, in the co. of Dorset, 4 miles to the S.E. of Bridport. It is seated on the coast of the channel.

BERWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Atcham, and hund. of South Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles to the S.E. of Shrewsbury. It is situated on the banks of the river Severn.

BERWICK, or LITTLE BERWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Mary, Shrewsbury, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles from Shrewsbury. The living is a perpet. cur., of the val. of £54, in the patron. of the Earl of Tankerville and others. The principal mansion is Berwick House, the seat of the Hon. H. W. Powys.

BERWICK, a par. in the hund. of Longbridge, rape of Pevensey, in the co. of Sussex, 7 miles to the S.E. of Lewes, its post town. It lies in a pleasant country on the west bank of the river Cuckmere, and is a station on the Brighton and South Coast railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, of the val. of £362, in the patron. of J. Ellman, Esq. This par. forms part of the Duchy of Lancaster.

BERWICK, or BARWICK-BASSETT, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Calne, in the co. of Wilts, 7 miles to the N.E. of Calne, and 7 S. from Wootton Bassett railway station. Swindon is its post town. The river Kennet passes at a short distance from the village. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £40, and in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has been recently repaired, and the tower and chancel rebuilt. It contains a very ancient font and a handsome rood-screen of carved oak. There is a free school, founded in 1775, with a small endowment, and a National school.

BERWICK HALL. See BARWICK HALL, Essex.

BERWICK HILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Ponteland, Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 6 miles to the S. of Morpeth.

BERWICK-IN-ELMET. See BARWICK-IN-ELMET, Yorkshire.

BERWICK, NORTH, a par. and burgh in the co. of Haddington, Scotland, 9½ miles to the N.W. of Haddington, and 22 miles to the N.E. of Edinburgh. It is in a secluded situation in the north corner of the county, on the south coast of the Frith of Forth, and has recently become a much-frequented watering-place. The surface is generally level, the soil fertile and well cultivated. The surface rests upon red sandstone and trap rock. The town consists chiefly of two streets at right angles to each other, in the form of the letter T. It received a charter from Robert III., under which, confirmed by James VI., it is a royal burgh, governed by 2 bailies and 12 councillors. It is also a parliamentary borough, contributory with three others to Haddington in returning one member. The population of the parliamentary burgh in 1851, was 863; in 1861, 1,164, with 198 houses and 233 children at school. The neighbouring coast is rocky and dangerous, and the harbour of North Berwick difficult of approach. It has a good pier, but is only a tidal harbour. There is a large new hotel and a reading-room in the town; and of late years many houses have been built for the accommodation of visitors. The living is in the presb. of Haddington, and in the patron. of Sir Hew Dalrymple, chief heritor. The church has recently been enlarged, and there are four other churches, besides Free and United Presbyterian churches, and an Episcopal chapel recently opened. Near the town on the south is North Berwick Law, a conical hill rising to the height of 800 feet. Its eastern side is a gradual slope, and covered partly with wood: its western and southern sides are steep and rugged. Not far off is North Berwick House, the fine seat of Sir Hew Dalrymple. Two miles to the north-east of the town, on the brow of the sea cliffs, are the ruins of the famous and formidable castle of Tantallan, once the seat of the Douglases. It is not known at what time or by whom this fortress was erected. The exterior walls, forming a quadrangle, are of immense thickness, and still nearly perfect. Several of the doorways are in the Saxon style of architecture. The sea surrounds it on three sides, and on the other side were two deep ditches crossed by drawbridges. The popular conception of its strength is expressed in the saying—"Ding down Tantallan! Mak' a brig to the Bass." This stronghold was the scene of some of the incidents in "Marmion." It was besieged in 1528 by James V., but without success. After standing impregnable for centuries, it was destined to fall by the hands of the Covenanters, who besieged, took, and dismantled it in 1639. It was purchased by the Dalrymples soon after 1700, and still remains in their possession. A little to the west of the town are some remains of a Cistercian nunnery, founded in the middle of the 12th century by Duncan, Earl of Fife. Its value at the period of the Reformation was about £220 per annum. The remains consist of massive portions of the wall, now surrounded by trees and shrubs. There are some ruins of a chapel near the harbour. The Bass Rock lies about 2 miles off the coast, opposite Tantallan Castle. Craig-Leith Island also lies near. The par. is 3 miles in length from E. to W., with a breadth of 3½ miles.

BERWICK-PRIOR. See BERRICK-PRIOR, Oxfordshire.

BERWICK-SALOME. See BERRICK-SALOME, Oxfordshire.

BERWICKSHIRE, a seaside co. of Scotland, lying at its south-eastern extremity, on the border of England, and bounded on the N. by the co. of Haddington, on the N.E. by the German Ocean, on the S.E. by the co. of Northumberland, from which it is separated by the river Tweed, on the S. by the co. of Roxburgh, and on the W. by that co. and part of Edinburghshire. In form it is nearly an oblong, extending in length from E. to W. about 31 miles, and about 19 miles at its greatest breadth. It has a coast line of about 25 miles, its circuit inland being 100 miles; and it comprises an area of 483 square miles, or about 339,300 statute acres. It is situated between 55° 36′ and 55° 58′ N. lat., and between 2° 5′ and 2° 55′ W. long., and has a population according to the census of 1861 of 36,614, having increased gradually since the commencement of the century, when it had 30,206. The British tribes named Ottadini occupied this district at the period of the Roman invasion. Under the Romans it was included in the division Valentia. In the 5th century it was invaded by the Saxons, who made themselves masters of it, and settled there. The town of Berwick is considered to have been founded by them. After long forming part of the kingdom of Northumbria, the district was ceded in 1020 to Malcolm II., King of Scotland. Its wealth and importance increasing, attracted many Norman and Anglo-Saxon settlers, who became the founders of noble families still existing. At the same period the trade of Berwick was promoted by the settlement there of Flemish and other foreign merchants. From that epoch the county became the scene of frequent warfare, and its history would be the history of the national and border contests between England and Scotland down to the union of the two countries.—The county is popularly divided into three districts—the Merse, Lammermuir, and Lauderdale: a division which is based on differences of physical character. The Merse (a name equivalent to "march," or, as some say, to "marsh"), is that part of the county lying between the Tweed on the south, and the Lammermuir on the no a level fertile tract of above 120,000 acres. It is most extensive tract of level land in Scotland, and i a state of high cultivation. The Lammermuir dist occupies the northern part of the county, and consist the bleak and moory range of the Lammermuir h partly forming sheepwalks, with here and there a sm cultivated spot. The range is formed by rocks of primary formation, chiefly slate, with trap rising peaks at various points. The greatest elevations are following:—Criblaw, which rises to the height of 1, feet, and is the loftiest hill in the range; Lammer 1,500 feet; Clinthill, overlooking the western part the county, 1,544 feet; Tippet-knowes, 1,323 feet; B Hill, 1,090 feet; Manslaughterlaw, 1,273 feet; Cockburnlaw, 912 feet. Cowden-knowes, Earlston H Bemerside Hill, on the south-west, are of elevation ing from 1,000 to 1,200 feet. Dunselaw and Cha Hill command fine views over the Merse. The d of Lauderdale lies in the western part of the coun and is partly hilly and partly cultivated. Its name derived from the Leader water, which flows by it. coast of Berwickshire is rocky and dangerous, access only at a few points. Its direction from the mouth the Tweed is north-westerly to St. Abb's Head, w it is more westerly to the border of East Lothian. A the coast are Berwick harbour, Burnmouth, Eyemou Coldingham, and Coves.—The principal rivers of wickshire are the Tweed, the Leader or Leader Whitadder and Blackadder, and the Eye. The Tw forms part of the south boundary of the county, receives the waters of all the other rivers except the It is not navigable, but from the clearness of its wa and the agreeable scenery on its banks, it is esteemed of the most beautiful rivers of Scotland. It abounds good salmon. The Leader, which rises among the L mermuir hills, runs southward through the valley trict named after it, and joins the Tweed near the west extremity of the county, a little above Dryb Abbey. The sources of the Whitadder are in E Lothian, those of the Blackadder on the south side of Lammermuir. The two streams unite in the Merse fall into the Tweed about 3 miles above its m The Eye runs to the south-east from the eastern bo of Haddingtonshire, falling into the sea at Eyem There is a small loch at Coldingham, another at Dun and several rivulets in different parts of the county the rivers contain abundance of fish, and the Tweed valuable salmon fisheries.—Berwickshire is not r in minerals. Limestone, sandstone, and whinstone found in various parts of the county. Small quanti of gypsum are obtained at Chirnside and Greenlaw, s marl at Mertoun, and slate of poor quality at Le Traces of copper and quicksilver have been discove The coast of Berwickshire offers an interesting study the geologist, in the intersection of the beds of primary and secondary formations where the Lamm muir range meets the sea. The two points of intersection are near Douglas on the north, and Eyemouth the south side of the hills. The climate of this coun is generally cold and dry. It occupies the northern p of the basin of the Tweed, which is bounded by ran of hills on the north, south, and west. With the exception of the bleak hills in the north, the greater part the county has a fertile soil, and is in a state of h cultivation. Some spots of low ground among the h are brought under cultivation, and much waste has b reclaimed. There is no chalk nor coal, and lime f purposes of agriculture is imported. A good loam, re ing on gravel or clay, is found along the banks of t principal rivers. The farms are large, ranging from to 1,000 acres, and are held generally on long lea The best methods of cultivation are adopted, and gr improvements have been effected. The present race agriculturists do not belong to the class of men severe portrayed by a critic of the last century as men "bo and living in mud, and having muddy heads." It is v common for people of the poorer classes to hold a sm piece of pasture land, on which they keep a cow, a pride themselves with milk and butter. On the cold hil the native black cattle, and the black-faced, long-wo lod sheep are pastured; while in the lower grounds im oved breeds, both of oxen and sheep, are found. Of the atter the Leicester and the Southdown breeds do we The old Scottish prejudice against pork has de ned, and many pigs are now reared in this county, bot for home consumption and for export.—Berwick-shi comprises 31 pars., with parts of two others. The lar st is Lauder, which contains an area of 58 square mi. It is also the only royal and parliamentary bo ugh. Greenlaw ranks as the county town, and is on of the five burghs of barony, the others being Dun e, Coldstream, Cockburnspath, and Eyemouth. Dun e is the most important town, and the most popu lou in the county. Berwick, once the county town, no constitutes a county by itself. The government is ves d in a lord lieutenant, vice-lieutenant, and 24 depu ties a sheriff, and substitute, &c. The county returns on member to the imperial parliament, and Lauder is a c tributory borough to Haddington in returning one. Th county is within the synod of Merse and Teviot-dal and is divided into the presbyteries of Dunse and Ch nside. There are 31 livings in connection with the Es blishment, and between 20 and 30 congregations of the Free Church and other dissenting bodies.—There are o extensive manufactories in Berwickshire. The cot n and linen manufactures are carried on to a small ext nt, employing about 200 hands, and there are hand-loo weavers at Earlston employed in making ginghams, mu nos, shirtings, flannels, &c. There was formerly a pap r-mill at Edrom, on the Whitadder.—The remains of an quity are numerous and interesting. They are chiefly of military character, and consist of castles, tumuli, cai ns, and stations. Encampments of British, Roman, Pi sh, and Danish origin abound in all directions. Th pars. of Mornington, Coldingham, Legerwood, and Co burnspath, are sites of British camps; Fogo, Whit-son, Cockburnspath, and Channelkirk, of Roman camps; and Lauder has several Pictish works. The principal cas es are at Coldingham; Fast Castle, on a steep cliff by the sea, formerly belonging to the Earls of Home, and the original of Wolf's Craig in the "Bride of Lam-mermoor;" Cranshaw Castle, a seat of the Douglases; Du se, Home, and Dunglas Castles, the two latter fo ded by the Homes. Of the religious houses, which we numerous, the principal are the abbeys of Dry-burgh, Eccles, and Coldingham. The latter is con-sidered the oldest nunnery in Scotland, and was in ex-istence in the middle of the 7th century. One aisle of the abbey church is all that remains. The remains of Dryburgh, on the banks of the Tweed, not far from Melrose, are extensive and beautiful. There is the grave of Sir Walter Scott. Churches of great antiquity exist at Polwarth and Auld Cambus. It was at Coldstream in 16-60, that the regiment of Guards was first raised by General Monk which has since borne the name of the place. Dunse Law was the site of an encampment of the Covenanters, under Leslie. Dunse is said to be the birth-place of the philosopher and theologian, Duns Scotus; and Earlston of Thomas the Rhymer. Eccles was the birth-place of Lord Kames. The principal seats of the nobility and gentry in Berwickshire are the following:—Thirlstane Castle, the seat of the Earl of Lauderdale; Dryburgh Abbey, of the Earl of Buchan; The Hirsel, of the Earl of Home; Langtown, of the Marquis of Breadalbane; Lennel House, of the Earl of Haddington; The Retreat, of the Earl of Wemyss; Wedderlie, of Lord Blantyre; Mertoun House, of Lord Polwarth; Nisbet, of Lord Sinclair; Marchmont, of Campbell, Bart.; Newton Don, of Sir W. H. Don, Bart.; Douglas, Atherstone, Jerviswood, Dunse, Wedderburn, Paxton, Bemerside, Morristoun, &c. The North British railway intersects this county, running from the town of Berwick, in a north-westerly direction, near the coast, by Burnmouth, Ayton, and Cockburnspath, to Dunbar, having a length of about 21 miles within the county. A branch line is formed from Reston Junction to Dunse. Communication with England is by the main line of the North-Eastern railway, which terminates at Berwick. The Berwick and Kelso railway passes along the south bank of the Tweed, to Jedburgh, and meets the Edinburgh and Hawick railway not far from Melrose. The chief roads are the following:—the great road from London to Edinburgh, which crosses the county from Berwick through Ayton; the road from Edinburgh to Greenlaw; roads from Berwick to Haddington, and to Earlston; and, on the south side of the Tweed, a road passing through Coldstream, Kelso, Dryburgh, and Melrose, to Abbotsford.

BERWICK ST. JAMES, a par. and vil. in the hund. of Branch and Dole, in the co. of Wilts, 5 miles to the N.W. of Wilton, and 8 from Salisbury, its post town. The Salisbury branch of the Great Western railway passes near it. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £54, in the patron. of Lord Ashburton, who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. James, is in the early English style, with Norman tower. There is a Church of England mixed school. The intrenchments known as Yarnbury Camp, lay 2 miles west of the village, on the slope of the Downs, covering a space of 28 acres. They are surrounded by a rampart 52 feet high, and approached by six entrances. Many British and Roman remains have been found in the vicinity, and there are two British earthworks.

BERWICK ST. JOHN, a par., vil., and tnshp. in the hund. of Chalk, in the co. of Wilts, 6 miles to the E. of Shaftesbury, and about the same distance from Titbury station, on the Salisbury and Yeovil and Exeter line. Salisbury is its post town. It is situated within the limits of Cranbourne Chase, on the border of Dorsetshire, at the foot of White Sheet hills, which form part of Salisbury Plain, and command an extensive view over Dorsetshire, the Downs, and part of Hampshire, as far as the Needle rocks in the Isle of Wight. There are three pretty and commodious villas built by the late Mr. Foote, whose family still retain some property here, and have some fine specimens of oak carving. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £562, in the patron. of the Warden and Fellows of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. John, is built in the form of a cross, with a richly ornamented tower of the time of Henry VII. It has recently been almost entirely rebuilt, from designs by Mr. Woodyer, and was reopened on the 1st of May, 1862; but the old form was strictly adhered to, and the walls occupy the same lines, with an increase of length of nave of some eight feet. The tower was restored, as far as decay would allow, stone by stone. The cost of the restoration was £2,400. Some very curious distemper paintings were found on the old walls. In the interior are two ancient effigies, clad in mail, of the time of the crusades, supposed to be those of Sir John Husee and Sir Robert Lucie, former owners of the manor; and several monuments of the Grove family. The register commences with the year 1556. The Baptists have a chapel here, and there is a National school, built in 1835, lately enlarged. There are some small charities. Lord Rivers is lord of the manor. On the neighbouring hills are some ancient British remains, and an extensive entrenchment covering an area of about 12 acres, called Winklebury, or Vespasian's Camp, from which there is a view of Wiltshire and Cranbourne Chase.

BERWICK ST. LEONARD, a par. in the hund. of Dunworth, in the co. of Wilts, 1 mile to the E. of Hindon, its post town, and 15 W. of Salisbury. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val., with the perpet. cur. of Sedgehill, which is annexed to it, of £375, in the patron. of J. Benett, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard, and has been recently restored. The manorhouse, which was erected in the reign of James I., is now converted into a barn.

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED, a borough, seaport, and market town on the frontiers of England and Scotland, 58 miles to the S.E. of Edinburgh by the North British railway, and 371 miles to the N. of London by the North-Eastern railway. It is situated on the north bank and at the mouth of the river Tweed, within that part of the co. of Northumberland called Islandshire, but was constituted in the reign of William IV. a county of itself. The question of its relation to England and Scotland remained for a long time unsettled, but has recently been determined by enactment to be included in England. The par., consisting of the town and its libs., is bounded by the German Ocean, the co. of Berwick, and the river Tweed, and comprises an area of 6,195 acres, while the borough has an area of 7,497 acres. The river belongs partly to the town and partly to Islandshire. The foundation of the town is commonly assigned to the Saxon kings of Northumbria, but nothing is certainly ascertained of its origin. The Danes are said to have landed here in 867, and a few years after the place was taken by the Scots, who did not retain it. In 1020, it is said to have been ceded to Malcolm II. But no authentic record of the town occurs before the reign of Henry I. At that period it was evidently a place of importance as a seaport, had a castle and many religious houses, and was the chief town of Lothian. It was one of the four towns of Scotland which were raised to the rank of royal burghs. The town was in the hands of the English from 1176 to 1189, being given up to Henry II. by William the Lion after the battle of Alnwick, and restored to the Scots by Richard I., on receiving from them a large sum of money for his meditated crusade. It was taken and burnt by King John in 1216, but was soon rebuilt. The commerce of the town was greatly promoted by the settlement there, in the 13th century, of some Flemish merchants. It was at Berwick that the council or commission sat in 1291, to inquire into the claims of Bruce and Baliol, to the throne of Scotland, when Edward I. as lord paramount of Scotland, gave judgment in the great hall of the Castle, on the 17th of November, "That John Baliol should have seisin of the kingdom of Scotland." In 1295 Edward took the town by storm, when a great slaughter took place, and excessive cruelties were perpetrated. He received there the homage of the nobles, gave the town a charter, and made it his capital of Scotland. William Wallace took Berwick in 1297, but soon lost possession of it, and eight years later the quartered body of the hero was exposed on the walls of the town. It was taken by Robert Bruce in 1318, and held by him till 1333, when it was given up to Edward III. after his great victory at Halidon Hill. It was repeatedly besieged, surprised, taken, and retaken during the 14th and 15th centuries, being the first point of attack on the outbreak of war between the two countries. The first occasion on which cannon were fired in England was on the taking of Berwick by Henry IV. After 1482, when the town and castle were ceded to Edward IV., they remained in the possession of the English. By treaty between Edward VI. and Mary, Queen of Scots, in 1551, Berwick was made a free town, independent of both countries. James I. passed through it on his way to England, in 1603; on whose accession it lost its importance as a frontier town. Charles I. was here twice. In 1648, Berwick was taken by Cromwell, and garrisoned for the parliament.—The town stands pleasantly on rising ground to the north of the Tweed, and is connected with the suburb of Tweedmouth by a fine stone bridge of 15 arches, 1,014 feet in length. It is inconveniently narrow, being only 17 feet in breadth. It was completed about the year 1634, at a cost of £25,000, and belongs to the crown. Part of the town extends along the summit of Castle Hill. There are several good streets, and the houses are generally well built. Gas was introduced in 1822. There is a large townhall, a handsome building of hewn stone with a Tuscan portico, and a spire 150 feet in height, in which is a peal of eight bells. The lower part of the building is used as an exchange, or market, and the upper as a prison. It was erected about 1751, and stands in the middle of one of the principal streets. The barracks, which form a quadrangle, stand near the ramparts on the north-east, and can accommodate 700 men. There are assembly-rooms, a handsome corn exchange, a library, a savings-bank, and an infirmary.—The principal business of the town arises from the fisheries, the shipping trade, and various manufactures connected with them. There are iron-works, manufactories of steam-engines, shipbuilding yards. The manufactures of dam diaper, sacking, carpets, hats, oil-cake, oil, leat ropes, pipes, and furniture, are also carried on. waterworks are the property of the corporation, the gas-works are managed by two companies.—I wick is a garrison town, and is still defended by w The present fortifications, which were construct the reign of Queen Elizabeth, consist of an ear rampart with a facing of stone, strengthened on north and east sides of the town with five bast There are two powder magazines, and two small teries, commanding the entrance to the harbour old walls, parts of which still remain, with one t called the Bell Tower, enclosed a larger area tha modern ones. The castle has been in ruins the reign of Charles I. The town is entered by gates, called the Scotch-gate, the Cowport, the N gate, and the Sand-gate. A fifth, which stood at head of the bridge and was called the Englis has been taken down.—Berwick received its last incorporation from James I. in 1605, under which some modifications by the Reform Act, it is still verned. The borough, comprising within its Tweedmouth and Spittle, is divided into three wards is governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 coun the style of the corporation being "the mayor, b and burgesses of the borough of Berwick-on-Tw The town sent a representative to the burgh Scotland till the reign of Henry VIII., since which it has returned two representatives to the English liament. The sheriff is the returning officer, and boundaries of the municipal and parliamentary bo are co-extensive. The borough has a revenue of £15,800, and comprises within its limits 1,872 shal houses, with a population of 13,254, according to census of 1861, showing a decrease of no less than in the decennial period from 1851. Berwick has a coast, and the entrance to the harbour is difficult shifting sandbanks. A good stone pier, nearly ha mile long, protects the harbour, within which the good anchorage for vessels of 500 tons burden. A pat slip, 800 yards in length, was erected in 1810, and th are extensive warehouses along the quay. The p which is placed under the control of commissioners, about 60 vessels and one steamer belonging to it in th Alnmouth, Budle, and Holy Island are subordinate t The principal business of the port is the export of sal corn, coals, ale, and whisky. The imports are tim manures, bones, iron, &c. There is a lighthouse at entrance of the harbour, the upper light of which is vis at a distance of 11 miles. The fisheries of the Twee the bay are very productive; the river abounds salmon and trout, and the bay in cod, haddock, whi and other valuable species. The salmon are packed ice and sent to the London market—a method of p ing which has been in use since 1790. Large quanti of crabs and lobsters are also obtained, and most of latter are exported to London. The river is navi gable above the bridge. Besides the old bridge, now crossed by a bridge and a viaduct for the N British railway. Berwick is a coastguard station, the seat of a Poor-law Union and a County Court trict. Three newspapers are published here, the Ber Advertiser, the Berwick Warder, and the Berwick J nal.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham the val. of £383, in the patron. of the Dean and Cha of Durham. The church, which was built in the t of the Commonwealth, has no tower, and is dedica to the Holy Trinity. It stands on the site of an ane one, in which the marriage of David Bruce with the s of Edward III. was solemnised. There is also a dist church dedicated to St. Mary, the living of which perpet. cur., val. £150, in the gift of the Vicar of Berw There are chapels belonging to the Scotch Kirk, tw tions of Presbyterians, Independents, Wesleyans, B tists, and Roman Catholics. There is a free gram school, founded about 1605 by the corporation, the pat age of which is vested in trustees. It was endowed a 165 by Colonel Strother, and has a revenue of about £16 There are also a burgess school, founded in 1798; Nat nal schools, founded by Captain James Bolton in 172 having an income from endowment of about £156; and several other schools. A lunatic asylum was established in 1813. The Berwickshire Naturalists' Club has r its object the study and knowledge of the natural feat es and productions of the surrounding country. Seval monasteries are said to have existed here in anc nt times; but there are no remains of any of them. The market, chiefly for corn, is held on Saturday, and an excellent market for cattle and sheep on every alternat Monday. Fairs are held on the second Wednesday in ay, the Friday in Trinity week, the Wednesday bef the 26th August, and the first Wednesday in November. The second is for the sale of black cattle and orses.

BERWYN, a tnshp. united with Croes, in the par. of Carr-ys-Clawdd, hund. of Penarth, in the co. of Cardig , South Wales, 3 miles to the S.E. of Tregaron. It is situated in the valley of the river Berwyn, a branch of the Teifi. The scenery of the Cwm Berwyn is remarkably wild and impressive.

BESCOBY. See BESKABY, Leicestershire.

BESFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Shawbury, and hun of North Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles to the S.E. of Wem. The river Roden runs near it.

BESFORD, a chplry. and vil. in the par. of St. Andrew, unic and hund. of Pershore, in the co. of Worcester, 2 miles from Pershore, its post town. It is situated on e bank of the river Avon, near the Birmingham and Gloucester railway, which has a station at Defford, 1½ mile north from the village. The living is a perpet. cur. nnexed to the vic. of St. Andrew's, Pershore, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a small old building with a tower. Besford Cou is the principal residence. Sir Thomas Sebright, Bart is lord of the manor, and sole proprietor of the par which contains about 1,300 acres.

BESKABY, or BESCOBY, an ext. par. lib. to the par. f Croxton-Keyrial, hund. of Framland, in the co. of Leicester, 5 miles from Melton Mowbray.

BESSECAR, a hmlt. in the par. of Cantley, in the wap of Strafforth and Tickhill, West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles from Doncaster.

BESSELSLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Hormer, in the co. of Berks, 4 miles to the N.W. of Abingdon, and 5 S.W. of Oxford. It derives its name from the families of Bssels and Leighs to whom it formerly belonged, and from whom it passed to the Fettiplaces and the Lenthalls. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £ in the patron. of K. J. W. Lenthall, Esq. The chur , dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a small edifice, with chancel and belfry in the Gothic style. The parish shar the benefit of the free school of Appleton, founded by Sir R. Fettiplace, and of Sellwood's clothing charity for e poor. The principal residence is Besselsleigh Hou , the seat of K. J. W. Lenthall, Esq., who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The Speaker of the ong Parliament was a member of this family.

BESSINGBY, a par. in the wap. of Dickering, in the ast Riding of the co. of York, not far from Bridlington, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £59, in the patron. of H. udson, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Magnus.

BESSINGHAM, a par. in the north div. of the hund. of Ingham, in the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles to the S.W of Cromer, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £131, in the patron. of E. Arden, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mar

BESTHORPE, a par. in the hund. of Shropham, in the co. of Norfolk, near Attleborough, its post town. The Great Eastern railway passes through it. The livi is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £25 in the patron. of the Earl of Winterton. The chur is dedicated to All Saints.

BESTHORPE, or BEESTHORPE, a chplry. in the par. South Scarle, wap. of Newark, in the co. of Nottingham, 7 miles to the N.E. of Newark, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of South Scarle, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The parochial charities consist of the endowment of a free school amounting to about £9 per annum. The principal seat is Besthorpe Hall, a mansion erected in the reign of James I.

BESWICK, an ext. par. lib. in the borough of Manchester, in the co. palatine of Lancaster. It has an area of about 60 acres.

BESWICK, a chplry. in the par. of Kilnwick, in the wap. of Harthill, East Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the N. of Beverley, its post town. It includes the hmlt. of Wilfholme. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £65, in the patron. of the master of Archbishop Holgate's grammar school.

BETAGHSTOWN, or BETTYSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Colpa, bar. of Lower Duleek, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles to the N.E. of Duleek, and 34 miles from Dublin. It is seated in a pleasant country on the sea-coast, and is resorted to as a watering-place. It has an extensive beach of fine sand. Betaghstown House is the seat of R. Sheppard, Esq., to whom the village belongs. There are numerous gentlemen's seats in the neighbourhood.

BETCHCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Smethcott, hund. of Condover, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles from Church Stretton.

BETCHWORTH, or BEECHWORTH, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Reigate, in the co. of Surrey, 3 miles to the E. of Dorking, and the same distance from Reigate, its post town. It is pleasantly situated at the foot of Box Hill, and is a station on the South-Eastern railway. The vil. of Brockham is included in this par. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £126, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church contains a monumental brass of the year 1553, and is dedicated to St. Michael. There is a free school with an endowment of £20 a year, and some other charities which produce about £55 per annum. Betchworth Castle was for several centuries the seat of the Earls of Warren and Surrey. It is situated about a mile from the village, in a fine park abounding in magnificent oaks, chesnut trees, and elms.

BETHELNIE, a par. in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, now joined to Rhynie.

BETHERSDEN, or BETHERSDEN-LOVELACE, a par. in the hund. of Chart and Longbridge, lathe of Shepway, in the co. of Kent, 5 miles to the S.W. of Ashford. Tenterden is its post town. The South-Eastern railway passes near it. The parish contains some beds of grey marble, employed for columns of churches, mantel-pieces, and other decorations of interiors. Hops are grown in this district. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £165, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. Beatrice, and contains several ancient family monuments and some brasses of the Lovelaces, who formerly held the manor of Bethersden. A fair is held in the village on the 1st July.

BETHESDA, a vil. in the par. of Llandwrog, hund. of Uwch Gorfai, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 4 miles from Carnarvon. The inhabitants are workers in the neighbouring slate quarries. There are several places of worship in the village.

BETHESDA, a hmlt. in the par. of Llan-llechid, hund. of Uchaf, in the co. of Carnarvon, 3 miles from Bangor.

BETHGELERT. See BEDDGELERT, Carnarvonshire.

BETHNAL-GREEN, a par. within the borough of the Tower Hamlets, lower div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, 2 miles to the N.E. of St. Paul's, London. It formed part of the par. of Stepney until 1743, when it was severed, and erected into an independent parish. It lies chiefly on the south and west sides of the Regent's canal, and is divided into four districts, called respectively the Church, Green, Hackney-road, and Town districts. The Great Eastern railway passes through Bethnal-Green. Within the limits of the parish are the North-East London Cemetery, Globe Town, part of Victoria Park, some large brick-fields, and extensive market-gardens. The houses are generally old and poorly built. The district is very thickly peopled, and chiefly by silk-weavers, who carry on their employment at their homes. It is usual for one house to be occupied by several families, so that the official returns for 1861 give only 14,812 houses, inhabited by a population of 104,905. The neighbourhood, however, must be considered healthy, for the increase of population in the decennial period since 1851 has been no less than 14,712, and the excess of registered births over deaths in the same period 15,963, showing a considerable migration to less thickly peopled districts. The parish contains a cotton manufactory, and a factory for waterproof hosiery for the use of brewers and firemen. Bethnal-Green forms a Poor-law Union by itself, and has a Union workhouse.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, of the val. of £514, in the patron. of the bishop, having recently been reduced £100 per annum, by abolition of intermural burials. The church, a plain brick building, was erected in 1746, and is dedicated to St. Matthew. There are 11 other churches in the parish, 10 of which were founded between 1840 and 1850, chiefly in consequence of the energetic efforts of Bishop Blomfield. The livings are all perpet. curs. in the gift of the Bishop of London, varying in val. from £200 to £400. The church dedicated to St. John, is a large and handsome structure in the Grecian style, built in 1828, from designs by Soane. Its cost was nearly £18,000. Here are also an Episcopal chapel connected with the schools of the London Society for promoting Christianity among the Jews, chapels belonging to the Wesleyans, Baptists, Independents, and other religious bodies. The charitable foundations are numerous, and the annual value of their endowments about £650. The principal charity is the free school and almshouse founded and endowed in 1722 by Thomas Parmiter, and further endowed by Elizabeth Carter and others. The income from the endowments has been augmented by judicious management, and now amounts to above £300 per annum. The parochial school, established in 1771 for 90 children of both sexes, has an income of about £140. There is also a National school for 1000 children. There are almshouses founded by Captain Fisher, and by the Drapers' and Dyers' Companies. Trinity Hospital, for the support and residence of masters of ships or their widows, was founded in 1695, and endowed a few years later by Captain Sandes. The building now occupied as a lunatic asylum was formerly a private mansion, and was built in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. According to the old ballad this house was the residence of the "Blind Beggar of Bethnal-Green," the hero of the ballad being, it is said, Henry, the son of the great Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester. The staff of the parish beadle still bears memorial of the legendary adventure. Another important charity of this parish is that called the Green Lands, the produce of which goes to the relief of the poor, and amounts to £154 per annum. Victoria Park is situated between the Regent's canal and the pars. of Hackney and Bow, extending about a mile in length, and comprising an area of nearly 300 acres. The formation of the park was commenced in 1841, and a handsome drinking fountain was erected by Miss Burdett Coutts in 1862.—Several men of note have been residents in this parish. Bishop Bonner is said to have lived in a hall called Bishop's Hall, the site of which is near the park; Sir Richard, father of Sir Thomas Gresham, resided here; Ainsworth, author of the well-known Latin Dictionary, had a school here; and William Caslon, the famous engraver and type-founder, was residing here at the time of his death, in January, 1766. The name of the parish is probably derived from an ancient residence called Bathon Hall, and a large green near Bishop's Hall.—A grand social experiment has recently been tried here by Miss Burdett Coutts, in order to show how houses may be provided for the labouring classes in accordance with the requirements of sanitary science, and at the same time affording a fair remuneration for the capital employed. To solve this difficult social problem, Miss Coutts caused a range of structures, designed by Mr. Darbishire, a forming three sides of a square, to be erected. E block of buildings is distinct, and rises to five stori fitted with its own baths, washhouses, club-rooms, sha for removal of dust, and, in fact, all modern applianc that seem likely to conduce to the health, cleanliness, a comfort of the class for whom they are designed. Th lodgings were eagerly sought after, and are now oc pied by about 170 families, who rent from one to th rooms at rates varying from 2s. to 5s. per week. T external appearance of this block of buildings is v pleasing, owing to the unity of architectural desi and the breaking of the sky-line. As evidence of t success of the experiment, it will be remembered th Mr. Peabody presented in 1862 the munificent sum £150,000, to be employed chiefly for the same purpos

BETLEY, a par. in the north div. of the hund. Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 7 miles to the W. Newcastle-under-Lyme. It is situated in a beau country on the confines of Cheshire, and was former a market town. The Grand Junction railway pa near it. A considerable extent of land is laid out market gardens, from which supplies are sent to the Ne castle market. Near the village is a piece of wa called Betley Mere. The living is a perpet. cur.* in dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £150, in the patron G. Tollett, Esq. The church is an ancient edifice, wit chancel and tower of more recent date. It is timbe framed, and contains columns and arches of wood, an several monuments of the Egertons, Tolletts, &c. T chancel appears to have been erected about 1610, the tower a century later. The Wesleyan Methodi have a chapel in the village. The parochial charitie including the endowment of a free school, amount £15 a year. The principal seats are Betley Hall, a residence of the Tolletts, and Betley Court. An annu fair is held on the 31st July.

BETSOME, or BETSHAM, a hmlt. in the par Southfleet, hund. of Axton, and lathe of Sutton-a Hone, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles to the S.W. of Grave end. The neighbourhood is hilly, and the scenery p turesque. The land is partly laid out in hop-grou and orchards.

BETTERTON, a tythg. in the par. of Locking hund. of Wantage, in the co. of Berks, 2 miles to t S.E. of Wantage.

BETTESHANGER, or BETSHANGER, a par the hund. of Eastry, lathe of St. Augustine, in the of Kent, 4 miles to the W. of Deal. Sandwich is post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canter bury, of the val. of £166, in the patron. of F Morrice, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Ma Betteshanger Park, the seat of the Morrices, was for merly that of the Boys family.

BETTISCOMBE, a par. in the lib. of Frampto and hund. of Whitchurch Canonicorum, in the Be port div. of the co. of Dorset, 5 miles to the W Beaminster, and 8 S.W. from Crewkerne, its post tow The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, v £180, in the gift of R. B. Sheridan, Esq., M P., wh lord of the manor. The church is a small ancient edif in the Gothic style, with a square tower.

BETTISFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Hanm hund. of Maylor, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, miles to the N.E. of Ellesmere. The seats are Bett field Hall and Bettisfield Park,—the former being t residence of Sir J. Hanmer, Bart., one of whose an tors was Sir Thomas Hanmer, the editor of Shak speare, and Speaker of the House of Commons in t reign of Queen Anne. He sat in the house for t county of Suffolk about 30 years, and died in 1746. Th mansion contains some interesting old portraits.

BETTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Market Drayto and hund. of North Bradford, in the Drayton div. the co. of Salop.

BETTON and AIKMERE, a tnshp. in the par St. Chad, Shrewsbury borough, in the co. of Salop, miles to the S. of Shrewsbury, its post town. The pri cipal residences are Betton Strange and Betton Hall.

ETTUS, or BETTWS-Y-CRWYN, a par. in the hun. of Clun, or Purslow, in the co. of Salop, 10 miles to the S.W. of Bishop's Castle. It lies on the borders of Radnorshire, not far from the river Teme, and contains the tnshps. of Kevencalanog, Rugantine, and Treder. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £57, in the patron. of Earl Powis. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

ETTWS, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Wentlooge, in the co. of Monmouth, 3 miles to the N.E. of Newport, its post and union town. Its name, common to several parishes in Wales, signifies a pleasant place among the hills. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Woollas, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. David.

ETTWS, a hmlt. in the par. of Bettws Evan, and hund. of Troedyrawr, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 8 miles to the E. of Cardigan.

ETTWS, a par. in the hund. of Iskennen, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 7 miles to the S. of Llandilawr. Carmarthen is its post town. It is situated in a mountainous district. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £98, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. David. The par. extends about 5 miles in length and 1 in breadth.

ETTWS, a par. in the hund. of Newcastle, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 4 miles to the N. of Bridgend, its post and union town. It is situated in a pleasant district on the banks of the river Ogmore, a branch of the Severn, with which it unites near the village. Coal is found here, and the neighbouring mines give employment to many of the workpeople. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Newcastle, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The Unitarians have a chapel here. There are some small charities. The principal residence is Coytherne, the seat of the Trehernes, standing on a hillside above the Ogmore, with beautiful wooded grounds and fine prospects. This village was the birthplace, in 1723, of Dr. Richard Price, the Nonconformist preacher and political writer during the American War and the French Revolution.

ETTWS, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfawr, hund. of Penllyn, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, 1 mile from Bala.

ETTWS, or BETTWS-CAEDEWEN, a par. in the hund. of Newtown, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 4 miles from Newton, its post and union town. It is on the banks of the river Bechan, a feeder of the Severn, and contains the tnshps. of Dilforwyn, Garthgell, Llanitheon, and Ucheldre. The Newtown branch of the Montgomery canal passes through the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, of the val. of £250, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Beuno, and belonged to a Cistercian nunnery, founded in the 13th century. In the chancel is a monumental brass to John ap Meredith, who erected the tower in 1531. The Methodists and Baptists have chapels here. The charitable foundation, including some almshouses founded in 1709 by Richard Weaver, produce about £24 per annum. There are several ancient camps in this parish, the principal of which is Pen-y-Gaer, north-west of the village. The remains of the ancient castle of Dolforwyn stand on the top of a lofty hill, from which there are fine views over the Severn. Its name signifies "Castle of the Virgin's Meadow." Not far from Bettws is the old mansion of Trigynog, in the par. of Tregynon, formerly the seat of the Blayney family, one of whom, Arthur Blayney, greatly distinguished himself by his hospitality and judicious beneficence. He died in 1795. The mansion is now in possession of his heir, Lord Sudeley, whose father acquired it through his wife, Lady Tracy.

ETTWS-ABERGELE. See BETTWS-YN-RHÔS, Denbighshire.

ETTWS-BLEDDRWS, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Moyddyn, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 3 miles to the N. of Lampeter. The river Teifi runs near it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, of the val. of £143, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, a neat building with a tower and spire, is dedicated to St. Bleddrws. The Baptists and Calvinistic Methodists have chapels in the village. Dery Ormond, the seat of J. Jones, Esq., is a fine mansion, standing at the foot of a wooded hill, in the midst of beautiful grounds. Not far from it is the old entrenchment called Castel Goedtref.

BETTWS-CLYRO, or CAPEL-BETTWS, a chplry. in the par. of Clyro, hund. of Painscastle, in the co. of Radnor, South Wales, 3 miles from Hay. It is situated in a beautiful district on the river Wye.

BETTWS-DISSERTH, a par. in the hund. of Colwyn, in the co. of Radnor, South Wales, 7 miles to the W. of New Radnor, its post town. It lies near the head of the river Edwy. The living is a cur., consolidated with that of Disserth, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are several small endowments for the benefit of the poor.

BETTWS-EVAN, or JENVAN, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Troedyrawr, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 8 miles to the E. of Cardigan. It contains the hmlts. of Bettws and Llynnchel, and is comprised within the Poor-law Union of Newcastle-in-Emlyn. The living is a perpet. cur. attached to the vic. of Penbryn, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. John.

BETTWS-GARMON, a par. in the hund. of Isgorfai, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 5 miles to the S.E. of Carnarvon, its post and union town. It is situated at the foot of Snowdon, the base of which extends into the parish. The river Gwrfai takes its rise here, and the neighbourhood comprises some of the grandest mountain and lake scenery in Wales. The church stands between Moel Aelian, 2,370 feet in height, and the Mynydd Mawr hills of rather lower elevation. Remains of towers exist on both these hills. Nant Mill, which is near a beautiful waterfall, is in this parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £63, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church, of small dimensions, is dedicated to St. Garmon. Fairs are held here on the 17th August, and the 22nd and 26th September.

BETTWS-GWERFYL-GOCH, a par. in the hund. of Edernion, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, 5 miles to the N.W. of Corwen, its post and union town. It is situated on the river Alwen, which is crossed by a bridge of three arches. There is some good scenery in the valley of the Alwen. The inhabitants of the district are extensively employed in the knitting of hosiery. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, of the val. of £124, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, an early English structure, is dedicated to St. Mary. Fairs for the sale of cattle, horses, sheep, &c., are held on the 22nd June, the 12th August (a large lamb fair), the 16th September, and the 12th December. The par. has an area of about 6 square miles.

BETTWS-LEIKI, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Llandewy-Brevi, hund. of Moyddyn, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 7 miles to the N. of Lampeter, its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the river Aeron, and forms a distinct parish for ecclesiastical purposes. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, of the val. of £50, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Llandewy-Brevi.

BETTWYS-NEWYDD, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Ragland, in the co. of Monmouth, 5 miles to the N.W. of Usk, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. attached to the vic. of Llanarth, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The parochial charities amount to £5 per annum. Bettws Lodge is the chief residence.

BETTWS PEN-PONT, a chplry. in the par. of Llanspythid, in the co. of Brecknock. Brecon is its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £120, in the patron. of the landholders.

BETTWS-Y-COED, a par. in the hund. of Nantconway, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 3 miles to the S. of Llanrwst. It is situated in a charming valley, protected by mountains, at the junction of the river Llugwy with the Conway. The latter is crossed by Waterloo-bridge, a single arch of iron, erected in the year of the battle of Waterloo. Over the former is the bridge called Pont-y-Pair, of singular construction, the work of an ingenious mason of Pennlyn, who lived in the 15th century. It consists of four arches, each resting on a mass of rock, over which the water, in time of floods, runs in fine cascades. There are many grand waterfalls in the district. The rivers abound in trout and salmon. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £84, in the gift of the bishop. The church, a small and ancient structure, stands on the site of an earlier religious house, and is dedicated to St. Michael. It contains a very interesting monument to Gruffydd ap David Gôch, a relative of the last Llewellyn, being an altar tomb with an effigy and inscription, a work of the 13th century. The Calvinistic Methodists and Independents have chapels. There is a free school, established in 1821.

BETTWS-Y-CRWYN. See BETTUS, Shropshire.

BETTWS-YN-RHÔS, or BETTWS-ABERGELE, a par. in the hund. of Isdulas, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 4 miles to the S.W. of Abergele, its post town. It is situated at the north foot of a lofty mountain, and through an opening in the hills has a fine sea view. It includes the five tnshps. of Peniarth, Bodlyman, Cilcen, Maesegwig, and Trofarth. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, of the val. of £399, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There are four dissenting chapels—one belonging to the Calvinistic, and two to the Wesleyan, Methodists, besides an Anabaptist meeting-house. There is a National school, supported partly by endowment. The parochial charities amount to £56 17*s.* 6*d.* per annum. Coed Coch, the seat of the Wynnes, is the principal mansion. Plas Gwyn, the residence of Thomas Oldfield, Esq., is a handsome Gothic edifice, near the village.

BEVERCOATES, a par. in the wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 2 miles from Tuxford, its post town. The Great Northern railway runs near it. The living is a vic. annexed to that of West Markham in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is in ruins.

BEVERLEY, a market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, and capital of the East Riding of the co. of York, 29 miles to the E. of York, and 183 miles from London by road, or about 224 miles by railway. It is a station on the Scarborough, Bridlington, and Hull section of the North-Eastern railway. It is the head of a liberty, with separate jurisdiction, though locally situated in the wap. of Harthill. Beverley is a place of great antiquity, but little is certainly known of its origin and early history. Its name, slightly modified from the Saxon Beverloga, signifies "lake of beavers," and contains an intimation of the condition of the surrounding country at the period of its origin. A large tract of flat country to the north of the Humber consisted chiefly of marshes, and was liable to frequent inundations. A great number of lakes were thus formed, the existence of which is testified still by many local names of towns which have the ending "sea." Beavers are said to have frequented in large numbers the river Hull, which runs through the district. The tribe called the Brigantes were the early occupants of the territory lying between the Tyne and the Humber. The town owed its origin to John, Archbishop of York, who founded a church here, probably about the commencement of the 8th century. It was dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and was converted by the founder into a monastery. His last days were passed in it, and on his death he was canonised. The buildings were nearly destroyed by the Danes about the year 870. Great privileges and endowments were granted to the monks and the townsmen by Athelstan, on his return from his expedition against the Scots; his success in this expedition he attributed to St. John of Beverley, under whose standard he had marched. He made the church collegiate, and conferred on it the privilege of sanctuary. A "fridstool," or chair of peace, was placed near the altar; and four crosses, erected on the four principal approaches to the town, marked the li of the sanctuary, which extended for a mile round the church. The relics of the saint were enshrined, were annually visited by crowds of pilgrims. A pa ing in the minster church represents the giving of charter by Athelstan to St. John of Beverley, with words,—

"Als fre make I the,
As hart may thynk or eyh may see."

The territories of the saint were specially exempted the severe sentence denounced and executed by the queror against this northern district after the re the inhabitants. Beverley was several times visite Edward I., and, in 1399, by Henry IV. During civil war of the 17th century the town was first in possession of the king, and afterwards of the pa ment. The arrest of Sir John Hotham, as a tra took place here.—The town of Beverley stands at foot of the Wolds, a mile from the west bank of river Hull, with which it is connected by Bev Beck, a canal constructed in 1727. The town ex above a mile in length, having several good street a spacious market-place. The streets are well-p and clean, and contain many good houses. Of the ancient gate-houses only one remains, that on the side of the town, in which quarter are many hand buildings.—Beverley appears to have been at one ti seat of the cloth manufacture. The present trade is ch in corn, coals, malt, and leather. Shipbuilding and ning are rather extensively carried on; and there steam saw-mills, two foundries, and a whiting manu tory. In the centre of the market-place is an octag cross, supported on pillars. The town contains a guild sessions-house, house of correction, register offic savings-bank.—Beverley received its first charter of corporation from Queen Elizabeth. The freemen h the privilege of exemption from toll and custom in parts of England, and the right of pasture on t neighbouring commons, comprising about 1,200 acr land. The borough includes the four pars. of St. Ma St. Mary, St. Nicholas, and St. John; the first t forming the old borough, and the last comprising libs. or tnshps. of Molescroft, Storkhill with Sandh Thearne, Tickton with Hull Bridge, Weel, and W mansey with Beverley Park. Part of the par. of John is in the wap. of Holderness. Under the Ref Act the borough is divided into two wards, and government is vested in a mayor, 6 aldermen, and councillors, with the style of the "mayor, aldermen, burgesses of the borough of Beverley." It has reg returned two members to parliament since the re Queen Elizabeth. The mayor is the returning The revenue of the borough, which comprises acres, is about £2,040, and the number of inha houses within the limits of the municipality, 2,178, a population of 9,654; while the parliamentary b comprises 2,423 houses, with a population of 10,30 The four pars. of Beverley are reduced to two, Martin's being united with St. John's, and St. Nich with St. Mary's. The living of St. John's is a per cur. of the val. of £188, in the patron. of Sime Trustees. That of St. Mary's is a vic.* with the of St. Nicholas, of the val. of £289, in the patron the lord chancellor. Both livings are in the di York. The churches of St. Martin and St. Nicholas long ceased to exist. The church of St. John, form the conventual church, and collegiate, is still call Minster, and is the great architectural ornament of town. It is a noble structure in the form of a with two fine towers at the west end, and exhibits various parts the early English, the decorated, and perpendicular styles. It has been twice restored. in 1717, and again about 1815-1820; on the latter sion under the direction of Mr. Comins. The len the building is 334 feet, its breadth 64 feet; the le of the transepts is 167 feet; the height of the to nearly 200 feet. In the purity, beauty, and accura its architecture it is considered to rival the finest of cnedrals. The west front, all panelled, is a singularly pfect and harmonious example of the perpendicular stle. The great east window, of stained glass, copied, it is said, from that of York Minster, is adorned with scies from the lives of Christ and his apostles, and some rnent saints of the Church. There is a porch of great beauty, with a panelled front, on the north side of the hrch. The choir, which is in the decorated style, ntains above 40 stalls, a fine altar, and a screen of nt rich and elaborate workmanship. Near the altar is h fine monument known as the Percy Shrine. It is a apied tomb, an exquisite work in the decorated style, was erected in memory of Henry Percy, fourth Earl f Northumberland, who died in 1489. There is a fine ld tomb, with the effigy of a priest (also a Percy), in the th transept. Not far off stands the ancient "fridstool," hich is formed of one block of stone. This fine church s kept in repair by means of funds specially granted or bequeathed for that purpose. St. Mary's church is also handsome and interesting structure, cruciform, with a fine embattled tower rising from the centre. It is in various styles, chiefly Norman and early English, and contains an octagonal font adorned with elegant sculpture, and bearing an inscription with the date 1530. The chancel has a groined ceiling, the panels of which contain portraits of the kings of England, mythical and historical. On a pillar in the nave are sculptured the figures of five minstrels, in memory of a company of minstrels of Beverley. There are many monuments in this church. Besides the two parish churches, there is a chapel dedicated to St. John, the living of which, val. £120, is in the gift of the trustees. The Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and the Society of Friends have places of worship here. The charitable institutions and endowments of Beverley are important and considerable, producing, exclusive of the minster lands, about £250 per annum. The value of the minster lands is about £1,900 a year. Here is a grammar school, founded at a very remote period, with an endowment of £10 a year, and eight scholarships at Cambridge University, founded by various persons. A good library is connected with the school. A free school for 160 children of both sexes was founded in 1810, and endowed by the Rev. John Graves. There are also a large National school, a blue-coat school, founded in 1709 for the maintenance and instruction of poor children, and several other schools. Among the numerous charitable institutions are Cox's almshouses for four widows, established in 1535; Routh's almshouses for 32 widows, founded in 1752 and having a revenue of £682; Warton's, for 14 widows, founded in 1712, with a revenue of £404; and several others. The town has a mechanics' institution, a savings-bank, and a dispensary.—Beverley is the seat of a Poor-law Union and of a County Court district. It is a polling-place for the East Riding, and the head-quarters of the East Riding militia. Quarter sessions for the Riding are held here.—This town is the birth-place of several distinguished men: amongst whom are the chronkish historian, Alfred, or Alured, of Beverley; Fisher, Bishop of Rochester, in the reign of Henry VIII., who was executed in 1535; Alcock, Bishop of Ely, who founded Jesus College, Cambridge, and died in 1500; and Green, Bishop of Lincoln, one of the writers of the "Athenian Letters," who died in 1779. Mary Wollstonecraft, the friend of William Godwin, was also born here.—Beverley Park was anciently the occasional seat of the Archbishop of York; subsequently of the Warton family, whose tombs are in St. Mary's church. It is well wooded, and has some pleasant scenery. Beverley gives the title of earl to the Percys.—Saturday is the market day, but a special market for cattle and sheep is held on Wednesday in alternate weeks. Fairs for the sale of horses, cattle, &c., take place on the Tuesday before the 25th February, on Holy Thursday, the 5th July, the Wednesday before the 25th September, and the 6th November. Annual races take place near the town in June.

BEVERSBROOK, UPPER and MIDDLE, a tythg. pty. in the par. and hund. of Calne, partly in the par. of Hillmarton, in the hund. of Kingsbridge, in the co. of Wilts, not far from Calne.

BEVERSTONE, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Berkeley, in the co. of Gloucester, 2 miles to the W. of Tetbury. Stroud is its post town. It is an ancient place, and was called by the Saxons Byferestan. A castle existed here before the Norman Conquest. It was a square structure, with towers at the angles, and was defended by a moat. In the reign of Edward III. it belonged to the Berkeley family, by one of whom, Thomas, Lord Berkeley, it was enlarged and strengthened. It stood several sieges during the civil war of the 17th century, and was at last taken and destroyed by the parliamentary army. The remains, now covered with ivy, consist of a tower, part of the walls, and the chapel; the latter still entire, and converted into a residence. The parish contains some quarries of roofing-stone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val., with the cur.* of Kingscote, which is annexed to it, £590, in the patron. of the crown. The church, which has a stone pulpit, is dedicated to St. Mary.

BEVINGTON, a chplry in the par. of SS. Peter and Nicholas, within the borough of Liverpool, and co. of Lancashire; the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately.

BEWALDETH, a tnshp. joined with Snittlegarth, in the par. of Torpenhow, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 6 miles to the N.E. of Cockermouth.

BEWCASTLE, a par. in Eskdale ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 11 miles to the N. of Brampton, its post town. It is situated in a wild, mountainous country on the borders of Northumberland, and includes the tnshps. of Bewcastle, Bailie, Bellbank, and Nixons. The name of the par. is derived from a castle founded here by a Norse baron named Bueth, shortly before the Conquest. The rivers Irthing and Leven take their rise here. Limestone and coal are found in this district, and some lead ore. Bewcastle was formerly a market town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Carlisle, of the val. of £120, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, situated near the castle, is dedicated to St. Mary. In the churchyard is an ancient stone cross, or obelisk, with inscriptions, the origin and interpretation of which remained undiscovered until very recently. The stone is about 14 feet high, and when deciphered was found to commemorate Ælcfrid, king of Deïra, the son of Oswy, king of Northumbria, who died about A.D. 665. The Presbyterians have a chapel here. Of the castle little now remains but the walls of the keep. It stood on the site of a Roman station on the Maiden Way to Scotland, which passed through this parish. Many coins, stones with inscriptions, and other Roman relics, have been found. The castle was a post of importance in the border wars, and was finally demolished in the reign of Charles I. The site belongs to Sir Frederick Graham, the lord of the manor. In the neighbourhood of Bewcastle there is much striking scenery, and several mineral springs. The par. is very large, extending over an area of about 30,000 acres.

BEWDLEY, a market town, parliamentary and municipal borough, and chplry. in the par. of Ribbesford, in the hund. of Doddingtree, and co. of Worcester, 14 miles to the N.W. of Worcester, and 129 miles from London by road, or 137½ by the Great Western railway, which has a station at Kidderminster, 3 miles to the S.W. of the town; it may also be approached viâ the North-Western and West Midland railways. There are besides two branch lines in course of formation—the Severn Valley line, from Hartlebury to Shrewsbury, which passes through the hamlet of Wribbenhall; and the Tenbury line, which is to pass through Bewdley, and so on to Kidderminster, connecting Bewdley with the trunk lines of communication to the metropolis, and all parts of the kingdom. Its name is a corruption of Beaulieu, and refers to the singular pleasantness of its situation. It is seated on the west bank of the river Severn, not far from the border of Shropshire. It was anciently an extra-parochial place, included within the jurisdiction of the Welsh Marches, and possessed the privilege of sanctuary. It became a part of the parish of Ribbesford in the reign of Henry VI., and was added to the county of Worcester in the latter part of the reign of Henry VIII. A palace was built here by Henry VII. for his son Arthur, and the marriage of that prince with Catherine of Arragon (by proxy) took place here. The palace was occupied by Charles I. during the Civil War, after his retirement from Oxford, and being much injured by the attacks of the Scottish troops, was soon after taken down.—The town of Bewdley stands partly on the level ground by the river, and partly on the slope of a pleasant hill. The river is crossed by a slight and handsome stone bridge of three arches, which was erected in 1797, and from which the principal street runs westward, and divides into two branches. The town is clean, the houses for the most part well built, and the streets paved and lighted with gas. There is a townhall, built of stone in 1818, and supported on several arches, through which are the entrances to the market-place, an open area bounded by arcades with stalls. Two small prisons stand next the townhall.—Bewdley was at one time the seat of an extensive carrying trade on the river, and also of the manufacture of Dutch caps; but both these have declined. Most of the workpeople are now employed in agricultural pursuits, or in the manufacture of horn combs, lanterns, drinking-horns, and powder-flasks. There are also a brass foundry, brick and rope-making works, several tanneries and malting houses.—The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. of £100, in the patron. of the Rector of Ribbesford. The church stands in the principal street. It is a spacious stone structure, erected in 1748, on the site of an older one built of timber, and is dedicated to St. Anne. In 1853 a separate district was assigned to this church by an order in council, out of the parish of Ribbesford, which district is named the "district chapelry of St. Anne," and embraces about a third part of the town. There is a new church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, at Far Forest, the living of which is a cur., val. £101, in the gift of the Rector of the parish of Ribbesford and the Rector of Rock, alternately. The Baptists, Wesleyans, Unitarians, and Quakers have chapels in the town. The charitable endowments of Bewdley amount to £278 per annum. The foundations consist chiefly of the free grammar school and numerous almshouses. The grammar school was founded in 1591, and was afterwards endowed by several benefactors, but its affairs were for many years involved in a suit in Chancery. It is, however, expected that a new school-house will soon be built, and a master appointed. The blue-coat school for 60 children has been united with the National school. Fourteen almshouses for aged women were founded in 1645; eight additional ones, by Thomas Cook, in 1693; and six for aged men, rebuilt in 1763. Cook's almshouses have been lately very extensively repaired by a donation of £200 from the late Rev. Joseph Crane, formerly curate of Ribbesford. In connection with the grammar school is a small free library founded by the late Thomas Wigan. There are also a library and reading-room, established in 1848, in connection with the literary institution; and a savings-bank.—Bewdley received its first charter of incorporation from Edward IV., on whose accession the manor, which at an early period belonged to the Beaumonts, Earls of Warwick, and afterwards to the Mortimers, Earls of March, became a possession of the crown. A new charter was granted by James I., another by James II., but after long litigation the former was confirmed. The borough has returned one member to parliament since the reign of James I. Under the Reform Act, the limits of the borough include, besides the old borough, Wribbenhall, on the east bank of the Severn, Hoarstone, Blackstone, Netherton, and Stourport. Its government is vested in a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the style of the "bailiff, burgesses, and inhabitants of the town and borough of Bewdley." It has a revenue of about £600, and an area of 7,110 acres, containing 691 inhabited houses, according to the census of 1861, within the municipal, and 1,516 within the parliamentary limits; the population being respectively 2,905 and 6,786, against 3,124 and 7,318, in 1851, showing a decrease in the parliamentary borough of 1,532, and in the municipal of 219, in the decennial period.—Tomkins, the philologist, and Bishop Willis, one of the founders of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, were born here, and received their early education at the grammar school. Ticknel Park, Winterdyne, and Spring Grove are the principal seats. Bewdley Park, near the town, is an extensive inclosure, adorned with magnificent woods, intersected by fine walks.—Saturday is the market day. Fairs are held on the last Tuesday in February, and on the Monday before the first St. Anne, for cattle; and on the 23rd April, the 2nd Tuesday in October, and the 10th and 11th December for pedlery and general merchandise.

BEWERLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Ripon, wap. Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1½ mile to the W. of Ripon. It is situated on the banks of the river Nidd, near Pateley Bridge, and includes the vil. of Greenhow Hill. Extensive lead mines are worked here, and give employment to many of the inhabitants. The chief residence is Bewerley Hall.

BEWHOLME, a tnshp. in the par. of Nunkeeling, wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles from Hornsea.

BEWICK, a vil. in the tnshp. and par. of Aldbrough, wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the S. of Hornsea. It is situated near the sea-coast.

BEWICK, NEW and OLD, tnshps. in the par. of Eglingham, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 7 miles to the S.E. of Wooler. In the neighbourhood are the remains of two ancient camps, both of a semicircular form—one situated on Bewick Hill, the other at Harup Burn. The former has a double vallum, and both are considered to be British works. There are some ruins of an ancient chapel near the village.

BEWLEY. See BEAULIEU, Hampshire.

BEWLEY CASTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Morland, West ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 3 miles S.E. of Appleby.

BEWSBOROUGH HUNDRED, one of the 7 hunds. or subdivisions of the lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, bounded by the hunds. of Eastry and Cornillo on the N.W. and N.E., the Straits of Dover on the S.E., and the lathe of Shepway on the W. It contains the pars. of Buckland, Charlton, West Cliff, Coldred, Deal, Ewell, Guston, Hougham, West Langdon, Lydden, St. Margaret-at-Cliffe, Poulton, River, Sherwold, and Whitfield, comprising an area of about 19,800 acres.

BEXHILL HUNDRED, one of the 13 subdivisions of the rape of Hastings, in the co. of Sussex, bounded by the hunds. of Ninfield and Baldslow on the N. and W., and by the sea on the S., and containing the greater part of the par. of Bexhill. It is a franchise with privileges like those of Battle and Rotherbridge. The inhabitants are exempt from serving on juries.

BEXHILL, a par. in the hund. of Bexhill, part also within the libs. of Hastings Cinque Port, rape of Hastings, in the co. of Sussex, 6 miles to the W. of Hastings, and 72 miles from London. It is pleasantly situated on a hill on the sea-coast, and is a station on the South Coast railway. The parish contains sea-hop-grounds, a bed of lignite, and several mineral springs. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, of the val. of £989, in the patron. of the bishop of the dioc. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a fine old structure, apparently of Norman construction, the nave being separated from the aisles by round-headed arches resting on massive pillars, while the chancel is in the early English style, with lancet-shaped windows. There is a district church, dedicated to St. Mark, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £286, in the gift of the vicar. Bexhill Common is north-west of the village.

BEXINGTON, EAST and WEST, hmlts. in the par. Abbotsbury, hund. of Uggscombe, in the co. of orset, near Abbotsbury. They are situated on the ast of the Channel, and formerly constituted a distinct rish. The living was annexed in the 15th century to e rect. of Puncknowle, and the ruins of the church still and on the shore.

BEXLEY, a par. and vil., chiefly in the hund. of uxley, partly in that of Lessness, lathe of Sutton-at-one, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles from Dartford, 8 from reenwich, and 13 from London. It includes the hmlts. Blendon, Bridgend, Halfway Street, and Upton. The llage is situated on the river Cray, which passes rough the centre of it. It is about 4 miles distant om Abbey Wood and Erith stations on the North ent line of railway. The manor was given by King nwulf, or Kenulf, to the see of Canterbury. In omesday Book it is recorded as having a church and ree mills. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Can-rbury, of the val., with the chapel of ease of Bexley ath, which is attached to it, of £592, in the patron. Viscount Sidney. The church contains several numental brasses, an ornamental confessional, and veral monuments. It is dedicated to St. Mary the rgin. Camden Place was the residence of William mden the antiquary, who held the manor of Bexley. e founded a professorship of history at Oxford, d endowed it with that manor. The charitable dowments of the parish produce above £200 per num; of which sum £100 is the revenue of Style-an's almshouses for 12 persons. The National school a commodious building, with residence for the chers, and has a small endowment of £8 per annum. here is also an infant school, and 12 almshouses, nded in 1755, by J. Styleman, besides other charities the benefit of the poor. Bexley gave the title of ron to the Vansittarts. Within the parish are some ious examples of shell formation. Danson Hill is a ndsome residence, the grounds were laid out by pability Brown. A fair is held on the 13th and 14th ptember.

BEXLEY HEATH, a chplry. in the par. of Bexley, nd. of Ruxley, and lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the of Kent, 2 miles from Bexley, and 12 S.E. from ndon. It is a rapidly increasing village, pleasantly uated on the London and Dover road, which com-nds extensive views over a very picturesque country. here is a market-house in the centre of the village, ently erected, and a police station. The chapel of e is annexed to the vic. of Bexley, in the dioc. of nterbury. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Indepen-ats have chapels here. There are National schools boys, girls, and infants, the two last with residences teachers. The south side of Welling is in the par. Bexley; and a mixed National school is maintained re also. The market is held on Saturday.

BEXTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Knutsford, hund. Bucklow, in the co. palatine of Chester, near Knutsford.

BEXWELL, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, in the of Norfolk, close to Downham Market, its post town. he Eastern Counties railway passes near it. It was merly a market town, under a grant from Henry III. he living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. £375, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities, con-ting of the produce of the poor's land, amount to £3 year.

BEYNHURST HUNDRED, one of the 20 sub-visions of Berkshire, situated in the eastern part of e co., and bounded on the N. by the Thames and the of Buckingham, on the E. by the hunds. of Bray d Ripplesmere, and on the S. and W. by the hund. of largrave. It contains the pars. of Bisham, Hurley, menham, Shottesbrook, and White Waltham, and has area of about 13,000 acres.

BEYTON, or BEIGHTON, a par. in the hund. of edwestry, in the co. of Suffolk, 5 miles to the E. of ry St. Edmund's, its post town. The living is a rect.* the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £175, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

BEYWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Petworth, and hund. of Rotherbridge, in the co. of Sussex, a short distance from the market town of Petworth, of which it is a suburb.

BIBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkharle, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 10 miles to the E. of Bellingham.

BIBURY, a par. partly in the hund. of Bradley, and partly in that of Brightwell's Barrow, in the co. of Gloucester, 5 miles to the S. of Northleach. Fairford is its post town. It is situated in a beautiful country, on the banks of the river Colne, and contains the chplry. of Winson and the tythgs. of Ablington and Arlington. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the val. of £1,023, in the patron. of Lord Sherborne. The church, which was founded by the abbots of Osney, has some Norman arches, and is dedicated to St. Mary. The chief residence is Bibury House, the property of Lord Sherborne, but occupied by his son, the Hon. J. Dutton, who is lord of the manor. The mansion, which was built by the Sackvilles, is well situated, and commands a good prospect over the Colne. At Ablingdon there is a very ancient manor-house, built in 1590, belonging to the Coxwell family. Roman antiquities have been found here. The village is a meet for the White Horse hounds. The races which took place annually in June are now discontinued.

BICESTER, a par. and market town in the hund. of Ploughley, in the co. of Oxford, 13 miles to the N.E. of Oxford; and 54 miles to the N.W. of London by road, or 66 miles by railway. Bicester is a station on the Oxford and Winslow branch of the London and North-Western railway. The name of this place is contracted from the Saxon Burin-ceastre, or Bernaceaster, and was probably derived from Birinus, a prelate of the 7th century, who assisted in founding it. It is near the site of the ancient Roman Alchester, and is divided into the two districts of King's End and Market End. An Augustine priory was founded here in 1182, by Gilbert Bassett, which was dedicated to St. Eadburg, and had a revenue at the Dissolution of £167. The name of the saint of Aylesbury is still attached to a pleasant walk, and a well to which it leads. A skirmish occurred here between the royalist and parliamentary forces in the reign of Charles I., and the town was alternately in the possession of both parties.—The town, which stands in a valley on a small stream, a branch of the Cherwell, is mostly well built, paved, and lighted with gas. It principally consists of one long street, on the high road to Banbury; a market-place where the townhall and shambles formerly stood, before they were destroyed in the riots of 1826; and two other streets, called Chapel-street and Crockwell. Great improvements have been recently made in the sanitary condition of the town, by covering the open drains, laying down a flagged foot pavement, and improving the supply of water. In 1832, during the time of the cholera, seventy persons were seized with that malady, and the small-pox hospital, which stood near the London-road, was appropriated for their reception. The hospital has since been removed to make way for the London and North-Western railway, which has a station here.—Bicester is not the seat of any manufacture, except lace, which is made to a small extent, and the employments of the workpeople are chiefly agricultural. It has some extensive breweries, the ale of which is celebrated. The general trade of the place, which depends upon its well-attended market and cattle fairs, is benefited by the Oxford canal, which passes near it.—Bicester is the seat of a Poor-law Union, comprising 38 parishes, and a County Court district. Petty sessions for the district are held here. It is also the head of a deanery, in the archdeac. and dioc. of Oxford. The town contains a savings-bank and the Union poorhouse, a spacious edifice, erected in 1836, capable of accommodating 320 inmates.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £231, in the patron. of the trustees of the late Sir G. Page Turner. The church, which stands on the site of the old conventual church, was built about 1400, and is dedicated to St. Eadburg. It has a good tower, and contains a monumental brass, several Norman arches, and some interesting monuments and sculptures. There are chapels belonging to the Wesleyans and Independents. The latter, a commodious brick building, capable of seating 400 persons, was built in 1729. Colonel Gardiner was a frequent attendant at the service of this chapel. The charitable endowments of Bicester consist chiefly of lands for the benefit of decayed townspeople, the produce of which is £206 per annum. There is a blue-coat school, founded in 1721, for 30 boys, which is supported partly by endowment; a diocesan school, established in 1839; a National school, and several other schools and charities.—The market is held on Friday, and a large cattle market on the first Friday in every month. The fairs are held on Easter Friday, the first Friday in June, the 5th August, the last Friday in October, and the third Friday in December. There is also a wool fair in July, recently established.

BICESTER KING'S END, a tnshp. or district in the par. of Bicester, hund. of Ploughley, in the co. of Oxford. It is the western part of the parish, and was the site of the ancient town.

BICESTER MARKET END, a tnshp. or district in the par. of Bicester, hund. of Ploughley, in the co. of Oxford. It contains the hamlet of Wretchwick, and was called Bury End till the reign of Henry VI., when the privilege of a market was granted it.

BICKENHALL, a par. in the hund. of Abdick and Bulstone, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles to the S.E. of Taunton, its post town. The living is a rect. consolidated with that of Staple-Fitzpaine, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells.

BICKENHILL, or CHURCH BICKNELL, a par. in the Solihull div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, in the co. of Warwick, 7½ miles to the S.E. of Birmingham, its post town. The London and North-Western railway, and the Warwick and Birmingham canal, pass through the parish. The former has a station at Hampton, about 2 miles distant from the village of Church Bicknell, and another in the hamlet of Marston Green, about 2½ miles from the church, which is situated on rising ground a quarter of a mile on the left-hand side of the coach road from Coventry to Birmingham. The parish contains the quarters of Lindon End, Marston Green, Church Bicknell, and Middle Bicknell. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, of the val. of £322, with 21 acres of glebe land, in the patron. of the Earl of Aylesford. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a fine old structure, formerly belonging to the convent of Mergate, in Berkshire. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for £326, and the impropriator's for £242. The Independent chapel at Marston Green has been recently purchased, and licensed for the performance of Divine service according to the order of the Church of England. There are National and infant schools.

BICKER, a par. in the wap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, in the co. of Lincoln, 8 miles to the W. of Boston. It includes the ext. par. libs. of Copping-Syke and Ferry Corner, and the hmlts. of Frist and Gauntlet. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £440, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Swithin. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. The charitable endowments, including the poor's allotments, which produce about £60 a year, amount to £116. There is a school with a small endowment.

BICKERSTAFFE, a tnshp. in the par. of Ormskirk, hund. of West Derby, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles to the S.E. of Ormskirk, its post town. The workpeople are chiefly employed in the neighbouring coal mines. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Earl of Derby. The township gives the title of baron to Lord Stanley of Bickerstaffe.

BICKERSTONE. See BIXTON, Norfolk.

BICKERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Malpas, hund. of Broxton, in the co. palatine of Chester, 4 miles from Malpas. Its post town is Chester, and it is included within the Poor-law Union of Nantwich. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £120, in the gift of the Rector of Malpas. On Bickerton Hill, which commands an extensive prospect, there is an ancient entrenchment, and Roman relics have been found.

BICKERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothbury, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 4 miles to the W. of Rothbury. It has an endowed school.

BICKERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bilton, York Ainsty, co. of York, 9 miles to the W. of York.

BICKFORD. See WHISTON, Staffordshire.

BICKINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Teignbridge, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles to the N.E. of Ashburton. Its post and union town is Newton Abbot. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £220, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, and there are some small charities. A cattle fair takes place on the 14th May.

BICKINGTON, ABBOT'S. See ABBOT'S BICKINGTON, Devonshire.

BICKINGTON, HIGH, a par. in the hund. of North Tawton-with-Winkley, in the co. of Devon, 7 miles to the N.W. of Chumleigh. Great Torrington is its post and union town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £475, in the gift of the Rev. S. Palmer. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a school with an endowment of £10 a year, bequeathed in 1740 by Gertrude Pyncombe, and other small bequests for the poor.

BICKLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Hayridge, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles to the S. of Tiverton, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Exe, which is here joined by the Dart. The former is crossed by a bridge. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £420, in the patron. of Sir W. P. Carew, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains monuments of the Carew family, whose seat was Bickleigh Court, which no longer exists. The noted Bamfylde More Carew, styled King of the Gipsies, was a member of this family, his father being rector of the parish at the time of his birth, in 1693. The eccentric wanderer died here in 1758. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £28 a year.

BICKLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Roborough, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles to the N.E. of Plymouth. It is situated in a beautiful valley on the banks of the Catwater, and is a station on the Tavistock branch of the South Devon railway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val., with the perpet. cur. of Sheepstor annexed to it, £253, in the patron of Sir R. Lopes, Bart. There is an almshouse for poor widows.

BICKLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Malpas, and hund. of Broxton, in the co. palatine of Chester, 3 miles to the N.E. of Malpas. It was the scene of an extraordinary occurrence in July, 1657, when a piece of land covered with large trees suddenly sank with a great noise, and was overwhelmed with a flood of water. The chasm, long dry, is called the Barrel Fall. In 1812, two ancient copper tablets were found in a field in this township, on which was inscribed a decree of the Roman emperor Trajan. They are now in the British Museum. The Wesleyans have a chapel here.

BICKMARSH, a hmlt. in the par. of Welford and hund. of Barlichway, in the co. of Warwick, 5 miles to the S.E. of Alcester. It is united with Little Dassington, and is included within the Poor-law Union of Stratford-on-Avon.

BICKNACRE, a hmlt. partly in the par. of Danbury, partly in that of Woodham-Ferris, in the hund. of Chelmsford, and co. of Essex, 5 miles to the S.E. of Chelmsford. It has some remains of a priory which was founded here in the reign of Henry II.

BICKNOLLER, a par. in the hund. of Williton and Freemanners, in the co. of Somerset, 14 miles to the N. of Taunton, its post town. It is pleasantly situated o t west foot of the Quantock hills, about 3 miles fm the coast of Bridgwater Bay. The living is a v. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £124, in the ron. of the Vicar of Stogumber. On the Quantock ll, not far from the church, are remains of two old ampments, named Trendle Castle and Turk's Castle. ere is a beacon on another point of the same hill. ny Roman coins and other relics have been disco-ed in the neighbourhood.

BICKNOR, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of lesford, in the co. of Kent, 6 miles to the E. of Maid-ne, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. Canterbury, val. £115, in the patron. of the lord ncellor. The church is dedicated to St. James.

BICKNOR, ENGLISH, a par. in the hund. of St. avels, in the co. of Gloucester, 6 miles to the W. of cheldean. Coleford is its post town. It is in the rest of Dean, on the east bank of the river Wye. al and iron are obtained, and limestone is quarried re. The district is noted for its apples, which are ch used for making cider. The living is a rect.* in t dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the val. of £300, ithe patron. of the Provost and Fellows of Queen's llege, Oxford. The church, which stands on the site o an ancient camp, is dedicated to St. Mary. The rochial charities amount to £5 per annum. The chief ridence is Bicknor Court, finely seated on a cliff over t Wye.

BICKNOR, WELSH, a par. in the lower div. of the hd. of Skenfreth, in the co. of Hereford, 8 miles to t N.E. of Monmouth. Ross is its post town. It is sated on the river Wye, which surrounds it on three ses, and once formed part of the Marches. Until re-ctly it was included in the co. of Monmouth, and is s designated Welsh, to distinguish it from English knor, which lies opposite to it. The living is a rt.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £169, in the patron. o the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. rgaret, and contains a curious ancient chalice. Near t village is Courtfield, the country residence at which, a ording to tradition, King Henry V. was nursed by t Countess of Salisbury.

BICKTON, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Ford-gbridge, in the co. of Southampton, 5 miles from ugwood.

BICKTON, or BICTON, a par. in the eastern div. of t hund. of Budleigh, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles to t W. of Sidmouth, its post town. It is beautifully sated on the sea-coast, on the banks of the river er, and includes the hamlet of Yettington. At the e of the Norman survey, the manor of Bicton was h d by the singular tenure of providing a county gaol; wch tenure was abolished by Act of Parliament in 17. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, of t val. of £220, in the patron. of the heirs of Lord Rle. The church stands in a pleasant spot surrounded b woods, and contains a monument to one of the Rles. It is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. Bicton Lge, a spacious mansion in a park well-wooded and a unding in deer, is the seat of the Rolles.

BICTON, or BICKTON, a joint tnshp. with Calcott, in the par. of St. Chad, Shrewsbury, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles to the N.W. of Shrewsbury. It lies on the bks of the river Severn, and is crossed by Watling Sret. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lhfield, of the val. of £60, in the patron. of the Vicar o St. Chad.

BICTON, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Clun, in t co. of Salop, 4 miles from Bishop's Castle.

BIDBROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Washlingstone, lthe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles to the SW. of Tunbridge Wells, its post town. Hops are c tivated here, and there are several mineral springs. Te living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the v of £227, in the patron. of Mrs. Deacon. The church h a Norman entrance, and is dedicated to St. Law-rce. A charitable bequest for the benefit of the poor p duces about £23 per annum.

BIDDENDEN, a par. and vil. in the hund. of Berke-ley, lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 5 miles to the E. of Cranbrook, and 13 from Maidstone. Staplehurst is its post town. It was for some time a seat of the clothing manufacture, which was introduced by the Flemings in the reign of Edward III.; at which time Sir Walter Manney had his residence here. Part of the land is laid out in hop grounds, and there are many ponds and springs in the neighbourhood. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £436, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is a handsome early English edifice, with an embattled tower, and peal of eight bells. It is dedicated to All Saints, and contains five monumental brasses, the earliest being of the year 1452, and some monuments of the Hendon family. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £74 a year, and consist chiefly of the income (£20) of the grammar school, founded by John Mayne in 1566, and £30, the produce of land the alleged gift of twin sisters, Eliza and Mary Chulkhurst, called the "Biddenden maids," who are said to have been born joined together at the hips and shoulders. They lived till the age of thirty-four, when they both died within six hours of each other. The charity was bequeathed in the 12th century, for the purpose of an annual distribution of bread and cheese to the poor; and the tradition of the two sisters is still perpetuated by figures of them stamped on the loaves or cakes given away on Easter Sunday. During the Civil War, a beacon stood near the village, communicating by Boar's Isle, Tenterden, and Coxe's Heath, with London. Fairs are held here on Old Lady Day and the 8th November.

BIDDENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Willey, in the co. of Bedford, 2 miles to the W. of Bedford. It is on the east bank of the river Ouse, which almost surrounds the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £100, in the patron. of Lord Dynevor. The church contains a brass of the year 1440, and is dedicated to St. James. It is in the Roman style of architecture, and bears evidence of great antiquity. The spire, which is covered with lead, is partially damaged by fire. In the interior is an altar-piece of tapestry, bearing date 1542, in good preservation.

BIDDESCOTE. See BITTERSCOTE, Staffordshire.

BIDDESTONE, or BIDSTONE, a par., tnshp., and vil. in the hund. of Chippenham, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles to the W. of Chippenham, its post town, and 18 from Bristol. It formerly constituted two pars., St. Nicholas and St. Peter, but they are now united for ecclesiastical purposes. The brook called the Wavering flows through the village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. with the cur. of Slaughterford, £102, in the patron. of the Warden and Fellows of Winchester College. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure, and was thoroughly repaired in 1850. It has a monument to Edmund Smith, a poet of some note at the beginning of the 18th century, who died at Hartham House, in this parish. The church of St. Peter has been taken down. There is a chapel belonging to the Baptists, and a National school. The charities amount to £23 per annum. Lord Methuen is lord of the manor.

BIDDICK, NORTH, a tnshp. chiefly in the par. of Washington, and partly in that of Whitburn, Chester ward, in the co. palatine of Durham, 4 miles to the S. of Gateshead. The workpeople are employed in the coal mines.

BIDDICK, SOUTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Houghton-le-Spring, ward of Easington, in the co. palatine of Durham, 6 miles to the W. of Sunderland. It lies near the river Wear, and the Durham Junction railway passes through it.

BIDDISHAM, a par. in the hund. of Bempstone, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the W. of Axbridge. Weston-super-Mare is its post town. It is situated on the south side of the Mendip hills, near the Bristol and Taunton canal. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the val. of £152, in the patron. of the bishop.

BIDDLESDON, a par. in the hund. and co. of Buckingham, 6 miles to the N.W. of Buckingham. Brackley is its post town. It lies on the edge of Northamptonshire, near the river Ouse, and was formerly a market town, under a grant by Edward II. A Cistercian abbey was founded here about the middle of the 12th century by Ernald de Bosco, the revenue of which amounted at the Dissolution to £142. It was given by Henry VIII. to Thomas, Lord Wriothesley. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £69, in the patron. of G. Morgan, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. There are no remains of the abbey. The principal seat is Biddlesdon Park.

BIDDLESFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Arreton, lib. of East Medina, in the Isle of Wight, co. of Southampton, 2 miles from Newport.

BIDDLESTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Allenton, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 7 miles to the N.W. of Rothbury. It is situated at the foot of the Cheviot Hills, on the river Coquet. Biddlestone Hall, a modern mansion at the foot of Silverton, one of the most southern peaks of the Cheviots, overlooking the valley of the Coquet, is the seat of the Selbys, who have held the manor since the 13th century, when it was granted to Sir Walter Selby. James I., on his progress to London in 1603, was entertained here, and conferred the honour of knighthood on five members of the Selby family.

BIDDULPH, or BIDDLE, a par. in the north div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles to the S. of Congleton, its post town. It lies on the confines of Cheshire, not far from the lofty hill called Mow Cop. The inhabitants are employed in the iron-works, the collieries, and the cotton and earthenware factories. Near the village is Biddulph Moor, inhabited by a curious set of people who live after the manner of gipsies. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £122, in the patron. of J. Bateman, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The Wesleyans have a chapel on the moor. The charitable endowments of the parish, including about £18 a-year to a school, amount to £22. Near an artificial cave lined with large unhewn stones, are the curious remains of antiquity called the Bride Stones. They stand upright, and are eight in number, two being within a semicircle formed by the other six. The manor of Biddulph was for many generations held by the family of that name, whose seat was Biddulph Hall, about a mile from the village.

BIDEFORD, a par. and market town, borough, and seaport in the hund. of Shebbear, in the co. of Devon, 38 miles to the N.W. of Exeter by road, or 48 miles by railway, and 201 miles to the W. of London. It is a station on the North Devon railway, which terminates here. The town is of considerable antiquity, and stands on the banks of the river Torridge, near an old ford, from which circumstance its name, sometimes written By-the-ford, is derived. It was a place of importance before the Norman Conquest, and was given by William the Conqueror to Richard de Granville. It possessed and exercised the elective franchise in the reigns of Edward I. and Edward II., but afterwards, by its own desire, ceased to do so. It became a market town in the latter part of the 13th century, and was made a free borough by Queen Elizabeth. The place distinguished itself in the civil war of the 17th century on the side of the parliament. Three forts were raised—two near the town and one on the coast by Appledore—which surrendered to the royalists, under Colonel Digby, in September, 1643. The trade and prosperity of Bideford was promoted by the introduction of silk weaving in 1650, and the establishment of the cotton and silk manufactures by French Protestants in 1615. A severe visitation of the plague occurred in 1680.—Bideford is about 5 miles from the sea-coast, situated on both banks of the Torridge, but chiefly on the side of a steep hill rising from the west bank of that river. The two parts of the town are connected with each other by a large and handsome bridge of 24 arches, built of stone, and 677 feet in length. It is a work of the 14th century, and was undertaken in consequence of the dream of a priest, and under the patronage of a bishop. It is under the management of trustees, who are incorporated and have a common seal, and its repair is provided for by endowments, known as the Bridge Estate. The bridge forms a delightful promenade, commanding a fine view of the broad channel and of the scenery on its banks. There are two principal streets. Many of the houses are old and poorly built, but the town is clean, well-drained, paved, and lighted with gas. There is a townhall with prisons beneath it, erected in 1698, and a hall for the bridge trustees, erected in 1758.—The shipping trade is the chief business of the place. There are many dock yards, and shipbuilding is carried on extensively. Other branches of industry are the manufacture of ropes, sail cloth, pottery, and bone-lace.—The river is navigable for large vessels up to the bridge, and for small ones to the Torrington canal, between 2 and 3 miles higher up. There is a fine quay near the middle of the town 1,200 feet in length. The port to which Appledore is subordinate, had about 140 vessels and one steamer belonging to it in 1852. The principal traffic is coastwise, but some of the vessels are engaged in the foreign and colonial trade. The chief exports are oak bark, earthenware, linens, woollens, sail-cloth, cordage, iron, corn, &c., to London and other large towns on the coast. Timber, coal, and lime are imported. A large number of boats are employed in the fishery. There are two lighthouses near the mouth of the river, one 86 feet in height, the other 40 feet; the former visible at the distance of 14, the other of 11 miles.—The charter of incorporation granted by Queen Elizabeth was confirmed and enlarged by James I. The borough is governed under the Reform Act by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, the corporation bearing the style of the "mayor, aldermen, and capital burgesses of the borough, town, and manor of Bideford." The limits of the borough coincide with those of the par., and comprise an area of 3,196 acres; with 1,211 inhabited houses, and a population of 5,851, according to the census of 1861, against 5,775 in 1851. Petty sessions for the borough are held once a month, and general sessions quarterly. Bideford is the seat of a Poor-law Union and a County Court district, and is a polling-place for the county elections. The Union poorhouse is in the town.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £633, in the patron. of Sir G. S. Stucley, Bart. The church, which was erected in the 14th century, and is dedicated to St. Mary, is a spacious edifice in the form of a cross, in the early English style of architecture, with a tower at the west end. It contains a fine stone screen beautifully carved, an ancient font, and several monuments. The original form of the church is, however, obscured by enlargements and alterations made at various times. There are chapels belonging to the Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and Bible Christians.—The principal charitable foundations are the Bridge Estate, with a revenue of £435; the free grammar school, founded at an early period, and having an income of about £40; a free school supported by the trustees of the bridge; John Strange's almshouses for seven families, founded in 1646; Henry Amory's hospital for twelve females, founded about 1664; and an endowment by Margaret Newcommen for the benefit of poor Dissenters. There are also National, British, and infant schools. The annual produce of the various endowments amounts to £500 per annum. This town was the birthplace of Admiral Sir Richard Grenville, general of the expedition sent by Sir Walter Raleigh to found the first colony in Virginia. The two Donnes, distinguished mathematicians; John Shebbear, a political writer, author of "Chrysal;" Zachary Mudge, master of the grammar school, and the eccentric Thomas Stuckley, were natives of Bideford. It also boasts of Edward Capern, the rural postman of Bideford, whose charming lyrics will long be remembered. Tuesday and Saturday are the market days, the former for corn, the latter chiefly for provisions. Fairs are held on the 14th February, the 18th July, and the 13th November.

IDFIELD, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Bisley, in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles from Stroud.

IDFORD, a par. in the Stratford div. of the hund. of Barlichway, in the co. of Warwick, 4 miles to the S. of Alcester, its post town. It is watered by the rivers Arn and Arrow, and contains the hmlts. of Barton, Bom, and Marecliff. A market was formerly held he, which has long been disused. The parish contains seral quarries of blue lias. The living is a vic. in the dr. of Worcester, val. £290, in the patron. of the Rev. T Boultbee. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. Th parochial charities, consisting of funds given by Ada, Duchess Dudley, in 1655, for various benevolent obects, produce about £110 per annum. Bidford Grange, on among the possessions of the abbey of Bordsley, is th property of Mr. Brown, lord of the manor. Near Bidford grew the crab-tree distinguished by tradition as sheltering the spot where Shakspeare and his comrades slpt a whole Sunday through after a drinking bout in th town, but it has recently disappeared.

BIDSTON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, in the co. palatine of Chester, 3 miles to the W of Birkenhead, its post town. It is situated on a tongue of land between the rivers Mersey and Dee, and includes the tnshps. of Bidston-cum-Ford, Claughton-cm-Grange, Moreton-cum-Lingham, and Saughall-Massie. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a small endowed school with an income of £10 per annum, and other charities which produce about £5 a year. On Bidston Hill, which is about 250 feet high, commanding an extensive prospect over the Irish Sea, Liverpool, and the estuaries of Mersey and Dee, is a lighthouse, which was built in 1762, and now belongs to the Mersey Dock and Harbour Board, Liverpool. It is of stone, 50 feet in height, with a fixed light visible 23 miles off. On the same hill is a telegraph station, one in a chain of 70 miles long, communicating between Liverpool and Holyhead. In the tnshp. of Claughton there is a district church called Christ Church, the living of which is a perpet. cur., in the patron. of trustees. The Birkenhead Commissioners are now constructing a cemetery in this township, with chapels for Church of England, Roman Catholics, and Dissenters; and also water-works, with water-tower, &c., for the supply of Birkenhead. In the vil. of Moreton there is a school, erected by subscription in 1861, and intended for the younger children of the neighbourhood.

BIELBY, or BEALBY, a chplry. in the par. of Hayton, wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles from Pocklington. The living is a perpet. cr. annexed to the vic. of Hayton, in the dioc. of York.

BIERLEY, EAST, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Hunsworth, and par. of Birstall, wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles from Bradford.

BIERLEY, NORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Bradford, wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, not far from Bradford, its post town. It includes the hmlts. of Bierley Lane, Wibsey, and several others. Coal and iron are obtained here, and the mines and works employ many of the inhabitants. The woollen manufacture is carried on, and there are some good stone quarries. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £130, in the patron. of Miss Currer. The parochial charities amount to £12 per annum. The chief residence is Bierley Hall, in the grounds of which stands one of the finest cedars of Lebanon in the country.

BIERTON, or BURTON-WITH-BROUGHTON, a p. and scattered vil. in the hund. of Aylesbury, co. of Buckingham, 2 miles to the N.E. of Aylesbury, its post and union town. The Aylesbury branch of the London and North-Western railway, and the Grand Junction Canal, pass through this parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val., with the perpet. curs. of Buckland, Quarrendon, and Stoke Mandeville, which are attached to it, of £310, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a structure of the 12th century, with a tower and spire, and has been recently entirely repaired. It contains an ancient piscina, and a curious monument to Samuel Pope and his 13 children, bearing date 1616. The Baptists and Methodists have chapels here, and there is a National school attached to the church. The charitable endowments, including £10 the revenue of a school, and Hill's charity for apprenticing poor boys, amount to £40 per annum.

BIESTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wrexham, hund. of Bromfield, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, not far from Wrexham.

BIGBURY, a par. in the hund. of Ermington, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles to the S. of Modbury, its post town. It is situated on the west bank of the river Avon, a little above its entrance into Bigbury Bay, a rocky and dangerous inlet of the English Channel, and a favourite haunt of smugglers. The bay is about 7 miles in breadth. The living is a rect. in the dioc.* of Exeter, of the val. of £658, in the patron. of C. Livingston, Esq. The church contains a monumental brass, and is dedicated to St. Lawrence.

BIGBY, a par. in the southern div. of the wap. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles to the E. of Brigg, its post town. The Lincoln and Hull railway passes near it. Kettleby and Kettleby Thorpe are hamlets of this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £708, in the patron. of R. C. Elwes, Esq. The church contains a brass of the year 1500, and is dedicated to All Saints.

BIGGAR, a par. in Upper ward, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 28 miles to the S. of Edinburgh. It is situated in a hilly and moorland district, on the east side of the river Clyde, and is intersected by the Candy Burn and Biggar Water. The Caledonian railway runs near it. Biggar was erected into a burgh of barony in 1451, under a charter granted by James II. to Sir Robert Fleming. In the 18th century the barony passed from the Flemings to the Elphinstone family. The town is small, consisting principally of one good street: but a beautiful modern suburb stands on the right bank of the stream. The principal building is the parish church, a plain structure in the form of a cross, which was founded and endowed as a collegiate church by the Flemings, in the 16th century. Biggar is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The living, of the yearly val. of £264, is in the patron. of Fleming of Cumbernauld. There are two places of worship belonging to Dissenters, a public library, and several schools. Near the town, on the south, are the ruins of a castle, called Bog Hall. In the vicinity are remains of a Roman camp. A doubtful tradition makes this place the scene of a defeat of the English under Whichenour, by William Wallace. Fairs for the sale of horses, cattle, &c., are held at Candlemas, Midsummer, and on the last Thursday in October (old style).

BIGGAR, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Walney, and par. of Dalton-in-Furness, hund. of Lonsdale, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, near Dalton. It lies near the coast of Morecombe Bay.

BIGGEN, NEW, a tnshp. in the par. of Shotley, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 9 miles to the S. of Hexham. It lies on the border of Durham, on the banks of the river Derwent.

BIGGES, or CARLISLE'S QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Long Horsley, ward of Morpeth, in the co. of Northumberland, 6 miles to the N.W. of Morpeth.

BIGGIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Wirksworth, hund. of Appletree, in the co. of Derby, 5 miles to the W. of Winster. Ashbourne is its post town. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £57, in the gift of the Duke of Devonshire. The tnshp. is in the honour of Tutbury, in the duchy of Lancaster.

BIGGIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Oundle, and hund. of Polebrook, in the co. of Northampton, 2 miles to the W. of Oundle. Biggin House is the principal residence.

BIGGIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Churchover, and hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 3 miles to the N. of Rugby.

BIGGIN, a tnshp. of the par. of Kirk Fenton, wap.

of Barkstone Ash, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the N.W. of Selby. It is said to have been the first place in Yorkshire where the teasel was cultivated.

BIGGIN, LOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkby-Lonsdale, ward of Lonsdale, in the co. of Westmoreland, 2 miles from Kirkby-Lonsdale. Biggin House is the principal residence.

BIGGLESWADE HUNDRED, one of the nine hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Bedford, lying on the eastern side of the co., and bounded on the N. by Huntingdonshire and Cambridgeshire, on the E. by Cambridgeshire, on the S. by the hund. of Clifton, and on the W. by the hund. of Wixamtree. It comprises the pars. of Astwick, Little Barford, Biggleswade, Dunton, Edworth, Everton, Eyworth, Hatley Cockayne, Langford, Potton, Sutton, Tempsford, and Wrestlingworth, with the chief part of Sandy. The hund. contains about 28,260 acres.

BIGGLESWADE, a par. and market town in the hund. of Biggleswade, in the co. of Bedford, 10 miles to the S.E. of Bedford, and 45 miles to the N. of London, or 41 miles by the Great Northern railway, on which it is a station. It is seated in a pleasant country on the east bank of the navigable river Ivel, about 8 miles above its confluence with the Ouse. The river is crossed by a stone bridge. Holme and Stratton are hamlets of this parish. Most of the houses in the town, which is now well drained and lighted with gas, are of modern erection, and well built, a large part of the old houses having been burnt down in 1786. The surrounding district is fertile, and the inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits, and in market gardening. The general trade and prosperity of the place is greatly promoted by its position on the great line of communication with the North by road and rail, and on the river Ivel, which communicates through the Ouse with the sea. Many of the female inhabitants are employed in lace-making and the manufacture of straw-plait. Biggleswade is the seat of a Poor-law Union and a County Court district, and petty sessions are held here by the county magistrates. Polling for the county elections takes place here. The town contains a handsome townhall, built in 1844, the Union poorhouse, and a savings-bank. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £348, in the gift of the bishop. The church, formerly collegiate, is an ancient edifice in the early English style of architecture, founded about 1230, and partly rebuilt in 1467. It is dedicated to St. Andrew, and had a chantry attached to it. It contains some brasses of 1449, and a monument to John Ruding, Archdeacon of Bedford in the 15th century, by whom the chancel was rebuilt. His arms were carved on some of the ancient seats, which were removed in 1832, when the church was thoroughly repaired, and two new galleries added. There are chapels belonging to the Calvinists, Wesleyan Methodists, and Baptists. The charitable endowments amount to £205 per annum, the chief part of which is the produce of a bequest by Sir John Cotton in 1726, for a school and other benevolent purposes. There is a small free school at Holme, founded in 1557 by Edward Peake, which has an endowment of £13. National, British, and infant schools are also established, and a mechanics' institution. The manor of Biggleswade was formerly held by the crown. An interesting discovery was made in a field at Stratton, in 1770, of an earthern jar containing 300 gold coins of Henry VI. They were of rather larger size than the halfcrown, but much thinner. The market, chiefly for corn, is held on Wednesday, and fairs on the 14th February, the Saturday after Easter, Whit Monday, the 2nd August, and the 8th November, for the sale of horses, cattle, &c. The par. has an area of 4,310 acres.

BIGHOUSE. See Tor, Sutherlandshire.

BIGHTON, a par. and vil. in the hund. of Bishop's Sutton, North Alton div. of the co. of Southampton, 2 miles to the N.E. of New Alresford, its post town, and 9 from Winchester. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £310, in the patron. of the Rev. J. T. Maine. The church is old, and contains some massive round pillars, supporting pointed arches of unequal size between the nave and the aisles. They are supposed to be as old as the Conquest. There is also a very fine ancient font. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and the eastern window is of stained glass. A National school has been recently erected.

BIGLANDS, a tnshp. united with Gamblesby, in the par. of Aikton, in the ward and co. of Cumberland, 4 miles to the N. of Wigton. It is situated on the river Wampool, and contains a sulphureous spring.

BIGNALL-END, a tnshp. in the par. of Audley, in the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles to the W. of Burslem.

BIGNOR, a par. in the hund. of Bury, rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex, 5 miles to the N. of Arundel, and the same distance to the S. of Petworth, its post town. It is situated in a pleasant country near the South Downs, and contains the hamlet of Buddington. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £—, in the patron. of Lord Leconfield. The church is in the early English style of architecture, and is dedicated to the Holy Cross. An interesting discovery was made here in 1811, by Mr. Lysons, of some fine pavement and other remains of a Roman villa at Oldbury, near which the Roman way called Stone Street passes. One of the pavements, 32 feet long and 30 broad, was adorned with well-executed mosaic work. Bignor Park is the seat of the Hawkins family. Mrs. C. Smith, the novelist, was born here.

BILBOROUGH, a par. in the southern div. of the wap. of Broxtow, in the co. of Nottingham, 4 miles to the N.W. of Nottingham, its post town. Brox—, which gives name to the wap., is a hmlt. of this par. Coal was formerly obtained here; but the works are disused. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lin— the val. of £273, in the patron. of T. W. Edge, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Martin.

BILBROOK, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cl— hund. of Williton, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the E. of Dunster.

BILBROUGH, a par. in York Ainsty, East R— of the co. of York, 4 miles to the S.W. of York. T— living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £—, in the patron. of T. L. Fairfax, Esq. The church con— tains the tomb of General Lord Fairfax, who d— 1671. There is an endowed school for 22 scholars, w— an income of about £14 a year.

BILBY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Barnby Moor, par. of Blyth, in the wap. of Bassetlaw, and co. of Nottingham, 4 miles to the W. of East Retford.

BILDESTON, or BILSTON, a par. in the hund. Cosford, in the co. of Suffolk, 5 miles to the N.W. Hadleigh, where is the nearest station of the Great Eastern railway. Ipswich is its post town. It is in a pleasant valley, watered by a small stream, a branch of the river Bret. This place was once a market town and the seat of a woollen manufacture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £346, in the patron. of the Rev. Joseph Gedge, M.A., incumbent. The church, a spacious building, contains a brass of 1— and is dedicated to St. Mary. The rectory, rebuilt within a few years, is well situated on a hill commanding an extensive view of the surrounding country. The Baptists have a chapel here, and there is a National school-house nearly in the centre of the town. The fairs which were formerly held here are now disused.

BILHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Hooton-Pagnell, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles to the N.W. of Doncaster. Bilham Row is a hmlt. of this tnshp. The district contains some coal beds, limestone, and a fine sand much used in foundries. Here is Belvidere Tower, commanding a very extensive and beautiful prospect, extending northward to York Minster and southward to Lincoln Cathedral of a clear day. Southwell Minster, also, and about 70 parish churches are visible. Bilham House, the chief residence, is near the Tower.

BILLERICAY, a small market town, and separate par. for ecclesiastical purposes under Lord Bla—

s Act, but for civil purposes forming part of the of Great Burstead, hund. of Barstable, in the co. of x, 8 miles to the S. of Chelmsford, and 23 miles to the of London. The Great Eastern railway passes it on the west, and has a station at Brentwood, iles distant. The town is of ancient origin; but been much improved of late years by the building w houses, and is now lighted with gas. It is seated eminence at the junction of the road from London ochford and Southend and that from Chelmsford to erry over the Thames at Tilbury, and enjoys a com- ding view over the Nore, the coast of Kent, and the mes, the vessels on which are often visible. The oyments of the people are agricultural; and brick- ing is carried on to a small extent. Billericay is the of a Poor-law Union, and contains the Union e. It has been a market town since the reign of ard IV., but the market is now of much less ortance than formerly, being chiefly for pigs. Poll- or the county elections takes place here, and petty ons are held once a fortnight in the market-house. living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, of val. of £120, in the patron. of the bishop. The ch is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. The tower, h is built of brick, is of earlier date than the body e church, and is now much decayed. There are els belonging to the Independents and Baptists. charitable foundations consist of the grammar l, endowed in 1654 by the Rev. Samuel Bayley, for ildren, which has an income of £120; and schools e National and British systems. Tuesday is the et day, and fairs for the sale of cattle are held on end August and the 7th October.

LLESDON, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, in the f Leicester, 8 miles to the E. of Leicester, its post t . It is situated in a beautiful valley, among the hills e east side of the county, and includes the chplries. oadby and Rolleston. Near the village is the hill alled Billesdon Coplow. Billesdon is the seat of a or-law Union, and contains the Union house. An d market-cross stands in the village. Agriculture, the making of hosiery, earthenware, &c., are the businesses of the place. The living is a vic.* in dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. with the curs. of by and Rolleston, of £279, in the patron. of Sir ur Hazlerigg and others. The church, dedicated to S. ohn the Baptist, has a tower and spire, which were lt in 1862. There are chapels belonging to the ists and Wesleyans. The parochial charities amount to 9 per annum, and include a free school endowed by veral persons, and some almshouses. In the neigh- hood of Billesdon are the remains of an extensive ent camp, covering 18 acres, and defended by a ram- and ditch. A Roman temple is said to have stood site.

LLESLEY, a par. in the Stratford div. of the of Barlichway, in the co. of Warwick, 3½ miles to the V. of Stratford-on-Avon, its post town. The living is discharged rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £100, in e patron. of the representatives of the late M. Mill, Esq., and the Rev. T. Higgins. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is stated by Dugdale to have been in his time only half the original building; and the parish now contains only three houses: Billesley Ha , the seat of Miss Miles, and two homesteads.

LLINGBOROUGH, a par. in the wap. of Aveland, par of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles to the E. Folkingham, its post town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £295, in the patron. of Earl Fortescue. The church is in the decorated style of architecture, with a good tower and spire, and is dedicated to St. Andrew. Here is a free school, founded and endowed by Mary Toller, in 1671, with a revenue of about £30. The annual value of the poor's land is about £24, and there are other charities producing about £17 a year.

LLINGE, a par. in the hund. of West Derby, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 5 miles to the S.W. of Wigan, its post town, and 4 miles N. of St. Helen's. It comprises the tnshp. of Billinge Chapel-End and the hmlt. of Winstanley. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £400, in the patron. of the Rector of Wigan. A church and churchyard existed here in the time of Elizabeth, but this was pulled down in 1717, and the present one was erected on the site. There is a parochial school, with residence for the master and mistress. The Roman Catholics have a chapel and schools here. Winstanley Hall, the seat of Meyrick Bankes, Esq., is a fine old mansion, erected in the 16th century. Billinge Hill is a lofty eminence near the termination of the Yorkshire range, rising to the height of 593 feet, and commanding a very wide prospect, which includes the Ingleborough mountain in Yorkshire, and parts of Cumberland, Cheshire, and Wales.

BILLINGE HIGHER-END, a tnshp. in the par. of Upholland, and hund. of West Derby, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, close to Billinge Chapel-End. Here are some cotton-mills, employing a small number of persons, and some stone-quarries. This township shares with Billinge Chapel-End the benefit of charitable endowments producing about £117 per annum. Bispham Hall, in this tnshp., is an ancient residence, belonging to the Holts of Bispham, but now in the occupation of V. H. Brancker, Esq.

BILLINGFORD, a par. in the hund. of Earsham, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the S.E. of Diss. Scole is its post town. It lies on the borders of Suffolk, on the north bank of the river Waveney. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. with that of Little Thorpe, of £264, in the patron. of G. Wilson, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard. The manor was held in the 14th century by Sir S. Burley, the favourite of Edward the Black Prince.

BILLINGFORD, a par. in the hund. of Eynsford, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the S.W. of Foulsham. Thetford is its post town. The river Wensum runs through the parish. A hospital for poor travellers was founded here early in the reign of Henry III. by William de Beck, to which a chapel was attached, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £360, in the patron. of the Earl of Leicester. The principal residence is Billingford Hall.

BILLING, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Spelhoe, in the co. of Northampton, 4 miles to the E. of Northampton, its post town. The Peterborough and Northampton branch of the London and North-Western railway passes near it, and there is a station at Billing Road. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £495, in the patron. of the Principal and Fellows of Brasenose College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew, and contains a monument to Henry, Earl of Thomond, to whom the manor belonged, and who died in 1691. A tablet to the memory of Caroline Elwes, who died in 1812, is adorned with a bas-relief by Flaxman. A hospital was founded here by John Freeman in the 17th century, which has an income from endowment of £33 a year. There are other small charities. This village was the birthplace of Sir J. Wake, a scholar and diplomatist of the reign of James I., the rectory being at that time held by his father. Billing Paddock is the seat of the Elwes family, to whom the manor now belongs.

BILLINGHAM, a par. in the north-eastern div. of Stockton ward, in the co. palatine of Durham, 3 miles to the E. of Stockton-on-Tees, its post town. It is a station on the Hartlepool and Port Clarence railway. The par. contains the chplry. of Wolviston, and the tnshps. of Billingham, Cowpen-Bewley, and Newton-Bewley. It is watered by a branch of the river Tees. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the coal-mines of the neighbourhood. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Durham, of the val. of £240, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church has a monumental brass of a priest, and is dedicated to St. Cuthbert. The parochial charities amount to £90 a year, including the church lands, which produce about £60, and a small endowed school. The principal seats are Billingham Grange and Haverton Hill.

BILLINGHAY, a par. in the first div. of the wap. of Langoe, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles to the S.W. of Tattershall. Sleaford is its post town. It is intersected by the cut called "Billinghay Skirth," which unites the Sleaford canal and the river Witham. The par. includes the tnshp. of Dogdyke and hmlt. of Walcott. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £500, in the patron. of the Hon. G. W. Fitzwilliam. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists have chapels here. Oatley, in the hmlt. of Walcott, was the site of a priory, founded in the reign of Stephen by Peter de Billinghay, for brethren and nuns of the Gilbertine or Sempringham order. Its revenue at the Dissolution was about £39, and it was granted by Henry VIII. to Robert Carr, of Sleaford.

BILLINGLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Darfield, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the E. of Barnsley. The North Midland railway runs near it.

BILLING, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Spelhoe, in the co. of Northampton, a little to the S. of Great Billing. It is situated on the banks of the river Nen, near the Billing Road station of the Peterborough and Northampton railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £349, in the patron. of Earl Brownlow. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and contains a curious old font. A farm-house in the village was formerly the seat of the Longuevilles, who held the manor.

BILLINGSHURST, a par. in the hund. of West Easwrith, rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex, 6 miles to the S.W. of Horsham, its post town. It is situated on the Arun and Wye Junction canal, and is a station on the Mid-Sussex branch of the London, Brighton, and South Coast railway. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £170, in the patron. of Sir C. F. Goring, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a chapel belonging to the Unitarians. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £7 a year. Billingshurst House is the chief residence. The Roman way called Stane Street passes through Billingshurst.

BILLINGSIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Lanchester, Chester ward, in the co. palatine of Durham, 11 miles to the S.W. of Gateshead. The Stanhope and Tyne tram railway passes through it.

BILLINGSLEY, a par. in the hund. of Stottesden, in the co. of Salop, 5 miles to the S. of Bridgnorth, its post town. The surrounding district abounds in coal and iron. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £195, in the patron. of the Duke of Cleveland. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. This village was the birthplace, in 1636, of Dr. Thomas Hyde, the Orientalist and Oxford professor, who took part in the preparation of Walton's Polyglot.

BILLINGTON, a chplry. in the par. of Leighton-Buzzard, and hund. of Manshead, in the co. of Bedford, 2 miles to the S.E. of Leighton-Buzzard, its post town. It is on the confines of Buckinghamshire, near the north bank of the river Ouse. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £45, in the gift of the inhabitants.

BILLINGTON, a lib. in the par. of Bradley, and hund. of Cuttlestone, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles from Stafford. In the vicinity is Billington Bury, an ancient British encampment of a circular form, and of considerable extent, with a good prospect.

BILLINGTON LANGHO, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Blackburn, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 5 miles to the N. of Blackburn. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in cotton weaving. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, and in the patron. of the Vicar of Blackburn. There is a free endowed school, with an income of £14 per annum, and other charities producing about £24 a year.

BILLISBORROW, or BILSBOROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Garstang, hund. of Amounderness, in the palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles to the S.E. of Garstang. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, and there is a school founded by John Cross in 1718, which has an income from endowment of £48 per annum.

BILLOCKBY, a par. in the western div. of the hund. of Flegg, in the co. of Norfolk, 8 miles to the N.W. of Yarmouth. Acle is its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £100, in the patron. of the Lucas family. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £3 a year. Billockby Hall is the residence of the Lucases.

BILLY, a par. in the bars. of Lower Dunluce and Carey, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 7 miles to the E. of Coleraine, and 169 miles to the N. of Dublin. The Northern Counties railway passes through the parish, and has stations at Ballymoney, Portrush, and Coleraine, each about 6 miles distant. It is situated on the north coast of the county, on the east bank of the river Bush, and contains part of the town of Bushmills, which is celebrated for its salmon fisheries and two distilleries. The Giant's Causeway forms the boundary of this parish, and presents a long tract of bold and beautiful scenery, including Dunluce and Dunsweriek Castles, much visited by tourists and geologists. With the exception of a tract of bog, forming about a third of the surface, the land is good and well cultivated. In the bog is found much fine fir timber in perfect preservation, with oak lying beneath on the rock formation. Whinstone and limestone are procured in abundance. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, Connor, and Dromore, now forming the corps of the archdeac. of Connor; it has a glebe residence and 30 statute acres of land, with a rent-charge of £ annum. In the par. of Billy, which is 6 miles long and wide, with a population of 5,000, there is one parish church, three Presbyterian places of worship, two Methodist chapels, and one Roman Catholic chapel. There are five National schools, a parochial school (under the governors of Smith's foundation), a school at the Causeway (liberally supported by Sir E. W. Macnaghten), several Sunday-schools, and some small charities. The principal residences are Dundarane, the seat of Sir E. W. Macnaghten, Bart.; Bushmills House, of Mrs Anderson; Ballylough House, and the Archdeaconry. In the month of August, the day after Dervock fair, the Causeway fair is held at Rock Head, a point above the Causeway, where tents are provided for the numerous pleasure-seekers who resort to it.

BILLY-QUAY, a vil. in the chplry. of Newcastle, Heworth, and par. of Jarrow, Chester ward, in the palatine of Durham, 3 miles to the E. of Gateshead. It is seated on the river Tyne, and contains the works of the Arkendale Mining Company, several manufactories, and a shipyard. At Catdene are some ancient and extensive stone-quarries.

BILLY-ROW, a tnshp. united with Crook, in the par. of Brancepeth, ward of Darlington, in the co. palatine of Durham, 7 miles to the S.W. of Durham.

BILNEY, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, in the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles to the N.W. of East Dereham. Swaffham is its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £142, united with the rect. of Beetley, val. £500, in the patron. of W. Collison, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Thomas Bilney, the Protestant martyr burnt at Norwich in 1531, was probably a native of this village. Bilney Hall is the chief residence.

BILNEY, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge Lynn, in the co. of Norfolk, 7 miles to the S.E. of Lynn Regis, its post town. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £60, in the patron. of J. Dale, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Cecilia. The parochial charities produce £6 a year. There is also a small allotment for fuel.

BILSBOROUGH. See BILLISBORROW, Lancaster.

BILSBY, a par. in the Wold div. of the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Linle to Alford. The hmlts. of Asserby and Thurlby are ded in this par. The living is a vic.* in the of Lincoln, val. £123, in the patron. of J. Mason, s. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. charitable endowments, including the revenue of a l school, amount to £7 a year.

ILSDALE-MIDCABLE, a chplry. in the par. of msley, wap. of Ryedale, in the North Riding of the f York, 6 miles to the S. of Stokesley. Northallers its post town. It is situated near the source of river Rye, and contains Bilsdale East-Side, and Bilsdale, and the hmlt. of Bilsdale Kirkham. The g is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £91, in patron. of the Vicar of Helmsley. The Quakers a meeting-house here.

ILSDALE WEST SIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of nby, wap. of Birdforth, in the North Riding of the f York, 6 miles to the S.E. of Stokesley. It ines the district of Easter-Side, with part of that of hill Gate, and the hmlt. of Fangdale Beck.

ILSDEAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Oldhamstocks, dingtonshire, Scotland.

ILSFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Buckland-Brewers, d. of Shebbear, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles to the W of Torrington.

ILSHAM, a tythg. in the par. of Yapton, hund. of ford, rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex, 3 miles e S.W. of Arundel. The Portsmouth and Arundel al passes through the par. of Yapton.

ILSINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Newchurch, partly in the lib. of Romney Marsh, lathe of Shepin the co. of Kent, 6 miles to the S. of Ashford. he is its post town. It is situated on the Grand tary canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the of Canterbury, val. £52, in the patron. of Lady oway. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Pa. The manor, once held by the Earls of Arunby the tenure of bearing the cup at the coronation, belongs to Lady Cosway. At a farm-house, on an elated spot in this parish, are some remains of an ustine priory, founded here in 1253 by John Manprovost of Beverley. It was valued at the Dissoon at £81, and was granted to the Archbishop of aerbury.

ILSTHORPE, a par. in the South Clay div. of the w of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 9 miles to N.W. of Newark. Mansfield is its post town. It situated within the Forest of Sherwood, and was given the Norman Conquest to G. de Gaunt. The living rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £360, in patron. of the Earl of Scarborough. The church, h stands near the ancient manor-house, once a reof Charles I., is a small building, dedicated to St. Margaret, and contains several monuments.

ILSTON, a chplry. and market town in the par. borough of Wolverhampton, hund. of Seisdon, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles to the S.E. of Wolverhampand 120 miles to the N.W. of London by road, or 12 miles by the London and North-Western railway, which it is a station. It is also a station on the Oxford Birmingham, and Wolverhampton section of the Great Western railway. The Birmingham and Staffordshire canal also passes near the town. Bilston was at remote period a royal demesne, but it remained for centuries a place of no importance. It is now one of the most populous and prosperous towns in Staffordshire. The district in which it is situated is remarkable for its mineral wealth, especially for its abundance of coal and iron. It contains also extensive and valuable depôits of clay, beds of quarry-stone of excellent quality for building purposes, for grindstones, &c., and a very fine orange-coloured sand used for casting. To these natural advantages the town is indebted for its rapid growth, and increasing prosperity as one of the centres of the iron trade.—Bilston is an irregularly built town, spreading over a tract of rising ground for about 2 miles. The principal streets contain some good and handsome residences, while in all directions around are scattered the dwellings of the workers. Above 2,500 persons are employed in the coal and iron mines.—The surrounding district is covered with the evidences, implements, and products of the manufacturing industry of the place. Foundries, forges, and smelting furnaces abound, and at night the lurid glow of the countless fires gives the locality an aspect almost unearthly and terrifying. The manufacture of all kinds of japannned and enamelled wares, and of tin, brass, iron wire, locks, screws, &c., is carried on to a large extent. Coarse earthenware is made of the clay of the district, and many hands are employed in the stone-quarries.—The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £635, in the gift of the inhabitants. The present church was erected in 1826 on the site of an earlier one, and is dedicated to St. Leonard. Two other district churches have since been erected: one dedicated to St. Mary, in 1829, a handsome edifice in the perpendicular style, with a good tower; the living of which is a cur., val. £250, in the patron. of the bishop of the dioc.; the other, dedicated to St. Luke; the living also a cur., val. £150, in the alternate patron. of the crown and the bishop. There are six chapels in the town, belonging to the Baptists, Independents, Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists. The charitable endowments consist chiefly of a fund for the augmentation of the cur., which produces £588 per annum; and the income of the blue-coat school, founded by Humphrey Perry; and of the cholera orphan school. The latter was founded for the maintenance of the 450 children left orphans by the severe visitation of cholera in the town in 1832. The town suffered from a like visitation in 1849, when there were between 600 and 700 deaths. Monday and Saturday are the market days. Fairs are held on Whit-Monday, and the Monday before the Michaelmas fair at Birmingham. Petty sessions are held, and polling for the county elections takes place here.

BILSTON. See BILDESTON, Suffolk.

BILSTONE, a chplry. in the par. of Norton-juxta-Twycross, hund. of Sparkenhoe, in the co. of Leicester, 3 miles to the N.W. of Market Bosworth. It is within the honour of Tutbury, in the duchy of Lancaster.

BILTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Lesbury, ward of Bamborough, in the co. of Northumberland, 3 miles from Alnwick.

BILTON, a par. in the Rugby div. of the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 1 mile from Rugby, its post town. The London and North-Western railway passes near it. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, of the val. of £678, in the patron. of the Rev. J. T. Parker, rector. The church, dedicated to St. Mark, is chiefly in the Norman style, with a tower and spire of more recent erection. There is a small endowed school, with a revenue of about £20 a year. The principal residences are Bilton Hall, Bilton House, and Bilton Grange. Bilton House is interesting as having once been the seat of Joseph Addison, the moralist; and afterwards the residence of his daughter, till her death in 1797. It still contains some of the furniture and pictures which belonged to him.

BILTON, or BILTON-IN-HOLDERNESS, a chplry. in the par. of Swine, wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the N.E. of Hull, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £145, in the patron. of the Hon. P. Dawnay. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

BILTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Knaresborough, and wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the W. of Knaresborough. Harrogate is its post town. There are several sulphureous springs in the vicinity. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £154, in the patron. of W. Sheepshanks, Esq. A free school, founded 1785, has an income from endowment of £30 per annum. Other small charities produce £4 a year.

BILTON, a par. in York Ainsty, co. of York, 7 miles to the W. of York. Wetherby is its post town. It includes the tnshps. of Bilton, Bickerton, and Tockwith. A Cistercian nunnery, dedicated to the Virgin, was founded at Symingthwaite, in this parish, by Bertram de Haget, about the middle of the 12th century. Its value at the Dissolution was £62. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £131, in the gift of the Prebendary of Bilton, in York cathedral. The church is dedicated to St. Helen.

BINACRE, a par. in the hund. of Blything, in the co. of Suffolk, 6 miles to the S.W. of Lowestoft. Southwold is its post town. It lies near the sea-coast and the East Suffolk section of the Great Eastern railway. In the parish is a lake called Binacre Broad, which covers an area of 100 acres, and abounds in fish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, consolidated with the rect. of Easton-Bavents and the vic. of North Hales, of the val. of £440, and in the patron. of Sir T. S. Gooch, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. In forming a road here, in 1786, an urn was found with several hundred coins of Vespasian, Trajan, Hadrian, and other Roman emperors. The principal residence is Binacre Hall.

BINBROOK, ST. GABRIEL, a par. in the southern div. of the wap. of Walshcroft, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 7 miles to the S.E. of Caistor. Market Rasen is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Ancholme, in a district abounding in rabbit warrens. The dressing of rabbit skins forms an important part of the occupations of the people. This place was formerly a market town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £291, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church has long been in ruins. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyans. The parochial charities, consisting of the church estate, produce about £80 a year.

BINBROOK, ST. MARY, a par., united with that of St. Gabriel, Binbrook, in the southern div. of the wap. of Walshcroft, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £291, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. Binbrook House is the principal residence. A fair is held on Easter Tuesday.

BINCHESTER, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Andrew Auckland, ward of Darlington, in the co. palatine of Durham, 2 miles from Bishop Auckland. It is situated on a hill on the east bank of the Wear, and derives its chief interest from the fact of its being the site of a Roman station called Vinovia, or Binovium. There is an extensive prospect from the hill, especially towards the north and south. The station appears to have occupied about 30 acres of ground, and numerous Roman remains, altars, urns, coins, &c., have been found there. Binchester House is the seat of the Wrens, who have held the manor since the reign of James I.

BINCOMBE, a par. in the lib. of Frampton, Bridport div. of the co. of Dorset, 4¼ miles to the N. of Weymouth, and 5 from Dorchester, its post town and railway station. It lies near the downs, on the banks of the river Way. In the vicinity are many tumuli, and some quarries of good stone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val., with that of Broadway, to which it is attached, of £487, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Caius College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure, without tower or spire.

BINDERTON, a par. in the hund. of Westbourne and Singleton, rape of Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, 3 miles to the N. of Chichester. Binderton House is the principal residence. The par. has an area of 1,790 acres.

BINDON LIBERTY, one of the subdivisions of the South Blandford div. of the co. of Dorset, lying in detached parts, surrounded by the hunds. of Barrow, Hasilor, and Winfrith, and partly by the sea. It contains the pars. of Chaldon Herring, Wool, and parts of Edmondsham, Moreton, and Pulham. It has an area of about 9,640 acres.

BINEGAR, a par. in the hund. of Wells Forum, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles to the E. of Wells. Shepton Mallet is its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, and in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. A horse fair is held at Whitsuntide.

BINFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Cookham, in the co. of Berks, 4 miles to the N.E. of Wokingham, and from Bracknell, its post town. It is situated in Windsor Forest. The Wokingham and Staines branch of the South-Western railway crosses the parish, and the Great Western railway passes near it. The village is scattered, but there are several very handsome mansions in the neighbourhood. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £628, including 3 acres of glebe, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a neat structure in the pointed style of the latter part of Edward III's reign; in 1848 a new north aisle was added, and the church entirely restored; in 1859 a further addition was made to the chancel. It contains monuments to Admiral Vernon and Mrs. Macaulay, the historian. There is a National school, partly supported by endowment. The parochial charities amount altogether to £82 a year. On the summit of a hill visible from the village are the remains of the extensive entrenchment called "Cæsar's Camp," defended by a double fosse. To the south of this camp, in the adjoining parish of Hampstead, is the ancient road, 90 feet wide, called "Devil's Highway." Binfield was the scene of Pope's early years, and the place where several of his poems were written, including the "Pastorals," "Windsor Forest," and part of his translation of Homer. His father's house, now the residence of Gerald Fitzgerald, Esq., is known as "The Firs;" but the beech under which he used to sit, bearing the inscription in capital letters, annually retraced, "Here Pope sang," has been blown down these many years. The inscription was originally cut by Lord Lyttleton. The principal seats are Binfield Park, Binfield Lodge, Albany Park, The Grove, The Firs, Forest Lodge, and Binfield Manor-house.

BINFIELD HUNDRED, one of the fifteen hundreds or subdivisions of the co. of Oxford, situated in the south-eastern part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hunds. of Ewelme and Pirton; on the E. by the cos. of Buckingham and Berks; on the S. by the co. of Berks; and on the W. by the hund. of Langtree. It contains the pars. of Bix, Caversham, Harpsden, Henley-upon-Thames, Grays Rotherfield, Peppard Rotherfield, and Shiplake, with part of the par. of Sonning. The area of the hund. is about 23,000 acres.

BINGFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of St. John Lee, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 5 miles to the N.E. of Hexham. The river Erring runs near the village. By the river is a remarkable mineral spring, the water of which is fatal to fish and insects. There is a chapel of ease dedicated to St. Mary, and a school with an endowment of £10 a year.

BINGHAM, a par. and market town in the north div. of the wap. of Bingham, in the co. of Nottingham, 9 miles to the E. of Nottingham, and 124 miles from London. It is situated in the Vale of Belvoir, and has a station on the Nottingham and Grantham branch of the Great Northern railway. Part of the tnshp. of Norton is included in this par. Bingham is a place of considerable antiquity, and was the site of a small college, or guild, dedicated to St. Mary. The town stands on low ground surrounded by hills, all highly cultivated. There are two principal streets, running in parallel directions, and a large market-place. The streets are well paved, and the houses neatly, though not uniformly, built. The town is the head of a Poor-law Union and a County Court district, and contains a Union poorhouse. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the annual val. of £1,503, in the patron. of the Earl of Chesterfield. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a large and ancient building, in the form of a cross, partly in the early English and partly in the decorated style of architecture, with a lofty embattled tower, and a lofty spire of later date. The church contains some elegant sculpture. The decayed roof of the chancel was put up in 1848. In the 13th century the rect. of Bingham was held in succession Archbishop Abbot, Bishop Hanmer, and Bishop Wren. The are chapels belonging to the Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists. The charitable endowments, including income of the free school, amount to £39 per annum. The manufacture of hosiery is carried on here to a small extent, but the principal pursuits of the inhabitants are agricultural. Polling for the county elections takes place, and petty sessions are held here. Several distinguished men were natives of this town or its vicinity; among whom are Robert White, the astronomer, and first editor of the "Ephemeris;" Archbishop Cranmer, Colonel Hutchinson, and Lord Howe. Thursday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 13th and 14th February, Whit-Monday, and the 8th and 9th November.

BINGHAMSTOWN, or SALEEN, a vil. in the par. of Kilmore-Erris, bar. of Erris, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles to the S.W. of Belmullet. It is seated on The Mullet peninsula, on the coast of Sheen Bay. The village has one long street, and contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, a market-house, a court-house, and a small pier. A brisk trade is carried on with Westport, and fairs are held monthly. Petty sessions are held, and a police force is stationed here. Binghamstown Castle is the seat of Major Bingham, the proprietor of the place.

BINGHAM WAPENTAKE, one of the 8 subdivisions of the co. of Nottingham, situated in the south-eastern part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the wap. of Newark, on the S.E. by the co. of Leicester, and on the W. by the waps. of Thurgarton and Rushcliff. It is in two divs., northern and southern. In the northern div. are the following pars.:—Bingham, East Bridgford, Car'olston, Elton, Flintham, Granby, Hawksworth, Kinoulton, Langar, Orston, Scarrington, Screveton, Thoroton, and Whatton. In the southern div. are the pars. of Broughton, Colston-Basset, Cotgrave, Cropwell-Bishop, Hickling, Holme-Pierrepoint, Kinoulton, Owthorpe, Ratcliffe-on-Trent, Shelford, Tollerton, and Tythby, with parts of the pars. of West Bridgford and Flawree, and the ext. par. lib. of Lodge-on-the-Wolds. The wap. extends over an area of about 35,700 acres.

BINGLEY, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Skyrack, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the N.W. of Bradford, and 201 miles to the N. of London. It is a station on the North Midland railway. The parish is situated in a pleasant and well-wooded country, and comprises the tnshp. of Bingley-with-Micklethwaite, the chplries. of Morton and Cullingworth, and numerous hmlts. The town consists of one long street, and stands upon rising ground between the river Aire on the west, and the Leeds and Liverpool canal on the east. Most of the houses are built of stone. The principal branches of industry are the spinning of yarn and cotton, the malt trade, and the manufacture of paper. The privilege of holding a market was conferred on the town by King John. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £233, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, a small building founded in the 12th century by William Paganell, and restored in the early part of the reign of Henry VIII., is dedicated to All Saints. Besides the parish church, there are two district churches, one at Cullingworth, and the other at Morton. The livings of both are perpet. curs., val. respectively £130 and £160, in the alternate patron. of the town and bishop. There are chapels belonging to the Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, and Baptists. There is a grammar school, founded in the 16th century, is endowed with property producing about £270 per annum. Besides the school-house, there is a residence and garden for the head-master. There is also a large National school. Almshouses for five widows were established and endowed by Sarah Rhodes in 1784, and there are some other charitable endowments. Bingley is one of the polling-places for the West Riding. In the hmlt. of Riddlesden is the old seat of the Maude family, who were settled here at an early period. Tuesday is the market day. Fairs for the sale of cattle, horses, and linen are held on the 25th January, the 25th August, and the two following days.

BING-WESTON, a quarter in the par. of Worthen, hund. of Chirbury, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles to the W. of Worthen.

BINHAM, a par. in the northern div. of the hund. of Greenhoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles to the S.E. of Wells. Holt is its post town. It was the site of a priory of the Benedictine order, founded early in the reign of Henry I., by Peter de Valoines and Albreda, his wife, as a cell to the abbey of Cluni, in France. The founder was nephew to William the Conqueror. At the Dissolution this priory was valued at £160. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £103, in the patron. of T. T. Clarke, Esq. The church is dedicated to the Holy Cross. It is a beautiful and interesting structure, being part of the old conventual church, and has a good west front in the early English style. It contains several Norman arches, some ancient stalls, and an octagonal font adorned with sculpture. Close by is an old cross. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £55 per annum.

BINHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, and hund. of Williton, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles from Watchet.

BINLEY, a tythg. in the par. of St. Mary Bourne, hund. of Upper Evingar, in the co. of Southampton, 6 miles to the N. of Andover.

BINLEY, a par. and vil. in the Kirby div. of the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 3 miles E. from Coventry, and 2 from Brandon railway station. It is situated on the river Sow, and contains the lib. of Earnsford. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £52, in the patron. of Earl Craven, who is also lord of the manor and sole proprietor of the parish. The church, which was erected by the sixth Earl Craven, in 1772, is an elegant structure in the Grecian style, and dedicated to St. Bartholomew. At the east end is a stained window, representing the Holy Family. There is a village school, supported by Lady Craven. Thomas Wagstaffe, author of a work in defence of Charles I., and also chaplain to the Pretender, was a native of this village; he died in Rouen in 1770.

BINNINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Willerby, wap. of Dickering, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles to the S.W. of Scarborough. The York and Scarborough railway passes through this township.

BINNY, or BINNING, EAST and WEST, vils. in the par. and co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 2 miles from Uphall. They are seated at the foot of Binny Craig, 450 feet in height, on the banks of Binning Burn. The ancient par. of Binning, of which these vils. were part, has been incorporated with Linlithgow. From that parish the Earl of Haddington takes the title of baron.

BINSCOE, a vil. in the par. of West Tanfield, wap. of Hallikeld, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles from Masham.

BINSCOMB, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Godalming, in the co. of Surrey, near Godalming.

BINSEY, a par. in the lib. of the city of Oxford, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles to the N. of Oxford. It is on the banks of the river Thames. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £90, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Christ Church, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret.

BINSTEAD, a par. in the lib. of East Medina, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Southampton, 6 miles to the N.E. of Newport. It is situated in a pleasant spot on the north coast of the island, about 1 mile west of Ryde, its post town. In the vicinity are some fine woods, and the ancient stone-quarries which supplied the material for the erection of Winchester Cathedral. Quarr, about a mile to the west of the village, was the site of the Cistercian abbey founded by Baldwin de Redvers, or Rivers, afterwards Earl of Devonshire, in the year 1132. It was dedicated to the Virgin, and was valued at the Dissolution at £184. The spot was well chosen, having a good sea view, and sheltered landwards by rich woods. The walls may still be traced, and inclose a space of about 30 acres. There are remains of the church and the refectory, the latter being now used as a barn.

The founder and his lady were interred there. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £80, in the patron. of the bishop. The old church, which was very small, was taken down and rebuilt upon an enlarged area in the year 1844. It is dedicated to the Holy Cross. There is a National school, erected in 1854. Binstead Cottage is one of the numerous villa residences which stud this delightful coast. Quarr Abbey House, the seat of Admiral Sir Thomas Cochrane, Bart., is a handsome stone mansion, recently finished; and several others are in course of erection. John Fleming, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

BINSTED, a par. in the hund. of Alton, Alton div. of the co. of Southampton, 4 miles to the E. of Alton, its post town, and 7 S.W. from Farnham. It includes the hmlts. of Issington, Week, Westcote, and Wheatley. Part of the land is laid out in hop-grounds. The village, which is a place of some importance, is situated 1¼ mile S.W. from Bentley railway station. The living is a vic.* annexed to the perpet. cur. of Kingsley, in the dioc. of Winchester, of the joint annual val. of £465, in the gift of the dean and chapter. The church of the Holy Cross is an ancient structure, with a low square tower, surmounted by a spire. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here, and there is a parochial school supported by voluntary contributions. The parochial charities amount to £2 a year. Lord Sherborne is lord of the manor.

BINSTED, a par. in the hund. of Avisford, rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex, 3 miles to the W. of Arundel, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Earl of Newburgh. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BINTON, a par. in the Stratford div. of the hund. of Barlichway, in the co. of Warwick, 4 miles to the W. of Stratford-on-Avon, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Avon, over which is a bridge. In the Saxon times this parish formed part of the domains of the abbey of Evesham, and in Domesday Survey it is called Benintone. The manufacture of needles and fish-hooks is carried on here, and there are several extensive quarries of limestone for paving. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £140, in the patron. of the Marquis of Hertford. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There is a National school, and the charitable endowments amount to £4 a year.

BINTREE, a par. in the hund. of Eynsford, in the co. of Norfolk, 1 mile from Foulsham. Reepham is its post town. It is situated on the river Wensum. The living is a rect., to which that of Hemelsthorpe is annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £462, in the patron. of Lord Hastings. The church is dedicated to St. Swithin. This parish has the enjoyment of charitable bequests producing about £47 per annum.

BIRBECK-FELLS, a tnshp. in the pars. of Orton, Crosby-Ravensworth, and Shap, the first being in East ward, the two latter in West ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 4 miles to the W. of Orton. It lies in a wild hilly country, watered by a small stream, named after the township, which falls into the river Lune. The Lancaster and Carlisle railway passes this place. The township shares the benefit of a free school at Greenholme, endowed in 1733 by George Gibson.

BIRCH, an extensive vil. in the tnshp. of Rusholme, and par. of Manchester, hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles to the S. of Manchester, of which it forms a suburb. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £160, in the gift of Sir J. W. H. Anson, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. James. Birch Hall is the principal residence.

BIRCH, a chplry. in the par. of Middleton, hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, not far from Middleton. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the gift of the Rector of Middleton. The church, erected in 1828, is dedicated to St. Mary.

BIRCH, a hmlt. in the par. of Warrington, hund. of West Derby, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, not far from Warrington.

BIRCH, a tnshp. joined with Lythe, in the pa Ellesmere, hund. of Pimhill, in the co. of Salop, n from Ellesmere.

BIRCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Baschurch, hun Pimhill, in the co. of Salop, 7 miles to the N.W Shrewsbury.

BIRCHALL. See BIRCHOLT, Kent.

BIRCHAM-CLIFFE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of L ley, and par. of Huddersfield, wap. of Agbrigg, in West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the N.W Huddersfield.

BIRCHAM, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Sn don, in the co. of Norfolk, 7 miles to the S.W. of K ham Westgate. Rougham is its post town. The l is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val of £ in the patron. of A. Hamond, Esq. The church is d cated to St. Mary.

BIRCHAM-NEWTON, a par. in the hund. of Sn don, in the co. of Norfolk, close to Great Bircham. living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the with that of Bircham Tofts annexed, of £134, a patron. of the Marquis of Cholmondeley. The ch is dedicated to All Saints.

BIRCHAM TOFTS, a par. in the hund. of Sm don, in the co. of Norfolk, close to Great Bircham. living is a rect. annexed to that of Bircham-Ne in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated Andrew.

BIRCHANGER, a par. in the hund. of Uttlesf the co. of Essex, 2 miles to the N.E. of Bishop ford, its post town. The Great Eastern railway p near it. A hospital was founded here by de Newport, in the reign of John, which was valu the Dissolution at about £32. The living is a rect the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £218, in the p of the Warden and Fellows of New College, Oxf The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BIRCHER, a tnshp. in the par. of Yarpole, hun Wolphy, in the co. of Hereford, 5 miles to the N.W Leominster. Bircher Common is about a mile from village.

BIRCHES, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budw hund. of Northwich, in the co. palatine of Ches miles to the E. of Northwich.

BIRCHET'S GREEN, a small vil. in the par Wargrave and Hurley, in the co. of Berks, 8 miles Reading, and 4 from Twyford station on the G Western railway. It is situated on a commanding adjoining the beautiful demesne of Sir Last Ca East, Bart., and enjoys an extensive view over the rounding country.

BIRCH, GREAT and LITTLE, a par. in th chester div. of the hund. of Lexden, in the co. of E 4 miles to the S.W. of Colchester, its post town. A fortress formerly existed here, of which there are remains. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ro ter, val. £469, in the patron. of the bishop and Round, Esq., alternately. The church is dedicat St. Peter. The parish church of Little Birch, ded to St. Mary, has long been in ruins. The par charities amount to £2.

BIRCHINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Ring lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles t W. of Margate, its post town. It lies near the coast, and is a member of Dover Cinque port. living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of M ton, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church is d cated to All Saints. It is an ancient structure, w tower and spire, and has a chapel attached to it bel ing to the manor of Quex, and containing five bra the earliest being of the year 1449, and several m ments to the Crispes, of Quex. The old manor-ho now converted into a farm-house. There is a free s founded and endowed by Anna G. Crispe, in 1707, an income of about £40.

BIRCH, LITTLE, a par. in the upper div. hund. of Wormelow, in the co. of Hereford, 6 mi the S. of Hereford. Ross is its post town. The is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. of in the patron. of the Rev. S. Thackwell, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BIRCH, MUCH, or GREAT, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Wormelow, in the co. of Hereford, close to Little Birch. Hereford is its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £106, in the gift of T. G. Symons, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charitable endowments produce £7 per annum.

BIRCHOLT, or BIRCHALL, a par. in the franchise and par. of Bircholt, lathe of Shepway, in the co. of Kent, 4 miles to the E. of Ashford, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £50, in the patron. of Sir N. J. Knatchbull, Bart. The church, long since dilapidated, was dedicated to St. Margaret.

BIRCHOLT FRANCHISE and BARONY, one of the subdivisions of the lathe of Shepway, in the co. of Kent, bounded by the hunds. of Stouting and Street, on the N., E., and S., and by the hunds. of Ham, Chart, and Longbridge and Wye on the W.; and containing the pars. of Bircholt, Brabourne, Hastingleigh, Smeeth, with part of Aldington. It has an area of about 10,100 acres.

BIRCHOVER, a chplry. in the par. of Youlgreave, hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 1 mile from Winster. It is in the honour of Tutbury, and duchy of Lancaster.

BIRCHWOOD, NETHER, a hmlt. in the par. of Alfreton, hund. of Scarsdale, in the co. of Derby, 2 miles to the S.E. of Alfreton.

BIRDALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Wharram-Percy, wap. of Buckrose, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S.E. of New Malton. It is united with Ruston-Parva.

BIRDBROOK, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, in the co. of Essex, 3 miles to the S. of Haverhill. Halstead is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £600, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Clare Hall, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Austin. The principal seat is Birdbrook Hall. The Roman road to Colchester passes through Birdbrook, and various relics of antiquity have been found here.

BIRDENBURY. See BREDENBURY, Herefordshire.

BIRDFORTH, a chplry. in the par. of Coxwold, wap. of Bulforth, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S.E. of Thirsk. Easingwood is its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £4, in the patron. of the archbishop. This place has given name to the hundred.

BIRDFORTH WAPENTAKE, one of the 11 waps. or subdivisions of the North Riding of the co. of York, bounded on the N. by the wap. of Langbaurgh; on the E. by that of Ryedale; on the S. by that of Bulmer; and on the W. by those of Allertonshire and Hallikeld. It comprises the pars. of Old Byland, Cowsby, Coxwold, Forcett, East Harlsey, Hawnby, Husthwaite, Kilburn, Kilvington, Cold Kirby, Kirby Knowle, South Otterington, Over Silton, Thirkleby, Thirsk, and Welbury, with parts of the pars. of Ampleforth, Leak, Cundall, Kirk-Wiske, North Otterington, and Topcliffe, and the extr. lib. of Morton. The wap. comprises an area of about 97,000 acres.

BIRDHAM, a par. in the hund. of Manhood, rape of Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, 3 miles to the S.W. of Chichester. It lies near the sea-coast, on the Portsmouth and Arun canal, near its junction with Chichester harbour. The South Coast railway runs near the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, of the val. of £396, in the patron. of the dean and chapr. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard.

BIRDHILL, a hmlt. in the bar. of Owney, co. of Tipperary, in the prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles from Newport. The principal residence is Birdhill House.

BIRDINGBURY, or BIRBURY, a par. in the Southam div. of the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 4 miles to the N.E. of Southam. Rugby is its post town. It is a station on the Leamington and Rugby branch of the London and North-Western railway, and is situated on the bank of the river Leame. This place was one of the possessions of the abbey at Coventry, founded by Earl Leofric. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £120, in the patron. of Sir T. Biddulph, Bart., who is also lord of the manor. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard. Birdingbury Hall is the seat of the Biddulphs, who take their name from the village of Biddulph, in Staffordshire, and who have held that manor since the Conquest.

BIRDLIP, a vil. in the hund. of Dudstone and Rings Barton, in the co. of Gloucester, 5 miles to the S.E. of Gloucester. It is seated in a fine country, under Birdlip Hill, not far from Whitcomb Park, the seat of the Hicks family. The ancient way called Ermine Street passes over Birdlip Hill, from which there is a fine view over the surrounding country.

BIRDRIDDING, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Carlton-Highdale, and par. of Coverham, wap. of Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the S.W. of Middleham.

BIRD'S GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Beauchamp-Roothing, hund. of Ongar, in the co. of Essex, 9 miles to the S.W. of Dunmow.

BIRDSALL, a par. in the wap. of Buckrose, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S. of New Malton, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £40, in the patron. of the Marquis of Hertford. The church, erected by Lord Middleton in 1824, is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities amount to £3 a year. The chief residence is Birdsall Hall, formerly a seat of Lord Middleton.

BIRDSTONE, a vil. in the par. of Campsie, Stirlingshire, Scotland.

BIRDWELL, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Worsbrough, and par. of Darfield, in the wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles from Barnesley. It is a station on the South Yorkshire railway.

BIRDWELL FLAT, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Swinton, and par. of Wath-upon-Dearne, in the wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the N.E. of Rotherham.

BIRGHAM, or BRIGHAM, a vil. in the par. of Eccles, Berwickshire, Scotland, on the road from Coldstream to Kelso. Here it is said that William the Lion, in 1188, denied the authority of the English Church to collect money in Scotland for a crusade; and, in 1290, the Treaty of Brigham was signed here, respecting peace between England and Scotland, and the proposed marriage between the Prince of Wales and the Princess Margaret of Scotland, who died the same year on her voyage to Scotland from Norway.

BIRKBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Cross Canonby, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 1 mile from Maryport. The Carlisle and Maryport railway passes through it.

BIRKBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Muncaster, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 2 miles from Ravenglass. Birkby Fell is the site of an ancient town called Barnscar, the ruins of which extend over an area of about 300 square yards. Coins have been found there.

BIRKBY, a par. in the wap. of Allertonshire, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N. of Northallerton, its post town. Hutton Bonville is a chplry., and Kirkby and Little Smeaton a tnshp. of this par. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £172, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

BIRKDALE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of North Meols, hund. of West Derby, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 7 miles to the N.W. of Ormskirk. Southport is its post town. It is situated on the sea-coast, and is a station on the Liverpool and Southport railway. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £200, in the patron. of trustees. The church, which has been recently erected, is dedicated to St. James.

BIRKDALE, a hmlt. in the par. of Dufton, East Ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 8 miles to the N.E. of Appleby.

BIRKDALE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Muker, and par. of Grinton, wap. of Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, not far from Muker.

BIRKENHEAD, a parliamentary borough, seaport, and market town, in the lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, in the co. palatine of Chester, 13 miles to the N.W. of Chester, and 203 miles from London by road, or 193 miles by railway. It is situated on the west bank and near the mouth of the river Mersey, opposite to Liverpool, of which port it is a dependency. Although a chplry., in the par. of Bidston, for civil purposes, it forms a separate ecclesiastical parish. It is connected with Chester and Manchester by the Liverpool, Birkenhead, and Chester, and the Manchester, Warrington, and Chester railways. The former passes under the town through a tunnel 500 yards long to the passenger terminus at Monk's Ferry, on the edge of the Mersey. There is also a branch from the old station in Grange-lane to the new goods depôts in Cathcart-street and Morpeth Dock. The town took its origin from the Benedictine order founded here by Hamon de Massey, in the reign of Henry II., which was, according to some authorities, a cell to the abbey of St. Werburgh, Chester, according to others an independent priory. It was valued at the Dissolution at £91. The building was held by the royalists during the Civil War, till 1644, when it was taken by the parliament.—Birkenhead remained a very small and unimportant place till a very recent period. Its growth has been rapid and extraordinary. In 1818 it was a village, containing a population of about 60 souls; in 1841, the number of inhabitants had risen to above 8,000; and in the next 10 years it had increased nearly threefold, amounting in 1851 to above 24,285, and has since gone on increasing in the like ratio. While the origin of the town was ecclesiastical, its modern importance is wholly commercial, and is due chiefly to the great docks which have been formed.—Birkenhead is now a parliamentary borough, having received the elective franchise in 1862, although the seat remains vacant till the next general elections. It is under the government of commissioners, appointed according to an Act of Parliament passed in 1833 for paving, lighting, and improving the township. Several Acts have been subsequently obtained, authorising further improvements and arranging various conflicting local claims and interests.—The streets are regularly planned, wide, clean, paved, and lighted with gas; there are many handsome residences, but much of the ground is not yet built upon. There is a handsome market-house, 430 feet in length by 130 feet in breadth, with a roof of iron and glass, and six entrances. The post-office is a fine edifice in the Corinthian style of architecture; part of the building being appropriated to the free library. The town also contains a townhall, a gaol, gas and water-works, baths and wash-houses, a savings-bank, and a dispensary. The docks have been formed by closing the entrance to Wallasey Pool, a natural inlet. The floating dock covers an area of about 150 acres. There are also a tidal and graving docks, with extensive and convenient wharfs, and all needful accommodations. The construction of these docks was first suggested by Mr. Laird; the first stone was laid in October, 1844, and they were opened in April, 1850. They have since been purchased by the Liverpool corporation, who at the same time secured by Act the Cheshire tidal shore of the Mersey, for about 26 miles from its mouth; thus preventing future dock-making except by arrangement. Adjoining the docks is the government emigration depôt for Australia. Branch lines of railway run to all the quays, and there is constant communication with Liverpool by steamboats.—Among the principal establishments are the Sub-Marine Telegraph Works, the iron ship-building yard of Mr. John Laird, and the Canada Works of Peto and Co. A public park has been formed, which extends over about 180 acres, and is tastefully laid out. It has six entran- that in Conway-street being a handsome Ionic arch- Next the park is a large cemetery.—The living i- perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £153, in patron. of trustees. The church is dedicated to Mary, and is in the decorated style, with a tower, spire. There are five other churches of recent erect- all curs. The living of Holy Trinity is of the val- £250, and in the patron. of the Rev. Dr. Bayley church, erected in 1837, is a large structure in the N man style, with a richly decorated tower and s- The other churches are dedicated to St. Anne, St J- St. James, and St. Paul. St. John's was erected in 1- and is in the early English style, with a tower and s- St. James's was founded in 1857, and St. Paul's in 1- There are chapels belonging to the Roman Cat- Independents (2), Baptists, Presbyterians (3), Wes- and Primitive Methodists, Quakers, and several o- Besides numerous schools connected with the - churches and the dissenting congregations, there a- theological college, dedicated to St. Aidan. It w- founded in 1846 by the Rev. Dr. Bayley, and the f- dation stone was laid by the Marquis of Blandford Duke of Marlborough. His grace has taken a l- interest in the institution, which now educates - than the 18th part of the clergy of the Church of E- land; and, from the progress it has hitherto mad- the high character of its students, it bids fair to be - of the foremost of the theological institutions o- Church of England. The present buildings were - pleted in 1856. They are a beautiful specimen - Elizabethan architecture, and the internal arrange- are highly creditable to the architect and the b-

BIRKENSHAW, a hmlt. in the par. of Birstal, - of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 7 - to the S.W. of Leeds. It is a station on the Gre- branch of the Leeds, Bradford, and Halifax Jun- railway. Coal and ironstone are obtained in g- abundance here, and many hands are employed in - cotton and woollen manufactures. The living - perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in - patron. of the Vicar of Birstall.

BIRKENSHAW BOTTOM, a hmlt. in the par- Birstall, wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of th- of York, close to Birkenshaw.

BIRKER, a tnshp. joined with Ansthwaite, in par. of Millom, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in co. of Cumberland, 6 miles to the E. of Ravenglass - is situated in Eskdale, in a district abounding in - scenery. In the vicinity are Birker Force and Stan- Gill, the former having a fall of between 60 and 70 - and being one of the most beautiful waterfalls in C- berland.

BIRKHILL, a vil. in the par. of Balmerino, in - co. of Fife, Scotland, not far from Newport. It is si- on the coast of the Frith of Tay.

BIRKIN, a par. in the lower div. of the wap- Barkstone-Ash, in the West Riding of the co. of Y- 5 miles to the E. of Pontefract. Ferrybridge is its p- town. It is situated on the north bank of the r- Aire, and contains the chplry. of Chapel Haddlesey, - the tnshps. of West Haddlesey, Courtney Hurst, - Temple Hurst. The living is a rect.* in the di- York, val. with the perpet. cur. of Chapel Haddle- £1,008, in the patron. of the Rev. T. Hill. The ch- is dedicated to St. Mary.

BIRKLE, a chplry. in the par. of Middleton, - hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaste- miles from Middleton. Bury is its post town. - living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, - £40, in the patron. of the Rector of Middleton.

BIRK-RIGGS, a hmlt. in the chplry of Hel- Lunds, and par. of Aysgarth, in the wap. of Ha- North Riding of the co. of York, near Hawes.

BIRKS, a hmlt. in the par. of East Witton, wap- Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 m- from Middleham.

BIRKSCEUGH. See Brisco, Cumberland.

BIRKWITH, a hmlt. in the par. of Horton-in-I-bleale, wap. of Staincliff and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles to the N. of Settle.

BIRKWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Crofton, and wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles from Wakefield.

BIRLEY, a par. in the hund. of Stretford, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles to the S.W. of Leominster. Weobly its post and union town. Part of the land consist of hop grounds. The living is a vic. consolidated with that of King's Pyon, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. Birley Court is the principal mansion.

BIRLEY-CAR, a hmlt. in the par. of Ecclesfield, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the N. of Sheffield.

BIRLING, a par. in the hund. of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 6 miles to the N.W. of Maidstone, its post town. Part of the parish is in hop grounds. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £158, in the patron. of the Earl of Abergavenny. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains a monumental brass. It was the burial-place of the Neville family, who once held the manor of Birling, and from whom it passed to the Says, and its present owner, the Earl of Abergavenny. The Nevilles had two seats here Birling Place and Comfort; the latter of which is now a farm-house, while of the former nothing remains but a gateway.

BIRLING, a tnshp. in the par. of Warkworth, ward of Quetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 6 miles to the E. of Alnwick. It lies near the sea-coast, on the bank of the river Coquet.

BIRLINGHAM, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Pershore, in the co. of Worcester, 3 miles to the S. of Pershore, its post town, and 11 S.E. from Worcester. It is situated on the banks of the river Avon, which nearly surrounds it. The Gloucester and Birmingham railway passes near the village, and has stations at Diffd and Eckington, about 2 miles distant. The living is a sct.* in the dioc. of Worcester, of the val. of £235, in the patron. of the Rev. R. E. Landor, incumbent. The church, dedicated to St. James, is modern, with the exception of the tower and a very ancient Saxon arch. There is a school-house, recently built and amply endowed by private charity, also eight almshouses. The Earl of Coventry is lord of the manor.

BIRMINGHAM, a par. and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, and important seat of manufactures, in the Birmingham div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, in the co. of Warwick, 20 miles to the N.W. of Warwick, and 113 miles from London by the London and North-Western railway. It is situated in the north-western corner of the county, on the confines of Staffordshire and Worcestershire, on the small streams called the Rea and the Tame, and is one of the great centres both of railway and canal communication, ranking unquestionably, for its wealth and population, as the capital of the midland counties, and one of the large towns of Europe, though not legally entitled to the designation of a city. The principal lines of railway radiating from the town are the London and Birmingham, the Grand Junction, the Birmingham, Gloucester, and Bristol, the Birmingham and Derby, the Oxford and Birmingham, and the Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Shrewsbury railways. The London and Birmingham was one of the earliest lines constructed, and the germ of the great system under the control of the London and North-Western Company. It was formed under the direction of Stephenson, and was completed in five years from its commencement, in 1833. It is carried through eight tunnels, over six viaducts, and above 300 bridges, and employs about 100 engines. Branch lines from it run to St. Alban's, Aylesbury, Luton, Bedford, Oxford, Northampton, Peterborough, Warwick, and from Hampton to the Midland Counties railway. The Grand Junction railway connects Birmingham, through Stafford, Crewe, and Warrington, with the Liverpool and Manchester line, which it meets about midway between those towns. The London and North-Western Railway Company was formed in 1846, by the union of the two companies of the London and Birmingham and the Grand Junction. The communication with Manchester is through Stafford, Crewe, and Stockport. Branch lines from the Birmingham and Bristol railway run to Tewkesbury, Cheltenham, and Dursley. The Birmingham and Derby railway crosses the Trent Valley line at Tamworth, and meets the Midland railway at Burton.—The present greatness and importance of Birmingham is of modern and comparatively recent growth, but the town itself is undoubtedly of very great antiquity. Although it is singularly unconnected with events usually called historical, and has not attracted the antiquary or the topographer, so that the notices of it from time to time are very brief and unsatisfying, there is yet enough of definite statement coupled with fair inference to show that a town has existed here from a very remote period, and that its inhabitants were even then engaged, on a small scale, in the same branch of manufacturing industry as that still carried on on so vast a scale. From its position near the iron-mines of Staffordshire, and the extensive forest lands of Warwickshire; from the numerous vestiges of ancient mining works in the neighbourhood, consisting of a great furnace, masses of cinder, and hundreds of old coal-pits, it is probable that to this place belongs the honour of being the earliest seat of the iron manufacture in England. It has even been asserted that in this neighbourhood were fashioned the necessary tools and implements for working the rich tin-mines of Cornwall in the days when Phœnician merchants first traded thither; and that those chariot scythes which made the resistance of the Britons so formidable to the Romans were manufactured here first. Considerable diversity is found in the spelling of the name of this town at different periods. In the Norman survey it is called Bermengeham. But the question of priority and correctness remains unsettled between that form and another differing much from it—Bromwycham. Those antiquaries who support the former derive it from the great British tribes of the Brummings and Bermings, who inhabited this part of the country. Those who prefer the latter seek for the derivation of the name in a Saxon origin; and there are two facts of interest and importance which certainly favour the latter: one, the vulgar pronunciation of the name as "Brummagem;" the other, the existence of villages and a town in the immediate vicinity which bear the names Bromwich and Bromsgrove. The first syllable of these names is the Saxon for "broom," and probably indicates the common growth of that shrub in the district. The last syllable of Birmingham is undoubtedly Saxon, and signifies "the village" or hamlet. One zealous inquirer into the matter discovers 140 variations in the form of the name Birmingham.—Birmingham appears to have been a place of importance before the Roman invasion, and to have been the seat of a small Roman station on the Icknield Street, from the occurrence of Roman antiquities in the neighbourhood. But there are no historical notices of this place before the latter part of the sixth century, when it was given by the King of Mercia to a Saxon family originally named Ulwine, or Allen, but who thenceforward took the name of the place, and were styled De Berminghams. They continued to hold the manor after the Conquest, but by military tenure under the FitzAusculphs, to whom the Conqueror had granted it. In the reign of Henry VIII. their ancient inheritance was taken from them through a base plot of Dudley, afterwards Duke of Northumberland; on whose attainder, which followed in a few years, the manor passed to the crown. Queen Mary gave it to the Marrows, a Warwickshire family, who held it 150 years, and ultimately sold it to Bishop Sherlock. It has since that time frequently changed owners. The Commissioners of the Street Acts hold the market tolls, the chief of the manorial rights, for the benefit of the town. The manor-house, or castle, a moated residence of the De Berminghams, stood near the old church of St. Martin. In the civil war of the 17th century, Birmingham embraced the popular cause, supplying swords to the parliament and refusing them to the king; and in 1642 the king's carriages were seized and his messengers arrested. In the following year Prince Rupert appeared before the town, at the head of 2,000 men. The inhabitants, joined with some of the parliamentary forces, encountered him at Camphill, and were repulsed. Some lives were lost, and part of the town was burnt by the royalists. Birmingham was the scene of serious riots in 1791. On the 14th of July in that year a dinner party was held by the Liberals to commemorate the taking of the Bastille two years before. A counter demonstration was provoked, a mob assembled, and the outburst of violence began by an attack on the house where the Liberals had met. The Unitarian chapel was next burnt down, and immediately after the residence of Dr. Priestley, the Unitarian minister and distinguished chemist, with his valuable books, manuscripts, and instruments. Dr. Priestley himself, whom the mob eagerly sought after, escaped with his family to Worcester. The riots were continued the three following days, several places of worship and many private houses being burnt; nor were the rioters, who numbered from 8,000 to 10,000 men, finally dispersed till the night of the 17th, when several cavalry regiments arrived, and put a stop to the disgraceful proceedings. In more recent times, too, Birmingham has been the scene of several tumultuous meetings. In 1839 the Chartists disturbed the public peace, and caused the first institution of the police, who succeeded in restoring tranquillity, and have ever since maintained good order in the town, to the great advantage and increase of its manufactures.—Birmingham occupies an elevated situation near the centre of England, at the south-western limit of the great central plain forming the basin of the Trent. The substratum of the district is the New Red sandstone. The surface, consisting generally of clay or gravel, is undulating, and scarcely any part of the town is flat. The scenery of the suburbs and surrounding country is very pleasant, and the air is considered healthy. Although from the character of its trade the town might naturally be expected to be deficient in cleanliness and beauty, such is far from being the case. From the sloping surfaces, the abundance of water, good drainage, improved processes of manufacture, and the general police of the town, its aspect is usually clean and agreeable. Cellar residences are almost unknown here, but a large number of persons live in narrow courts. The inhabitants are supplied with water by a company formed in 1825, who have a large reservoir at Aston, fed by the river Tame. There are also numerous pumps and wells, both private and public, and some water-carts from which the poor purchase their supply.—Before 1838 the government of the town was conducted by two bailiffs, high and low, two constables, a headborough, and other subordinate officers for the inspection of weights and measures, food, &c. The office of bailiff had gradually increased in importance with the growth of the town, and the more so from the non-residence of the lords of the manor. Under the charter of incorporation the borough is divided into 13 wards, and the government is vested in a mayor, 15 aldermen, and 48 councillors, with the style of the "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Birmingham." The mayor is the returning officer at the elections for the borough, which was constituted by the Reform Act in 1832, and returns two members to parliament, besides being a polling-place for the northern division of Warwickshire. The limits of the parliamentary coincide with those of the municipal borough, and are much more extensive than those of the parish, comprehending in addition the par. of Edgbaston, and the tnshps. of Bordesley, Deritend, and Duddleston-cum-Nechels, in the par. of Aston. The par. of Birmingham is about 8 miles in circuit, while the borough is 21 miles, including 59,090 inhabited houses, with a population, according to the census of 1861, of 295,955, against 232,841 in 1851, showing an increase of 63,114 in the decennial period. The corporation has a revenue of about £130,000.—The manufacturing industry of this great and busy town would be matter for a volum itself, and that not a mere modern handbook, but a g old-fashioned, ponderous folio. The tale would be of capital illustrations of the greatness of little thi Steam-engines and fire-arms are mighty instruments, pressing us at once with a sense of their importance. the buckle and the button, the pin, the nail, and the pen, looked at in the light of the statistics of their duction here, assume an importance that is startling Leland, in the reign of Henry VIII., speaks of mingham in a passage often quoted, as "a good ket towne," with one "paroch church." He a "There be many smithes in the towne that use make knives and all mannour of cuttinge to many lorimers that make bittes, and a great naylors," &c. He visited it in 1538, and alm same description would have suited it a century The one street, which he calls "the beauty mingham," was, he says, a quarter of a mile long streets of the present borough are said to measure 100 miles in length, and the number of inhabited increases at the rate of 4,000 per annum. But in addition to this must be noted the hundreds of erections ing up on every side beyond the limits of the bo which are connecting the town with the agricultural tricts of Warwickshire and Worcestershire on the hand, and the great mining and manufacturing nities of Staffordshire on the other. Birmingham being situated on any of the great lines of traffic, was even a post town till a time but little beyond the me of persons still living. Some curious instances ha recorded of the addresses usually put on letters to distant places to persons in Birmingham, implying possibility of a difficulty in finding it. At the of the restoration of Charles II. a new epoch of and prosperity opened for the town; when cost fashion and luxury, and the imitation of assist foreign models, gave an impetus to the production variety of costly and elegant articles. The manufacture of brass articles was soon after introduced, and rose into importance. It still remains one of the principal branches of industry, employing between 3,000 4,000 persons. The trade of Birmingham has peculiarity, that in time of war, or of threatened although the peaceful arts are stopped, there is demand for guns and other weapons. About the mi of the 17th century the manufacture of fire-arms transferred from London to Birmingham, and has been carried on to an enormous extent. During French revolutionary war the Birmingham manufactories supplied to the British government about stand of arms per month, besides an immense to the East India Company; and since the breaking of the civil war in America, the English trade country has chiefly been maintained by the supply warlike implements to either of the belligerents, a lar rate of insurance being taken for war risks. In an Act passed in 1813, a proof-house was established the purpose of testing and stamping all guns and barrels made in the town. The establishment is the direction of a master, wardens, and trustees, incorporated by the same Act. It is made felony to counterfeit the stamp. The proof-house, situated at Bath, on the canal, is called the Tower, and is surrounded by lofty walls. Several cannon are mounted in the court. The shoe-buckle, introduced at the revolution 1688, and remaining a fashionable ornament for a century, gave rise to one of the most extensive and flourishing manufactures of Birmingham. It is said that at time 5,000 persons were employed in it. After passing through an endless variety of size, shape, and pattern exhibiting all degrees of beauty and ugliness, the buckle fell out of fashion and became extinct. The button manufacture, probably commenced at a very early date has been long, and still is, carried on to a great extent. It is divided into a large number of separate branches and gives employment to nearly 3,000 artisans. In the early part of this century a very large and characteristic feature of the industry of this place was the manufac of polished steel goods (locally called toys), gold, silver, and plated articles, jewellery, chains, and an infinite variety of fancy wares, which occasioned Burke's description of Birmingham as the "toyshop of Europe." Such goods are still made, but they bear a smaller proportion to the entire productions of the town than formerly. The greatest establishments are for iron and brass founding, rolling, stamping, plating, and drawing of metals, iron roofs and girders, railway waggon and carriage building, coach and railway lamps, galvanised iron, wire drawing, metallic bedsteads, brewing, and coachbuilding. These include works for steam-engines and gasometers. New departments of manufacture have been opened by the introduction of the stamp for metal goods, of Albata and Britannia metal; and the processes of electro-typing, japanning, and glass-making are carried on to a large extent. Among the important manufactures of recent introduction are those of the steel pen, the pin, and the umbrella. One manufactory alone is said to employ 300 hands, many of them women, and to produce 36 millions of steel pens annually. The production of nails and screws is enormous. Other important branches of industry are, modelling, die-sinking, and the manufacture of brass and other tubing. The skill of the artist is more and more in demand, and the number of designers, engravers, carvers, chasers, die-sinkers, lithographers, and modellers at work, is considerable, and every year increases in proportion as the national taste becomes elevated. In fact, the importance of artistic skill in the manufactures can scarcely be over-estimated, as it not only affects their value in England, but their demand throughout the world. The better to facilitate this object the Government has founded a School of Design at Birmingham, and there is a local Society of Arts who hold a yearly exhibition, and have a School of Art and an Art-Union. Occasionally an exhibition of arts and manufactures is held on a large scale; and so successful do these means appear to have been in elevating the quality of English manufactures, that this rapid improvement specially attracted the attention of the French Commissioners for the International Exhibition of 1862, and occasioned them to point out the necessity of the adoption of similar measures in France.

The introduction of steam power in 1780 was followed by an immense extension of trade and production. The work performed by the steam-engines of Birmingham in 1829 was calculated to be equal to the labour of 86,000 men, and is now probably doubled. Gas was first successfully used for the purpose of lighting in the famous Soho Works, near Birmingham, founded by Matthew Boulton, and long conducted by him in partnership with James Watt. The works were illuminated with gas, under the direction of Mr. Murdoch, in 1802, on occasion of the peace with France. In these works also the steam-engine was first used in 1780. The manufacture of the copper coinage issued in 1792 and following years was undertaken by Mr. Boulton; and to the firm, still bearing the name of Boulton and Watt, Soho Mint, is entrusted the preparation of the new bronze money introduced in 1861. The order from Government was for 1,800 tons of bronze pennies, &c., and will occupy between two and three years in the execution.—The principal inhabitants of Birmingham form a large commercial class, consisting of merchants, accountants, agents, and stockbrokers, and a great body of clerks. The Chamber of Commerce was established in 1813, and exercises a vast influence, not only in Birmingham, but throughout the kingdom. The circulation is in Bank of England notes, for the ready conversion of which into bullion there is a branch Bank of England, besides many local banks. There are freehold land and building societies, besides joint-stock companies for canals, gas, insurance, and other purposes connected with the Birmingham trade, which is considered by foreign nations of sufficient importance to require the presence of resident consuls, though Birmingham is an inland town. The town is about 2 miles long, and nearly the same in breadth, and is adorned with many handsome edifices, although there are few ancient buildings. The chief streets are High-street, New-street, Bull-street, Snow-hill, Digbeth, and Dale-end; many great improvements have been made in the streets of late years.—For civil purposes Birmingham is still one parish; but during the last century and a half the increase of the population has necessitated the erection of thirty additional churches, in connection with some of which district parishes have been created. The original parish church is St. Martin's; the living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, of the val. of £1,048, in the patron. of Hawke's Trustees. The church, situated in the Bull Ring, is the most ancient building in the town, having been probably erected in the 13th century. It has a tower and well-proportioned spire, and contains some old monuments of the Lords De Bermingham. It has been outwardly cased with brickwork, and inwardly disguised by plaster and arbitrary ornamentation, so that its original appearance is only to be guessed at. The living of St. Philip's is a rect.,* val. £800, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church, built in 1715, stands on a hill 460 feet above the level of the sea, and has a tower surmounted by a dome and cupola. The architecture is of the Corinthian order. The triennial musical festivals took place in this church from 1778 to 1829. An extensive cemetery surrounds the church. The living of St. George's is a rect.,* of the val. of £550, in the patron. of Hawke's Trustees. The church, built by Rickman in 1822, is a handsome structure, in the decorated style, with an embattled tower and pinnacles. The living of St. Thomas's is a rect., of the val. of £480, in the same patron. The church is in the Grecian style, with a lofty tower, and is situated on Holloway Head. It was erected in 1829, and has a finely panelled ceiling. The living of All Saints is a rect., val. £250, in the same patron. In addition to these are the curs. of St. Mary, St. Mark, St. Paul, Christ Church, St. Peter, St. Luke, Bishop Ryder's, St. Stephen, St. Jude, St. Bartholomew, St. Barnabas, St. John at Ladywood, and Magdalene chapel, besides five others in the par. of Aston. In 1841 was completed the fine Roman Catholic cathedral, dedicated to St. Chad. It is built of brick, in the form of a cross, after designs by Pugin, and contains a fine screen with a roodloft, richly-carved stalls from Cologne, and a splendid pulpit of carved oak from Belgium. Near it is the bishop's residence, with chapel, library, cloisters, &c. The places of worship for Dissenters are very numerous, and include some large and handsome edifices. They belong to the Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, Presbyterians, Quakers, Unitarians, &c. The Presbyterian church, erected in 1849, is a fine structure, in the Italian style, from designs by Botham. It is about 100 feet in length, and is lighted from the roof. The Jews have a synagogue in Blucher-street, erected in 1858 at the cost of £10,000; also one in Wrottesley-street.—The educational institutions of Birmingham are numerous and important. The principal are the free grammar school, Queen's College, the blue-coat school, Oscott Roman Catholic college, Springhill Independent college, the Protestant Dissenters', Fentham's, Leach's, and other charity schools. The grammar school was founded by Edward VI. in 1552, and endowed with the estates of the Guild of the Holy Cross. It has a revenue of £10,000 per annum, and ten exhibitions at the universities of Oxford and Cambridge. The number of scholars is about 450. Attached to it are eight subordinate schools, with about 1,000 pupils. The school-house has been twice rebuilt, first in 1707, and again in 1832. The present buildings form one of the chief, if not the chief, architectural ornament of the town. They are situated in New-street. The structure, which occupies three sides of a quadrangle, is of stone, in the Tudor style, and was erected from designs by Barry, at a cost of £40,000. It is 174 feet in length, 127 in depth, and 60 feet in height. Queen's College, founded by charter in 1843, as a school of medicine, now embraces the study of theology and law. The building is in the Tudor style. The blue-coat school, established in 1722, has a revenue of above £2,000, and maintains and educates 160 children. The produce of a bequest by George Fentham in 1690, now amounting to above £300 a year, is applied to the support of from 15 to 20 children in that school. The Roman Catholic college is a very handsome structure, in the Tudor style, with a richly-ornamented chapel, oratories, refectories, and various other apartments and offices. It is of red brick with stone dressings, and was designed by Pugin. Springhill College was established in 1838, for the education of candidates for the university, and has an income from endowment of £500 per annum. At the neighbouring village of Handsworth are a convent of the Sisters of Mercy and a House of Mercy for destitute young women. There is also a branch convent of the Sisters of St. Paul, in Bath-street, and the Brotherhood of Oratorians, in Lombard-street, of which Dr. Newman is principal.—Birmingham has many charitable foundations, at the head of which may be named the General Hospital, founded in 1778 by Dr. Ash, and supported from the first partly by the produce of the triennial musical festivals. The profits of the festival have gradually risen from £127 the first year up to several thousand pounds. The building was enlarged in 1791, and contains a portrait of the founder, by Sir Joshua Reynolds. The Dispensary was established in 1794. There are also infirmaries, the Queen's Hospital, an asylum for the deaf and dumb, blind asylum, Magdalene Institution, and many other institutions for relieving the diversified wants and sufferings of the poor. The literary and scientific institutions include two public libraries, one founded in 1779, the plan of which was subsequently revised by Dr. Priestley; the other in 1796; both are supported by subscription, and contain, the former 30,000, the latter 7,000 volumes; a newsroom at Bennett's-hill, established in 1825, a handsome edifice with a Doric front; the Philosophical Society; the Society of Arts and School of Design, founded in 1821, with about 500 students, a third being females; the Polytechnic Institute; the Odd Fellows' literary institute; the Society of Artists, &c.—The townhall of Birmingham, erected in 1834, is a magnificent structure of Anglesey marble, designed by Hansom, after the temple of Jupiter Stator at Rome. It occupies an elevated site in Church-street, and is a conspicuous object from all parts of the town. The hall itself stands on a basement above 20 feet high, and is surrounded by ranges of columns of the Corinthian order, fifteen on each side, and eight at each end. The interior dimensions are—length, 145 feet; breadth and height, 65 feet. It is capable of holding 4,000 persons. In this hall is the fine organ built by Hill, one of the largest in England, being 45 feet high and 40 wide. It has 4,000 pipes, four sets of keys, and nearly 80 stops. The longest pipe is 35 feet in length. This magnificent organ is the property of the General Hospital. The musical festivals have been held in the townhall since its erection. The hall contains a bust of Mendelssohn. The Birmingham and Midland Counties Institute is a noble pile of buildings, situate in Paradise-street, near the townhall. It contains a museum, lecture-rooms, news and class-rooms, &c. The first stone was laid by the late Prince Consort on the 21st November, 1855. It is governed by a president, vice-president, and court of governors. Of the public buildings not already named must be mentioned the new borough gaol, occupying seven acres of ground at Winson Green; the large market-hall in the Bull Ring, 360 feet long, 108 wide, and 60 high, with space for 600 stalls; the corn exchange, built in 1847; Smithfield market, on the site of the old manor-house; cavalry and infantry barracks; the public office, with court-room and prison, built in 1806; the Court of Bankruptcy, County Court, post-office, union poorhouse, &c. There are also a theatre, Vauxhall pleasure gardens, botanical gardens at Edgbaston, and the Ladywell and other bath establishments. There are three cemeteries. The Rhea is crossed by a stone bridge at Deritend, which was rebuilt in 1823. In the centre of the Bull Ring is a statue of Lord Nelson, by Westmacott, set up in 1809. At the top of New-street is the handsome bronze statue of Sir Robert Peel, inaugurated on the 27th of August, 1855. It was designed by Mr. Peter Hollins, of Birmingham, and cast by Messrs. Elkington and Mason; and in front of the magnificent railway station in N. street is a marble statue, recently erected, of Thos. Attwood, Esq., to whose exertions Birmingham is mai indebted for her political independence.—The affairs the town are administered by a recorder, bench borough magistrates, town clerk, clerk of the pe coroner, and treasurer, with right of quarter sess Birmingham is the seat of a Poor-law Union, comp ing the parish; of a County Court district; of a Hon Court for the recovery of small debts under £20; and Bankruptcy Court, the jurisdiction of which ext over the surrounding counties of Warwick, Wor Hereford, Salop, Leicester, and Stafford, and parts several others. In connection with these courts the small local bar, conveyancers, above two hundred a tors, public notaries, surrogates for granting mar licenses, and law stationers. It is a registration d trict for births, deaths, and marriages, as are also A and King's Norton.—The manor is held by Lord W of Dudley, who takes the title of baron from the tow There are several newspapers published in Birmingh the principal are, the Birmingham Daily Post, a L journal, with a circulation of about 20,000 copies the Birmingham Journal, also a Liberal paper, with culation of 13,000 copies; Aris's Birmingham Gazet influential Conservative paper; the Midland C Herald, a neutral paper; and the Saturday E Post, addressed to the working classes, with a circula of 15,000 copies; besides many almanacs and n guides, &c.—The principal canals are the follow the original Birmingham canal, 23 miles long, cons in 1769, and connected, through the Stafford an W cester canal, with the river Severn; the Fazeley cut in 1790, connecting Birmingham by the Grand T canal with Manchester and Hull, and by the Co Junction with London; and the Birmingham and L pool canal, 39 miles long, constructed in 1828, joi the Ellesmere and Chester canal at Acton.—The remains of antiquity consist of the vestiges of a hosp founded in the reign of Edward I., of a priory, and large Roman camp, with a triple fosse, on Icknield Str which ran through the parish.—Many distinguished m have been connected with its history. Amongst these be mentioned John Wilkinson, John Taylor, Dr Pa ley, Watt, Eginton, Murdoch; besides Matthew Bou born in 1748; Bishop Smalbroke, in 1672; and Cary, translator of Dante, in 1772, who were natives of B mingham. The eminent printer, Baskerville, had at time a printing-office here.—Thursday has been the m ket day from the earliest times, and still is the only for the corn market, though general markets are held Monday, Thursday, and Saturday, and a hay marke held on Tuesday. Fairs take place on the Thursd Whitsun week and two following days, and the Thursday in September, also lasting three days. Th are wakes, and quarterly meetings of the freemen which take place on the second Thursday in the mont of January, April, July, and October.

BIRMINGHAM, NEW, a vil. in the par. of K cooley, bar. of Slieveardagh, in the co. of Tippera prov. of Munster, Ireland, 12 miles to the N.E. of Cas It is situated in the neighbourhood of the Kilsha coal-mines, and was founded by Sir Vere Hunt, Ba In the name given to the place the founder expres his hope of its future manufacturing importance, wh has not been realised. The markets and fairs, for wh he obtained grants, have been some time disused. T village contains a Roman Catholic chapel, a spac building in the perpendicular style.

BIRNIE, a par. in the co. of Elgin, Scotland, 4 mi to the S.W. of Elgin. It is situated in a hilly coun on the banks of the river Lossie, and is the property the Earl of Seafield. Not more than half the land under cultivation. The Lossie contains abundance trout. The living, val. £156, is in the presb. of Elg and in the patron. of the Earl of Moray. The church of considerable antiquity. It stands on a small eminen which is supposed to have been the site of one of primitive stone circles called Druidic. It is imagi t the large blocks of granite built into the walls are ains of the ancient circle. Birnie was the first seat he bishopric of Moray, and this church is probably most ancient still in use in Scotland. The large n of Kilforman, 300 feet in circumference, the Bible ne, an old landmark, and some remains of an ancient p, supposed to be a Danish work, are the other an- ities of the place.

IRR, a par. in the bar. of Ballybritt, King's County, he prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 20 miles to the S.W. of lamore. It lies on the banks of the Little Brosna r, and contains Parsonstown and the vil. of Crinkill. living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, Kilfenora, fert, and Kilmacduagh, in the patron. of the bishop. principal mansions are Birr Castle, the seat of the l of Ross, and Birr View.

IRSAY. See HARRAY, Orkney Islands.

IRSE, or PRESS, a par. in the district of Kincar- O'Neil, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 28 miles he W. of Aberdeen. It is situated at the foot of the mpian mountains, on the south side of the river Dee. district is well wooded, and is crossed by lofty hills, ch divide it into three straths, called Feughside, ter Chattee, and "Six Towns." The elevation of mountains varies from 2,000 to above 3,000 feet, loftiest being Mount Battock, 3,450 feet in height. estone is the prevailing rock, and the river contains ndance of salmon and other fish. The living, val. 8, is in the presb. of Kincardine O'Neil, and in the on. of the crown. There is a free school in the vil- . The parish extends about 6 miles in length and 5 s in breadth.

IRSELEY, a locality in the par. of Tranent, in the of Haddington, Scotland, not far from Preston Pans. C l is obtained here.

IRSTALL, a chplry. in the par. of Belgrave, and d. of Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, 3 miles to the N of Leicester. It lies on the banks of the river Soar, T manufacture of hosiery is carried on to a small ex- t in the village. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to he vic. of Belgrave. The church is dedicated to St James, and contains tombs of the Mansfields, who ld the manor. The parochial charities produce £3 a ar. The chief residence is Birstall House, the seat of he Mansfields.

IRSTALL, a par. in the wap. of Morley, in the W t Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S.E. of B lford, and 7 from Leeds, its post town. It is con- ted with the London and North-Western railway, by a ort branch line from Batley. The Lancashire and Y kshire railway runs through the parish, with stations at leckheaton, Liversedge, and Heckmondwike. Bir- st is a very large and populous par., extending over a rea of 13,656 acres, and comprising the chplries. of C kheaton, Drighlington, Gomersall, Heckmondwike, Li rsedge, Tong, Wyke, Birkenshaw, with Huns- w th, Whitechapel, and Robertown, and some ham- le The manufacture of woollen cloth is carried on he to a large extent, and many persons are em- pl ed in the coal-mines and iron-works. The living is a ic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, of the val. of £275, in he patron. of the bishop. The parish church stands in he township of Gomersall, and is dedicated to St. P r. There are eleven district churches situated in th several chapelries into which the parish is divided. T livings of all are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £ 0 to £84, with residences. There is a chapel belong- in to the Wesleyans, and a National school with a small en owment. The annual value of the parochial chari- ti is £119.

IRSTWITH, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of H psthwaite, wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co of York, 3 miles to the W. of Ripley, its post town. It situated on the banks of the river Nidd, and conta s the hmlt. of Wreak's Bridge. The living is a pe et. cur. val. £200, in the patron. of F. Greenwood, E The church was erected in 1857. Birstwith has a ure with Felliscliff in a small endowment for educa- ti BIRTHORP, a tnshp. in the par. of Semperingham, wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the E. of Folkingham.

BIRTLE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Lunedale, and par. of Romald Kirk, wap. of Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N.W. of Barnard Castle.

BIRTLE-CUM-BAMFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Middleton, hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 2 miles from Bury. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the cotton and woollen manufactures, and in calico printing.

BIRTLES, a tnshp. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. palatine of Chester, 3 miles to the W. of Macclesfield. It is situated in a pleasant and wooded country. The living is a perpet. cur in the dioc. of Chester, val. £50, in the patron. of T. Hibbert, Esq., whose seat is Birtles Hall.

BIRTLEY, a chplry. in the par. of Chester-le-Street, Chester ward, in the co. palatine of Durham, 5 miles to the S. of Gateshead, its post town. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the coal mines of the district. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £300, in the patron. of the incumbent of the parish. Salt is procured from a spring here.

BIRTLEY, a parochial chplry. in the N.E. div. of Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 5 miles to the S.E. of Bellingham. Hexham is its post town. Until the year 1765, Birtley formed part of the par. of Chollerton. It includes the joint tnshp. of Broomhope with Buteland. Coal and limestone are obtained here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £84, in the patron. of the Duke of Northumberland.

BIRTS MORTON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Pershore, in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles to the S.W. of Upton-on-Severn. Ledbury is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, of the val. of £430, in the patron. of C. Pilson, Esq. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, and contains some old monuments. There is a small free school founded in 1703, having an income from endowment of £14 a year. The ancient manor-house, called Birts Morton Court, is still standing, and is occupied as a farm house. The moat which surrounds it is in good preservation. This ancient residence was the birthplace (1770) of the Right Hon. William Huskisson.

BISBROOKE, a par. in the hund. of Wrangdike, in the co. of Rutland, 2 miles to the E. of Uppingham, its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £252, in the gift of the Duke of Rutland. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist.

BISCATHORPE, a par. in the eastern div. of the wap. of Wraggoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 7 miles to the N.E. of Wragby. Louth is its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £180, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. It is at present held by the Rector of Gayton-le-Wold. The church is dedicated to St. Helen.

BISCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Luton, hund. of Flitt, in the co. of Bedford, 2 miles from Luton.

BISCOVEY, or PAR, a chplry. in the par. of St. Blazey, in the co. of Cornwall, near St Austell, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately.

BISHAM, a par. in the hund. of Beynhurst, in the co. of Berks, 1 mile from Marlow, and 5 miles to the N.W. of Maidenhead, its post town and nearest railway station. It is situated in a beautiful country, on the banks of the river Thames. It was the site of a preceptory of the Knights Templars, founded in the reign of Stephen, and converted into a priory of the Augustine order by William de Montacute, in 1338. This priory had a revenue of about £327, and flourished nearly 200 years. It was then re-founded by Henry VIII., as a Benedictine abbey, but shortly after dissolved, and granted by Edward VI. to the Hoby family. In this parish are Temple Mills, formerly employed for the manufacture of copper articles, but now converted into paper mills. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £156, in the patron. of G. Vansittart, Esq. The church, which stands by the river, is dedicated to All Saints, and has recently been restored. The most ancient portions are in the Norman style; and the church contains some interesting monuments of the Hoby family. There is also a district church dedicated to St. James, erected in 1850, at the village of Stubbings, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* val. £108, in the gift of H. Skrine, Esq. The fine old mansion called Bisham Abbey was erected by Sir Edward Hoby, who was Speaker of the House of Commons in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. It occupies the site and was built of the materials of the ancient abbey. Queen Elizabeth, when Princess, used to reside here, and there is a well still called the Princess Elizabeth's, also a large apartment in the mansion called the Queen's council chamber, in commemoration of her residence there. The abbey was the burial-place of the founder, of several Earls of Salisbury, of the great Earl of Warwick, and other eminent persons.

BISHAMPTON, a par. in the middle div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles to the N.E. of Pershore, its post town. It is situated in the Vale of Evesham. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £103, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

BISHOP AUCKLAND, a chplry. and market town, in the par. of St. Andrew Auckland, N.W. div. of the ward of Darlington, in the co. palatine of Durham, 10 miles to the S.W. of Durham, and 248 miles to the N. of London by road, or 245 by railway from King's Cross. It is a station on the Sunderland branch of the North-Eastern and on the Stockton and Darlington railways. The town occupies a commanding situation on a hill on the south bank of the river Wear, which is here joined by the small river Gaunless, running along the east side of the town. This place took its name Auckland (Oakland) from the abundance of oaks which anciently flourished here, and the addition "Bishop" from the fact of the manor belonging to the bishops of Durham, who have a palace near the town. The district is fertile, and contains abundance of coal and limestone, the working of which employs many persons. The cotton manufacture is carried on to a small extent. The town, which stands about 140 feet above the surrounding country, is well-built, the streets are paved, and there is a good supply of water. It contains a large market-place. The steep sides of the hill are pleasantly laid out in garden grounds. Bishop Auckland is said to be a borough by prescription. It is the head of a County Court district, and the seat of a Poor-law Union, and contains the union house. It is a polling-place for the county elections, and petty sessions are held once a month. There is a savings-bank. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val., with that of St. Andrew's, £587, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a modern building, dedicated to St. Anne. There are chapels belonging to the Independents, Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, and New Connexion Methodists. The charitable endowments are numerous, and produce nearly £500 a year. The principal foundation is the National school for 200 boys, established in 1810 by Bishop Barrington, which, with the School of Industry for girls, founded a few years later by the same benefactor, has an income from endowment of about £365 per annum. The free grammar school, founded by James I., has a revenue of £42 a year. Another free school for 20 boys was founded in 1772; and almshouses for four persons were endowed by Bishop Cosins in the reign of Charles II. The episcopal palace stands on the north-east side of the town, in a fine park extending over 800 acres of ground, and watered by the river Gaunless. The terraces near the palace command beautiful and varied prospects of pasture and woodland, and the rich grounds along the banks of the Wear. The palace was originally founded by Bishop Antony Beke, in the reign of Edward I., but received considerable additions from various succeeding prelates. After the fall of Charles I. it was given to Sir Arthur Haselrig, who took it down and built a new mansion with the material, which was in turn taken do after the Restoration by Bishop Cosins. The pres structure, with the beautiful chapel, was then cre by him. The fine Gothic gateway and screen, form the entrance from the town, were built by Bishop B rington, from designs by Wyatt. In the palace several valuable paintings, including the "Corn Family," by Titian, and the "Patriarchs," by Sp noletto. The altar-piece of the chapel is the "Res rection," by Sir Joshua Reynolds. Bishop Cosins, w died in 1674, was interred here, and his tomb is mark by a simple stone. The chapel contains a monume Bishop Trevor, who died in 1771. It is a fine work Nollekens. One mile from the town is Newton C small village on the Wear, which is there crossed b curious old bridge, erected by Bishop Skirlaw, a 1390. It consists of two arches, differing in form span; one being round and the other pointed the s mer having a span of 101 feet, the latter of only 20 Thursday is the market day. Fairs are held in months of March and October.

BISHOPBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Glentha in the eastern div. of the hund. of Aslacoe, part Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 9 miles to the S.W Caistor.

BISHOPBRIGGS, a vil. in the par. of Cad Lanarkshire, Scotland, 4½ miles from Glasgow.

BISHOP BURTON, a par. in the Hunsley Bea div. of the wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding co. of York, 2 miles to the W. of Beverley, its p town. The archbishops of York had formerly a s here. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York £100, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. T church is dedicated to All Saints. It stands on a h the centre of the village, commanding a fine view the pleasant landscape around. There is a chapel longing to the Baptists. The charitable endowm include a free school for 10 children, founded in 1714 Elizabeth Gee, which has an income of £20 a year; four almshouses, founded in 1614 by Ralph H with a revenue of about £72. Burton Hall is the residence.

BISHOP DALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Aysgar and wap. of Hang, in the North Riding of the co York, 4 miles to the S.E. of Askrigg. It lies in a trict abounding in beautiful scenery, on the banks small stream, a branch of the river Ure. There are picturesque waterfalls.

BISHOPDOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Cha Bishop, hund. of Sherborne, in the co. of Dorset, 1 to the S. of Sherborne.

BISHOPLEY, a joint tnshp. with Newland Side the par. of Stanhope, ward of Darlington, in the palatine of Durham, 5 miles from Walsingham.

BISHOPMILL, a vil. in the co. of Moray, Scotla near Elgin. It is seated on the banks of the r Lossie. See ELGIN.

BISHOP MONKTON, a tnshp. in the par and lib Ripon, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 mile the S.E. of Ripon. The living is a perpet. cur. in dioc. of Ripon, val. £100, in the patron. of the d and chapter.

BISHOP MORCHARD, a par. in the hund. of Cre ton, in the co. of Devon, 7 miles to the N.W. of Cre ton. At Morchard Road is a station of the North Dev and Exeter and Crediton branches of the South-Weste railway. The river Taw runs near the village. T living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val £533, in the patron. of R. H. Tuckfield, Esq. T church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BISHOP NORTON, a par. in the eastern div. of t wap. of Aslacoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Linco 8 miles to the W. of Market Rasen. Kirton-in-Lindse is its post town. It includes the tnshp. of Attley. T living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £185, in t patron. of the Prebendary of Bishop Norton in Linco Cathedral. The church is dedicated to St. John.

BISHOP RYDER, a hmlt. in the borough of Bi mingham, hund. of Hemlingford, in the co. of Warwi ne Birmingham. The living is a perpet. cur. in the di. of Worcester, in the patron. of trustees.

ISHOPSBOURNE, a par. in the hund. of King-hford, lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, 3 m s to the S.E. of Canterbury, its post town. It is w ered by the Little Stour. The manor of Bourne was fo erly held by the archbishops of Canterbury, one of whom entertained Henry I. here when prevented by a orm from embarking for the Continent. Part of the la l is laid out in hop-grounds. The living is a rect.* in e dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £700, in the gi of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. M y, and contains the grave and a bust of Richard H ker, who held the rectory the last five years of his li and died here in November, 1600. Bourne House is th principal mansion.

ISHOP'S CANNINGS, or CANNINGS EPIS-C PI, a par. and scattered vil. in the hund. of Potterne d Cannings, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles to the N.E. o Devizes, its post town, and 24 N. of Salisbury. It is uated on the Kennet and Avon canal, and includes th chplries. of South Broom and Chittoe, and the tythgs. o Bourton with Easton, Coate, Horton, and St. James. Th living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the va of £351, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. Th church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a spacious and ient edifice, in the early English and Norman styles, h ing much resemblance to Salisbury cathedral. From th intersection of the cruciform structure, rises a lofty w r, surmounted by a spire 230 feet from the ground, wi turret and parapet. The interior is divided by p ted arches, supported on cylindrical pillars, and th chancel has a groined ceiling and richly painted ea windows, representing Christ raising Jairus's d ghter. The organ, which cost £400, was presented in 809, by William Bayley, a native of this village, wh accompanied Captain Cook in his circumnavi-gaon of the globe. There is a National school, built in 830. A large part of the parish was recently pur-ch ed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who hold th manor.

ISHOP'S CASTLE, a par., market town, and m icipal borough, in the Bishop's Castle div. of the Hu d. of Purslow, in the co. of Salop, 18 miles to the S.W. of Shrewsbury, and 159 miles to the N.W. of L don. It lies near the border of Wales, not far from a unch of the river Clun, and was formerly the site of a c stle, the seat of the bishops of Hereford, from which it rives its name. The par. contains the tnshps. of B ghton, Colebatch, Lee, with Oakley and Woodbatch. Th town is built on the side and summit of a hill, and co ains a townhall, with two prisons, erected in 1750, an a handsome stone market-house of modern erection. Th re are a few good houses, but the majority are poorly bu , and thatched. Queen Elizabeth granted the town a charter of incorporation, and soon after the elective franchise. Under that charter, extended by James I., th government of the borough is vested in a bailiff, re order, and 15 burgesses, with subordinate officers. It returned two members to parliament till the Reform Ac when it was disfranchised. Quarter sessions for the b ough are held, and polling for the county elections ta s place here. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of H reford, of the val. of £350, in the patron. of the Earl of Po is. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. Th body of the building is modern, having been e ted after the destruction of the old church in the ci l war of the reign of Charles I. The ancient tower, a square embattled structure in the Norman style, still re ains. A free school for 50 children of both sexes w founded here in 1737, by Mary Morris, and has an in me from endowment of £48 a year. There are other sm ll charities, producing about £13 per annum. A N onal school for 200 children was established in 1839. Th town was the birthplace of Jeremy Stephens, the as tant of Sir Henry Spelman in compiling his "Engli Councils." Friday is the market day. Fairs for th sale of cattle and sheep are held on the 13th Febru y, the Friday before Good Friday, the 5th July, the 9th September, and the 13th November. A hiring and pleasure fair is held on the Friday after May-day.

BISHOP'S CAUNDLE. See CAUNDLE-BISHOP, Dorsetshire.

BISHOP'S CLEEVE HUNDRED, one of the 27 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Gloucester, situated in the north part of the co., and surrounded by the hunds. of Tewkesbury, Deerhurst, Kiftsgate, and Cheltenham, and the co. of Worcester. It comprises the par. of Bishop's Cleeve.

BISHOP'S CLEEVE, a par. in the hund. of the same name, in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles to the N. of Cheltenham, its post town. It is a station on the Bristol and Birmingham section of the Midland railway. The par. includes the hmlts. of Gotherington, Stoke Orchard, Southam with Brockhampton, and Woodmancott. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the val. of £1,574, in the patron. of the Rev. W. L. Townsend, incumbent. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a large ancient structure in the form of a cross, with a central tower of modern erection, and exhibits various styles of architecture, from the Saxon downwards. It has a fine Norman arch at the west end, and contains monuments of a crusader, and of the De la Veres of Southam House. The rectory house was formerly a residence of the bishops of Worcester, to whom the village belonged. On Cleeve Hill is a large ancient entrenchment, of a crescent shape, supposed to be a British work. On the same hill the Cheltenham races annually take place. There are mineral springs in the vicinity.

BISHOP'S FEE, a lib. in the par. of St. Margaret's, in the borough and co. of Leicester.

BISHOP'S FONTHILL, a par. in the hund. of Downton, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles to the E. of Hindon. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £242, in the patron. of the Bishop of Winchester. The church is in the early English style, and is dedicated to All Saints. There are charitable endowments, which produce £11 per annum.

BISHOP'S FROME, a par. in the hund. of Radlow, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles to the S. of Bromyard, its post town. It contains the tnshp. of Eggleton, the vil. of Leadon, and the district of Walton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. of £608, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Hopton. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BISHOP'S HAMPTON. See HAMPTON-LUCY, Warwickshire.

BISHOP'S HATFIELD. See HATFIELD, Hertfordshire.

BISHOP'S HULL, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile from Taunton, its post town. It lies on the banks of the river Tone, not far from the British and Exeter railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. val. £222, in the patron. of the Rev. H. W. Rawlin. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. The charitable endowments amount to about £50 a year.

BISHOPSIDE, HIGH and LOW, a tnshp. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 11 miles to the S.W. of Ripon. It is situated on the river Nidd, near its source, and includes the chplry. of Pateley Bridge, and several hmlts. The charitable endowments of the township amount to £36 per annum.

BISHOP'S ITCHINGTON, or UPPER and LOWER ITCHINGTON, a par. in the Southam div. of the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 3 miles to the S.W. of Southam. It is situated on the west side of the river Watergall, and contains the ext. par. lib. of Chapel Ascote. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val., with the perpet. curs. of Chadshunt and Gaydon annexed, of £416, in the patron. of the Bishop of Lichfield. A church, dedicated to All Saints, formerly stood in Lower Itchington, but has long been destroyed. The present church is in Upper Itchington, and is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities amount to £22 per annum.

BISHOP'S LAVINGTON. See LAVINGTON, West, Wiltshire.

BISHOP'S LYDEARD, a par. in the western div. of the hund. of Kingsbury, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles to the N.W. of Taunton, its post town. It is a station on the Taunton and Watchet Branch of the Great Western railway. It lies near the west foot of the Quantock hills, and contains the hmlt. of Kenley Bottom, and the tythgs. of Coomb's Ash, East Bagborough, East Coomb, and several others. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £120, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Wells. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charitable endowments, consisting chiefly of the revenue of the almshouses, amount to £156 per annum.

BISHOP'S MIDDLEHAM, a par. in the north-eastern div. of Stockton ward, in the co. palatine of Durham, 9 miles to the S. of Durham. Ferry Hill is its post town. It is situated on the river Skerne, and contains the tnshps. of Cornforth, Garmondsway Moor, Mainsforth, and Thrislington. The Darlington and Hartlepool railways pass near it. The bishops of Durham had a manorial seat in this parish, which was the residence of various prelates from the Norman Conquest to the close of the 14th century. The mansion, of which no traces are left, stood on a hill over the river. Limestone is obtained here. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, of the val. of £152, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parish has the benefit of charitable bequests which produce about £30 a year.

BISHOP'S NYMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Witheridge, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles to the S.E. of South Molton, its post town. It lies in a pleasant hilly country, to the south of the river Yeo, and contains abundance of limestone. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £296, in the patron. of the bishop. Cattle fairs are held here on the 14th April and the 29th October.

BISHOP'S OFFLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Adbaston, hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles from Eccleshall.

BISHOP'S SPARKFORD, a tythg. in the city of Winchester, Winchester div. of the co. of Southampton.

BISHOP'S STORTFORD, a par. and market town, in the hund. of Braughin, in the co. of Hertford, 12 miles to the N.E. of Hertford, and 32 miles by railway from London. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The situation of the parish on the river Stort is indicated by its name, and the prefix "Bishop's" was derived from the fact of the town belonging to the see of London at a very early period. That a small castle existed here before the Norman Conquest, and was even then held by the bishops of London, appears from Domesday Book; the same authority also showing a gift of the castle and town by the Conqueror to the then bishop. In the reign of John, the bishop having joined in the papal interdict, the king had the castle razed to the ground, and made the town a borough. This privilege was enjoyed but for a short time; for in the reign of Edward III. the bishop resumed his rights. Bishop's Stortford is situated in Herts, on the borders of Essex, in a rich corn country, and is the seat of a considerable corn and malt trade. The numerous malt-houses, with their "cowls," form a conspicuous feature in the general aspect of the place; and there is an extensive brewery. The formation of a canal, in 1769, by which communication was opened with the river Lea and the Thames, contributed very much to improve the trade of the town. The leather trade was formerly carried on, and there were several tan-yards and a silk-mill; but these are now defunct. The town has two principal streets crossing at right angles, with a handsome market-house at their intersection. It occupies ground rising gently from the river, and contains many good houses and large inns, and is lighted with gas. The market-house, erected in 1828, has a handsome Ionic front, and contains a hall occupied as an exchange, an assembly-room, and other apartments. The town is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and contains the Union house. It is also the head of a County Court district, and a polling-place for the county elections. There is a public library, and a savi bank. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester the val. of £365, in the patron. of the Precentor of Paul's Cathedral. The church, which stands on l ground, is a large structure in the perpendicular st with a lofty tower and spire, and is dedicated to Michael. The tower was rebuilt in 1820. Besides parish church there are two district churches, one d cated to the Holy Trinity, situated at Newtown, other at Hockerill. The livings of both are per curs., the former in the gift of the vicar, and the la val. £100, in the patron. of the Bishop of Lon There are chapels belonging to the Independents, W leyans, Baptists, and Quakers. The grammar sc founded in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, attained high repute at the commencement of the last cent under the mastership of Dr. Tooke, but subsequen fell into decay. After many years of suspended a tion it has been revived. It is endowed with abo per annum, and recently a spacious house for board has been built for the head-master. There are in t town National, British, and proprietary schools, a t ing school for female teachers, founded in 1852, some almshouses. The annual value of the charitable endowments of the parish is about £27 which sum £107 is the income of the church. Bishop's Stortford was the birthplace (1632) of Sa Chauncey, author of the "History and Antiquit Hertfordshire," who also received his educati at grammar school. Thursday is the market day. F are held on Holy Thursday, Thursday after Tr Sunday, and on the 11th October, for the sale of ca and horses.

BISHOP'S SUTTON HUNDRED, one of th hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Southampton, s ated in the northern division of the co., and sur by the hunds. of Alton and Fawley (part lies d in Alton hund.) It is in two divs., the upper lower: — the upper containing the pars. of Ba Medsted, and Wield; the lower, the pars. of Ba Sutton, Ropley, and West Tisted. The area of entire hund. is about 16,750 acres.

BISHOP'S SUTTON, a par. in the lower div. of hund. of the same name, in the co. of Southampton mile to the S.E. of Alresford, its post town. The B of Winchester had formerly a seat here, the remai which are now occupied as a malt-house. The li a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val., with the pa cur. of Ropley annexed, £350, in the patron. of th Deacon. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas.

BISHOP'S TACHBROOK, a par. in the Warwick d of the hund. of Kington, partly also in the hund. of Kin low, in the co. of Warwick, 3 miles to the S.E. of W wick. Leamington is its post town. It is situate branch of the river Avon, and contains the hmlt. of M lory Tachbrook. The living is a vic.* in the dio Worcester, val. £293, in the patron. of the Bish Lichfield. The church is dedicated to St. Chad. Th is a free school, with an endowment of £40 per annu and some other small charities.

BISHOP'S TAWTON, a par. in the hund. of So Molton, in the co. of Devon, 2 miles to the S. of Ba staple, its post town. It is pleasantly situated on east bank of the river Taw, from which it takes name, and contains the chplry. of Newport. This pl is said to have been the seat of the first Bishop of Da at the commencement of the 10th century. The see subsequently removed to Crediton. The living is a v in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £440, in the patron of t bishop. The church is dedicated to St. John the Ba and contains several monuments. The parochial charit amount to £17 per annum.

BISHOPS-TEIGNTON, a par. in the hund. of E minster, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles to the S.E. Chudleigh. Teignmouth, 2 miles distant, is its post tow It is situated in a beautiful district near the coast, on banks of the river Teign, and is intersected by the So Devon railway. The manor was held by the bishop Exeter, who had a palace here, erected in the reign

Edward III. by Bishop Grandison. There are still remains of this palace near the village. Limestone and marble exist in the parish. The living is a vic.* in the diocese of Exeter, of the val. of £215, in the patron. of the Rev. V. R. Ogle, the incumbent. The church is in the Anglo-Norman style, and has a fine western entrance. It is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. There is a free school in the village, endowed with about £40 a year, and some other charities producing £12 a year. West Teignmouth formerly formed part of this parish, but is now a separate living in the gift of the Vicar of Bishops-Teignton. The principal residence is Bishops-Teignton Lodge.

BISHOP STOKE, a par. and large vil. in the hund. of Ewley, in the co. of Southampton, 7 miles to the S.W. of Winchester, and 73 miles from London. It is a station on the London and South-Western railway. A branch line runs from this place to Gosport and Portsmouth, and another branch line to Salisbury. The village, which is large and well-built, is situated in a well-wooded county on the east bank of the river Itchin, which is navigable to Winchester. The county cheese market, established in 1852, is a spacious square enclosure, surrounded by sheds and stores, and having ready communication with the several railways which centre at Barton, on the west side of the river Itchin. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £437, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1825. It is a handsome stone structure, with square tower, and a rich painted window at the east side. There are National and infant schools, built in 1842, and a Wesleyan chapel at the adjoining hamlet of Crowd Hill. Bishop Bale, the antiquary, was rector of this parish in the reign of Edward VI. The Bishop of Winchester is lord of the manor. The chief seats are Fair Oak Park, Oak Lodge, Manor House, Highfield Lodge, Stoke Mount, &c. There is a large corn-mill, and a commodious family hotel and posting house adjoining the railway station.

BISHOPSTON, or LLAN-DEILO-VERNALT, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 6 miles to the W. of Swansea, its post town. It is pleasantly situated in a beautiful valley near the coast of Oxwell Bay, and includes the vil. of Killay. It was formerly among the possessions of the see of Llandaff. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £241, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Deilo. Davies, the antiquarian, author of "Celtic Researches," was once rector of this place.

BISHOPSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Ramsbury, in the co. of Wilts, 6 miles to the E. of Swindon. Farringdon is its post town. It lies on the borders of Berkshire. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £208, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are two endowed schools in the village, the income of which amounts to about £60 per annum, and some other charities of the annual value of £70.

BISHOPSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Stone, hund. of Aylesbury, in the co. of Buckingham, 2 miles to the S. of Aylesbury.

BISHOPSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, in the co. of Hereford, 7 miles to the W. of Hereford, its post town. It is situated near the river Wye. The living is a rect.,* of the val., with the vic. of Yazor annexed to it, of £429, in the patron. of Sir R. Price, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The principal charity is Berrington's Hospital, which has a revenue from endowment of £47 a year. In the vicinity is Garnons, a castellated mansion on Bishopstone Hill, with beautiful grounds, and commanding fine views of the river Wye. It is the seat of the Cotterells.

BISHOPSTONE. See BISHTON, Monmouthshire.

BISHOPSTONE, a tythg. in the par. of Montacute, and hund. of Tintinhull, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the W. of Yeovil.

BISHOPSTONE HUNDRED, one of the 17 subdivisions of the rape of Pevensey, in the co. of Sussex. It comprises the pars. of Bishopstone and Denton, and extends over an area of about 2,700 acres.

BISHOPSTONE, a par. in the hund. of the same name, rape of Pevensey, in the co. of Sussex, 7 miles to the S. of Lewes. Seaford is its post town. It is situated in a pleasant spot on the sea-coast, and has a coastguard station. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £88, in the patron. of the Bishop of London. The church is old, and partly in the Norman style. The village was the birthplace (1763) of James Hurdis, author of the poem entitled the "Village Curate," and Professor of Poetry at the Oxford University.

BISHOPSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Downton, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles to the S. of Wilton. Salisbury is its post town. It contains the hmlt. of Throope, and several others. The living is a vic.* and sinecure rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £806, in the patron. of the Earl of Pembroke. The church, which once belonged to the priory of Monkton Farleigh, is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. It is a handsome structure in the form of a cross, in the decorated style of architecture, and has a finely decorated ceiling, some canopied niches, and two stone coffins, in which were deposited the remains of bishops. The parochial charities, consisting of a bequest for the benefit of the school, amount to £12 a year. There is a parochial day-school and a Sunday-school, the latter built by the present rector, the Rev. Chancellor Lear.

BISHOPSTROW, a par. in the hund. of Warminster, in the co. of Wilts, not far from Warminster, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £220, in the patron. of Sir F. D. Astley, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Adeline. Roman urns and many brass coins have been found here. There are remains of a large earthwork on Whiten Hill, near the village. The principal residence is Bishopstrow House.

BISHOP SUTTON, a tythg. in the par. of Chew Magna, hund. of Chew, in the co. of Somerset, 8 miles to the S. of Bristol.

BISHOP'S WALTHAM, a par. and market town in the hund. of the same name, Droxford div. of the co. of Southampton, 9 miles to the S.E. of Winchester, and 65 miles from London by road, or 79 miles by railway. It is a station on the Gosport and Portsmouth branch of the London and South-Western railway. The parish is situated in a pleasant country near the source of the river Hamble, and includes the chplries. of Ashton and Curdridge, and the tythg. of West Hoe. The prefix "Bishop's" denotes the fact that the manor belongs to the see of Winchester. It has been held by the bishops from time immemorial, and was the site of the episcopal palace or castle originally founded in the reign of King Stephen, by his brother, Henry de Blois. It was the chosen seat of William of Wykeham, to whose cultivated taste was chiefly owing the grandeur and beauty of the building. The last days of his long and active life were spent here. The palace was destroyed during the civil war of the 17th century; but there are some remains to testify to its former extent. The business of the town is chiefly connected with agriculture. A brisk trade in leather is carried on, and a small malt trade. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £915, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There is a grammar school, founded in 1679 by Bishop Morley, with an endowment of about £40 a year. Other charitable endowments of the parish produce about £100 per annum. National schools have been established. Waltham Chase, near this town and included in the manor, was formerly a notorious haunt of deer-stealers, who, from the custom of blackening their faces, obtained the name of Waltham Blacks. The legislature interfered at last, and, in 1723, to put a stop to their depredations, passed the Act called the Black Act. The village of Wickham, near the Chase, was the birthplace (1324) of the great prelate, William of Wykeham. Bishop's Waltham is a polling-place for the county elections, and a County Court is held in the town. Friday is the market-day. Fairs are held on the second Friday in May, the 30th July, and the first Friday after Old Michaelmas Day.

BISHOP'S WALTHAM HUNDRED, one of the 48

hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Southampton, situated in the southern div. of the co., and surrounded by the hunds. of Fawley, Meon-Stoke, Portsdown, Titchfield, and Mainsbridge. The upper div. contains the par. of Droxford; the lower, those of Durley and Bishop's Waltham. The hund. contains an area of about 16,690 acres.

BISHOP'S WICKHAM, a par. in the hund. of Thurstable, in the co. of Essex, 3 miles to the N. of Maldon. Witham is its post town. It is situated on the east side of the river Blackwater, and was formerly the site of a park belonging to the see of London. The park was inclosed in 1375. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £393, in the patron. of the bishop.

BISHOP'S WOOD, a lib. in the par. of Brewood, hund. of Cuttlestone, in the co. of Stafford, 10 miles to the S. of Stafford. The living is a cur., attached to the vic. of Brewood. The Albrighton hounds meet at this place.

BISHOP'S WOOD, a chplry. in the par. of Walford, and hund. of Greytree, in the co. of Hereford, 3 miles to the S. of Ross, its post town. It is seated on the banks of the river Wye. The Bishop's Wood ironworks are in the neighbourhood. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £35, in the patron. of J. Partridge, Esq. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

BISHOP THORNTON, a tnshp. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles from Ripon. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £95, in the gift of the dean and chapter.

BISHOP THORPE, a par. in the Ainsty of the city, West Riding of the co. of York, 2¼ miles to the S. of York. It is situated on the banks of the river Ouse, and is the seat of the archbishop. The manor has been held by the archbishops since the reign of King John, when it was purchased by Walter de Grey. Before that time the parish bore the name of St. Andrew's Thorpe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £240, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, which was rebuilt by Archbishop Drummond about 1766, was rebuilt a second time by Archbishop Harcourt in 1842. It is dedicated to St. Andrew, and contains three painted windows. The mullions of the east window belonged formerly to Cawood Castle, an earlier residence of the archbishops, which was destroyed during the civil war in the reign of Charles I. The episcopal palace of Bishop Thorpe was founded by Archbishop de Grey, in the reign of Henry III., and after being at various times enlarged and improved, was nearly rebuilt by Archbishop Drummond about 1770. The Gothic gateway and front, designed by Atkinson, were erected, and the chapel was restored, by him.

BISHOPTON, a par. in the south-west div. of Stockton ward, in the co. palatine of Durham, 6 miles to the N.W. of Stockton, its post town. It includes the tnshps. of Bishopton, East and West Newbiggin, and Little Stainton. The Clarence and Hartlepool railway passes near it. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £250, in the patron. of the Master and Brethren of Sherburn Hospital. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. Eastward of the village are the remains of the entrenchment constructed by Roger Conyers, in 1144, when he defended the bishop against the usurper, William Comyn.

BISHOPTON, a vil. in the par. of Erskine, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 5 miles from Paisley. It is seated on the south bank of the Clyde, and is a station on the Greenock branch of the Caledonian railway. Bishopton House is the seat of Sir J. Maxwell, Bart., to whom the village belongs.

BISHOPTON, a tnshp. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, in the West Riding of the co. of York, not far from Ripon.

BISHOPTON, or BISHOPSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Stratford, hund. of Barlichway, in the co. of Warwick, 2 miles from Stratford-on-Avon, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £25, in the gift of the Vicar of Old Stratford. The church, long decayed, is dedicated to St. Peter.

BISHOP WEARMOUTH, a par. in the north div. of the ward of Easington, in the co. palatine of Durham, adjoining Sunderland. It is situated on the south bank of the river Wear, about 1½ m. above its mouth, and is connected with Monk Wearmouth, on the opposite bank, by the fine iron bridge projected by Mr. Burdon, and constructed by Thomas Wilson about the close of the 18th century. It has a very flat arch, 236 feet in span, and nearly 100 feet above low-water mark. The entire work occupied about three years, and cost £26,000. In 1859 the bridge was strengthened, and the south end raised to a level with the road from the town, at a cost of about £30,000, under the direction of Robert Stephenson. The parish comprises the tnshp. of Bishop Wearmouth Panns, the chplry. of Deptford, Ford, and Ryhope, and the tnshps. of Southwick, Burdon, and Tunstall. It was in the Saxon period a possession of the bishops of Durham, to whom the lordship was given by Athelstan, and was early a borough. Sunderland formed part of the parish of Bishop Wearmouth till 1719; and on the erection of the former town into a borough under the Reform Act the borough rights of the latter were transferred to it, and the township of Bishop Wearmouth with some others are now included within the limits of the borough of Sunderland. The modern part of the town is continuous with the chief street of Sunderland, and the business of the place, like that of Sunderland, is connected with the shipping trade, the extensive and valuable coal-mines of the district, and iron works, glass works, and various manufactories. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, of the val. of £1,[illegible], in the patron. of the bishop. The church, a large and handsome structure in the form of a cross, rebuilt in 1[illegible] and enlarged in 1850, is dedicated to St. Michael. There are five other churches, named respectively from the districts in which they are situated—Ryhope, St. Paul's, Ford or Hylton, Deptford, and St. Peter's, the livings of which are perpet. curs.,* varying in value from £300 to £500, in the gift of the bishop and rector. Hendon is in the gift of the rector. There are various places of worship belonging to the Dissenters. The charitable endowments, consisting chiefly of the sums left for almshouses, founded by Elizabeth Woodcock and Mary Scott for 10 widows or daughters of seamen, and for 10 widows or houses founded by Jane Gibson in 1725, produce about £265 per annum. Bishop Wearmouth contains the Athenæum and the Sunderland infirmary.

BISHOP WILTON, a par. in the Wilton Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the N. of Pocklington, its post town. It is situated at the foot of a range of chalk hills forming part of the Wolds, on a branch of the river Derwent. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £148, in the patron. of Sir T. Sykes, Bart. The church, which is an ancient edifice, with a tower and lofty octagonal spire, is dedicated to St. Edith. Near it is an old moat, believed to mark the site of the palace of Archbishop Neville, who resided here in the reign of Edward IV., and whose arms appear on one of the windows of the church. At Belthorpe is a mineral spring called St. Leonard's Well. The division of the wap. take takes its name from a beacon on the summit of the wold near the village, from which there is a fine prospect over the highly-cultivated and agreeable country.

BISHOP WYCKS, a hmlt. in the lib. of the borough of Ipswich, in the co. of Suffolk, near Ipswich.

BISHPORT, or BISHOPWORTH, a tythg. in the par. of Bedminster, hund. of Hartcliffe, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles from Bristol, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £125, in the patron. of the vicar. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

BISHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Tidenham, hund. of Westbury, in the co. of Gloucester, not far from Chepstow.

BISHTON, or BISHOPSTONE, a par. in the Cross div. of the hund. of Caldicott, in the co. of Monmouth,

5 mi to the E. of Newport. Caerleon is its post town. The ving is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £51, the patron. of the archdeacon. The church is dedicated to St. Cadwalader.

BISHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Colwick, and hund. of Pehill, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles from Rugeley. It is situated on the Trent, which here flows through a beautiful valley. The chief residence is Bishton Hall, seate near the river.

BISLEY, a par. in the hund. of the same name, in the of Gloucester, 3 miles to the E. of Stroud, its post wn. It is included within the bounds of the borough of Stroud, and contains the chplries. of Bussage, Chalford, Oakridge, and France-Lynch, with numerous tythgs. The Thames and Severn canal pass through the parish, and enters the tunnel, between 2 and 3 miles in length, under Sapperton Hill. Bisley was formerly a market town, and the seat of an extensive manufacture of woollen cloth. The market, held under a grat of James II., has long been all but disused, and the woollen manufacture is now almost extinct. Some of the factories are now appropriated to other branches of industry. The country is hilly, and the par contained a large extent of waste land, most of which is now enclosed. The manor was a royal demesne from the Conquest to the reign of Edward I., from which time it was held by the Mortimers, Earls of March for about 300 years. The town, or village, stands partly on a hill side, partly in a valley, through which a small river runs, and contains but a few good houses. The ving is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the val. of £527, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was built at various periods, the earliest portion appearing to be about the middle of the twelfth century, and exhibits traces of all the English styles of architecture. It is a large and handsome edifice, with a tower and spire, and stands on elevated ground. A chantry chapel of unparticular architecture formerly existed, but was destroyed in the reign of Henry VIII. or Edward VI. A curious fresco painting, temp. Henry VII., representing the archangel St. Michael weighing out the souls for judgment, with the Virgin Mary on his right hand receiving them under her robes, was discovered on the north wall, over the north doorway, but the condition of the wall necessitated the destruction of the painting. In the foundations on the south side two Roman altars, perfect, and a piece of Roman sculpture were found, and have been preserved. The church has recently undergone a complete restoration in accordance with the style of the 14th century. It contains a memorial brass of 15, and an ancient Norman font, which formerly supported the old cross still standing in the churchyard. The cross is octagonal and finely panelled, temp. Henry III., and is erected over a supposed well. A lych-gate has been added to the churchyard, and a vestry annexed to the chancel, which contains the organ, lately enlarged by Walker, of Tottenham Court-road. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. The free school and the blue-coat school, the latter founded in 1820 for 10 boys, are united, and have an income from endowment of £56 per annum. The charitable endowments of the parish produce annually about £300, of which sum £30 is the income of the church lands. Roman pavements and other remains have been discovered at Lillyhorne and Custom-Scrubs. Thursday was the market day, and cattle fairs, now of little importance, are held on the 4th May and the 12th November. Bisley is a polling place for the eastern division of the county.

BISLEY, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Godley, in the co. of Surrey, 7 miles to the N. of Guildford. Bagshot is its post town. The London and South-Western railway passes near it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £188, in the patron. of J Thornton, Esq. The church, an ancient building partly of brick and timber, is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. A mineral spring near the church is called St. John's Well. The parochial charities amount to £40 a year.

BISLEY HUNDRED, one of the 27 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Gloucester, situated in the centre of the co., and bounded on the N.W. by the hunds. of Dudstone and King's Barton, and Whitstone; on the N.E. by the hunds. of Rapsgate and Crowthorne; and on the S. by the hund. of Longtrees. It contains the pars. of Bisley, Edgeworth, Miserden, Painswick, Sapperton, Stroud, and Winstone. The area of the hund. is about 27,730 acres.

BISPHAM, a par. in the hund. of Amounderness, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 18 miles to the N.W. of Preston, its post town. It is situated on the coast of the Irish Sea, and contains the tnshps. of Bispham-with-Norbreck and Layton-with-Warbrick, and the chplries. of Blackpool and Southshore. The Preston and Wyre branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway passes near it, with which Blackpool is connected by a short line from Poulton Junction. A new line direct to Lytham has also lately been completed, and a handsome pier is in course of construction. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Manchester, of the val. of £235, in the patron. of the Rev. C. Hesketh. The church is of modern erection. There is a free school, founded in 1659 by Richard Higginson, with an income from endowment of £70 per annum.

BISPHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Croston, hund. of Leyland, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 6 miles to the W. of Chorley. The river Douglas runs through it. There is a free grammar school, established and endowed by Richard Durning in 1675, the revenue of which amounts to £160 per annum.

BISTERN, a tythg. joined with Bartley, in the par. of Eling, and hund. of Redbridge, in the co. of Southampton, 4 miles from Southampton.

BISTERN, an ext. par. lib. in the div. and hund. of Ringwood, in the co. of Southampton, near Ringwood, its post town. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Ringwood, in the dioc. of Winchester.

BISTREE, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Mold, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, not far from Mold, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Mold.

BITCHFIELD, a par. in the wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles to the N.W. of Corby, its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £134, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene.

BITCHFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Stamfordham, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 13 miles to the N.W. of Newcastle.

BITTADON, a par. in the hund. of Braunton, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles to the N. of Barnstaple, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £83, in the patron. of W. A. Yeo, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

BITTERING PARVA, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, in the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles to the N.W. of East Dereham. Swaffham is its post town. It is joined to the par. of Beeston. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £100, in the patron. of James Dover, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

BITTERLEY, a par. in the hund. of Overs, extending also into the hund. of Munslow, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles to the N.E. of Ludlow, its post town. It comprises the tnshps. of Bitterley, Cleeton, Henley, Hill-upon-Cot, Middleton, and Smitton. Coal and iron abound here, especially at Clee Hill, and many of the inhabitants are employed in working the collieries and mines. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val., with the cur. of Middleton annexed, of £750, besides glebe and rates, in the patron. of the Rev. C. Walcot, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. A free grammar school here was endowed by John Newborough in 1712, and has an income of £34 a year. There are some other charities, producing about £26.

BITTERNE, a chplry. in the par. of South Stoneham, and hund. of Mainsbridge, in the co. of Southampton, 2 miles to the E. of Southampton, its post town. It is situated on the river Itchin, and is the site of the Roman station Clausentum. Numerous Roman remains, consisting of urns, coins, &c., have been found, and in 1848 the interesting discovery was made of a part of the quay of the ancient town. The portion discovered was about 120 feet in length, and was covered with soil to the depth of 9 feet. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £200, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is modern. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel in the village. The principal seats are Bitterne Grove and Bitterne Manor House.

BITTERSCOTE, or BIDDERSCOTE, a lib. in the par. of Tamworth, hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, close to Tamworth.

BITTESBY, a lib. in the par. of Claybrooke, hund. of Guthlaxton, in the co. of Leicester, 2 miles to the W. of Lutterworth.

BITTESWELL, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, in the co. of Leicester, 1 mile from Lutterworth, its post town. It borders upon the Roman way, Watling Street. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £428, in the patron. of the Master and Wardens of the Haberdashers' Company, and the Governors of Christ's Hospital. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charitable endowments, including £58, the produce of Dowse's bequest for the church, amount to about £70 per annum. There is a mineral spring near the village.

BITTISCOMBE, a hmlt. in the par. of Upton, hund. of Williton and Freemanners, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles to the E. of Dulverton.

BITTON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Langley and Swinehead, in the co. of Gloucester, 6 miles to the E. of Bristol, its post town. It is situated in the southern extremity of the county, on the confines of Somersetshire, on the north bank of the river Avon. It is also watered by the Boyd, a small stream which here falls into the Avon, and is crossed by a stone bridge. The Great Western railway passes near this place. The par. contains the chplries. of Henham, Kingswood, and Oldland. The inhabitants of the district, which is part of the great coal-field of Gloucestershire, are chiefly employed in agriculture and the coal mines. Wesley and Whitfield, and other earnest men, by their labours here, contributed greatly to raise the moral character of the population, then very low and degraded. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £390, in the patron. of the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol. The church is large, and partly in the perpendicular style, with a good tower, and is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities amount to £26.

BIX, or BIXBRAND, a par. in the hund. of Binfield, in the co. of Oxford, 4 miles to the N.W. of Henley-upon-Thames, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £487, in the patron. of the Earl of Macclesfield. The church is dedicated to St. James.

BIX, or BIXGIBWEN, formerly a par. in the hund. of Binfield, in the co. of Oxford, next Bixbrand, with which it is now joined. The rect. is consolidated with that of Bixbrand. The church, long decayed, was dedicated to St. Michael.

BIXLEY, a par. in the hund. of Henstead, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the S. of Norwich, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val., with the rect. of Earl's Framlingham attached to it, of £608, in the patron. of the Rev. C. Brereton, rector. The church is ancient, having been founded in 1272, by William De Dunwich, bailiff of Norwich. It is dedicated to St. Wandregesilius, or St. Wandred the Abbot, whose image here was much visited by pilgrims. The principal residence is Bixley Hall, formerly the seat of the Wards, by whom it was built, and monuments to some of whom are in the chancel of the church.

BIXTON, a par. now merged in the par. of Barnham-Broom, hund. of Forehoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles to the N. of Wymondham, its post town. The church has long been in ruins, and the rect. is united with that of Barnham-Broom.

BLABY, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, in the co. of Leicester, 4 miles to the S. of Leicester, its post town. It is situated on a small river, a branch of Soar, and includes the chplry. of Countess Thorpe. Midland railway runs near it, and the Union canal p through the parish. A new line of railway (the S Leicestershire) is now making through a part of parish. Some of the inhabitants are employed in worsted and hosiery manufactures. Blaby is the of a Poor-law Union. The living is a rect.* in the of Peterborough, of the val. of £600, in the patro the lord chancellor. There are no tithes, but g land, about 400 acres, in lieu of them. The chur dedicated to All Saints, and has recently been repaired. The Baptists and Wesleyans have ch in the village. There is a new National school, a some building, and a rectory-house built by the rector. The parochial charities amount to £5 Two new burial grounds (one for the Church, and for Dissenters) are now being formed.

BLACKADDER, a vil. in the par. of Edrom, in co. of Berwick, Scotland, 4 miles to the E. of It is situated in the Merse, on the banks of the Blackadder. A coal-mine is worked in the vicinity principal residence is Blackadder House.

BLACKAUGHTON, or BLACKAWTON, a p the hund. of Coleridge, in the co. of Devon, 4 mi the W. of Dartmouth, its post town. It lies near coast of Start Bay, and includes the chplry of St The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. in the patron. of Sir H. P. Seale, Bart. The ch which contains a finely-carved screen and a Saxon is dedicated to St. Michael. The Wesleyans h chapel here. The charitable endowments of the pa amount to £16 per annum.

BLACKBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Hay in the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the E. of Collumpt post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ex val. £140, in the patron. of the Earl of Egremont. church, which is dilapidated, was dedicated to Saints.

BLACKBOURN HUNDRED, one of the 21 h or subdivisions of the co. of Suffolk, situated in western div. of the co., and bounded on the N the co. of Norfolk, on the E. by the hund. of Ha mere, on the S. by the hunds. of Stowe, Thing Thedwestry; and on the W. by the hund of Lac It contains the following pars.:—Great Ash Badwell-Ash, Bardwell, Barnham, Barningham, Co Elmswell, Euston, Fakenham Magna, Hepworth, derclay, Honington, Hopton, Hunston, Ingham, Ixw Knettishall, Langham, Livermere Parva, Norton, I inghill Inferior, Sapiston, Stanton, Stowlangtoft, Stow, Thelnetham, Thorpe-by-Ixworth, Troston, sham, Wattisfield, Coney Weston, Market Weste Wordwell, with part of Rushford. The hund. co over an area of about 67,370 acres.

BLACKBOURNE HUNDRED, one of the 16 h or subdivisions of the lathe of Scray, in the co. of K surrounded by the hunds. of Chart and Longb Ham, Oxney, Tenterden, Rolvenden, and Barkw containing the pars. of Appledore, High Halden, ardington, Shadoxhurst, and Woodchurch. It ha area of about 17,000 acres.

BLACK-BOURTON, a par. in the hund. of Bam in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles to the W. of Bam Witney is its post town. The living is a vic. in the of Oxford, val. £148, in the patron. of the Dean Canons of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, w is dedicated to St. Mary, is in the early English and contains a stone pulpit and monuments to the gerfords and Sir A. Hopton. The village was the place (1769) of Maria Edgeworth, the novelist, grandfather resided here. The Heythrop hounds here.

BLACKBROOK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Parr, par. of Prescot, hund. of West Derby, in the co. pal of Lancaster, not far from Prescot.

BLACKBROOK, a hmlt. in the par. of Kidderm and hund. of Halfshire, in the co. of Worcester, for part of the west suburbs of Kidderminster.

BLACKBULL, a vil. in the bar. of Dunboyne, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles from Dunboyne.

BLACKBURN, a par., municipal and parliamentary borough, and important seat of manufacture, in the hund. of Blackburn, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 23 miles to the N.W. of Manchester, and 209 miles from London by road, or 177¾ miles by the North-Western railway. It may also be approached vid the Great Northern and Midland railways. It is a station on the western div. of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, a branch of which also runs from Blackburn to Clitheroe. By the Leeds and Liverpool canal, which passes near the town, communication is opened with the principal rivers of the country, and the eastern and western seas. The par., which is of great extent, being about 14 miles in length and 10 miles in breadth, is situated on the river Darwent, and comprises the chplries. of Balderston, Bamber Bridge, Over Darwen, Lower Darwen, Feniscowles, Great Harwood, Langho, Mellor, Salesbury, Samlesbury, Tockholes, Walton-le-Dale, and Witton, and the tnshps. of Blackburn, Billington, Clayton-le-Dale, Cuerdale, Dinkley, Eccleshill, Little Harwood, Livesey, Osbaldeston, Pleasington, Ramsgrave, Rishton, and Wilpshire. The surrounding country, forming anciently the district called Blackburnshire, which included the present hund. of Blackburn, is for the most part barren, and remained till recently uncultivated. A ridge of high ground runs through the parish in a direction from northeast to north-west, extending from Whalley to Billinge Hill, at which point it has an elevation of about 630 feet. That part of the parish which lies on the north-west side of the hills, sloping to the river Ribble, has the best soil and most agreeable scenery. Clay soils predominate, and rest chiefly on sandstone. Coal is obtained in abundance, and some limestone. A mine of alum-stone, which was formerly worked, has long been neglected.—The staple business of Blackburn is the cotton manufacture, which has long been established there. In the 17th century the "Blackburn checks," a united fabric of linen and cotton, were well esteemed; and subsequently the manufacture of "Blackburn greys," a cloth not bleached before printing, flourished here. The number of hand-loom weavers is comparatively small, most of them are employed mostly in the cheap muslin manufacture. From ten to eleven thousand persons are engaged in the various processes of making, printing, and bleaching the cotton and muslin goods; and the spinning of cotton alone is said to employ about 100,000 spindles. The invention of the spinning-jenny, the introduction of which was violently resisted by the workmen, and which has since proved of such vast importance, was due to James Hargraves, a native of Blackburn, and originally a carpenter.—The manufacture of weaving machinery is now one of the most flourishing trades of the town, large orders being frequently received from Germany, France, Russia, Spain, and other parts of Europe. There are also several iron and brass foundries, four breweries, two corn mills, an extensive bobbin manufactory, besides works for gas-retort making, and several brick and tile yards. Previous to the cotton famine of 1862, Blackburn was conspicuous amongst the many thriving manufacturing towns of Lancashire for its progress and wealth.—The town, the old parts of which are irregularly built, stands in a pleasant situation, sheltered by the ridge of hills which cross the parish, and on the banks of a small rivulet called the Blackwater, or Blackburne, a branch of the river Darwent. There are many good houses of modern erection, and great improvements have been made in the streets and public establishments. The town is now lighted with gas, well paved, and has a good water supply. A magnificent townhall was erected in 1856, at the cost of £30,000; it is in the Italian style, and was designed by Pattenden. One side faces the market-place, which is surrounded by lofty and well-built shops and public buildings. There is a large cloth hall in Fleming-square, in which the sales of woollen cloth take place. The town contains a small theatre, two banks, the Blackburn Union Club, with good billiard and news-rooms a public subscription library, and a mechanics' institution. A savings-bank, a dispensary, and some other charitable institutions are established. The suburbs of the town are becoming dotted over with villa residences, chiefly inhabited by merchants, mill-owners, and wealthy shopkeepers. A public park has been recently formed at a short distance from the town, on the Preston New-road, embracing 50 acres of undulating ground, diversified with rocky hills, lakes, waterfalls, and four fine fountains. These latter are the munificent gift of the late mayor, William Pilkington, Esq. The horticultural shows, which take place in June and September, are held in the assembly-rooms of the townhall.—Blackburn was created a borough by the Reform Act, returning two members to parliament, and was incorporated by royal charter in September, 1851. The number of registered voters in 1857 was 1,518. The bounds of the parliamentary and municipal boroughs coincide with those of the township, which contains, according to the census of 1861, 11,314 houses, inhabited by a population of 63,125, against 46,536 in 1851, showing an increase of no less than 16,589 in the decennial period. Blackburn is also the seat of a Poor-law Union, the head of a County Court district, and a polling place for the north division of the county. Petty sessions for the hundred are held here. The town contains the Union poorhouse. Two weekly newspapers are published here, called the Weekly Times and the Blackburn Standard.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Manchester, of the val. of £893, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, a handsome structure, erected in 1826 on the site of the old grammar school, and restored, after partial destruction by fire, in 1831, is partly in the perpendicular style of architecture, and has a richly decorated tower, with crocketed pinnacles. The plan of the interior is greatly admired. The building, which was entirely redecorated in 1857, is dedicated to St. Mary. The original parish church was of earlier date than the Conquest, and belonged to the monastery of Whalley. It was twice rebuilt, and was taken down in 1819, the tower and the Duncan chapel alone remaining. The register dates from 1568. There are six other churches in the town, of recent erection,—viz., those of St. John, St. Peter, St. Paul, St. Michael, and the Holy Trinity, and Christ Church, the livings of which are perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £50 to £217, and in the patron. of the vicar. The places of worship for Dissenters are numerous, including two each for Roman Catholics, Baptists, and Independents, and one each for Wesleyan, Primitive, and Association Methodists, Presbyterians, Quakers, Unitarians, and Swedenborgians.—The charitable endowments of the parish are of the annual value of £526. The principal foundations are the following:—The free grammar school, founded by Queen Elizabeth for 30 boys, managed by 50 governors who are incorporated, and having a revenue of £120; and a free school for 90 children, founded and endowed by William Leyland in 1765, and further endowed by other benevolent persons since that time. There are also a very large National and numerous other schools.—There are many gentlemen's seats in the neighbourhood, the principal of which are Feniscowles, the residence of Sir W. Fielden, Bart.; Witton, Woodfold, &c. Audley Hall, the ancient manorhouse, and old Samlesbury Hall, are among the most noteworthy of the older buildings. The Independent Theological Academy formerly established here has been united with the college near Manchester. The markets are held on Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs are held annually in Easter week, and on the 12th May, and the 17th October; and cattle fairs once a fortnight from February till Michaelmas.

BLACKBURN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kimberworth, and par. of Rotherham, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile from Rotherham.

BLACKBURN, a vil. in the par. of Livingstone, in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 3 miles to the S. of Bathgate. It is situated on the banks of the Almond river. The cotton and flax manufactures are carried on here. An Independent chapel was built here in 1825.

BLACKBURN HUNDRED, one of the six hunds. or subdivisions of the co. palatine of Lancaster, situated in the northern div. of the co., and bounded on the N. and E. by Yorkshire, on the S. by the hunds. of Salford and Leyland, and on the W. by the hund. of Amounderness. It is in two divs., upper and lower, the former containing parts of the pars. of Bury and Whalley, including the towns of Burnley, Clitheroe, Colne, Habergham-Eaves, Newchurch, &c.; and the latter containing the pars. of Blackburn and Chipping, with parts of Milton, Ribchester, and Whalley, and the town of Haslingden. The entire hund. comprises an area of 175,500 acres.

BLACK-BURTON. See BURTON-IN-LONSDALE, Yorkshire.

BLACKBURY, a hmlt. in the par. of Colyton-Rawleigh, hund. of Budleigh, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the W. of Colyton. In the vicinity are the remains of a Roman encampment, now called Blackbury Castle, and a tumulus.

BLACK-CALLERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Newburn, Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 6 miles to the N.W. of Newcastle.

BLACK-CARTS, an ext. par. lib. united with the lib. of Ryehill, in the par. of Warden, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 8 miles to the N.W. of Hexham. It is near the North Tyne river.

BLACKCHAPEL, a chplry. in the par. of Great Waltham, hund. of Chelmsford, in the co. of Essex, 5 miles to the N. of Chelmsford. It is seated near the river Chelmer. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £80, in the patron. of trustees.

BLACKDEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Sandbach, hund. of Northwich, in the co. palatine of Chester, 6 miles to the N.E. of Sandbach. The London and North-Western railway passes through it.

BLACKDOWN, a chplry. in the par. of Broadwinsor, in the co. of Dorset, near Bridport, its post town. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Salisbury, annexed to the vic. of Broadwinsor.

BLACKDOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Kidderminster, hund. of Halfshire, in the co. of Worcester, forming part of the suburbs (called the Foreign) of Kidderminster.

BLACK-DOWN, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Crewkerne, in the co. of Somerset, 6 miles to the S.W. of Crewkerne. It is united with the tythg. of Laymore.

BLACKENHURST HUNDRED, one of the 5 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Worcester, situated in the eastern div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by Warwickshire, on the S. and E. by Gloucestershire, and on the W. by the hund. of Oswaldslow. It is in two divs., upper and lower. The lower contains the pars. of Great Hampton, Abbots Morton, Norton, and Oldberrow, with part of Church Lench, and the borough of Evesham. The upper div. contains the pars. of Badsey, Breforton, Church Honeybourne, North and South Littleton, Offenham, and Wickhamford. The entire hund. comprises an area of about 17,300 acres.

BLACKER, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Worsborough, and par. of Darfield, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the S. of Barnsley.

BLACKER, a hmlt. in the par. of Darton, wap. of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.W. of Barnsley.

BLACKFORD, a par. in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 5 miles to the S. of Nuthill. It is a station on the Scottish Central railway, 18 miles from Perth. It is situated at the foot of the Ochil hills, which extend into the south part of the parish. The surface and soil are of various character. The small rivers Allan, Devon, and Ruthven run through the parish, which contains also several small lakes. Freestone and sandstone are obtained here. The living, of the val. of £207, is in the presb. of Auchterarder, in the patron. of Murray of Abercairnie. There is also a Free church. In the immediate vicinity is Ardoch and its famous camp, and in the parish are traces of several entrenchments, cairns, and remains of the castles of Kincardine and Tullibardine, the former containing the tombs of the Dukes of Montrose, and latter being an ancient residence of the Murrays. H are also some remains of two ancient chapels. A for the sale of cattle is held on the third Wednesd October. The par. extends about 9 miles in length 4 miles in breadth.

BLACKFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Milbor Stoke, hund. of Munslow, in the co. of Salop, 7 mi the N.E. of Ludlow.

BLACKFORD, a par. in the hund. of Whitley, in co. of Somerset, 4 miles to the W. of Wincanton. Carey is its post town. It is watered by the river The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and W the val. of £177, in the patron. of B. H. Hea The church, which is in the early English style, Saxon doorway, is dedicated to St. Michael.

BLACKFORD, a chplry. in the par. of Wed hund. of Bempstone, in the co. of Somerset, 4 mi the S. of Axbridge. Wells is its post town. The was held in the reign of Queen Elizabeth by Saxey, who founded the hospital or almshouse at B and was given by him to that hospital as part of dowment. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the d Bath and Wells, val. £145, in the patron. of the of Wedmore. The church is modern.

BLACKFORDBY, a chplry. in the par. of Ashby-la-Zouch, extending also into the par. of Seal, hun West Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, 2 miles to th of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. The Ashby canal passes this place. The village contains a church, wh dedicated to St. Margaret, and a chapel belonging t Wesleyans.

BLACKFORD MANOR, a hmlt. in the par. of worthy, and hund. of Carhampton, in the co. of Som set, 3 miles to the W. of Minehead. It is seated hilly, pleasant spot, near the south coast of the Bri Channel.

BLACK-FRIARS. There are several places of name,—an ext. par. lib. in the borough and co. of cester; an ext. par. lib. in the city of Canterbury co. of Kent; and a precinct in the city of London.

BLACK-GANG CHINE, a remarkable ravine in Undercliff, on the south coast of the Isle of Wight of Southampton, 1 mile to the E. of Niton. It is the finest and wildest chasms in the island, running up among the lofty rocks that form the coast of Bay. The cliffs are dark and very rugged, and ris each side about 500 feet. At the head of the cha small body of water passes over the half-upright there about 80 feet in height. This fall, which in weather almost ceases, becomes larger and more ste after much rain. The rocks are bare of vegetation their wild aspect and sombre hues are said to remind visitor of Alpine scenery. In one part of the there is a singular echo. The name "Black-Gang probably equivalent to Bleak-Way.

BLACKHEATH, a vil. and chplry. in the pa Lewisham, partly also in the pars. of Greenwich Kidbrooke, in the hund. of Blackheath, and in Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 6 miles to the of London. It is a station on the North Kent rai The vil. is pleasantly situated on the Heath, in e spot next Greenwich Park, commanding wide and tiful views over the surrounding country and the Thames. From its nearness to the metropolis, a situation on the great road from London to D Blackheath has been the scene of many historical e The Roman road Watling Street crossed the heath the neighbouring Shooter's Hill, and traces of it still to be found. Roman urns containing ashes coins have been discovered, some of which are in the British Museum. A body of Danish invader camped on Blackheath in the year 1011, and murdered Alphege, Archbishop of Canterbury, opposed their demands. It was from this spot, in that Wat Tyler led his followers, 100,000 in numb London. When Palæologus, the emperor of the came, in the year 1400, to ask assistance again Turks, Henry IV. had a conference with him

Fifteen years later, Henry V., returning victorious from his French campaign and the battle of Agincourt, was received here by a state procession of the citizens of London, headed by the mayor. In 1416 an interview took place on Blackheath between the same monarch and the Emperor Sigismund. Jack Cade encamped here with his followers in 1450; and here, the next year, Henry VI. pardoned those of his followers who made submission to him. In 1452 the same king assembled his army on the Heath, to oppose the Duke of York. Edward IV., returning from France in 1474, was here met by the citizens of London. A battle was fought on Blackheath in 1497, between the Cornish men, under Lord Audley, and the royal forces, led by the Earl of Oxford, in which the former were defeated, and Lord Audley captured and put to death. A splendid reception was given here to Campejo, the papal legate, in 1519, a tent of cloth of gold being prepared for him, and a grand retinue, headed by the Duke of Norfolk, going out to receive him. And, finally, on this spot took place the first interview between Henry VIII. and Anne of Cleves, the marriage being immediately after (3rd January, 39) celebrated at Greenwich. Blackheath has two churches, All Saints' and St. John's. The former is situated within the par. of Lewisham, and the latter in that of Greenwich. The livings of both are perpet. curs., the former in the patron. of the Vicar of Lewisham, and the latter in the gift of William Angerstein, Esq.; and two chapels. In the vicinity are the college, founded by Sir John Morden for decayed merchants; and the free grammar school, erected by Abraham Colfe in 162. [See LEWISHAM.] The Ranger's House, known also as Park Lodge, late the seat of the Earl of Aberdeen, is now inhabited by Prince Arthur. It was once the residence of the Princess Sophia of Gloucester, and near it formerly stood the residence of the Princess of Wales. Park-place, or Blackheath-park, is a range of handsome dwellings, on the site of Wricklemarsh House, a splendid mansion built by Sir Gregory Page, which was taken down in 1787.

BLACKHEATH HUNDRED, one of the 8 hunds. or subdivisions of the lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, surrounded by the hunds. of Lessness and Dartford, and Beckenham, the co. of Surrey, and the river Thames. It contains the pars. of Charlton-next-Woolwich, Eltham, Lee, and Lewisham. The area of the hund. is about 12,650 acres.

BLACKHEATH HUNDRED, one of the 14 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Surrey, situated in the western div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of Woking; on the E. by the hund. of Wootton; on the S. by the co. of Sussex; and on the W. by the hund. of Godalming. It is in two divs., called first and second. The first div. contains the pars. of Alford, Bramley, Dunsfold, Hascombe, St. Martha, Shalford, and Wonersh. The second div. contains the pars. of Albury, Cranley, Ewhurst, and Shere. The entire hund. has an area of about 41,000 acres.

BLACKHEDDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stamfordham, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 10 miles to the S.W. of Morpeth. The Tindale hounds meet at the village.

BLACKLAND, a par. in the hund. of Calne, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles from Calne, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £150, in the patron. of the Rev. James Mayo. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. Blackland House, the principal mansion, was formerly the seat of the Maundrell family.

BLACKLAND, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Calne in the co. of Wilts, not far from Calne.

BLACKLAW, a vil. in the par. of Linton, in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland, 4 miles from Kelso. Thomas Pringle, poet, and missionary to South Africa, was born here in 1789.

BLACKLEY, or BLAKELEY, a chplry. in the par. of Manchester, hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles to the N. of Manchester, its post town. The workpeople are principally employed in the various branches of the cotton manufacture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, of the val. of £150, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Manchester. The church, which was anciently a private chapel belonging to Blackley Hall, is dedicated to St. Peter. The Wesleyans and Unitarians have chapels in the town, and there is a school with a small endowment. Annual races take place here in the month of August.

BLACKLION, a vil. in the bar. of Skyrne, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S. of Slane.

BLACKMANSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Worth, lathe of Shepway, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles to the N. of New Romney, its post town. It is included in the lib. of Romney Marsh. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £44, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church has long been in decay.

BLACKMILL, a vil. in the par. of Llandyfodog, hund. of Ogmore, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 5 miles to the W. of Llantrisaint. A branch of the river Ogmore runs near it.

BLACKMOOR-FOOT, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Linthwaite, and par. of Almondbury, wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, not far from Huddersfield.

BLACKMORE, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, in the co. of Essex, 7 miles to the S.W. of Chelmsford. Ingatestone is its post town. It was the site of a priory of the Augustine order, founded by Adam and Jordan de Sampford in the latter half of the 12th century, and valued at the Dissolution at £85. It was granted by Henry VIII. to Cardinal Wolsey, but on his subsequent attainder returned to the crown. The king frequently resided in the house; and the royal favourites, who were often entertained here, designated it Jericho. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £83, in the patron. of the Crickett family. The church, a small building, was the conventual church of the priory, and is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £54 per annum.

BLACKMORE, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Melksham, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles from Melksham.

BLACKNESS, a vil. in the par. of Carriden, in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 5 miles to the E. of Linlithgow, and 18 miles to the W. of Edinburgh. It is seated on the south shore of the Firth of Forth, and is a very ancient place. From the various Roman remains which have been found here, it is conjectured to have been a Roman station. It had once a thriving trade as the port to Linlithgow, and has an old castle which was used as a state prison in the reigns of James I. and Charles I. This fortress was one of the four in Scotland which it was agreed at the Union should be kept up. It stands on a small tongue of land stretching into the Forth. The harbour is destroyed. The trade of the village is unimportant, and the fortifications are merely nominal.

BLACKPOOL, formerly a chplry. in the par. of Bispham, hund. of Amounderness, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, but recently constituted a district par. under Lord Blandford's Act, except a small portion on the north side, which still belongs to Bispham, is 4 miles to the S.W. of Poulton, and 48 miles from Manchester by the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, with which it is connected by a short branch line from Poulton Junction. A new line has lately been completed direct to Lytham, and a handsome pier is in course of construction, which will be opened in 1863. It is situated on the coast of the Irish Sea, between the estuaries of the Wyre on the north and the Ribble on the south, and has taken its name from a dark boggy pool near the old seat of the Tildesleys, at the south end of the village. Up to the middle of the last century it remained an insignificant place, but has now become a favourite watering-place, frequented every summer by thousands of visitors, from the busy towns and factories and workshops of the great manufacturing province. Blackpool stands on ground considerably elevated, and enjoys the advantage of a remarkably pure, keen, and bracing air. The prospect in clear weather embraces the mountains of Westmoreland, Cumberland, and North Wales. The Isle of Man is occasionally discernible. There is a fine sandy beach, firm, and sloping gently from the town. A noble range of houses extends along the parade for nearly a mile. There are large and good hotels, assembly-rooms, library, and newsroom. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, of the val. of £350, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. John, was erected in 1821. It has twice been enlarged, and now contains 800 sittings. The population of the district attached to it is estimated at 2,000, but new houses are continually being built, and the population is rapidly on the increase. The reserved portion, which is still in the parish of Bispham, contains about 250 inhabitants, for whom an iron church has been provided. There are chapels belonging to the Roman Catholics, Independents, Baptists, and Wesleyan Methodists, also National and infant schools. The sea has encroached on the coast to a great extent, and the cliffs near the town, which consist chiefly of clay, are gradually broken away. A large stone, called the Penny Stone, lying on the sands about half a mile from the shore, is said to mark the former site of a public-house.

BLACKRAKE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Carlton Highdale, and par. of Coverham, wap. of Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the S.W. of Middleham.

BLACKRATH, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, and co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N.E. of Kilkenny. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, of the val. of £131, in the patron. of the bishop of the diocese. Near the vil. is Lyrath, the seat of Sir J. Cuff, Bart.

BLACKRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Torphichen, in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 5 miles to the W. of Bathgate. It is seated near a small stream, a branch of the Blackburn river. There is a chapel of ease, and a preaching station belonging to the Free church.

BLACKROCK, a vil. in the par. of St. Finbar, city of Cork, in the bar. and co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles to the E. of Cork. The Cork and Passage railway passes through it. It is seated in a beautiful spot on the south bank of the river Lee, here above a mile in breadth. Here is a castle originally founded in 1604 by Lord-Deputy Mountjoy, and rebuilt about 1830. A lofty turret, rising from the castle, is converted into a lighthouse. The village contains a church, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The former, dedicated to St. Michael, is a handsome stone structure in the perpendicular style, with transept, embattled tower and spire, and is a chapel of ease to the cathedral church of St. Finbar. The Ursuline convent for 35 nuns, founded at Cork in 1771 by Honora Nagle, was transferred to Blackrock in 1825. It is a handsome building, with a chapel and extensive grounds attached to it. There are a dispensary, two lunatic asylums, and four schools. The neighbourhood is adorned with numerous seats of the gentry, with plantations, gardens, and charming pleasure grounds along the banks of the Lee.

BLACKROCK, a vil. in the par. of Monkstown, bar. of Bathdown, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.E. of Dublin. It is a station on the Kingstown railway, and is seated in a pleasant district on the south coast of the bay of Dublin. Blackrock is much frequented as a watering-place, and contains a good hotel, lodging-houses, and baths for the accommodation of visitors. There are Episcopal and Roman Catholic chapels, a Carmelite convent for 20 nuns, founded in 1822, two schools, and a savings-bank. An old cross of granite in the village marks the south limit of the city of Dublin. There are many gentlemen's seats, with pleasure grounds, in the vicinity, among which are Blackrock House, Maritimo (the seat of Lord Clonearry), Carysfort House, Newton House, &c.

BLACKROCK, a vil. in the par. of Haggardstown, bar. of Upper Dundalk, in the co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S.E. of Dundalk. It is seated on the bay of Dundalk, and is resorted to watering-place. It has a good beach.

BLACKROD, a chplry. in the par. of Bol... Moors, and hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of ... caster, 6 miles to the W. of Bolton. Chorley is ... town. It is a station on the western div. of th... cashire and Yorkshire railway, and a branch of th... caster canal passes through the chapelry. Th... tants are mostly engaged in the cotton ma... the print-works, and the coal-mines. The li... a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, ... val. of £300, in the patron. of the Vicar of ... The church is dedicated to St. Catherine. T... leyans have a chapel here. There are large N... and Sunday schools, and a free grammar sch... an income from endowment of £140 a year, besi... exhibition at Pembroke College, Cambridge, of ... of £80 for four years. The charities produce ... £200 per annum. The Roman road Watling ... passes through this place, which is conjectured ... to have been a Roman station. A fire which ... in a coal-mine here was extinguished by turning ... Douglas into it. A number of silver vessels, ... the impression of a rose and crown, were found ... in a moat surrounding an old mansion in this ...

BLACKSHAW, a vil. in the par. of Caerlaver... the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 7 miles to the S. ... fries. It is seated on the coast of the Solway F... the mouth of the Lochar river. Blackshaw Flats ... sandy or mossy tract, now covered by the se... which is said to have been formerly the site of a ...

BLACKSHIELS, a vil. in the par. of Fala, in t... of Edinburgh, Scotland, not far from Fala.

BLACKSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kidderm... hund. of Halfshire, but extending into the ... Bewdley, hund. of Doddingtree, in the co. of W... 2 miles from Bewdley. It is situated on the we... of the river Severn, near the cliffs called B... Rocks, and forms part of the suburbs (called the F... of Kidderminster.

BLACKSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Kilbar... the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 2 miles from Pa... is seated on the Black Cart river. Near the vi... Blackstown House.

BLACKTHORN, a chplry. in the par. of Ambr... hund. of Bullington, in the co. of Oxford, 3 mile... S.E. of Bicester. It is seated on the confines ... inghamshire, where the ancient way called A... Street enters the county and crosses Blackthor... The church is decayed. There are some char... trifling value.

BLACKTOFT, a par. in the wap. of Howden, ... the East Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles to t... of Howden, its post town. It is situated at t... fluence of the rivers Ouse and Trent, and in... tnshp. of Scalby. The living is a perpet cur.* ... dioc. of York, val. £220, in the patron. of the D... Chapter of Durham. The parochial charities ... to £2 per annum.

BLACK-TORRINGTON, a par. and vil. in the ... of Black-Torrington, in the co. of Devon, 1½ ... the N.W. of Hatherleigh, its post town. The p... of large extent, comprising an area of 7,200 a... is bounded on the N. by the river Torridge. ... part of the female population are employed in th... trade. The living is a rect.* in the archdeac... and dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £600, derived ... from tithes and partly from 19 acres of glebe, a... the patron. of Lord Poltimore. The church, de... to St. Mary, is a handsome edifice, of the time of ... VIII., with a fine tower. The Baptists and ... Christians have chapels, and there is a National ... There is a small charity left by Specott for the ... of the poor of this parish jointly with the poor ... worthy. Llewellyn Llewellyn is lord of the ma...

BLACK-TORRINGTON HUNDRED, one ... hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Devon, sit... the west div. of the co., and bounded on th... the hunds. of Hartland and Shebbear, on the E...

hund of Winkley, North Tawton, and Wonford; on the S. by the hund. of Lifton, and on the W. by the co. of Cornwall. It contains the following pars.:—Abbo-Bickington, Ashbury, Ashwater, Beaworthy, Belste, Black-Torrington, Bradford, Bradworthy, Broadwood-Kelly, Clawton, Cookbury, Exbourne, St. Giles-in-the-Heath, Halwell, Hatherleigh, Highampton, Hollacombe, Holsworthy, Honeychurch, Inwardleigh, Jacobstowe, Luffnicott, Milton Damerell, Monkokehampton, Northlew, Pancrasweek, North Petherwin, West Putford, Pyworthy, Sampford-Courtney, Sutcombe, Tetcott, Thornbury, and Werrington, with parts of Boyton, Bridgerule, and Okehampton. This hund. comprises an area of about 141,600 acres.

BLACKWALL, a district in the par. of Poplar, Tower div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, and borough of the Tower Hamlets, in the co. of Middlesex, 4 miles to the E. of St. Paul's. It is connected with the metropolis by a railway terminating in Fenchurch-street. A branch line runs from the Stepney station to Bow on the Great Eastern railway, forming part of the North London railway: and near Blackwall the North-Western and Docks Junction railway meets it. The Blackwall railway, which is carried along a viaduct for about 2½ miles, was completed in 1841, at a cost of £288,200 per mile, and was worked till 1849 by stationary engines and a wire rope. Locomotive engines are now employed. Blackwall is situated on the north bank of the Thames, on Blackwall Reach, where the river Lea falls into it, and the site of the East India Company's Docks, several extensive shipyards, iron-foundries, and other important establishments connected with the shipping trade. The East India Docks, which were constructed under the superintendence of Rennie, and were completed in 1806, occupy the east end of the district, near the Mast House, and comprise import and export docks, and an entrance basin. The import, or inner dock, covers an area of 18 acres; the export, or outer dock, originally covered about 9 and 10 acres, but was subsequently enlarged. The basin comprises 3 acres. The water in the docks has a depth of 30 feet. A lofty wall surrounds them, and extensive ranges of warehouses and offices stand within it. The railway terminus occupies the space between the docks and the Brunswick wharf and pier, near which stands the Brunswick White Bait tavern. The quay of the Trinity Board is at the mouth of the river Lea. The parish chplry. belonging to the East India Company, forms a cd. of £500, in the patron. of the directors. Blackwall Reach is that part of the river Thames which lies between Greenwich Reach and Bugsby Reach.

BLACKWATER, a name common to several rivers and small streams in the three kingdoms, including five in Ireland, three in Scotland, and three in England. The most important are the following:—1. The Blackwater, next to the Shannon the principal river of Ireland, having its source on the borders of the co. of Kerry, among the Kinnagossy and Knockanadune mountains, runs eastward through the co. of Cork to Cappoquin in Waterford, where it bends to the south, and falls into the sea at Youghal. It passes in its course Mill Street, Mallow, Fermoy, and Lismore, and receives the waters of several tributary streams, mostly on its northern bank, the chief of which are the Bride, the Allua, the Awbeg (Spenser's "gentle Mulla"), the Funcheon, the Araghlin, and the Finisk. The river has a bar at its mouth, and it is not navigable, except by barges, far beyond Youghal. Its length is about 90 miles. The country lying to the south of the Blackwater is mountainous, and the scenery along the banks of the river is beautiful and interesting. There are many noble seats, rich woods, and remains of ancient castles and ecclesiastical buildings. The river is bounding in salmon, and some pearl mussels have been found in it.—2. The Blackwater, a river in Ireland, which rises on the south border of the co. of Tyrone, and running first to the eastward, then south-eastward, bends above Caledon to the north-east, and falls into Lough Neagh, which it enters at its south-western extremity, a little distance from the Bann. It passes Clogher, Augher, Aughnacloy, Caledon, and Benburb, Blackwatertown, and Charlemont, where it reaches the Ulster canal. It receives several small tributaries, and has a fall of nearly 300 feet. Its length is between 40 and 50 miles. This river has some historical interest as the old boundary between the country of the O'Nials and the English pale.—3. The Blackwater, a river in Ireland, rising in the eastern part of the co. of Cavan, runs in a south-easterly direction to Kells, in the co. of Meath, passing through Lough Ramor, and to Navan, where it joins the river Boyne. It has a course of about 40 miles.—4, 5. The other two rivers bearing this name in Ireland are in the cos. of Longford and Wexford; the former being a branch of the Shannon, which it joins near Lanesborough, and the latter falling into the sea at Bannow Bay.—The Scottish streams of this name are one in the co. of Forfar, a branch of the river Isla; one in the co. of Kirkcudbright, a branch of the river Ken; and one in the Isle of Arran.—The principal English Blackwater is in the co. of Essex. It rises in the north-west corner of the co., not far from Saffron Walden and the border of Cambridgeshire. Its course is south-easterly, by the towns of Braintree, Coggleshall, and Witham, where it is joined by the river Brain, to Maldon, at which place the river Chelmer meets it. The united streams expand into a large estuary, and fall into the German Ocean. The Blackwater has a course of about 30 miles.—The same name is borne by a small stream in Dorsetshire and Hampshire, a branch of the Stour, and by another running along the borders of Hampshire, Berkshire, and Surrey, a branch of the river Loddon.

BLACKWATER, a vil. in the par. and hund. of Christchurch, in the co. of Southampton, 2 miles from Christchurch. It is on the border of Dorsetshire, on the banks of the small river Blackwater.

BLACKWATER, a vil. in the par. of Yateley, and hund. of Crondall, in the co. of Southampton, near Yateley. It is a station on the Reading branch of the South-Eastern railway. The village is seated on the confines of Surrey and Berkshire, on the banks of the small river Blackwater, which is crossed by a bridge. In the immediate neigbourhood is Sandhurst College. The Baptists have a chapel in the village. A cattle fair is held here annually on the 8th September.

BLACKWATER, a vil. in the par. of Kilcrohane, bar. of Dunkerron, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the W. of Kenmare. It is situated on the west bank of the river, from which it takes its name. In the vicinity is Blackwater Cottage. The banks of the river are steep and well-wooded, and the scenery around is remarkably picturesque. The Blackwater has a course of about 8 miles from Lough Brinn to the Kenmare river. A bridge of two arches crosses it by the village.

BLACKWATER, a vil. in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 12 miles to the N.E. of Wexford. It is situated on the sea-coast, and has a police force and a coastguard stationed in it. Fairs are held in the village on the 25th March, the 12th May, the 1st June, the 10th August, and the 10th November.

BLACKWATERBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Moyfenrath, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles from Innfield. It is on the confines of the co. of Kildare, on the banks of the Blackwater rivulet.

BLACKWATERTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Clonfeacle, bar. and co. of Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S. of Charlemont, and 85 miles to the N. of Dublin. It is seated on the east bank of the river Blackwater, opposite the vil. of Clonfeacle, with which it is connected by a bridge of three arches. The Ulster canal passes close by this place. The village was the scene of several attacks and skirmishes during the rebellion of the Earl of Tyrone, when a garrison was stationed here. A good export trade is carried on in corn and potatoes, coal and timber being imported. A National school, a chapel belonging to the Wesleyans, and a dispensary are in the village.

BLACKWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Darlington, Darlington ward, in the co. palatine of Durham, 1 mile from Darlington. It is situated on the east bank of the river Tees, which is here navigable. The Croftbridge railway passes near it. Blackwell Grange is the seat of the Allans, one of whom, George Allan, was the antiquary and topographer. He formed a large and valuable collection of objects of interest, both in nature and art, and died here in 1800. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here.

BLACKWELL, a par. in the hund. of Scarsdale, in the co. of Derby, 3 miles to the N.E. of Alfreton. Coal is procured in this place. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £90, in the patron. of the Duke of Devonshire. The church, which was rebuilt in 1826, is dedicated to St. Werburgh. The parochial charities amount to £4 per annum.

BLACKWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 4 miles to the E. of Buxton. The river Wye flows near this place.

BLACKWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Tredington, hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 2 miles to the N. of Shipton-on-Stour.

BLACKWELL, HIGH and LOW, tnshps. in the par. of St. Cuthbert, Carlisle, Cumberland ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 2 miles to the S. of Carlisle. They lie between the Lancaster and Carlisle and the Maryport railways. The charitable endowments of the townships, consisting of a bequest by Thomas Lowrey, in 1779, for a school and the relief of poor widows, and a bequest by Grace Graham, about 20 years later, for a school at Dunbar, produce about £14 per annum.

BLACKWOOD, a tnshp. united with Crowborough, in the par. of Horton, hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles to the W. of Leek.

BLACKWORTH. See BACKWORTH, Northumberland.

BLACON-CUM-CRABHALL, or CRABWALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Holy Trinity, Chester, hund. of Wirrall, in the co. palatine of Chester, 2 miles to the W. of Chester. It is not far from the Ellesmere canal.

BLADENOCH, a vil. in the par. of Wigton, in the co. of Wigton, Scotland, not far from Wigton. It is pleasantly situated on Bladenoch Water, which, after a course of about 25 miles from Ben Braik Hill, where it rises, falls into Wigton Bay.

BLADON, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, in the co. of Oxford, not far from Woodstock, its post town. It includes the hmlt. of Hensington. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val., with the perpet. cur. of Woodstock annexed to it, of £329, in the patron. of the Duke of Marlborough. The church, which was rebuilt by the duke in 1804, is dedicated to St. Martin. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £50 per annum. Bladon is included in the parliamentary borough of Woodstock.

BLAEN-AËRON, a tnshp. in the par. of Caron-ys-Clawdd, hund. of Penarth, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 4 miles to the N.E. of Tregaron. It is situated, as its name denotes (Blaen, "head of a river"), at the source of the river Aëron.

BLAENAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Ar-Arth, hund. of Cathnioc, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 9 miles to S.W. of Lampeter.

BLAEN-AVON, or AFON, a chplry. in the par. of Llanover, hund. of Abergavenny, in the co. of Monmouth, 5 miles to the S.W. of Abergavenny. It is situated in a mountain district, near the head (Blaen) of the river Avon-Llwyd, and is the terminus of the Eastern Valleys section of the Monmouthshire railway and canal. Coal and iron are abundant here, and the iron-works are of great extent. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the mines, which are worked by means of horizontal shafts, and yield about 400 tons of iron a week. Some of the dwellings are cut in the sides of the rocks. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, of the val. of £114, in the patron. of T. Hill, Esq. There are two chapels belonging to the Baptists in the village.

BLAEN-CARON, a tnshp. of Caron-ys-Clawdd, hund. of Penarth, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, not far from Tregaron. It lies at the source of the river Caron.

BLAENGLESYRCH, a hmlt. in the par. of Llan hund. of Machynlleth, in the co. of Montgomery, Wales, not far from Machynlleth. It is in a hill; near the river Dovey, on a small stream called Glesyrch. There are fine views from the high gr

BLAENGWRACH, a chplry. in the par. of corrwg, hund. of Neath, in the co. of Glamorgan, Wales, 11 miles to the E. of Neath. It is situ the head of the romantic and beautiful Val of N at the source of the river Gwrach. The neighb copper and iron mines employ many of the inhabit The living is a perpet. cur., annexed to that of Co rwg, in the dioc. of Llandaff. There is a chapel ing to the Independents, which is one of the olde Wales. The principal residence is Ynislaes, the perty of the Earl of Dunraven and Mountearl village was the birthplace of Dr. Rees, editor well-known "Encyclopædia," whose father, Lewis was minister of the Independent chapel here.

BLAENHONDDAN, a hmlt. in the par of C hund. of Neath, in the co. of Glamorgan, S near Neath. It is seated on the river Neath the inhabitants are miners. Cadoxton Place and ton Lodge are the principal residences.

BLAENPENAL, or LLANPENAL, a chplry. par. of Llanddewi-brefi, hund. of Perrarth, Cardigan, South Wales, 6 miles to the N.W. of It is at the head of the vale of the Aeron river from the mountain on which it rises. The l perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, of £84, in the patron. of the Earl of Lisburne and R Esq. The church is dedicated to St. David.

BLAEN-PORTH, a par. in the lower div. of hund. of Troedyraur, in the co. of Cardigan, South W miles to the E. of Cardigan. The living cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £97, in the the Earl of Lisburne and J. V. Lloyd, Esq. T is dedicated to St. David. The parish has of three ancient camps, one of which, Gwythan, is attributed to Gilbert, Earl of others are called Caer Sawydd and Tudor's Castle. is a mineral spring at Tyllwyd.

BLAENSAWTHE, or BLAENSAWDDE, in the par. of Llanddausaint, hund. of Perfedd Carmarthen, South Wales, 7 miles to the S very. It is seated near the foot of the Black Mo where the river Sawdde takes its rise.

BLAGDON, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of borne, in the co. of Dorset, 3 miles from Cr

BLAGDON, a tnshp. in the par. of S Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 8 the N. of Newcastle. In the vicinity is Blagdo the seat of Sir M. W. Ridley, Bart.

BLAGDON, a par. in the hund. of Winter the co. of Somerset, 6 miles to the N.E. of A Bristol is its post town. It is situated on the slope of the Mendip hills. The living is the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the val. of patron. of W. Fripp, Esq. The church, years ago, is dedicated to St. Andrew. The W have a chapel here. The rect. of Blagdon was by John Langhorne, D.D., joint author with his William Langhorne, of the translation of Plu Lives. He died here, and was interred in the yard in 1779. Here is a free school, endowed by Baynard in 1687, with a revenue of about £ annum, and a bequest by John Leman, the pr produce of which is about £13 a year. A Nat has recently been built on the top of the Mend with residence for a mistress, in which Divine ser performed on Sunday evenings.

BLAGRAVE, a tythg. in the par. of Lam hund. of the same name, in the co. of Berks, from Lambourn.

BLAIDES, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Mallerst par. of Grinton, wap. of Gilling, in the North Rid the co. of York, 4 miles to the W. of Reeth.

BLAINA, near Nant-y-Glo, in co. Monmouth, W.S.W. of Abergavenny, and 18 miles from Ne by t Western Valleys railway, which has a station at Nan -Glo, about 1½ miles from Blaina. The village is situated in a very picturesque spot, between two very high nd steep ranges of hills, which separate the Ebwy Vall from that of the Afon. The whole of the popu- latio are engaged in the extensive ironworks of Messrs. Levi and Simpson. More attention has been paid at Blai than at most works to the education of the inha- bitan , and a beautiful church, in the Norman style, was ected in 1845 in place of the old parish church, whic was almost destroyed by fire in the preceding year

BLAINEY, a parcel of the par. of Llangunider, hund. of Crickhowell, in the co. of Brecknock, South Wales, 6 mi to the W. of Crickhowell. It is a station on the Weste n Valleys section of the Monmouthshire railway and anal.

BLAIR-ATHOLL, a par. in the district of Atholl, and , of Perth, Scotland, about 80 miles to the N. of Edinburgh. It is situated among the Grampian moun- tain and consists chiefly of rugged and bleak lands, but th some beautiful and fertile plains and straths. The incipal river is the rapid Garry, which receives seve tributaries from the glens on each of its banks: the Tilt. The loftiest hills are Beinn-a-Ghlo, which rises to the height of 3,725 feet, and Ben-y-gloe-charg, 3,550 feet. The view over this district from the ass of Killiecrankie, by which it is approached from the south, is considered to be one of the finest in the country. It embraces a great variety of scenery, hill nd dale, pasture and woodland, bright streams and mo dicoats. The par. of Blair-Atholl is very extensive, and includes the ancient pars. of Kilmavronaig, Lude, and rowan. The living, of the val. of £250, is in the psb. of Dunkeld, in the patron. of the Duke of Athe . The parish church is a recent structure. The old church, now in ruins, was the burial-place of Graham of Claverhouse, who fell at Killiecrankie in July, 1689. Blair Castle, the fine seat of the Duke, stands on the bank of the Tilt, near its junction with the Garry. This mansion was attacked by the Highlanders in 1746. Her Majesty the Queen visited it, and stayed several weeks here, in September, 1844. There are some pic- turesque waterfalls in the neighbourhood—those of the Bruar, in Glen Tilt, and those of the Bruar, celebrated by Burns, near the road to Inverness. A considerable extent of ground has been planted with larch, fir, &c. Gaelic is commonly spoken here. Fairs are held for the sale of cattle on the third Wednesday in May, and at the Ridge of Tilt on the 25th June and the 20th August (old style). The par. is about 28 miles in length, by 18 miles in breadth, having an area of about 166,000 acres.

BLAIR GOWRIE, a par. in the co. of Perth, Scot- land, 2 miles to the N.E. of Cupar Angus. A branch of the Grampians extends into this parish. It is watered by several streams, the principal of which are the Isla and the Ericht. The banks of the latter are steep and lofty, and the stream has abundance of fish. The town has a good trade, and is a burgh of barony. Many of the workpeople are employed in spinning and weaving flax. The living, of the val. of £223, is in the presb. of Meigle, in the patron. of M'Pherson of Blair Gowrie, and Oliphant of Ardblair. In the vicinity is Newton House, the old residence of the M'Phersons. Fairs are held here in March, May, August, October, and November. The par. extends about 7 miles in length and 3 miles in breadth.

BLAIR LOGIE, a vil. in the par. of Logie, in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, 3 miles from Stirling. It is seated in Glen Devon, at the foot of the Ochil Hills. Copper and pyrites exist here, and were once worked. The hill, the glen, the village with its kirk, and an ancient castle near, make up a very picturesque scene.

BLAIRNGONE, a vil. in the par. of Fossaway, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 8 miles to the N.E. of Clack- mannan. It is a burgh of barony. The Murrays had a seat here.

BLAISDON, a par. in the hund. of Westbury, in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles to the E. of Mitcheldean. Newnham is its post town. A destructive fire occurred in this village in 1699. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, and in the patron. of Mrs. Anna Gordon. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

BLAKEMERE, or BLACKMOOR, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, in the co. of Hereford, 7 miles to the S. of Weobly. It is situated on the banks of the river Wye. The living is a vic. united with that of Preston- on-Wye, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church is dedi- cated to St. Leonard. The parochial charities produce £2 per annum.

BLAKENEY, a chplry. in the par. of Awre, hund. of Blidesloe, in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles to the S. of Newnham. It lies near the river Severn. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the val. of £232, in the patron. of the Haberdashers' Company, London. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The Baptists have a chapel in the village. Cattle fairs are held here on the 12th May and the 12th No- vember.

BLAKENEY, a par. and small port in the hund. of Holt, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles to the N.W. of Holt, Thetford is its post town. It is situated on the sea-coast, and has a good harbour. It was anciently called Snit- terley, and was the site of a Carmelite monastery, founded at the close of the 13th century, and subsequently en- dowed by William de Roos. In the reign of Henry III. the inhabitants received the grant of a market, and many German traders afterwards resorted to the port and settled in the town. There are about 50 or 60 small vessels belonging to the port, which are employed in the coasting trade and the fisheries. The entrance to the harbour is rendered difficult and dangerous by a shifting bar. The extension of the Great Eastern railway to the neighbouring port of Wells will probably lessen the trade of this place. The living is a rect.* united with that of Cockthorpe, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £506, in the patron. of Lord Calthorpe. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. It is a large and handsome building of flint, with a lofty embattled tower at the west end, and a turret at the east end. It forms a con- spicuous object on the coast, and is a well-known sea- mark. It is said that the eastern turret was formerly lighted up. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists. The charitable endowments amount to £12 per annum. The town contains an old guildhall, and some good arches of the ancient friary. Blakeney was the birthplace of John de Baconsthorpe, the "resolute and subtle doctor," and provincial of the Carmelites in England. He died in 1346.

BLAKENHALL, or BLACKENHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Wybunbury, hund. of Nantwich, in the co. palatine of Chester, 5 miles to the S.E. of Nantwich. The Grand Junction railway passes near it.

BLAKENHAM, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Bosmere and Claydon, in the co. of Suffolk, 3 miles to the S. of Needham Market. Soon after the Conquest a small Benedictine priory was founded here, as a cell to the abbey of Bec, in Normandy, to which the manor had been given. On the suppression of alien priories, the manor was granted to the Provost and Fellows of Eton College. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £166, in the patron. of the Provost and Fellows of Eton College. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Great Eastern railway and the Stow- market and Ipswich canal pass near this place.

BLAKENHAM, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Bosmere and Claydon, in the co. of Suffolk, near Great Blakenham. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Nor- wich, of the val. of £280, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Jackson, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BLAKESALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Wolverley, hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 3 miles to the N. of Kidderminster.

BLAKESLEY, a par. in the hund. of Green's Nor- ton, in the co. of Northampton, 4 miles to the W. of Towcester, its post town. It includes the hmlts. of Foxley and Woodend. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £176, in the patron. of J. W. Wright, Esq. The church, which contains a monumental brass of the year 1416, is dedicated to St. Mary. The charitable endowments of this parish are of considerable value, producing above £250 per annum. The principal foundations are the school established in 1669 by William Foxley, which has an income from endowment of £100 a year; and the free school endowed by Lady Leveson, with an income of the same amount. Blakesley has also a share in several other charities. It is said that Blakesley Hall at one time belonged to the knights of the order of St. John of Jerusalem.

BLANANLLYN, a vil. in the par. of Kilrhedin, hund. of Elvet, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 4 miles to the SSof Newcastle Emlyn.

BLANCHARDSTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. and bar. of Castleknock, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles to the N.W. of Dublin. It is a station on the Midland Great Western railway. A police force is stationed here, and petty sessions are held in the village once a month. Here are also a Roman Catholic chapel and the Cabra nunnery, in connection with which is a large girls' school.

BLANCHLAND, or SHOTLEY HIGH QUARTER, a par. in Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 10 miles to the S. of Hexham. It is situated on the confines of the co. of Northumberland next Durham, on the river Derwent, not far from its source. This place was the site of an abbey, founded in the latter part of the 12th century by Walter de Bolbec, for canons of the Premonstratensian order. Its abbot was called to one of the parliaments held in the reign of Edward I. The revenue of the abbey at the period of the Dissolution was £44 9s. The estate came subsequently into the possession of the Bishop of Durham, Lord Crewe, who made it part of the endowment of the munificent charities which he founded. The inhabitants are principally employed in the extensive lead mines which have long been worked here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, of the val. of £198, in the patron. of Lord Crewe's trustees. The present church is part of the old abbey, and was made good for use in the year 1752. The gatehouse and some other parts of the abbey are still standing. They are situated in a narrow valley in the midst of moors. There is a free school for boys, endowed with £50 a year, and one for girls.

BLANCHVILLESKILL, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles to the E. of Kilkenny. The soil is fertile, and the district contains some limestone. The living is a vic. united with the rect. of Kilfane, in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin. The principal residence is Blanchvilleskill House, the seat of General Kearney.

BLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Sedbergh, hund. of Staincliff and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, not far from Sedbergh.

BLANDFORD-FORUM, or MARKET BLANDFORD, a par., market town, and municipal borough, in the hund. of Coombs-Ditch, in the co. of Dorset, 16 miles to the N.E. of Dorchester, and 103 miles to the S.W. of London. It is a station on the Dorset Central section of the London and South-Western railway. Blandford is situated in a pleasant and fertile country, chiefly consisting of fine pasture land, on the banks of the river Stour, which curves round two sides of the town, and is crossed by a bridge of six arches. The name of the place indicates its position by an ancient ford of the Stour. The manor of Blandford belonged, at the close of the 12th century, to the Earl of Leicester, and was afterwards a royal possession, being held by Henry IV., Edward IV., and Richard III. It now belongs to the corporation, to whom it was granted by James I. The town has frequently suffered from destructive fires. The first occasion was in 1579, when it was quickly rebuilt. It was again burnt in the years 1676 or 1677, 1684, and 1713. But the most extensive conflagration occurred in 1731, when about 400 homes perished, and not more than 40 private houses escaped the destruction. The town was rebuilt under the provisions of an Act of Parliament passed for purpose, and with the help of generous contribut from many quarters, including the royal family these successive destructions and restorations Bla is indebted for its present handsome appear that of any town in the West of England It is larly built, and the streets are well paved and li with gas. It contains a handsome townhall, Portland stone, the architecture being of the I order. A pump near the hall has a marble ta with an inscription in commemoration of the fi 1731. It was erected in 1760 by John Bastard, o sufferers. There are also a commodious corn-ex built by the corporation in 1855, a savings-ba the Union poorhouse.—Blandford is said to be a by prescription, but only two instances are its exercising the elective franchise, one in the Edward I., and the other in the reign of Edw It was constituted a free borough by a charter of I., granted in 1606, by which its prescriptive were confirmed and enlarged. Under the Re the borough is governed by a mayor or bailiff, men, and 12 councillors, with the style of the and burgesses of Blandford-Forum." Blandford seat of a Poor-law Union, the head of a C district, and a polling-place for the county has been a market town from a period preceding reign of Henry III. Petty sessions are held town by the county magistrates.—Various manufa have been carried on here at different times, of the most noted was that of point lace, superior other English, and rivalling the famed Flemish value was £30 per yard. Large quantities of shir tons were formerly made in this town and the surro ing district, but this manufacture declined on the tion of the more elegant pearl button.—The living rect. and vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the £300, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of W chester. The church, which was erected after t struction of the former one by the fire of 17 its site, is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. It structure in the Grecian style of architecture, wi tower and cupola, and possesses several handsome ments. There is a chapel belonging to the Inde —The charitable endowments of the parish are siderable extent, producing about £1,200 per The principal of these is the endowment founded by William Williams, for the instruction and ap ticing of poor children, and other benevolent purp the revenue of which is now nearly £600 a year grammar-school, removed from Milton to the t 1785, has an income of £150 per annum. There blue-coat school for 12 boys, established and by Archbishop Wake in 1729, which has a rev £50. Almshouses for 10 persons were found George Ryves about 1685, and have an income endowment of £210. Six others are endowed property producing a like amount.—There are mains of several ancient camps in the vicinity Blandford. Damory Court, at the east end of the was the ancient manorhouse.—Blandford has been birthplace of several distinguished men, among wh may be named Bruno Ryves, born in 1596, editor of early newspaper entitled Mercurius Rusticus, and one the contributors to the Polyglot Bible; Thomas Creech born in 1659, poet, and author of a translation Lucretius; Archbishop Wake, born in 1657. Edw Wake, who founded the institution for the sons of clergy; and Christopher Pitt, born in 1699, author translation of the Æneid.—Blandford gives the title marquis to the Duke of Marlborough.—The market been held on Saturday since the reign of Henry II it previously was held on Sunday. Fairs for the sale horses, cattle, and cheese take place on the 7th Mar the 10th July, and the 8th December. There is a racecourse near the town, on which races were annually in August, but they have been discontinued since 1843.

BLANDFORD ST. MARY, a par. in the hund.

Combs-Ditch, in the co. of Dorset, near Blandford-Forum. It is situated on the south bank of the river Stour, which is here crossed by a bridge. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £313, in the patron. of the heirs of Sir John Burrough. The church was rebuilt in 1711 by Governor Pitt, and contains several monuments of the Pitt family. Governor Pitt who was the grandfather of the Earl of Chatham, was born in this village in 1653. Here, too, was born the antiquary, Browne Willis, in 1682.

BLANKNEY, a par. in the second div. of the wap. of Lawe, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 9 miles to the S.E. of Lincoln. Sleaford is its post town. Linwood is a hamlet of this parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £821, in the patron. of T. Chaplin, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Oswald. Blankney Hall is the principal mansion.

BLANTYRE, a par. in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 3 miles to the W. of Hamilton. It is situated in a level, fertile district, sheltered by higher grounds, on the south bank of the river Clyde. Low Blantyre is a station on the Hamilton branch of the Caledonian railway, and High Blantyre a station on the Hamilton and Strathaven railway. The par. includes the vils. of Blantyre Works, Auchinraith, Auchintibber, Barnhill, Hunthill, and Stonefield. It is the site of a priory of the Augustine order, founded before the close of the 13th century. At the Reformation it was given by James VI. to Walter Stewart, who was shortly afterwards made a baron, with the title of Lord Blantyre. The barony is still held by his descendants. The cotton manufacture is carried on here, and gives employment to about 900 persons. The district contains ironstone and limestone. The living, which is of the val. of £97, is in the presb. of Hamilton, in the patron. of Lord Blantyre, whose seat is Erskine House. The remains of the ancient priory stand on a rock by the Clyde, opposite Bothwell Castle. There is a mineral spring in the parish, the water of which is efficacious in some cutaneous affections.

BLARIS, or LISBURN, a par. partly in the bar. of Upper Massarene, in the co. of Antrim, and partly in the bars. of Upper Castlereagh and Lower Iveagh, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 7 miles to the S.W. of Belfast, and 80 miles to the N. of Dublin. It is situated on the banks of the river Lagan, and contains the market town of Lisburn. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, Connor, and Dromore, of the val. of £61 in the patron. of the Marquis of Hertford. See LISBURN.

BLARNEY, a vil. in the par. of Garrycloyne, bar. of East Muskerry, in the co. of Cork, and prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the N.W. of Cork, and 160 miles from Dublin. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. The village is seated on the river Blarney, which is here joined by the Comane, and is crossed by a bridge of three arches. This place was formerly the seat of a thriving trade. The linen manufacture, in which at one time above 12 mills were employed, was succeeded by the cotton manufacture, which flourished but a short time and then decayed. There is still a large mill, in which many of the villagers are employed in the worsted and woollen manufacture. The scenery surrounding the village is beautiful, and chiefly woodland, the oft-sung "groves of Blarney" being very real, extensive, and delightful. The chief object of general interest here is the old castle, the remains of which stand on a lofty limestone rock by the river, from which there is a wide view over the country as far as the Boggra mountains. One of the kings of South Munster had a hunting-seat on this spot, and a castle was erected at the commencement of the 13th century, on the site of which the present structure was reared in 1446 by Cormac McCarthy, a hero of royal descent. It was destroyed, with the exception of the tower, at the Revolution of 1688. In an angle of the tower, about 20 feet from the summit, is a stone with a Latin inscription, recording the erection of the castle and the name of the founder. This is the famous "Blarney Stone," possessed, according to vulgar tradition, of the power of inspiring whosoever succeeds in kissing it with the gift of resistless flattery and dauntless lying. Few venture, it is said, on the perilous experiment of being lowered within reach of it. There are several large caves under the castle, containing some fine stalactites and stalagmites. The parish church of Garrycloyne stands in this village. Petty sessions are held once a fortnight, and a police force is stationed here. There are also a large National school and a dispensary. Fairs are held on the 18th September and the 11th November.

BLASKENWELL, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Corfe Castle, in the co. of Dorset, not far from Corfe Castle.

BLASTON, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, in the co. of Leicester, 7 miles to the N.E. of Market Harborough. It consists of the two districts of St. Michael and St. Giles. The living of St. Michael is a don. cur., attached to the rect. of Hallerton, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The living of St. Giles is a don. rect., of the val. of £222, in the patron. of the Rev. G. O. Fenwicke, incumbent, who also holds the manor of Blaston. There are charitable endowments which produce about £10 per annum.

BLATCHINGTON, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Flexborough, rape of Pevensey, in the co. of Sussex, 8 miles to the S. of Lewes; Seaford is its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the coast of the English Channel, at the mouth of the river Cuckmere. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, of the val. of £88, in the patron. of the Rev. N. R. Dennis, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

BLATCHINGTON, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Whalesbone, rape of Lewes, in the co. of Sussex, 2 miles to the N.W. of Brighton. The South Coast railway passes near it. The living is a rect. consolidated with the vic. of Brighton, in the dioc. of Chichester. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

BLATCHINWORTH, a joint tnshp. with Calderbrook, in the par. of Rochdale, and hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles to the N.E. of Rochdale. The Manchester and Leeds section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway passes through it, with a station at Littleborough, a village included in the township. The inhabitants are employed in the woollen manufactories, the print-works, and the numerous collieries.

BLATHERWYCKE, a par. in the hund. of Corby, in the co. of Northampton, 6 miles to the N. of Oundle, This parish was formed by the union of two ancient parishes, about the middle of the 15th century. Part of it is included in Rockingham Forest. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £394, lately in the patron. of Augustus Stafford, Esq. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and contains a monumental brass of Sir H. Stafford and his lady, of the year 1548. The other church, which was dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, was long ago taken down. The parochial charities amount to £5 a year. The chief residence is Blatherwycke Hall, the seat of the Stafford family.

BLAUNAN, a tnshp. in the par of Nantglyn, hund. of Isaled, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 4 miles from Denbigh.

BLAWITH, a chplry. in the par. of Ulverstone, hund. of Lonsdale, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 7 miles to the N. of Ulverstone. It lies near the south end of Coniston Water. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, of the val. of £63, in the patron. of T. R. G. Braddyll, Esq. There is a school with a small endowment, and other charities of trifling value.

BLAXHALL, a parish in the hund. of Plomesgate, in the co. of Suffolk, 4 miles to the S. of Saxmundham. Woodbridge is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £498, in the patron. of A. Ingleby and others. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial charities produce £18 per annum. Blaxhall Hall is about a mile distant from the village.

BLAXTON, or BLAKESTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Finningley and Lake of Doncaster, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the E. of Doncaster.

BLAYDON, a vil. in the tnshp. of Winlaton, and par. of St. Cuthbert Stella, Chester ward, in the co. palatine of Durham, 4 miles to the W. of Newcastle. It is situated near the river Tyne, and is a station on the Newcastle and Carlisle railway. It is not far from Axwell Park, the seat of Sir T. Clavering, Bart. There are extensive coal works in the vicinity.

BLAYNE, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandebie, hund. of Iskennen, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 4 miles to the S. of Llandilofawr.

BLAYNEY, or BLAENAU, a parcel of the par. of Llanfihangel-Cwmdu, hund. of Crickhowell, in the co. of Brecknock, South Wales, 5 miles to the N. of Crickhowell. It is situated at the foot of the Black Mountains.

BLAZE, or BLAZEY, ST., a par. in the eastern div. of the hund. of Powder, in the co. of Cornwall, 4 miles to the E. of St. Austell. It lies near the coast of the English Channel, on the banks of a small river which falls into the Bay of St. Austell, or Par Bay. The patron saint to whom the parish owes its name, and to whom the church is dedicated, is said to have landed at this spot. The district is rocky, the surface consisting chiefly of granite and slate. Tin and copper are abundant, and the inhabitants are mostly employed in working the mines. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £120, in the patron. of Major Carlyon. The church is dedicated to St. Blaise, whose effigy it contains. It has also a monument to Henry Scobell, treasurer and paymaster of the farmtin in the reign of Queen Anne. There is also a district church at Par, or Biscovey, the living of which is a perpet. cur. val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and the Bishop of Exeter alternately. There are chapels belonging to the Wesleyans, the Primitive and the Association Methodists. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. The principal seat in the vicinity is Tregrehan, a residence of Major Carlyon. Roselyon was the seat of the Kellios and Scobells, but is now only a farmhouse. This parish was the birthplace of the benevolent Ralph Allen, of Prior Park, near Bath, the original, as it is said, of Fielding's Allworthy, in "Tom Jones." He died in 1764.

BLEADON, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, in the co. of Somerset, 6 miles to the W. of Axbridge. Weston-super-Mare is its post town. It is situated on the river Axe, which is here navigable, and includes the hmlts. of Oldmixton and Shiplet. The Bristol and Exeter railway runs through the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the annual val. of £469, in the patron. of the Bishop of Winchester. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The rect. of Bleadon was held by Meric Casaubon, a learned critic, son of a greater father, Isaac Casaubon. The former died in 1671. There are remains of British encampments and several barrows in the neighbourhood, where coins, weapons, and other relics have been found.

BLEAN, BLEAN CHURCH, or ST. COSMUS AND DAMIAN IN THE BLEAN, a par. in the hund. of Whitstable, lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles to the N.W. of Canterbury. The Whitstable railway runs through it. The parish is situated in Blean Forest, a rough tract of woodland which belongs to the crown. Hops are cultivated here, and part of the land is covered with coppices. Blean is the seat of a Poor-law Union. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £346, in the patron. of the Master of Eastbridge Hospital. The church is dedicated to SS. Cosmus and Damian, and has several monuments. The parochial charities amount to £3 a year.

BLEAN, HIGH and LOW, hmlts. in the tnshp. of Bainbridge, and par. of Aysgarth, wap. of Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, not far from Askrigg.

BLEANGATE HUNDRED, one of the 12 hunds. or subdivisions of the lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, situated in the eastern div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the Thames, on the E. by the of Thanet, on the S. by the hunds. of Downham and Preston, and on the W. by the hund. of Whitst It contains the pars. of Chislett, Hearne, Heath, I ver, Stourmouth, Sturry, Swadelithe, and West This hund. covers an area of about 18,800 acres

BLEASBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Legsby, and of Wraggoe, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles to the Wragby. It once formed a separate parish.

BLEASBY, a par. in the wap. of Thurgarton, i co. of Nottingham, 3 miles to the S. of S post town. It lies on the west bank of the river T and is a station on the Nottingham and Lincoln of the Midland railway. The hmlts of Goverton, and Notown are included in this pa living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of t £107, in the patron. of the Chapter of the Church of Southwell. The church, an ancient is dedicated to St. Mary. The princip Bleasby Hall. About a mile from the villa ford ferry over the Trent. Bleasby is a mee Rufford hounds.

BLEASDALE, a chplry. in the par. of Lanc of Amounderness, in the co. palatine of Lan to the E. of Garstang. This township co extensive tract of elevated moorland, rising Fell, the highest point, to the height of abo It formerly constituted the Forest of Bleas now almost entirely enclosed. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, of the val the patron. of the Vicar of Lancaster. The endowments of the township amount to £6 the produce of a bequest by Christopher P 1702, and which is applied partly to the supp school and partly to the relief of the poor

BLEATARN, a hmlt. in the par. of W ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 4 miles to Brough. It is seated on the river Eden, in country abounding in limestone. Here are tiges of a convent founded in the latter part of century as a cell to Byland Abbey, to which of Bleatarn was granted by John de Tailb

BLECHINGDON. See BLETCHINGDON, Oxfo

BLEDDFA. See BLETHVAGH, Radnors

BLEDDINGTON, a par. in the upper di hund. of Slaughter, in the co. of Gloucester, the S.E. of Stow-on-the-Wold. The living is a the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the va in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Christ C Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard

BLEDISLOE HUNDRED, one of the 27 hu subdivisions of the co. of Gloucester, situated western div. of the co., and bounded on the S. by the hund. of Westbury, on the E. by the Severn, and on the W. by the hund. of St. B contains the pars. of Alvington, Awre, and L extends over an area of about 12,900 acres

BLEDISLOE, a hmlt. in the par. of Awre and of Bledisloe, in the co. of Gloucester, 2 m Newnham. It is seated on the south bank of the Severn.

BLEDLOW, a par. in the hund. of Aylesbury, co. of Buckingham, 5 miles to the S.E. of T Prince's Risborough is its post town. It lies on the lines of Oxfordshire, and includes the hmlt. of Bl Ridge. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxf the val. of £175, in the patron. of Lord Carr The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. It the early English style, and contains monuments Crosse family. Its situation on the brow of a rock hanging a pool in a deep and woody glen, has given to the following rhyme—

"They who live and do abide, Shall see the church fall into the Lyde."

The pool below the rock is called the Lyde. The table endowments of Bledlow amount to £30 per an

BLEDNOCH. See BLADENOCH, Kirkcudbright

BLEINE, a hmlt. united with Llan, in the p

Llangendeirne, and hund. of Kidwelly, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 5 miles to the N.E. of Kidwelly.

BLENCARN, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkland, Leath ward in the co. of Cumberland, 9 miles to the E. of Penrith. A free school was established here in 1775 for the benefit of the tnshps. of Culgaith and Blencarn. It has an income from endowment of £60 per annum. There is a mineral spring near the village.

BLENCOGO, a tnshp. in the par. of Bromfield, in the ward and co. of Cumberland, 4 miles to the W. of Wigton. This village was the birthplace (1738) of Jonathan Boucher, author of a glossary of the English language, and contributor to Hutchinson's history of the county.

BLENCOW, GREAT, a tnshp. in the par. of Dacre, Leath ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 4 miles to the N.W. of Penrith. Here is a free grammar school, established and endowed by Thomas Burbank, in 1576, which has a revenue of about £190 per annum. The first Lord Ellenborough was a pupil in this school.

BLENCOW, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Greystoke, Leath ward, in the co. of Cumberland, close to Great Blencow. A farm-house in this township was the ancient seat of the Blencow family, who resided here from the commencement of the 14th century. There are some remains of a chapel and other buildings, and in a neighbouring cemetery is a stone cross.

BLENDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Bexley, and hund. of Bexley, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles to the E. of Dartford. Blendon Hall is the principal residence.

BLENDWORTH, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Finch-Dean, in the co. of Southampton, 8 miles to the S.E. of Petersfield. Horndean is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £226, in the patron. of the Rev. E. L. Ward, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Giles. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £21 per annum, of which £19 is the produce of a bequest by William Ashford, in 1695, for the education of poor children. The chief residence is Blendworth House, the seat of Sir W. Brighton, Bart.

BLENHEIM PARK, an ext. par. district, in the lib. of Oxford, in the co. of Oxford, 8 miles to the N.W. of Oxford. It is situated on the river Glyme, close to the town of Woodstock, and near the Handboro' Junction station on the West Midland railway. It is the seat of the Duke of Marlborough. Blenheim, like Strathfieldsaye, is a permanent monument raised by a grateful nation to one of its most illustrious heroes and defenders. On the 2nd of August, 1704, the great Duke of Marlborough obtained a decisive victory over the united forces of the French and Bavarians at Hochstädt, near the village of Blenheim, on the banks of the Danube. Immediately afterwards the royal approbation of his achievement was expressed in the grant to him, by Queen Anne, of the honour of Woodstock, to be held by the tenure of presenting annually to the reigning sovereign at Windsor Castle a standard of France by way of "acquittance for all manner of rents, suits, and services due to the crown." The legislature subsequently confirmed the grant and voted also a sum of £500,000 for the erection of the palace and laying out the grounds.—The park, which is of great extent, consists of a beautiful tract of undulating ground, watered by the river Glyme, which expands into a lake-like sheet of water opposite to the principal front of the palace. The great natural advantages of the spot have been improved to the utmost by the hand of art. The laying out of the grounds was entrusted to the eminent landscape gardener, Brown, and the result of his plan is considered a masterpiece of refined taste and artistic skill. He is said to have remarked, in reference to his successful distribution of the water in the park, that "the Thames would never forgive him for what he had done at Blenheim."—The palace was erected from designs by Sir John Vanbrugh. It is of vast size, the principal front extending about 350 feet from wing to wing, and the entire structure covering about seven acres. Its architecture presents the usual characteristics of his style, especially heaviness, and is generally admitted to have little claim to admiration for beauty or elegance. It occupies an elevated situation in the park, and commands, from the south front, an extensive and beautiful prospect bounded by the distant hills of the Chiltern range. The entrance to the park, on the Woodstock side, is by a fine triumphal arch, or gateway, of the Corinthian order of architecture; and the approach to the grand front is by a noble avenue above 2 miles in length. The arrangement of the interior of the palace is remarkably good, and its decorations splendid and magnificent. Among its principal apartments are the lofty entrance hall, with a ceiling painted by Thornhill, and containing many statues and pictures; the bay-window room hung with beautiful tapestry; the state and other drawing-rooms; dining-room, containing several family portraits by Sir Joshua Reynolds; the saloon, partly lined with marble, the ceiling and walls of which are painted by La Guerre; the state bed-chamber; the library, a noble apartment, nearly 200 feet in length, supported by marble columns, and containing about 20,000 volumes—it has a marble statue of Queen Anne, by Rysbrach; the chapel, in which is the monument, by the same artist, to the great duke and his duchess; the theatre; and till recently the Titian room. The last-named room was totally destroyed, with a large part of the north-east wing of the palace, by an accidental fire in February, 1861. Among the numerous paintings which adorn the palace are works by Raphael, Murillo, Rubens, Vandyck, Titian, Reynolds, &c.—Not far from the triumphal arch is a small and elegant building, called the China Gallery, in which is preserved a valuable and interesting collection of porcelain, delft, and Japan manufactures. In front of the palace is a column, 130 feet in height, surmounted by a statue of the great duke, and bearing an inscription by Bolingbroke. The lake is crossed by an elegant bridge; and on a hill, sloping to the water, stands the High Lodge. In the reign of Charles II. this lodge was occasionally the residence of Rochester, then comptroller of the Park. On the slope of the hill is Rosamond's Well, near the site of her famed Bower. The ancient way called Akeman Street crosses the park, and remains of Roman buildings have been discovered near it.

BLENKINSOP, a tnshp. in the par. of Haltwhistle, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 2 miles to the W. of Haltwhistle. The Newcastle and Carlisle railway runs through it. The inhabitants are principally employed in the extensive coal works of the district. The chief residence is Blenkinsop Hall, near which are the remains of an old castle situated on a hill, and once the seat of the Blenkinsop family, whose name it bore. Roman remains, consisting of an altar and a stone with an inscription, have been found at this place.

BLENNERHASSETT, a tnshp. united with Kirkland, in the par. of Torpenhow, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 4 miles to the W. of Ireby. It is seated on the banks of the river Eske. There is a chapel belonging to the Independents. The charitable endowments of the township produce £3 a year.

BLENNERVILLE, a vil. in the bar. of Trughanacmy, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile from Tralee, to which it is the port. It is situated on the coast of Tralee Bay. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries. Fairs are held here on the 9th May, the 15th September, the 25th October, and the 19th December.

BLESSINGTON, a par. and market town in the bar. of Lower Talbotstown, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 18 miles to the S.W. of Dublin. It is situated on the confines of the co. of Kildare, on the banks of the river Liffey, and owes its origin to Michael Boyle, Archbishop of Dublin in the reign of Charles II. A charter of incorporation was granted in 1669, from which time till the Union the borough returned two members to the Irish parliament. A police force is stationed here, and petty sessions are held once a fortnight. The district is mountainous, and there are large tracts of waste and bog. Granite, which is abundant, is quarried and exported. The fine waterfall called Poul-a-phuca is within 3 miles of Blessington. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, of the val. of £398, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, which has a lofty tower, was erected by Archbishop Boyle, and contains a monument to him. In the vicinity are Hillsborough, the seat of the Marquis of Downshire; Russborough, the seat of the Earl of Milltown; and Russelstown. The market day is Thursday. Fairs are held on the 12th May, the 5th July, and the 12th November.

BLETCHINGLEY, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Tandridge, in the co. of Surrey, 5 miles to the E. of Reigate, and 20 miles from London. The South-Eastern railway passes through the par., the nearest station to which is Redhill. Ham Farm is a hmlt. of this par. Bletchingley is a very ancient place, and was formerly a market town and a borough, returning two members to parliament from the reign of Edward I. The market was long since disused, and the borough was disfranchised by the Reform Act in 1832. At the period of the Norman Conquest the manor was held by the Earl of Clare. A castle was shortly after erected, which was destroyed after the battle of Lewes, in the reign of Henry III. Nothing remains of it, but part of the foundations. The town is pleasantly seated on a hill overlooking the South Downs. The pursuits of the inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. Large quantities of fuller's earth are obtained in the adjoining district. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £1,200, in the patron. of H. Chawner, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is a spacious edifice in the early English style of architecture, with a low embattled tower, from which formerly rose a fine spire to the height of 160 feet. This was destroyed by lightning in 1606. The church contains a very fine monument to Sir Robert Clayton and his lady, with white marble effigies; and a monument to Bishop Thomas, by whom the rectory was once held. The manor belonged to the Clayton family. The Independents have a chapel in the town. There is a free school for 25 boys, which was founded in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and possesses an annual income from endowment of £23. Ten almshouses for aged persons were erected in 1668, and another was subsequently added. The parochial charities produce altogether about £50 per annum. Bletchingley, the ancient manor-house, was formerly the residence of the Duke of Buckingham, beheaded by Henry VIII. This mansion was pulled down by one of the Earls of Peterborough, and the porter's lodge transformed into the present farmhouse. Fairs are held annually on the 22nd June and the 2nd November, for the sale of horses, cattle, &c.

BLETCHINGTON, or BLETCHINGDON, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, in the co. of Oxford, 4 miles to the E. of Woodstock. The river Cherwell and the Oxford canal pass near it on the west. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £356, in the patron. of the Provost and Fellows of Queen's College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Giles. The charitable endowments of the parish, which include an almshouse for four persons, founded in 1520 by Leonard Power and since rebuilt, amount to about £55 per annum. Bletchington Park is the seat of the Annesley family.

BLETCHLEY, a par. in the hund. of Newport, in the co. of Buckingham, 5 miles to the S. of Wolverton, and 47 miles to the N.W. of London. It is a station on the main line of the London and North-Western railway. The par. comprises the tnshp. of Water Eaton, and part of the chplry. and market town of Fenny Stratford. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £456, in the patron. of Joseph Bennitt, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains several monuments, among which is one to Richard, Lord Grey of Wilton, who died in 1442. The parochial charities consist of an allotment of 25 acres of land for the benefit of the poor.

BLETCHLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Morton-Sea, and hund. of Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles f Market Drayton.

BLETHERSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Dung in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 5 miles to the N of Narberth. The living is a vic. united with th Llawhaden, in the dioc. of St. David's.

BLETHVAUGH, or BLEDDFA, a par. in the h of Cefnllys, in the co. of Radnor, South Wales, 9 to the S.W. of Knighton. It is situated in a bleak hilly country, near the river Lug. The living is a in the dioc. of St. David's, of the val. of £81, in patron. of the bishop of the diocese. The church cated to St. Mary. Petty sessions are held here county magistrates.

BLETSOE, a par. in the hund. of Willey, in th of Bedford, 6 miles to the N.W. of Bedford, town. It lies on the banks of the river Ouse, a the site of a castle belonging, in the 14th century Pateshulls and Beauchamps. The living is a r the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £316, in the patron Lord St. John, of Bletsoe. The church is d St. Mary. It contains the tombs of the St John with monuments to Sir John St. John, and Countess of Bolingbroke. The remains of the seat of the Lords St. John, of Bletsoe, is now house. The parochial charities produce about £ annum.

BLEWBURY, a par. in the hund. of Reading, part also in that of Moreton, in the co. of Berks, 3 the S.W. of Wallingford, its post town. It on the Ridge Way, and contains the chplries of Upthorpe, and Upton, and the lib. of Nottingh The parish is crossed by the ancient way called I or Icknield Street. The living is a vic.* in the Oxford, of the val., with the curs. of Aston-Upt and Upton annexed to it, of £161, in the pat Bishop of Oxford. The church is dedicated to S chael. This parish has the benefit of an important table endowment founded in 1760 by William M the produce of which amounts to about £ annum. This sum is applied, under the direction Court of Chancery, to the maintenance of the blue-coat school, Reading; to the support schools for boys and girls; to apprenticing of poor children, and other benevolent purposes. is an endowed almshouse, founded in 17 charities, the value of which is about £55 p In this parish was formerly a spacious bu the Charter-house; and the ancient manor-house defended by a moat and rampart of earth. On barton Hill are remains of an extensive encampm and there are some barrows in the vicinity.

BLEYNE, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfihangel of Carnwallon, in the co. of Carmarthen, South W 5 miles to the N.E. of Llandily.

BLICKLING, a par. in the southern div. of the of Erpingham, in the co. of Norfolk, 1 mile to the N of Aylesham, its post town. The manor of Blickling in the Saxon age, was a royal demesne, and at the quest, was given to the bishops of Norwich, who had palace and a fine park here. It afterwards passed to the families of the Dagworths, Erpinghams, and Boleyns to the Boleynes and Hobarts, and is now held Lady Suffield. The living is a rect.* in the Norwich, of the val., with that of Erpingham with it, of £521, in the patron. of the Baroness Suffield. The church is dedicated to St Andrew contains some interesting old monuments, including brasses: among which are a good one of Sir Nicholas Dagworth, who died in 1401; one of Robert Baynard and family, of the year 1454; and one of Anne Boleyn aunt of the unfortunate Queen of England, who died 1477. There is also a sculptured hexagonal font. Blickling Hall is the seat of Lady Suffield. It is a very interesting example of the Elizabethan style of architecture. It is in the form of a quadrangle, with a square turret at each angle, and is surrounded by a moat, which is crossed by a bridge of two arches. It was erected by the Hobarts in 1628, on the site of a more ancient ma sion, which was the birthplace of Anne Boleyn, and from which she was married to Henry VIII. The hall contains large and valuable library, and several portraits by Sir Joshua Reynolds, Gainsborough, and Cornelius Jansen. The park, which extends over about 1,000 acres, contains some noble woods of oak and beech, a fine lake, hills rising from its edge, and much picturesque scenery. In 1641 Sir John Hobart had the honour of entertaining at this seat Charles II. and his queen.

BLIDWORTH, a par. in the Southwell div. of the wapentake of Thurgarton, in the co. of Nottingham, 4 miles to S.E. of Mansfield, its post town. It is situated within the bounds of the ancient Forest of Sherwood, and contains the hmlts. of Bottoms, Fishpool and Rainworth. The village stands on high ground, and many of the inhabitants are engaged in the manufacture of hosiery. A large tract of land in the parish is covered with woods which were planted at the time of the inclosure in 1806. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £231, in the patron. of the Prebendary of Oxton, in Southwell Collegiate Church, to which the manor belongs. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BLINDBOTHEL, a tnshp. in the par. of Brigham, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 2 miles to the S. of Cockermouth.

BLINDCRAKE, a tnshp. joined with those of Isell and Redman, in the par. of Isell, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 3 miles to the N.E. of Cockermouth. It lies near the north bank of the river Derwent.

BLINDLEY HEATH, a chplry. in the par. of Godstone, hund. of Tandridge, in the co. of Surrey, not far from Godstone. East Grinstead is its post town. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. with that of St. John the Evangelist, Godstone, and in the patron. of the Vicar of Godstone.

BLISLAND, a par. in the hund. of Trigg, in the co. of Cornwall, 4 miles to the N.E. of Bodmin, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Camel, in a district containing abundance of granite and schist, and steam tin. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £571, in the patron. of the Rev. J. W. Pye. The church, which is dedicated to St. Pratt, contains several monuments and a brass of the year 1620. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here. A fair for the sale of cattle is held on the Monday after the 22nd September.

BLISWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Wymorsley, in the co. of Northampton, 4 miles to the N.E. of Towcester, and 63 miles from London. It is a station on the joint line of the London and North-Western railway, from which a branch line here runs to Northampton and Peterborough. The Grand Junction canal also passes through this parish, and is carried through a tunnel about 100 yards in length. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £351, in the patronage of the Rev. W. Barry, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and contains a monumental brass of the year 1503. The parochial charities, including a small free school, amount to £12 per annum.

BLITHBURY, a hmlt. in the par. of Mavesyn Ridware, hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles from Rugeley. It is seated on the banks of the river Blythe, a branch of the Trent, into which it falls near Kings Bromley.

BLITHE BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kingston, hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles from Uxeter. It is situated on the river Blythe, a branch of the Trent.

BLITHEFIELD, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles from Abbot's Bromley. Rugeley is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Blythe, and includes the hmlt. of Admaston, and the lib. of Newton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £388, in the patron. of Lord Bagot. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard, and contains some fine monuments and brasses of the Bagot family and others. There are free schools for boys and girls, founded and endowed in 1729 by Elizabeth Bagot and Jane Jones, the income of which is about £35 per annum. There are other charitable endowments producing nearly the same sum yearly. Blythefield House, the seat of Lord Bagot, is an extensive structure in the form of a quadrangle, with numerous towers and pinnacles. The moat which formerly surrounded it is filled up. The mansion contains a good collection of pictures, among which are some valuable portraits, including those of Lord Burleigh, Lady Aylesford, Lady Dorset (one of the beauties of the court of Charles II.), and Moliere.

BLO' NORTON, a par. in the hund. of Guilt-Cross, in the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles to the S. of East Harling. It lies on the borders of Suffolk, on the banks of the river Waveney. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £231, in the patron. of the Rev. C. H. Browne, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The charitable endowments amount to £97 per annum, the principal part of which sum is the produce of the parish lands.

BLOCKHOUSE, an ext. par. district, comprised within the bounds of the city of Worcester, in the co. of Worcester.

BLOCKLEY, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, lying detached within the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles to the N.W. of Moreton-in-the-Marsh, its post town. It is a station on the Oxford and Wolverhampton section of the West Midland railway. It is situated on a small stream, a branch of the river Stour, and includes the hmlts. of Dorne, Ditchford, Draycott, Northwick, and Paxford, and the chplry. of Aston Magna. A monastery appears to have been founded here before the middle of the 9th century, which was afterwards given to the bishops of Worcester, who have long held the manor, and who had a palace here before the Reformation. The silk manufacture was introduced here about 1700, and is still carried on. There are also several flour-mills and some stone quarries. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, of the val. of £762, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. It is an ancient building, partly in the Norman style, with a tower of modern erection, and stands on the site of the old monastery. It contains two monumental brasses of priests, one being of the year 1483, and a monument, by Rysbrach, to the Rushout family, of Northwick Park. There is a chapel belonging to the Baptists. The National school is partly supported by endowment. The Fosse Way passed through this parish, and Roman urns and other relics have been found in the neighbourhood. Several mineral springs exist here.

BLODWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanyblodwell, hund. of Oswestry, in the co. of Salop, 5 miles to the S.W. of Oswestry.

BLOFIELD HUNDRED, one of the 34 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Norfolk, situated in the eastern div. of the co., and bounded on the N.E. by the hund. of Walsham, on the N.W. by the hund. of Taverham, and on the S. by the hunds. of Henstead and Loddon, from which it is separated by the river Yare. It comprises the following pars.: — Blofield, Bradeston, Brundall, Buckenham, Burlingham St. Andrew, Burlingham St. Edmund, Burlingham St. Peter, Cantley, Freethorpe, Hassingham, Limpenhoe, Lingwood, Great Plumstead, Little Plumstead, Postwick, Southwood, Strumpshaw, Witton, and part of Thorpe. The hund. extends over an area of about 20,290 acres.

BLOFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Blofield, in the co. of Norfolk, 6 miles to the E. of Norwich, its post town. The Great Eastern railway passes through it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £896, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Caius College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. Here is a free school, founded by Charles Reeve in 1729, which has an income of £10 a year; also several other charitable endowments, the annual value of which is about £75. Blofield is the head of a Poor-law Union, and contains the Union house.

BLOOMSBURY, a par. included within the borough of Finsbury, London, about 1 mile to the N.E. of St. Paul's. It formed part of the adjoining par. of St. Giles until 1730, when, on the erection of St. George's church, it was severed, and constituted an independent parish by authority of parliament. Its present name, Bloomsbury, is supposed by some to be a corruption of Lomesbury, the name of a hamlet anciently standing on the spot, which was the site of the Royal Mews until the year 1534, when they were burnt down; others derive it from William Blemund, lord of the manor in the reign of Henry III. The par. contains the British Museum (which fronts Great Russell-street), Bloomsbury-square (originally called Southampton-square), Russell-square, Woburn-square, Torrington-square, and parts of Bedford and Brunswick squares. Bloomsbury-square has a statue of Charles James Fox, by Westmacott; and Russell-square has one of Francis, Duke of Bedford, by the same artist. These statues are placed at opposite extremities of Bedford-place, facing each other. Coward College, belonging to the Dissenters, is situated in Torrington-square. The north side of Bloomsbury-square was formerly occupied by Bedford House, which was erected by Inigo Jones.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, of the annual val. of £700, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, which was one of the 50 churches appointed by Act of Parliament in the reign of Queen Anne to be built within the bills of mortality, stands in Hart-street, near New Oxford-street. It was erected from designs by Hawksmoor, at a cost of £9,790, and was opened in 1731. It was dedicated to St. George, in compliment to his majesty, King George the First, whose statue surmounts the tower. The architecture is partly of the Tuscan, partly of the Corinthian order; but the steeple, an extraordinary structure, is an imitation of the tomb of Mausolus. The other livings are Christ Church, Woburn-square, and Bedford Chapel; the former of which is a perpet. cur., of the val. of £500, and in the patron. of the Rector of Bloomsbury. In Bloomsbury-street, besides Bedford Chapel, are the French Episcopal chapel and the new Baptist chapel, a large and handsome structure erected in 1848, from designs by J. Gibson. The charitable endowments of the parish consist chiefly of the Southampton almshouses, which have a revenue of about £380 per annum. Bloomsbury is the head of a County Court district, and contains the court-house and a savings-bank.—Bloomsbury-square was originally called Southampton-square, in honour of the Earl of Southampton, who had a mansion there, which was taken down in 1800. Lady Russell spent her last days in it. Among the residents in the square have been Sir Hans Sloane, the founder of the British Museum; Richard Baxter, the eminent divine; the poet Akenside; Judge Mansfield; and the elder D'Israeli, who there wrote the "Curiosities of Literature." Sir Samuel Romilly, Sir Thomas Lawrence, Lord Tenterden, and Lord Loughborough resided in Great Russell-street. Among the important institutions located in this district are the Russell Literary Institution, established in 1808; the Corporation of the Sons of the Clergy; the Royal Literary Fund; the Orthoepic Institution, &c. Soame Jenyns was born here in 1704, and Theodore Hook in 1788.

BLOORE-IN-TYRLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Drayton-in-Hales, hund. of Pirchill, in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles to the E. of Drayton. It lies on the confines of Shropshire, and includes the hmlt. of Sandy-lane Head, and part of the hmlt. of Hookgate. Some historical interest attaches to Blore Heath in this township, as the scene of a severe conflict during the wars of the Roses, in which Lord Audley, commanding the Lancastrian forces, was defeated and slain, with a large number of Cheshire gentlemen fighting on the same side. The Yorkists were led by the Earl of Salisbury. The battle took place in the year 1459, and was commemorated by a wooden cross set up on the spot soon afterwards. Three hundred years later, the cross having been thrown down, was re-erected on a stone pedestal by the lord of the manor.

BLORE, or BLORE RAY, a par. in the northern of the hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Staff... miles to the N.E. of Cheadle. Ashborne is its post t... It is situated on the west bank of the river D... contains part of the chplry. of Calton. The living... rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £1... the patron. of O. Shore, Esq. The church is d... to St. Bartholomew. It is a small ancient ed... contains several monuments and brasses of the B... family, who had formerly a seat here, on the s... which now stands a farmhouse. The parochial ch... produce about £17 per annum. This parish is p... the honour of Tutbury, in the duchy of Lancaster.

BLOWICK, HIGHER and LOWER, hmlts. in par. of North Meols, hund. of West Derby, in palatine of Lancaster, 6 miles to the N.W. of Ormskirk. They are seated near the coast, at the mouth of the Ribble.

BLOWTY, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangeitho, of Mathrafel, in the co. of Montgomery, North W... miles to the W. of Llanfair.

BLOXHAM, a par. in the hund. of Bloxham, in co. of Oxford, 3 miles to the S.W. of Banbury town. It is watered by a small stream, a branch of river Cherwell, and contains the chplries. of Bloxham Milcombe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of the val. of £290, in the patron. of the Provost Fellows of Eton College. The church is ded... St. Mary, and is a fine specimen of the geometrical of architecture, with portions in the style of both and later periods. A church is supposed to have erected not later than the first half of the 12th but the present building contains only a few the earlier structure. The most remarkable its beautiful spire, 195 feet high, which is one of the most graceful in England. There is a that it was built by Cardinal Wolsey, but the dered by most authorities incorrect. The spacious edifice, but somewhat too short for width. The chancel is unworthy of the church, though there are some interesting former structure to be found in it. The western is adorned with singular sculpture, symbolising Judgment. The south porch doorway is a specimen of the transition period, containing Norman merging into early English, while the porch is an elegant specimen of decorated work. church contains some brasses of unusually There are chapels in the village belonging to the and the Wesleyans. A large collegiate building entrance of the village, built in the year grammar school, but which failed, is now the middle classes, sons of farmers, tradesmen. Boys are boarded and educated here for £ year. It is managed by a late Fellow of New Oxford, and is nearly full. New parish schools children have been built in 1862, which are ornament to the village, as well as a public have an endowment of £20 a year. The endowments amount to between £300 and £ annum, being chiefly the produce of the tolls which, under decree of the Court of Chancery, into three parts,—one for the repair of the and bridges, another for the aid of the poor, for the common town charges, which consist the causeways and other public works.

BLOXHAM, or BLOXHOLM, a par. in the Flaxwell, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, to the N. of Sleaford, its post town. The living rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val., with of Digby united to it, of £245, in the patron Right Hon. E. A. Nisbet. The church is dedicated St. Mary. Bloxham Hall is the principal re...

BLOXHAM HUNDRED, one of the 14 hundred subdivisions of the co. of Oxford, situated in the part of the co., and bounded on the N. by Warwickshire; on the E. by the hund. of Banbury and co. of Northampton, on the S. by the hund. of W... and on the W. by the hund. of Dorchester and of W wick. It contains the pars. of Adderbury, Alkerto Bloxham, Broughton, Drayton, Hanwell, Horley, Horn n, Tadmarton, Wigginton, and Wroxton, with parts f the pars. of Cropredy and Swalcliffe. The hund extends over an area of about 27,700 acres.

BLOXWICH, a vil. in the par. and borough of Walsall, in the hund of Offlow, co. of Stafford, 2 miles to the N. of Walsall. It is a station on the South Staffordshire railway. The Essington and Wyrley canal asses through this place. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Walsall. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are chapels belonging to the Roman Catholics and the Wesleyans.

BLOXWICH, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. and borough of Walsall, in the hund. of Offlow and co. of Stafford, close to Bloxwich.

BLOXWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Coombs-Ditch, in the co. of Dorset, 5 miles to the N. of Wareham. Blandford is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £230, in the patron. of the Rev. G. Pickhard, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. To the south of the village is a large heath, situated on a hill called Woolsbarrow, on which are remains of a Danish entrenchment. The chief residence is Bloxworth House.

BLUBBERHOUSES, a tnshp. in the par. of Fewston, wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the S.W. of Ripley. It has an area of about 1,600 acres.

BLUE ANCHOR, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, hund of Williton, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles from Watchet. It is pleasantly seated on the coast of Bridgwater Bay.

BLUNDESTON, a par. in the hund. of Mutford and Lothingland, in the co. of Suffolk, 3 miles to the N.W. of Lowestoft, its post town. It is situated on the seacoast, on the north-east side of the river Waveney. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val., with that of Flixton united with it, of £617, in the patron. of T. Mare, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel in the town, and there is a small free school with an endowment of £10 per annum, the bequest of Gregory Clarke in 172 . There are some other charities, the value of which is about £87 a year. Blundeston House is the principal residence.

BLUNHAM, a par. in the hund. of Wixamtree, in the co. of Bedford, 8 miles to the E. of Bedford. St. Neots is its post town. It lies between the rivers Ouse and Ivel, the former of which bounds it on the W., the latter on the E. The hmlt. of Moggerhanger belongs to this parish, and has a district church of its own recently erected. Blunham was formerly a market town, the inhabitants having obtained a grant of a market and fair early in the 14th century. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £731, in the patron. of Earl de Grey. The church contains some monuments of the Longvilles and Bursalls, and is dedicated to St. Edmund. There is a chapel belonging to the Baptists. The principal seats are Blunham House, the residence of Sir C. Pym, Bart., and Blunham Park.

BLUNSDON, BROAD, a chplry. in the par. of Highworth hund. of Highworth, Cricklade, and Staple, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles to the W. of Highworth. Bury Blunsdon is a tythg. in this chplry. The living is a perpetual cur. annexed to the vic. of Highworth, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The Roman road to Cirencester passes at the foot of Blunsdon Castle Hill, on which is an extensive circular encampment.

BLUNSDON ST. ANDREW, a par. in the hund. of Highworth, Cricklade, and Staple in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles to the S.W. of Highworth. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the val. of £305, in the patron. of I. J. Calley, Esq.

BLUNTISHAM, a par. in the hund. of Hurstingstone, in the co. of Huntingdon, 4 miles to the N.E. of St. Ive's, its post town. It is situated on the borders of Cambridgeshire, on the west bank of the river Ouse, and includes the vil. of Earith. The manor belonged to the monks of Ely before the Norman Conquest, and part of it is still held by the dean and chapter. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the yearly val. of £1,070, in the patron. of the Bishop of Peterborough. The church stands on elevated ground, commanding a wide prospect over the rich meadow lands and the river. It is dedicated to St. Mary, and is in the early English style of architecture, containing a screen, piscina, and an octagonal font. Here is also a neat marble monument to Dr. Samuel Knight, who once held the rectory, and was the author of the biographies of Erasmus and Dean Colet. Dr. Knight died here in 1746. There are chapels belonging to the General and Particular Baptists, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, and Quakers in the town, and a free school founded in 1708, which has an income from endowment of about £88 per annum. The other charitable endowments of the parish—the principal of which is the estate held by feoffees for the benefit of the poor—produce about £140 a year.—In September, 1741, this place was visited by a destructive storm of wind, which lasted nearly a quarter of an hour and did fearful havoc in the village. It also touched upon Cambridge, Downham, and Lynn, at the latter place injuring St. Margaret's church.

BLURTON, a joint chplry. with Lightwood Forest, in the par. of Trentham, and hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles to the S.E. of Newcastle-under-Lyne. Stoke-upon-Trent is its post town. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val., with the cur. of Normicott united with it, of £189, in the patron. of the Duke of Sutherland.

BLYBOROUGH, a par. in the west div. of the wap. of Aslacoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 9 miles to the N.E. of Gainsborough. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £519, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Alkmond. Blyborough Hall is the principal mansion. The parish contains some mineral springs.

BLYMHILL, a par. in the west div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, in the co. of Stafford, 5 miles to the N.W. of Brewood. It lies on the border of Shropshire, not far from Watling Street. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £560, in the patron. of the Earl of Bradford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities, which include a small bequest for education, amount to £6 a year. The village is a meet for the Albrighton hounds.

BLYTH, a par. chiefly in the Hatfield div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, but partly also in the wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 30 miles to the N. of Nottingham, and 146 miles from London by the Great Northern railway, which crosses the parish. The Ranskill station is 2 miles from Blyth. This par. is of great extent, and contains the chplries. of Austerfield and Bawtry, which are in Yorkshire, and the tnshps. of Barnby Moor, Ranskill, Styrrup, and Torworth, and the lordship of Hodsock, which are in Nottinghamshire. The river Ryton runs through the parish, and joins the Idle at Bawtry. Blyth is a place of great antiquity, and was the site of a Benedictine priory founded in 1088 by Roger de Builly, dedicated to the Virgin, and partly subordinate to the abbey of Rouen. Its value at the Dissolution was about £126. Roger de Builly is said to have built a castle here; but no vestiges are left of it. In the reign of John a leper's hospital was founded by the De Cressys, lords of Hodsock. The buildings have perished, but their site is still called Blyth Spital. This town had the privilege of a market, which is now disused. It is a neat and well-built place, situated in a pleasant and fertile district in a high state of cultivation. Fuller, perhaps jocosely, derives the name of the parish from the character of the people, noted, he says, for their "mirth and good fellowship." The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £751, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Martin. It is a spacious edifice in the Norman style, with a lofty handsome tower in the perpendicular style, and was originally part of the old conventual church. The chancel contains several ancient monuments of the Mellish family. The Wesleyan Methodists and the Quakers have places of worship in the town. There is a small endowed free school, and almshouses for eight persons, the value of the entire parochial charities being about £80 per annum. Blyth Hall was the seat of the Mellishes. Scrlby Hall, situated about a mile from the town, is the seat of the Dowager Lady Galway. It contains a good collection of portraits and pictures, including works by Daniel Mytons and Vandyck. Fairs are held at Blyth on Holy Thursday and the 20th October.

BLYTHBURGH, a par. in the hund. of Blything, in the co. of Suffolk, 4 miles to the W. of Southwold. Halesworth is its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the south side of the river Blythe, and includes the hmlts. of Bulcamp and Hinton. It was anciently a place of some importance, having the privilege of a market and several fairs. It had also a priory of the Augustine order, founded, it is supposed, in the 12th century by the Abbot of St. Osyth, in Essex. It had a revenue at the Dissolution of about £48. The river Blythe, which has a course of about 15 miles, is navigable from Halesworth to Southwold, where it falls into the North Sea. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £85, in the patron. of Sir John R. Blois, Bart. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. It is in the Tudor perpendicular style of architecture; but was greatly damaged during the civil war of the 17th century, so that there are few remains of the monuments, paintings, and stained windows which formerly adorned it. Here is said to have been the tomb of Anna, king of East Anglia, whose remains were afterwards deposited at Bury St. Edmund's. Not far from the church are the traces of the old priory. There are also some remains of an ancient chapel. Westwood Lodge, an interesting Elizabethan mansion, is now a farmhouse. In the vicinity is Henham Hall, the seat of the Earl of Stradbrooke.

BLYTHEFORD, a par. in the hund. of Blything, in the co. of Suffolk, 2 miles to the S. E. of Halesworth. It lies on the banks of the river Blythe. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, and in the patron. of the Rev. J. Day. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

BLYTHE MARSH, a vil. in the tnshp. of Forsbrook, and par. of Dilthorne, in the hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles to the S.E. of Lane End. It is seated on the river Blythe, not far below its source. Blythe Bridge is a station on the Crewe, Stoke, and Uttoxeter section of the North Staffordshire railway. There are in the village a chapel for the Wesleyan Methodists and an endowed free school, founded in 1728.

BLYTHING HUNDRED, one of the 21 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Suffolk, situated in the east div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hunds. of Wangford and Mutford and Lothingland, on the E. by the North Sea, on the S. by the hund. of Plomesgate, and on the W. by the hund. of Hoxne. It comprises the following pars.: — Aldringham, Benacre, Blythburgh, Blytheford, Bramfield, Brampton, Chediston, Cookley, South Cove, Cratfield, Darsham, Dunwich, Easton-Bavents, Frostenden, Halesworth, Haveningham, Holton, Huntingfield, Knodishall, Leiston, Linstead, Linstead Parva, Middleton, North Hales, Peasenhall, Reydon, Rumburgh, Sibton, Sotherton, Southwold, Spexhall, Stoven, Thelarton, Thorington, Ubbeston, Uggleshall, Walberswick, Walpole, Wangford, Wenhaston, Westhall, Westleton, Wissett, Wrentham, and Yoxford, with parts of the pars. of Henstead and Henham. The hund. extends over an area of about 83,850 acres. This hund., with the additional pars. of Carlton and Kelsale, is constituted a Poor-law Union. The Union house is at Bulcamp, in the par. of Blythburgh.

BLYTH, NORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Bedlington, Chester ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 8 miles to the S.E. of Morpeth. It is united with the tnshp. of Cambois, and is situated on the north bank of the river Blyth. The inhabitants are chiefly fishermen.

BLYTH, SOUTH, or BLYTH NOOK, a tnshp small seaport, in the par. of Earsdon, extending alo the par. of Horton, eastern div. of Castle ward, co. of Northumberland, 12 miles to the N E. of castle, and 283 miles from London by road, or abo miles by the York and Newcastle and Great Nor railways. It is a station on the Blyth and Tyn way. The tnshp. comprises also the lordship of sham. Blyth is pleasantly situated on the sea-co the mouth of the river Blyth, which takes its rise 20 miles to the westward, near Throckington, and here an excellent and remarkably safe harbour f vessels. The entrance to the harbour is easy in the stormy weather. The port is subordinate to t Newcastle, and has about 100 vessels belonging The Bedlington iron-works are situated about from the mouth of the river, and the principal bu at Blyth is the export of coal and iron. The colliery, which was opened about 1790, is within of Blyth. The river and port were formerly u jurisdiction of the bishops of Durham. The ri tains abundance of excellent fish. The town, a poor-looking place, with narrow irregular stree been improved, and has now many well-built h has dry and floating docks (formed in 1811, a house (a branch of that of Newcastle), and two slips for building and launching vessels. The lighthouse, which was erected in 1788 by Sir M Ridley, who held the manor. It is a circular structure, 48 feet high, with a fixed light. T another light near it called the "Basket Rock l Various manufactures connected with the shipping are carried on, and gas and waterworks have be blished. A chapel of ease was built by Sir M W ley in 1751. The living is a don. cur. in the Durham, val. £93, in the patron. of Sir M W There are also chapels belonging to the various of Presbyterians, and the Wesleyan and the Pri Methodists. A mechanics' institution has b blished, and there are pleasure gardens and a central hall was erected in 1857.

BLYTON, a par. in the wap. of Corringham, pa Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles to the N Gainsborough, its post town. It is a station o Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway par. includes the tnshp. of Wharton, and the ext district of Greenhill. The living is a vic* in the of Lincoln, of the val. of £399, in the patron Earl of Scarborough. The church is dedicated Martin. There is a chapel belonging to the Wes Methodists, and an endowed free school with an i of £20 per annum.

BOARDLEY, a tnshp. united with Hetton, par. of Burnsall, wap. of Staincliffe and Ewcross West Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles to the Settle.

BOARHILLS, a vil. in the par. of St Andrew the co. of Fife, Scotland, 3 miles to the S.E. of St drew's. It is seated on the sea-coast, and take from an old tradition of the ravages of a boar in Ross Moor.

BOARHUNT, a par. in the hund. of Portsd the co. of Southampton, 2 miles to the N E. of ham. Portsdown Hill extends into this parish, summit of which stands the column erected in ho Lord Nelson, after the victory of Trafalgar, in The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Winche the val., with that of Southwick united to it, of in the patron. of T. Thistlethwaite, Esq.

BOARSTALL, a par. in the hund. of Ashe the co. of Buckingham, 7 miles to the N W of T It is situated on the border of Oxfordshire, and formed a part of the par. of Oakley. At the N Conquest the manor of Boarstall was given to Nig huntsman, keeper of the Forest of Bernwood, for s a boar there. It was held by grand serjeanty of C and the horn, the symbol of the tenure, is still held Aubreys, the descendants of the original holder. stall House, the old seat of the Aubreys, was the of several conflicts between the royalists and parliamentarians in the reign of Charles I., and was occupied by both alternately. The church was also seriously damaged at the same period. The living is a perpet. cur., annexed to the of Brill, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities—consisting partly of land called Poor Folks' Pasture, the gift of William III., in 1699—produce about £20 per annum.

BOBBING, a par. in the hund. of Milton, lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 1 mile from Milton. The North Kent railway passes near it. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £96, in the patronage of the Rev. G. Simpson, vicar. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. It is an ancient building, with a tower and spire, and contains a piscina, two monumental brasses (one being canopied), and tombs of the Sages and Tuftons. Titus Oates was once rector of Bobbing. There is an endowment of about £7 a year for the instruction of poor girls. The Roman way, Watling Street, passes through this parish. Bobbing Court, now dilapidated, was the old seat of the Savage family, who formerly held the manor. Bobbing Place was the seat of the Cliffords. A fair is held here annually on the 4th September.

BOBBINGTON, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Seisdon, in the co. of Stafford, and extending also into the hund. of Brimstree, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles to the E. of Bridgnorth. It includes the hmlt. of Halfpenny Green. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £97, in the patron. of T. Whitmore, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is an endowed free school, founded by Hannah Cobbett in 1792, which has an income of £42 per annum. The other parochial charities amount to about £40 a year.

BOBBINGWORTH, or BOBBINGER, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, in the co. of Essex, 2 miles to the N.W. of Chipping Ongar, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £393, in the patronage of J. A. Houblon and C. Cure, Esqrs. The church is dedicated to St. German. The annual produce of the parochial charities is about £11.

BOCKENFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Felton, Morpeth ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 8 miles to the N. of Morpeth.

BOCKHAMPTON, a tythg. in the par. of Lambourn, Ganfield hund. of the same name, in the co. of Berks, close to Lambourn.

BOCKHAMPTON, UPPER and LOWER, vils. in the par. of Stinsford, George hund., in the co. of Dorset, 2 miles from Dorchester.

BOCKING, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, in the co. of Essex, 2 miles to the N. of Braintree, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Blackwater. The baize manufacture was at one time carried on to successfully, one kind of which article was especially noted for its good quality, and acquired the name of "Bockings." They were exported in considerable quantities. Some of the inhabitants are at present employed in the crape manufacture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £923, in the patronage of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, which is in the early English style of architecture, is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains two brasses and several monuments. One of the former is of Sir John Dorwarde, who died in 1420. There is a free school for 30 children, founded by Bishop Gauden, which has an income from endowment of £50 a year. There is also an almshouse, or hospital, for 9 persons, with a revenue of about £80 per annum. The parish is in the enjoyment of various other charitable endowments, the annual value of which, with those mentioned, is about £220. The manor of Bocking, which was granted to the cathedral of Canterbury before the Conquest, is now held by the Corporation of the Sons of the Clergy. Bocking is the head of a rural deanery. Petty sessions for the South Hackford div. are held in the town. A hospital is said to have been founded here by Sir John Dorwarde in the 15th century. The Roman road from Chelmsford passed within a mile of this place.

BOCKLETON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Doddingtree, in the co. of Worcester, partly also in the hund. of Broxash, in the co. of Hereford, 5 miles to the S. of Tenbury. Hampton Charles is a hmlt. of this par. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. of £127, in the patron. of the Rev. J. J. Miller, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parish contains some hop-grounds.

BOCONNOC, a par. in the hund. of West, in the co. of Cornwall, 4 miles to the E. of Lostwithiel, its post town. Lead was procured here in small quantities in the 17th century, and traces of the works still exist. The living is a rect. consolidated with that* of Broadoak, in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £378, in the patron. of Lady Grenville. Boconnoc House, the property of Lady Grenville, is situated in a fine park of great extent, and considered the most magnificent in Cornwall, adorned with rich old woods and well-stocked with deer. The house was originally erected by the Mohuns, who were for a long time the proprietors of the place. In 1718 it passed by purchase to Thomas Pitt, Governor of Fort St. George, who enlarged and reconstructed the mansion. It was further enlarged and improved by the first Lord Camelford. The picture gallery contains some interesting portraits, among which are those of the Duchess of Cleveland, by Lely; Governor Pitt, by Sir Godfrey Kneller; George, Lord Lyttelton, by the same artist; and William, Earl of Chatham. Here are preserved, too, a table and chair made from the material of the cradle of Queen Elizabeth. During the Civil War, in 1644, Charles I. took up his quarters at Boconnoc House for a short time, and narrowly escaped being shot in the park. At this seat was born, in 1708, the great Earl of Chatham, who was the grandson of Governor Pitt. The famous diamond brought to England by the latter weighed 433 grains, and fetched the fabulous price of £135,000. The purchaser was the Duke of Orleans, Regent of France. On an elevated spot in the park is an obelisk 123 feet in height, erected in 1771 to the memory of Sir Richard Lyttelton.

BODAIOCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Tref-Eglwys, hund. of Llanidloes, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 4 miles to the N. of Llanidloes. It is seated in a pleasant spot on the banks of the river Tarannon, a branch of the Severn.

BODDAM, a fishing vil. in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 3 miles to the S. of Peterhead. It is seated on the coast, and has two small harbours, one for boats only, near the promontory called Buchan Ness, or Boddam Head, on which are the ruins of a castle.

BODDINGTON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Tewkesbury and Westminster, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles to the N.W. of Cheltenham. It includes the tnshp. of Barrow, and was the scene of the final defeat of the Danes by Alfred the Great, in the year 893. The living is a perpet. cur., annexed to the vic. of Staverton, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. The principal seat is the Manor House, which is surrounded by a moat. A magnificent oak, about 18 yards in girth, formerly stood near the house.

BODDINGTON, UPPER and LOWER, a par. in the hund. of Chipping Warden, in the co. of Northampton, 9 miles to the S.W. of Daventry. It is situated on the borders of Warwickshire. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £757, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. There is a free school, endowed by R. Lamprey in 1758, and some other charities, the annual value of which is about £47.

BODEDERN, a par. in the hund. of Lyfon, in the co. of Anglesea, North Wales, 7 miles to the E. of Holyhead. The name of this place, which signifies "House of Edern," is derived from a bard who resided here in the 7th century. It is situated in a pleasant country on the old road to Holyhead. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the spinning of yarn, which is carried on in two mills. Petty sessions are held in the village monthly. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, of the val. of £104, in the patron. of the Principal and Fellows of Jesus College, Oxford. The church, an ancient edifice of small dimensions, is dedicated to St. Edeyrn, and contains several interesting monuments to the families of Presaddved and Jones of Tre' Iorweth. There are chapels belonging to the Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists, Baptists, and Independents. A National school was founded in 1822. The parochial charities amount to £19 per annum. Presaddved and Tre' Iorweth are the principal seats. The latter is situated near the beautiful lake called Llyn Llwennyn.

BODEIGAN, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Asaph, hund. of Rhuddlan, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, not far from St. Asaph.

BODELGAR, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbedr, hund. of Ruthin, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 2 miles to the N.E. of Ruthin.

BODELWYDDAN. See BODLLEWYDDAN, Flintshire.

BODENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, in the co. of Hereford, 7 miles to the N. of Hereford. Leominster is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Lug, and contains the tnshps. of Bowley, Bryan, Maund, Whitchurch Maund, and the Moor. Part of the land in this parish is laid out in hop-grounds. This place was anciently a market town, the privilege being obtained in the reign of Richard II. It has been long disused. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. of £686, in the patron. of John Arkwright, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyans. The parochial charities among which are a school with a small endowment and Mason's bequest for the poor—produce about £54 per annum.

BODENHAM, a joint par. with Nunton, in the hund. of Downton, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles to the S.E. of Salisbury.

BODENSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of North Naas, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near Clane. It is situated in a fertile and cultivated country on the west bank of the river Liffey, which is here crossed by a stone bridge of five arches. This bridge is a singular structure, not having any two of its arches of the same form. The vil. of Sallins is included in this par. The Grand canal, which passes close by this place, promotes its trade. The living is a suspended benefice in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, united with the perpet. cur. of Sherlockstown, of the val. of £65. in the patron. of the archbishop. There is no church, and the cur. is at present held by the Rector of Clane. The principal residences are Blackhall, Castlesire, Little Rath, Prospect, and Sallins Lodge. Bodenstown is the birth and burial-place of Theobald Wolf Tone.

BODEWRYD, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Twrcelyn, in the co. of Anglesea, North Wales, 4 miles to the S.W. of Amlwch. It was part of the parish of Llancilian till about the beginning of the present century. The Wynnes are the proprietors of the parish, and had a mansion here, which is now a farmhouse. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £70, in the patron. of Lord Stanley of Alderley. The church, a small building, is dedicated to St. Mary, and has several monuments to the Wynne family.

BODFACH, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Llanfyllin, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, close to Llanfyllin. It is situated on the banks of the river Cain, and contains the seat of Lord Mostyn.

BODFARI, or BODVARI, a par. partly in the hund. of Ruthin, in the co. of Denbigh, and partly in the hund. of Rhuddlan, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 4 miles to the N.E. of Denbigh. It is situated in a very picturesque country on the rivers Clwyd and Whielor, and contains the tnshp. of Aber-Whielor. This place is considered to be the site of the Roman station Varis. Its name, its position on the Roman road from Chester, and the discovery of numerous coins, urns, and other Roman remains, support this view. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, of the val. of £296, in the pat the bishop. The church, which stands on rising gr has a good tower and a finely-carved oak pulpit, s in 1574, and is dedicated to St. Stephen. The par charities produce about £6 a year. There is an e entrenchment near the village, at Moel-y-gaer, commands the pass over the mountains, and is sup to be of British origin.

BODFEIRIG, a tythg. in the par. of Aberffraw, of Maltraeth, in the co. of Anglesea, North Wa far from Aberffraw.

BODFERIN, or BODVERIN, a par. in the h Commitmaen, in the co. of Carnarvon, North W miles to the S.W. of Nevin. It lies on the Irish Sea, and contains the creeks called Porth Porth Iago. The living is a perpet. cur., and rect. of Llaniestyn, in the dioc. of Bangor. now no vestiges of the old church and churchy are the ruins of Capel Odo, an ancient chapel, them Bedd Odo, a mound said to mark the burial- of a giant named Odo.

BODGADFAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llan hund. of Tal-y-Bont, in the co. of Meri Wales, 4 miles to the N. of Towyn. It is on of Cardigan Bay.

BODGEDRWYDD, a tythg. in the par. of A hund. of Maltraeth, in the co. of Anglesea, N near Aberffraw.

BODGONWYCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llan hund. of Isaled, in the co. of Denbigh, N miles to the N.E. of Llanrwst.

BODGYNFEL, a tnshp. in the par. of Gwy hund. of Edernion, in the co. of Merioneth. N 2 miles from Corwen.

BODHAM, a par. in the hund. of Holt, in Norfolk, 3 miles to the E. of Holt. It is si pleasant winding valley, watered by the Glaven. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of N and in the patron. of T. I. Mott, Esq. dedicated to All Saints. There are some trifling amount.

BODIAM, or BODYHAM, a par. in the Staple, rape of Hastings, in the co. of Sussex the N.E. of Battle. Hurstgreen is its pos situated in a pleasant district on the banks of the river Rother. It is the s founded about the middle of the 14th Dalryngrudge family, which was subsequently of the Lewknors. The castle occupies a spa length and 150 feet in breadth, and is sur moat. Some parts of the structure are still in servation, among which are a fine gateway the angles, the chapel, hall, &c. The estate by the Webster family. The north wall gives a remarkable musical echo. There grounds in the parish. The living is a vic. of Chichester, of the val. of £280, in the Cubitt, Esq. The church is old, and is d Giles. Two monumental brasses are pre parsonage, one of a knight, bearing the d the other of a woman in a shroud. There is mansion called Bodiam Castle not far from the pile.

BODICOTT, a chplry. in the par. of Adderbury, hund. of Bloxham, in the co. of Oxford, not far Banbury. The living is a perpet cur., and vic. of Adderbury, in the dioc. of Oxford. is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The Baptis a chapel in the village. The charitable don the chapelry amount to £8 per annum. Bodicott birthplace (1616) of John Kersey, the mathe Bodicott Grange and Bodicott House are the dw dences.

BODIDDA, a tnshp. in the par. of Gyffin, and of Isaf, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, from Conway.

BODIDRIS, a joint tnshp. with Trnam, in the Llanarmon, hunds. of Yale in the co. of Denbi Mackor in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 7 miles

S.E. Ruthin. The name signifies "house of Idris," and t tnshp. contains an old mansion, the seat of the Most s, which formerly belonged to a chief named Idras

BODIGRE'R-ABBOT, and BODIGRE'R-YARLL, tnshp in the par. of Llanarmon, hund. of Yale, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 5 miles to the S.E. of Ruth BOINGEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Ysceifiog, hund. of Rhidlan, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 3 miles to the of Holywell.

BOINNOCK, a hmlt. in the par. of Lanteglos-by-Fowe hund. of West, in the co. of Cornwall, 5 miles to the of Lostwithiel.

BOLES, a hmlt. in the par. of Bentley-with-Arksey, wap. Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of ork, 2 miles to the N. of Doncaster. The Great North n railway runs by it, with a station at Arksey.

BOLITH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansilin, hund. of Ch k, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 7 miles to the E. of Chirk.

BOLLEWYDDAN, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Asaph, hund Rhuddlan, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 3 mile to the W. of St. Asaph. The principal mansion is Bollewyddan House, the seat of Sir J. H. Williams, Bart., whose family it has belonged since the reign of Ch II., when the estate was bought by Williams, Speak of the House of Commons. The gardens attached to the house are remarkably beautiful.

BOLYMAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Bettws-yn-Rhôs, hund. f Isdulas, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 3 mi to the S.W. of Abergele.

BOLYNGHARAD ISAF and UCHAF, tnshps. in the p. of Llanfwrog, hund. of Ruthin, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, not far from Ruthin.

BODMIN, a par. and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Trigg, in the co. of Cornwall, 20 miles to the N.E. of Truro, and 234 miles from London. The town is about 5 miles from the Bodmin Road station of the Cornwall and West Cornwall railway. It is now the county town of Cornwall. The name of the place—the first syllable of which, Bod, is the same that is found in many names of places, &c., in Wales, and signifies "house" or "abode" —is shortened from the ancient form found in the charters, Bodminian or Bosmana, signifying "house of monks." Another form also occurs—Boseuna, or "houses on the hill."—The pleasant valley in which the town stands at a very early period attracted religious recluses. St. Petroc, whose settlement here is assigned to the early part of the 6th century, is said to have found St. Guron already residing on the spot, and to have enlarged and made his hermitage for the abode of himself and his companions, who had resolved to live after the rule of St. Benedict. St. Petroc died and was interred here about the middle of the 6th century. The house he founded appears to have existed till the 10th century, occupied by a few brethren of the order. In the year 981 a priory of the Benedictine order was founded by King Athelstan on or near the site of the ancient house. Although disused for a time, and appropriated to secular uses, the priory continued to exist, and was occupied in succession by various religious orders and classes of persons. It appears to have been in a flourishing condition at the time of the Norman survey, when the priory possessed several important privileges. He received the profits of a market and fair, and had, probably, with his pillory and his gallows, the power of inflicting the punishment of death. Early in the 12th century the monastery was refounded, for monks of the Augustine order, by one Algar, with the royal licence, and the of Warlewas, Bishop of Exeter. The establishment flourished from that time till the Dissolution, when its revenue amounted to about £290. Its possessions were then given to Thomas Sternhold, joint author with Hopkins of the earliest metrical version of the Psalms in English. The opinion of Borlase, author of the "Antiquities of Cornwall," that Bodmin was the first seat of the bishops of Cornwall, and that it was their residence through the 10th century, until the destruction of the town, with the monastery and the church, by the Danish invaders in 981, the see being then transferred to St. German's, has been stoutly controverted by other antiquarian inquirers. Exeter became the head of the diocese about the middle of the 11th century, previously to which the bishopric was named, sometimes from the county, sometimes from both the towns of St. German's and Bodmin. A town, the abode of busy men, had grown up around the secluded haunt of the monks before the Norman Conquest. It increased rapidly after that event, and was at an early period a place of large population and no little importance. It was visited by the terrible plague which desolated Europe in the middle of the 14th century, and according to William of Worcester, who cites the Grey Friars' church registry, not fewer than 1,500 of the inhabitants perished of the pestilence in 1351. It was from Bodmin that Perkin Warbeck, the pretender, in 1496, led a force of 3,000 men, which he had mustered here, to the attack of Exeter. Two years afterwards, when the Cornish men rose in insurrection, they chose for their leaders Flammoc, a lawyer, and Joseph, a farrier, of this town. Joined by another body of insurgents, and headed by Lord Audley, they marched into Kent. They were defeated at Blackheath by the royal forces under the Earl of Oxford, and their three leaders were put to death. Bodmin, with many other towns, fell into decay in the 16th century, and a special Act was passed in the 32nd of Henry VIII. for their restoration. During the pressure and straitness of that period a serious insurrection took place in the county, when 10,000 Cornish men encamped at Castle Kynock, near Bodmin. The new religion bore the blame of the general distress, and the insurgents, who fought for the re-establishment of the old system, laid siege to Exeter, which suffered severely. They were at last defeated and the town relieved by Lord Russell. The mayor of Bodmin was hung by the provost-marshal, Sir Anthony Kingston, after having entertained him at dinner. Bodmin was not garrisoned during the civil war of the 17th century; but was in the possession alternately of royalists and parliamentarians until 1646, when it was finally taken by General Fairfax.—Bodmin, which occupies a nearly central position in the county, is situated in a pleasant valley, in a range of hills running N.E. and S.W., separating the valley of the river Camel on the N. from that of the Fowey on the S. There is much fine scenery in the surrounding country. The town has one principal street about a mile long. It contains many ancient houses, as well as many handsome modern buildings. It is well paved and lighted, and has a plentiful supply of water. There is a handsome new market-house, built of granite, a county assize hall, a county gaol, and a lunatic asylum. No important manufacture is carried on in the town. Bone-lace was formerly made here, and now many hands are employed in the shoe trade, and some in the woollen and yarn manufacture.—Bodmin received its first charter of incorporation from Richard, Earl of Cornwall, in the 12th century; whose grant was several times confirmed and enlarged. Under the Reform Act the government of the borough is vested in a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the style of the "mayor and burgesses of the borough of Bodmin." The borough has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward I., by whom the franchise was first conferred on it. The limits of the parliamentary borough greatly exceed those of the municipal, including the neighbouring pars. of Halland, Lanhydrock, and Lanivet, with a population of 6,381. The mayor is the returning officer. The municipal borough has a revenue of about £650, and, according to the census of 1861, consists of 793 houses, inhabited by a population of 4,466, against 4,327 in 1851, showing an increase of 139 in the decennial period. Bodmin is the seat of a Poor-law Union and a County Court district; a polling place and place of election for the eastern division of the county. The courts of assize and quarter session are held here. The town contains also the Union poorhouse, the Stannary prison (formerly at Launceston), and a savings-bank.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £350, and in the patron. of G. F. Bassett, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Petroc. It is the largest church in Cornwall, measuring 151 feet in length by 63 feet in breadth within the walls. Part of the venerable structure belongs to the early part of the 12th century, but the greater portion was rebuilt in 1472. It was the conventual church of the monastery, and is chiefly in the perpendicular style of architecture. A lofty spire, which originally surmounted the fine tower, was destroyed in a thunderstorm in 1699. The east window of stained glass belonged to the old church, to which it was given by Lord Dunstanville. There are several interesting monuments in the church, of which the most noteworthy is that of Thomas Vyvyan, Prior of Bodmin, who died in 1533. It is an altar tomb, with a recumbent figure of the prior. The font is a curious relic of the earliest times. It is of large size, nearly three feet and a half in diameter, supported by a stole and four small pillars, and covered with sculpture. Near it is a piscina. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Bryanites have chapels in the town. There is a grammar school, founded by Queen Elizabeth, with an endowment of £5 6s. 8d. per annum, and National schools for boys and girls. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £46 a year.—There are some remains, consisting of the gatehouse and part of the refectory, of the Grey Friars' priory which formerly existed here. About a mile from the town are the ruins of the Leper's Hospital, dedicated to St. Lawrence, and incorporated by Queen Elizabeth in 1582. Its revenue, about £140 per annum, is paid to the infirmary at Truro. James I. granted the hospital a market, long since disused, and a fair, which is still held in August. Castle Kynock, or Canyke, is an extensive encampment eastward of the town. Halgaver, or Halgower Moor, was till recently the scene of a curious annual festival, called the "Bodmin Riding," including a procession on horseback and on foot, with garlands, election of a mayor, holding of a court, and trial of any one guilty of slovenly dress, concluded sometimes by a "ducking." The ceremony is of very ancient origin, and has given rise to the popular sayings, "Take him before the Mayor of Halgaver," "Present him in Halgower Court." Berry Tower, north of the town, was part of an ancient chapel.—There is a railway to Wadebridge, 15 miles distant, for the conveyance of minerals.—In the neighbourhood of Bodmin are the pile of granite blocks called the "Cheesering," and the circles called the "Hurlers," which Dr. Stukely supposes to have been the remains of a Druid's temple; they stand on a down in three circles. The peasantry here have the superstitious notion that they were men transformed for diverting themselves on the Sabbath-day at "hurling," a Cornish recreation.—Dean Prideaux received his early education at the grammar school of Bodmin.—The principal seats are Bodmin Priory, which stands on the site of the old monastery, Lanhydrock, Lancar, and Becare.—Saturday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 25th January, the Saturday before Palm Sunday, the Wednesday before Whitsuntide, and the 6th December, for the sale of horses and cattle. Large fairs are also held at St. Lawrence on the 21st August, and the 29th and 30th October. There is a good racecourse near the town, on which races are occasionally held.

BODNEY, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Greenhoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles to the W. of Watton. The living is a rect., united with that of Great Crossingham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The principal seat is Bodney Hall. This mansion was the retreat of the nuns of Montargis, refugees, after the French Revolution of 1789.

BODNOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Eglwys-fach, hund. of Isdulas, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 6 miles to the N. of Llanrwst. In this township is the seat of the Hanmer family.

BODORLAS, a tnshp. in the par. of Corwen, hund. of Edernion, in the co. of Merioneth, N Wales, not far from Corwen.

BODORRYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Abergele, h of Isdulas, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, ne from Abergele. It is situated on the sea-coast

BODRACH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangern hund. of Isaled, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wa miles to the N.E. of Llanrwst.

BODRAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfyllin, h of the same name, in the co. of Montgomery, N Wales, not far from Llanfyllin.

BODULLTIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Ruabon, h of Bromfield, in the co. of Denbigh, North W miles to the N. of Chirk. The Shrewsbury and railway passes near it.

BODVACH. See BODFACH, Montgomeryshire.

BODVARI. See BODFARI, Flintshire.

BODVEAN, or BODVEAN-IN-LLEYN, a par hund. of Dinlaen, in the co. of Carnarvon, North W mile to the S. of Nevin. It is situated near the ba Carn Bodvean. The living is a rect. in the dioc gor, of the val. of £198, in the patron. of the bish diocese. The church, a modern structure, is to St. Buan, and contains some monuments Wynne family. Here is a chapel for Calvinistic Me dists; also a small free school, with an endowment a year. Bodvean Hall, the old seat of the Wyn now the residence of Lord Newborough.

BODWROG, a parochial chplry. in the hund fon, in the co. of Anglesea, North Wales, 4 miles t S. of Llanerchymedd. The Holyhead railway the south of this place. The living is a perpet the dioc. of Bangor, of the val. of £90, in the p the Principal and Fellows of Jesus College, The church is dedicated to St. Twrog. The endowments of the chplry produce £3 per annu BODYDDOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Llang hund. of the same name, in the co. of Monty North Wales, not far from Llanfyllin.

BODYNWYDAG, a tnshp. in the par. of L Eglwys, hund. of Yale, in the co. of Denbigh, N Wales, 5 miles to the N.W. of Llangollen.

BODYS-GAW, and BODYS-GAWEN, tnshps par. of Llannefydd, hund. of Isaled, in the co. of bigh, North Wales, 5 miles to the N.W. of Den BODYVOL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihan of Pool, in the co. of Montgomery, 4 miles to the Llanfyllin.

BOGGANFIN, a vil. in the bar. of Athlone, in co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 to the S. of Athlone.

BOGNOR, a chplry. and market town in the p South Bersted, in the hund. of Aldwick, and Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, 6 miles to the of Chichester, and about 76 miles from Lon the South Coast railway. Bognor is about from the Woodgate station on that line. The t situated in a pleasant spot on the coast of the Channel, being sheltered on the north by the Downs. In 1790 Sir R. Hotham erected a ma for his residence here, and some lodging-hou visitors. From that time the place grew in impo and became a fashionable watering-place. A ma was established by Act of Parliament, and a market-house erected; baths and subscription roo rooms were also established. The coast is high rocky; but there is a good sandy beach. The commands a fine view over the Channel and the Isl Wight. Here is a coastguard station. The Portsm and Arun canal passes to the north of Bognor living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chichester, of val. of £107, in the patron. of the Archbishop of terbury. The church, built in 1821, is dedicated t John. The Independents and Wesleyans have cha here. There are two schools for girls, supported subscription, one of which was founded by the Pri Charlotte. Bognor Lodge, erected by Sir R. Hot who is considered the founder of the town, is now seat f Sir J. E. Harrington, Bart. Thursday and Satu ay are the market days, and a fair is held on the 5th a d 6th July BOTHORN, a hmlt. in the par. of Keighley, wap. of Stacliff and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of Yk, not far from Keighley.

BOHARM, a par. partly in the co. of Banff, partly in th of Moray, Scotland, 3 miles to the E. of Rothes. It is uated in a valley at the foot of the hill called Ben geen, on the banks of the river Spey, which is here ossed by a suspension bridge. The river Fiddich joins e Spey near this place. A castle was founded here an early period by the Freskyns of Duffus, of which onsiderable remains still exist. The living, of the val. o£245, is in the presb. of Aberlour, in the patron. of the crown and the Earl of Fife. There is also a Free hurch preaching station. The chief mansions are A dilly and Auchlunkart.

BOHERAROAN, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Bunratty, in the . of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, not far from Newmarket on Fergus.

BOHERBOY, a vil. in the par. of Kilmeen, and bar. of Du low, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, miles to the W. of Kanturk.

BOHERMEEN, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Navan, in the of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the NW. of Navan.

BOHILLANE, or BOHALAN, a par. in the bar. of Ina ay, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 mi from Castlemartyr. The living is a suspended ben e in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne, and in the pa on. of the bishop of the diocese. There is no parish hurch.

BOHO, a par. in the bars. of Magheraboy and Clanawley, in the co. of Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 mi s to the S. of Derrygonnelly. It is situated in a mo tainous country on the banks of the river Sillees. Belmo mountain, the loftiest in the district, has an alt de of 1,312 feet. The parish contains some tracts of fine land. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh and Clogher, of the val. of £188, in the patron. of the bishop.

BOHOLA, or BUCHOLA, a par. in the bar. of Gallen, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.E. of Foxford. It is situated on the banks of the river Gustien, a branch of the Moy. The country is hilly, but the land is mostly good and under cultivation. The living is a vic., forming part of the union of Straid, or Templemore, in the dioc. of Tuam, Killala and Achonry. The church is decayed.

BOLAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Gainford, ward of Darlington, in the co. palatine of Durham, 5 miles to the S. of Bishop's Auckland.

BOLAM, a par. in Castle, Morpeth, and Tindale wards, in the co. of Northumberland, 8 miles to the W. by North. Newcastle is its post town. It is situated in the river Blythe, not far from its source, and contains the tnshps. of Bolam, Bolam Vicarage, Belsay, Bradford, Callow-hill, Harnham, Shortflatt, and Trewick. Coal and limestone are found in the parish. The living is a vic in the dioc. of Durham, of the val. of £238, and the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. It is a very ancient building, and contains monuments of the Bolams and the Middletons. The barony was held by the Bolams in the reign of King John. Bolam Moor is crossed by a branch of Watling Street, called the Devil's Causeway, near which is a tumulus where a stone coffin was found. Not far from the same spot are remains of an old camp of an oval form. Belsay Castle, the ancient residence of the Middletons, is a fine specimen of the old Border fortress. The principal residences are Belsay House, the seat of Sir C. M. L. Monck, Bart.; and Bolam House, formerly the seat of the Horsleys, and now belonging to Lord Decies.

BOLD, GREAT, a par. in the south div. of the hund. of Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles to the W. of Newport. Wellington is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Tern, and includes the tnshp. of Meeson. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £304, in the patron. of Viscount Hill. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. There are some parochial charities of trifling amount.

BOLAS, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hodnet, hund. of Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles to the N.W. of Great Bolas.

BOLBROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandyssil, hund. of Newtown, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 2 miles from Montgomery.

BOLD, a tnshp. in the par. of Prescot, hund. of West Derby, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles to the S. of St. Helen's. The St. Helen's and Lancashire and Yorkshire railway runs through it. The tnshp. contains Bold Heath, and the hmlt. of Maypole. It has some charitable endowments, which produce about £13 per annum. The family of the Bolds had their seat here from before the Norman Conquest down to the year 1761, when the male line became extinct. The curious old hall still exists as a farmhouse, on the demesne attached to the present mansion of Bold Hall, the seat of Sir H. B. Hoghton, Bart. Richard Barnes, Bishop of Carlisle, and afterwards of Durham, in the latter half of the 16th century, was born here.

BOLD, a chplry, in the par. of Aston Botterell, hund. of Stottesden, in the co. of Salop, 7 miles to the N.W. of Cleobury Mortimer. The church has long been decayed.

BOLDON, EAST AND WEST, a par. in the eastern div. of Chester ward, in the co. palatine of Durham, 4 miles to the S. of South Shields. Gateshead is its post town. The North-Eastern railway passes near it. The manor of Boldon has formed part of the possessions of the see of Durham from time immemorial; and in the archives of the cathedral is preserved a manorial survey of the diocese, made in the year 1183, which is called the "Boldon Buke," and has been printed for the Record Commission. The book is so called probably from the frequent references to this manor, which stands first in the survey. The village is situated in a healthy spot on Boldon hills, and there is abundance of limestone in the neighbourhood. Conflicts occurred here between the English and the Scots during the civil war in the 17th century. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, of the val. of £653, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. There are two schools for boys and girls, supported by voluntary contributions and by a small endowment of £8 a year. The other charitable endowments of the parish produce about the same sum.

BOLDRE, or BOLDER, a par. in the hund. of Christchurch and New Forest, Lymington div. of the co. of Southampton, 2 miles to the N. of Lymington, its post town, and 2 from the Beaulieu station on the South-Western railway. A branch line has been recently opened from Brokenhurst station to Lymington. It is situated in an elevated and picturesque district, and includes the chplries. of South Baddesley, Sway, and East Boldre, and the hmlts. of Battramsley, Pilley, Warborne, and Walhampton. The prospects from various points are very fine, over the Isle of Wight and the Channel, from the Needles to Spithead. The living is a vic* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val., with the cur. of Lymington and Brockenhurst annexed to it, of £394, in the patron. of the Rev. C. Shrubb. The church, a Norman edifice, with a low tower, is dedicated to St. John, and contains a piscina, an old font, and a monument to William Gilpin, formerly vicar of the parish. He was author of several interesting works, amongst which are the "Life of Bernard Gilpin," "Picturesque Tours in the New Forest, &c.," and "Remarks on Forest Scenery." He also founded a free school here for 40 children of both sexes, and at his death gave a collection of his sketches for its endowment. The income of the school is about £85 per annum. There are some other charities of small amount. The Baptists have a chapel in the town. Bolder Wood is distinct from Boldre, and is distant about 9 miles in the Forest, where formerly the Marchioness of Londonderry resided for a time; it is now made a keeper's lodge.

BOLDRON, a tnshp. in the par. of Startforth, wap. of West Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, near Barnard Castle.

BOLE, a par. in the North Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 3 miles to the S. of Gainsborough. It is situated on the confines of Lincolnshire, on the west bank of the river Trent. The Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway runs by this place, and a branch line from Lincoln meets it. About a mile from the village is Bole Ferry, over the Trent. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Martin. The parochial charities, which include a small bequest for education, amount to £6 per annum BOLEHILL, a tnshp. united with Glascote, in the par. of Tamworth, and hund. of Hemlingford, in the co. of Warwick, close to Tamworth. The Midland West Branch railway runs through it.

BOLESKINE AND ABERTARFF, a united par. in the co. of Inverness, Scotland, 12 miles to the S. of Inverness. It is situated in a district partly mountainous and partly flat, on both the east and west sides of Loch Ness, and is watered by the rivers Oich, Tarff, and Foyers. There are also many small lochs. The par. includes Fort Augustus, and is crossed by the military road from Inverness. Good granite and limestone are obtained in the hills. In this parish is the fine waterfall of Foyers. The living, of the val. of £238, is in the presb. of Abertarff, and in the patron. of Fraser of Lovat. Fort Augustus is the seat of a mission, worth £80 a year. There is also a Free church, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The par. is about 20 miles long and 10 broad.

BOLFRACKS, a portion of the par. of Fortingall, in the co. of Perth, Scotland.

BOLINALEA. See BALLINALEA, Wicklow.

BOLINGBROKE SOKE, one of the 17 subdivisions of the parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, situated in the northern div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of Hill, on the E. by the wap. of Candleshoe, on the S. by the wap. of Skirbeck, and part of that of Kirton, and on the W. by the soke of Horncastle. This soke is in two divs., east and west. The east div. contains the pars. of Carrington, East Ville, Halton-Holegate, Hundleby, East Keal, Lusby, Mavis-Enderby, Midville, Raithby, Spilsby, Little Steeping, St. Peter Thorpe, Toynton All Saints, and Toynton St. Peter's. The west div. contains the pars. of Asgarby, Bolingbroke, Frithville, Hagnaby, Hareby, West Keal, East Kirkby, Minningsby, Revesby, Sibsey, Stickford, Stickney, and West Ville. The soke extends over an area of about 56,980 acres.

BOLINGBROKE, a par. and small town in the west div. of the soke of Bolingbroke, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 8 miles to the N. of Boston. Spilsby is its post town. The Great Northern railway passes near it The par. is situated near the head of a rivulet, which falls into the river Witham, and includes the vil. of New Bolingbroke. It was the site of a fortress erected in the reign of Stephen, by William de Romara, Earl of Lincoln, which was an important military station. The castle was enlarged in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and was the scene of several conflicts in the civil war of the 17th century. It was dismantled by order of the parliament, and left to fall into decay. This castle was the birthplace of "proud Bolingbroke," afterwards Henry IV., son of "old John of Gaunt, time-honoured Lancaster." The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. with that of Hareby, of £560 gross, in the patron. of Sir John J. Smith, Bart. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. It is an ancient edifice of large dimensions, but the tower and a large part of the church were destroyed during the Civil War. Besides the parish church there is a district church, lately erected at the village of New Bolingbroke, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £100, in the patron. of trustees. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists, a small free school, with an endowment of £15 5s. annum. There are some other charities producing about £11 a year. The market is discontinued, but annual fair is held on St. Peter's Day.

BOLLAIT, a vil. in the par. of St. Buryan, hundred Penwith, in the co. of Cornwall, 4 miles to the S.W. Penzance. It is situated near the Land's End, and contains the Druidical stones called "the Pipers." One of them is 16, the other 21, feet in height. They are 200 yards distant from each other.

BOLLING FEE, a tnshp. in the par. of Wilmslow and hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. palatine of Chester, 6 miles to the N.W. of Macclesfield. It is pleasantly situated on the banks of the small river Bollin, one of the Mersey, into which it falls near Warburton, a course of about 20 miles. It takes its rise a near Macclesfield. The Wilmslow station, on the and North-Western railway, is in this tnshp. M the workpeople are employed in the cotton ma BOLLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of hund. of Bucklow, in the co. palatine of Chester to the N. of Knutsford. The Bridgwater the river Bollin pass through this tnshp. The W have a chapel here.

BOLLINGTON, a chplry. in the par. of P hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. palatine of C miles to the N. of Macclesfield. It is seated in district, on the small river Bollin, near its h the Macclesfield canal. The silk and cotto tures are carried on here, and many of the are employed in the coal-works, and stone quarries, which are of considerable extent. also a water-mill for grinding bark. The li perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, of the val in the patron. of the Vicar of Prestbury. The dedicated to St. John. The Wealeyans have here.

BOLLOM, or BOLHAM, a hmlt. in the par. borough, wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of N near East Retford. The Great Northern railw by it.

BOLNEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Harpsden, of Binfield, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles to th Henley. It is close to the Henley branch of the Western railway. Bolney was formerly a parish. The living is now a perpet. cur., annexed rect. of Harpsden, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church. Bolney Court is the seat of Colonel M.

BOLNEY, a par. in the hund. of Butting Lewes, in the co. of Sussex, 3 miles to the S.W. field, its post town. The living is a vic.* in of Chichester, of the val. of £162, in the patron bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary M

BOLNHURST, a par. in the hund. of St co. of Bedford, 6 miles to the N. of Bedford, town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. of £159, in the patron. of the Rev. H W The church is dedicated to St. Dunstan. The endowments of the parish, including £12, the inc the free school founded in 1791, produce about annum.

BOLSOVER, a par. in the hund. of Scarsdale, co. of Derby, 6 miles to the E. of Chesterfield is its post town. It comprises the hmlts. of Gi Ockley, Oxcroft, Stanfree, Shuttlewood, Whitley, house, and Woodside. In Saxon times Bolsover to a thane of the name of Leuric. After the C it was one of the many lordships bestowed by t queror upon William Peveril, who built Bols in the reign of William Rufus or Henry I. The baron, William Peveril, was a partizan of King S and was attainted by King Henry II., when h ships, including Bolsover, were confiscated to the The Norman castle of Bolsover now became a ment fortress, and sustained many sieges dur civil wars of the reigns of John and Henry II for many centuries it continued to be one of the st of the government fortresses in central England. King Henry VIII. conferred it upon the Earl of Shrewsbury, from whose family it passed, in the reign of Elizabeth, into that of Cavendish. The Norman castle was repaired in the end of the 16th century by Elizabeth Hardwick, Countess of Shrewsbury, and her son, Sir Charles Cavendish. It was completed in the beginning of the 17th century, and it has been ever since preserved in the state in which they left it, as a remarkable specimen of a Norman keep restored in Elizabethan times. The eldest son of Sir Charles Cavendish, William, first Duke of Newcastle, built, in the reign of King Charles I., the magnificent building, now in ruins, situated on the terrace adjoining the old castle; and here he had the honour of frequently entertaining his sovereign before the breaking out of the Civil War. It was for one of these occasions, in 1633, that Ben Jonson composed his masque. He also built the Riding House. Bolsover Castle belongs to the Duke of Portland, who is heir and representative of the Cavendishes, Dukes of Newcastle; and his grace preserves the ancient Norman keep in the exact state in which it was restored by his ancestors, Elizabeth, Countess of Shrewsbury, and Sir Charles Cavendish. It is at present inhabited by the Rev. John Hamilton Gray, who has furnished it in the Elizabethan style. The village of Bolsover, formerly a market town, is pleasantly situated on a hillside, commanding a good prospect, and is partly surrounded by an entrenchment. Tobacco-pipes are made here which are in high repute. In the parish are quarries of magnesian limestone, which furnished part of the material for the Houses of Parliament. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £111, in the patron. of the Duke of Portland. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is very ancient, portions of it being Norman. The spire is a good specimen of early English. The arches are partly Norman and partly early English. It contains magnificent monuments, erected to the memory of Sir Charles Cavendish and Henry Cavendish, second Duke of Newcastle. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels. The parochial charities, consisting of a bequest by Mrs. [illegible], for portioning girls—producing annually about £[illegible]—and the endowment of a small free school, amount to £10 per annum. An annual fair is held on Midsummer-day.

BOLSTERSTONE, a tnshp. in the chplry. of Bradfield, and par. of Ecclesfield, in the wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, West Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles to the N.W. of Sheffield. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £119, in the patron. of [illegible] Bramington, Esq. The church was erected soon after the beginning of the 15th century.

BOLTONE. See Boulstone, Herefordshire.

BOLTBURY, a hmlt. in the par. of Marlborough, and hund. of Stanborough, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the S. of Kingsbridge. It is pleasantly situated near the coast, not far from Bolt Tail.

BOLTBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Feliskirk, wap. of Birdforth, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N.E. of Thirsk.

BOLTON, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, not far from Ireby. Wigton is its post town. It is situated in a hilly country on the banks of the river Ellen, and includes the tnshps. of High Bolton, Low Bolton, or Bolton Wood, and Quarry Hill. Many of the inhabitants are employed in working the coal and limestone, which are very abundant here. Copper is also obtained. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, of the val. of £512, in the patron. of the Earl of Lonsdale. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

BOLTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Gosforth, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 5 miles to the N. of Ravenglass.

BOLTON, a par. in the co. of Haddington, Scotland, 3 miles to the S. of Haddington. It lies on the banks of Gifford Water and Binns Water, and is partly wooded. The manor was given, about the end of the 12th century, to the Viponts, by William the Lion. After several changes of ownership, it was seized about 1600 by the Hepburns, one of whom took part, with Bothwell, in the murder of Darnley, and was executed for the crime. The manor was afterwards held by Secretary Maitland, and now belongs to Lord Blantyre. The living, of the val. of £154, is in the presb. of Haddington, in the patron. of Lord Blantyre. There is a Free church for Bolton and Salton.

BOLTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Edlingham, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 5 miles to the N.W. of Alnwick. It is seated on the banks of the river Alne, and was the site of an hospital founded before the year 1225 by Robert de Roos, of Wark, and given at the Dissolution to the Collingwoods, of Eslington. At this place in September, 1513, the Earl of Surrey assembled his forces, numbering about 26,000 men, preparatory to the final decisive conflict with the Scotch invaders, which took place on the 13th of that month at Flodden.

BOLTON, a chplry. in the par. of Morland, West ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 4 miles to the N.W. of Appleby, its post town, and 1 from the Kirkby Thore station of the Eden Valley railway. It is situated on a small stream, a branch of the river Eden, the latter being crossed, about a mile from the village, by a chain-bridge, erected in 1816. Bewley Castle, an old mansion, now a farmhouse, near Bolton, was formerly a seat of the bishops of Carlisle. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, of the val. of £90, in the patron. of the Vicar of Morland. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyans, and a free school with an income from endowment by several persons of £16 per annum. Other charitable endowments of the chplry. produce about £4 a year.

BOLTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bishop-Wilton, wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the N.W. of Pocklington. It extends also into the lib. of St. Peter of York. Bolton Hall is the principal residence.

BOLTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Calverley, wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the N. of Bradford. Hodgson Fold, Low Fold, and Out Lane, are hmlts. included in this tnshp. The principal employment of the people is the woollen manufacture.

BOLTON ABBEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Skipton, wap. of Staincliffe and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the N.E. of Skipton, its post town. It is situated in a district abounding in picturesque scenery, on the banks of the river Wharfe, and is chiefly interesting as the site of a priory, of which there are extensive and beautiful remains. The priory, originally founded at Embsay, a village about 4 miles distant, by William de Meschines and Cicely his wife, in 1121, was removed to Bolton about 1154, by their daughter Adeliza. It was for canons of the Augustine order, and had a revenue at the Dissolution of £302. The site was given in 1543 to Henry Clifford, Earl of Cumberland, from whose family it passed by marriage about a century afterwards to the Burlingtons, and subsequently to the Cavendishes. The manor is now held by the Duke of Devonshire. A Carmelite monastery is also said to have existed here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, of the val. of £111, in the patron. of the Duke of Devonshire. The church, which was part of the old conventual church, is dedicated to SS. Mary and Cuthbert. Here is a free grammar school, founded about 1700 by the Hon. Robert Boyle, which has an income from endowment of £104 per annum. There are some other charities of small value. Bolton Park is an occasional residence of the Duke of Devonshire. The house was originally a gate-house of the priory. The ruins of the priory, consisting chiefly of the walls of the church, partly in the Norman style, stand on a level spot surrounded by rising grounds, on a find bend of the "Crystal Wharfe." Fair meadows, dotted with noble elms, ash, and other trees, abrupt masses of rock overhanging the river, hills covered with rich old woods, and in the distance wild moorlands, are the varied elements of the surrounding scenery. Not far from the priory the Wharfe rushes through a deep rift in the rock, called the Strid. It was here, according to tradition, that the "noble boy of Egremound," son of the Lady Adeliza, was drowned. The genius of Wordsworth has thrown a surpassing charm about the story and the place, in his exquisite poem of the "White Doe of Rylstone."

BOLTON BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Bolton Abbey, and par. of Skipton, wap. of Staincliffe and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the N.E. of Skipton. A chapel for the benefit of travellers anciently stood here.

BOLTON BROW, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Skircoat, and par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile from Halifax. It is near the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway.

BOLTON-BY-BOWLAND, or BOLTON-BY-BOLLAND, a par. in the western div. of the wap. of Staincliffe and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 12 miles to the S. of Settle. Clitheroe is its post town. It is situated on the borders of Lancashire, on the banks of the river Ribble, near Bowland Forest, and includes, besides the village of Bolton, the hmlts. of Holden and Forest Becks. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, of the val. of £335, in the patron. of Mrs. H. A. Littledale. The church is dedicated to St. Peter, and contains a curious old font and several interesting monuments, the most remarkable of which is a tomb, surmounted by a limestone slab, 10 feet long, 5 feet 3 inches broad, and 9 inches thick, to the memory of Sir Ralph Pudsay, his three wives, and 25 children. The charitable endowments of the parish consist of a free school, with an income of £30 per annum, also a girls' school, partly endowed, and several bequests for the benefit of the poor, producing about £25 a year. Bolton Hall, the residence of Mrs. Littledale, was formerly the seat of the Pudsays, and is a very ancient mansion. Henry VI. founded an asylum here after the fatal battle of Hexham, and the king's boots and gloves were for long kept here as relics. A well close by bears his name. The population is entirely agricultural.

BOLTON CASTLE, a chplry. in the par. of Wensley, wap. of West Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the E. of Askrigg. Bedale is its post town. It is situated on the north side of Wensleydale, an extensive tract of fertile and picturesque country, on the banks of the river Yore. It is the site of a castle founded in the reign of Richard II., by Richard Lord Scrope, at that time Chancellor of England. Mary Queen of Scots was confined in this fortress a short time in 1568, and was removed hence to Tutbury Castle. Bolton Castle was held for the king during the Civil War, but after a long siege it was surrendered to the parliament, in November, 1645. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, of the val., with that of Redmire annexed to it, of £160, in the patron. of the Rector of Wensley. The church is dedicated to St. Oswald. There are charitable endowments worth about £4 a year. The ruins of the castle, which are of considerable extent, stand on the edge of a hill commanding a wide prospect over the scenery of the dale. The walls on the north and east sides are dilapidated, but the west front is nearly perfect. Bolton Hall, erected in 1678 by the first Duke of Bolton, is the seat of Lord Bolton, to whom it gives the title of baron. It is about 3 miles from the castle, and is pleasantly situated on the river Yore, among well-wooded grounds.

BOLTON INN, or CHEEKPOINT, a vil. in the bar. of Gaultiere, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the E. of Waterford.

BOLTON-LE-MOORS, a par. and market town, and municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 10 miles to the N.W. of Manchester, and 200 miles from London. It is an important station on the London and North-Western, and the Lancashire and Yorkshire railways, and is connected by various lines with all the principal surrounding towns. The par., which extends over 30,062 acres, is intersected by the small river Croal, a branch of Irwell, and comprises the chplries. of Astley, Belmont, Blackrod, Bradshaw, Harwood, Little Lever Bridge, Rivington, Tonge, Turton, and W... the tnshps. of Anglezarke, Breightmet, Darcy, ... worth, Entwistle, Longworth, Lostock, Quarl... Sharples. The town consists of the two tow... Great Bolton and Little Bolton, separated by the ... —The first fact of importance in the history ... growth of this important seat of manufacturing ... is the settlement of some Flemish emigrants ... the first half of the 14th century. The ... of woollen cloth, introduced by them, was the ... beginning of the trading activity and prosperity ... town. Other refugees from the cruelty of ... despotism sought here in later time their ... with them the knowledge of various other ... manufacture. Weavers from the Rhine int... mixed fabric of linen yarn and cotton. Cotton ... were made here first about the year 1756, and ... dimity, and quilting, somewhat later. Seve... most important inventions for the improvement ... cotton manufacture were made by residents ... To Richard Arkwright was owing the perfection ... spinning-jenny and the water-frame, and to S... Crompton the invention of the "mule," a ma... geniously combining the principles of the two ... The invention was made public in 1780, and ... immense impetus to the trade. In 1812 the ... ment acknowledged the services of the inventor ... had not enriched himself, by a grant of £5,000. ... ton resided near Bolton, in an old timbered ... the Hall-in-the-Wood—a name which was given ... to the mule. Factories were multiplied, but ... engine and the power-loom were needed ... extension to the works and the trade. Bolton ... side of the parliament in the civil war of ... century, and the town was garrisoned and held ... popular forces till 1644. In that year an ... to take it by storm was made by the royalists ... Prince Rupert and the Earl of Derby. The ... bravely repulsed by the garrison. But a ... sault by the Earl of Derby, at the head ... tenantry and fresh forces, was successful, and the ... remained in their possession for a short time. ... again surrendered to the parliament, and the ... earl, made prisoner after the fight at Worcester, ... tried before a military tribunal at Chester, and ... and beheaded in this town in 1651.—The country ... rounding Bolton is chiefly moory and stony. ... barrenness of the surface is compensated by the ... dance of coal. The town, partly old but ... modern erection, contains several long and broad ... which are paved and lighted with gas. It is well ... plied with water by a company established ... whose works cost £40,000. Considerable improvements ... have been made in the town under the Act for ... Bolton Moor, the rents for the inclosed land ... applied by the commissioners for that purpose. ... are a townhall, an exchange (erected in 1... ... ket-house, theatre, assembly rooms, temperance ... cloth hall, barracks, water-works, &c. But the ... manufactories form the great mass of the buildings ... the town. The cotton factories are very numerous ... on a large scale. The chief productions are ... muslins, quiltings, and dimity. Here are also ... tensive bleach-works, dye-works, numerous large ... foundries and steam-engine manufactories, and ... print-works.—Bolton was constituted a parliamentary ... borough under the Reform Act, and returns two members ... to parliament. It was made a municipal borough ... charter obtained in 1838, under which it is governed ... a mayor, 12 aldermen, and 36 councillors. The ... revenue is about £6,500, and the number of ... houses 13,348. Besides the tnshps. of Great Bolton ... Little Bolton, the limits of the municipal and ... mentary boroughs, which are conterminous, include ... vils. of Horrocks Fold, Eagley Bank, and the ... Haulgh with Tonge. The population of this ...

according to the census of 1861, is 70,396, against 61,17 in 1851, showing an increase of no less than 9,225 i the decennial period.—Bolton is the seat of a Poor w Union, the head of a County Court district, and polling-place for the south division of the county. Petty essions are held regularly.—In the town are a dispe ary and a savings-bank, and about 1½ miles out of th town is the Union poorhouse, lately erected, a large handsome building.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. Manchester, of the val. of £350, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, an ancient edifice in the perpendicular style, with a low tower, is dedicated to St. Peter. Six other churches have been erected, the livings of which are all curs.:—St. George's, in Little Bolton, founded in 1796, is worth £168, and is in the patron. of the vicar; Holy Trinity Church, erected in 1825, is in the patronage of the bishop, and of the val. of £150; Emmanuel Church, founded in 1838, val. £150, is in the patron. of the vicar; Christ Church and St. John's, worth £150, are in the alternate patron. of the crown and the bishop; and All Saints', val. £128, in the patron. of T. Tipping, Esq. There are seven chapels belonging to various sections of Wesleyans, three to the Roman Catholics, two each to the Independents and Baptists, and one each to the Quakers, Unitarians, and Swedenborgians. The charitable endowments of the parish are numerous and of considerable value, producing above £1,600 per annum. The principal of these belonging to the town are the following:—The free grammar school, founded in 1641, by Robert Lever, citizen of London, and afterwards united with a school of earlier origin: it has a revenue of about £486, including three exhibitions at the universities; the free school, founded by Nathaniel Hulton in 1693 for 60 children of both sexes, with an income from endowment of £82; another free school, endowed by Thomas Marsden in 17 with an income of £24, and numerous bequests for the benefit of the poor. Some almshouses have been recently established. There are National, British, and Sunday schools, a mechanics' institution, news and reading-rooms. Three weekly newspapers are published in the town, called the Bolton Chronicle, the Bolton Guardian, and the Bolton Examiner, and one monthly, called the Bolton Advertiser.—Ainsworth, author of a Latin dictionary of reference in repute, was a pupil in the grammar school here, and afterwards rose to be master. Dr. Lempriere, author of the well-known Classical Dictionary, was also master of this school.—Bolton is connected with Manchester by a canal 12 miles in length, and with Bury by one about 6 miles long.—Among the seats in the vicinity are Bolton Lodge, Smithhills Hall, Lostock Hall, &. Bradshaw Hall, 3 miles from Bolton, is said to have been the seat of John Bradshaw, president of the "High Court of Justice" constituted for the trial of Charles I.—Monday and Saturday are the market days. Fairs for the sale of lean cattle take place fortnightly from the 5th January to the 12th May. And fairs for cattle, horses, &c., are held on the 30th and 31st July, and the 13th and 14th October.

BOLTON-LE-SANDS, a par. in the hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles to the N. of Lancaster, its post town. It is situated near the coast of Morecambe Bay, and is a station on the Lancaster and Carlisle railway. The par. includes the chplry. of Over Kellet, and the tnshps. of Nether Kellet and Slyne-with-Hest. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Manchester, of the val. of £189, in the patron. of the bishop. Here is a free grammar school, founded by Thomas Asheton in 1619, and endowed with £26 per annum. There are some other charities producing about £100 a year.

BOLTON-PERCY, a par. in the Ainsty of the city, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles to the S.W. of York, its post town. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The tnshps. of Appleton-Roebuck, Bilton, and Steeton, are included in this par. It took the addition "Percy" from the Percys of Topcliffe, who formerly held the manor. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £1,540, in the patronage of the archbishop. The church, which is spacious and well built, is dedicated to All Saints. It was erected in 1423 by Thomas Parker, then rector, and contains some monuments to the Fairfaxes, and one to Sir W. M. Milner, Bart., who died in 1811. There are three stalls in the chancel, and some good stained windows. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £34 per annum.

BOLTON-UPON-DEARNE, a par. in the northern div. of the wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles to the N. of Rotherham. It is a station on the Midland railway. Goldthorpe is a hmlt. of this parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £88, in the patron. of Marsden's executors. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities, consisting chiefly of bequests for education, by Richard Bingley and Elizabeth Pashley, amount to £19 a year. A statute fair is held on the second Thursday in November.

BOLTON-UPON-SWALE, a chplry. in the par. of Catterick, wap. of Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the E. of Richmond. It includes six tnshps. of which Scorton is the largest. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, of the val. of £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Catterick. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. In the churchyard is the grave of Henry Jenkins, oldest of English men, born at Ellerton, a neighbouring village, in 1500, and died there in December, 1670, having reached the rare age of 169 years. He was present at the Battle of Flodden Field. Among the memorable events which occurred during his life were the Reformation, the destruction of the Armada, the deaths of three Queens on the scaffold, the execution of Charles I., and the Great Fire of London. A neat monument marks his burial-place, and a monument in the church is inscribed with an epitaph composed by Dr. Thomas Chapman, Master of Magdalen College, Cambridge, and set up by subscription about 1743.

BOLVENTOR, a chplry. in the par. of Altarnun, hund. of Lesnewth, in the co. of Cornwall, not far from Alternon. Launceston is its post town. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £75, in the patron. of F. Rodd, Esq.

BOLY. See GALBOOLY, Tipperary.

BOMBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Bampton, West ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 3 miles to the N.W. of Shap. It is seated on the banks of the river Lowther, not far from Hawes Water.

BOMER, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 10 miles to the S.W. of Dunfanaghy.

BON ACCORD, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Old Machar, Aberdeen, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. The living, worth £150, is in the presb. of Aberdeen, and in the patron. of the seat-holders. "Bon Accord" was the watchword of the Aberdonians when they repulsed the English in the reign of Edward I. It has been the burgh motto since the days of Robert Bruce.

BONAR, a vil. in the co. of Sutherland, Scotland, 12 miles to the W. of Dornoch. It is situated on the confines of Ross-shire, on the coast of the Dornoch Frith. The Frith is here crossed by a fine bridge of three arches, constructed by Telford. The central arch is of iron, and has a span of 150 feet; the other two are of stone, with a span of about 50 feet each.

BONBUSK, a hmlt. in the par. of Norton Cuckney, wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 5 miles to the S.W. of Worksop.

BONBY, or BONDEBY, a par. in the northern div. of the wap. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles to the S. of Barton-upon-Humber, its post town. It is situated on the Wolds, and was the site of an Alien priory founded in the reign of King John, and given in 1402 to the Carthusian monastery at Beauval, in Nottinghamshire. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £233, in the patron. of the Earl of Yarborough. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew.

BONCHURCH, a par. in the lib. of East Medina, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Southampton, 9 miles to the

S. of Newport. It is situated on the south coast of the island, on the remarkable formation called the Undercliff. Above the village rises the lofty St. Boniface Down, and a little to the N.E. is the headland of Dunnose. Bonchurch is one of the most charming spots in the island. The name of the place is probably a corruption of Boniface Church. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val., with the perpet. cur. of Shanklin annexed to it, of £134, in the patron. of the Rev. W. White, and C. P. Hill, Esq. The church, which is partly in the Norman style, is dedicated to St. Boniface. In the vicinity are Steephill, and Appuldercombe Park, the seat of Lord Yarborough.

BONDARY ROAD, or BARTON ROAD, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Repton and Gresley, in the co. of Derby, 2 miles from Ashby-de-la-Zouch.

BONDGATE, a tnshp. joined with Aismunderby, in the par. and lib. of Ripon, in the West Riding of the co. of York, close to Ripon.

BONDINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Dunster, hund. of Carhampton, in the co. of Somerset, not far from Dunster.

BONDLEIGH, or BUNDLEY, a par. in the hund. of North Tawton, in the co. of Devon, 8 miles to the N. of Oakhampton. It lies on the banks of the river Taw. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £232, in the patron. of Col. Wyndham. The church, which is partly Norman, is dedicated to St. James. It has an old font.

BONDS, a tnshp. joined with Barnacre in the par. of Garstang, hund. of Amounderness, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, not far from Garstang. Here are the remains of Greenhaigh Castle, an ancient seat of the Stanleys, founded in the reign of Henry VII. It was dismantled by order of the parliament during the civil war of the 17th century, and only one tower is now standing.

BONE END, a vil. in the hund. of Desborough, in the co. of Buckingham, 3 miles to the E. of Great Marlow. It is on the north bank of the river Thames.

BONEHILL, a lib. in the par. of Tamworth, and hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles from Tamworth. The principal residence is Bonehill House, the seat of E. Peel, Esq.

BO'NESS. See BORROWSTOWNNESS.

BONGATE, or BONDGATE, a tnshp. in the par. and borough of Appleby, East ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, close to Appleby. The Appleby station of the Eden Valley railway is in this township. It is situated on the river Eden, and includes the hmlt. of Battle-Barrow, the site of an ancient Carmelite monastery, the shire-hall, and county gaol, besides the old church and a handsome National school. The barony was held by the Viteriponts, under a grant from King John. See APPLEBY.

BONHARD, a vil. in the par. of Whitburn, in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 4 miles from Whitburn. In the vicinity are the Flow Moss coal-works.

BONHILL, a par. in the co. of Dumbarton. The Dumbartonshire railway crosses this parish, with a station at Alexandria. It is situated in a picturesque district between the southern end of Loch Lomond and the river Clyde, on the banks of the river Leven. The par. contains the populous and flourishing vil. of Alexandria, and the vil. of Darleith. The Leven, the outlet for the waters of the Loch, falls into the Clyde, near Dumbarton. It abounds in fine salmon and trout, and its water is remarkably pure and soft. On its banks are established numerous large print-works and bleach-grounds, in which most of the inhabitants of the parish are employed. The living, of the val. of £225, is within the presb. of Dumbarton, and in the patron. of Campbell of Stonefield. There are, besides the parish kirk, places of worship belonging to the Free Church and the United Presbyterians. Bonhill was the birthplace (1721) of Tobias Smollett, novelist and historian, to whose memory a pillar has been erected. The river Leven is the theme of one of his songs. Bonhill House is the residence of the Smolletts. The parish formerly belonged to the Lennoxes, who founded the village of Darleith.

BONINGALE, or BONINGHALL, a par. Shiffnal div. of the hund. of Brimstree, in the Salop, 5 miles to the S.E. of Shiffnal. It lies edge of Staffordshire. The Shrewsbury and Birm (North-West) section of the Great Western r passes near this place. The living is a perp annexed to the rect. of Stockton, in the dioc. of L

BONJEDWARD, a vil. in the par. and dis Jedburgh, in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland, 2 mi Jedburgh. It is situated above the confluenc rivers Teviot and Jed. The Jedburgh branch North British railway runs by it.

BONKLE, a vil. in the centre of the par. of Ca nathan, Lanarkshire, Scotland.

BONLAHY, or BUNLAHY, a vil. in the pa bar. of Granard, in the co. of Longford, pro ster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N.W. of Gr near the south extremity of Lough Gowna. held here on the 6th May, the 26th July, 1 October, and the 12th December.

BONMAHON, or BUNMAHON, a vil. in the Ballylaneen, and bar. of Decies-without-Dru co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 the S.W. of Waterford. It is pleasantly situ sea-coast, at the mouth of the small river Mah resorted to as a watering-place. Many of the tants are employed in the extensive and valu and lead mines of the neighbouring village of B mahon, which have long been worked. Here is guard station.

BONNEN-GATE, a vil. in the tnshp. of St Kettle, and par. of Kendal, Kendal ward, in t Westmoreland, 3 miles to the N.W. of Kendal.

BONNINGTON, a vil. in the par of St Cuth in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 1 mile fro burgh. It is seated near the coast of the Firth on Leith water, and is a station on the Leith and branch of the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee ra There is a mineral spring, the water of which is esteemed.

BONNINGTON, a vil. in the par of Ratho, co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 1¼ mile W. of th Ratho, and 9 miles to the W. of Edinburgh. The canal passes near it. In the vicinity is Boni House.

BONNINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Street of Shepway, in the co. of Kent, 6 miles E. fr Hythe. It is partly in the lib. of Romney Marsh is intersected by the Grand Military canal. The is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val in the patron. of T. Papillon, Esq. The church cated to St. Rumwald.

BONNYBRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Fal the co. of Stirling, Scotland, 4 miles to the W kirk. It is seated on the banks of the Bonny W branch of the river Carron.

BONNYRIGG, or BANNIRIGG, a vil. in th of Cockpen, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland to the S. of Edinburgh. It is a station on the branch of the North British railway. Coal is ob in the neighbourhood.

BONNYTON, or BONNINGTON, a vil. in th of Maryton, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 1 m the W. of Montrose. The Scottish North-Easter way passes near it. A castle formerly stood h which there are still some remains.

BONRON, a tnshp. in the par. of Gwyddelwern, of Edernion, in the co. of Merioneth, North W miles from Corwen.

BONSALL, a par. and town in the hund of W worth, in the co. of Derby, 2 miles S.W. from M 17 from Derby, and 1¼ mile N.W. from Cromford way station. It is situated in a hilly district, abo in romantic scenery, on the west side of the riv went, and contains the hmlt. of Slaley. Bons formerly a market town; and a market cross, d 1687, consisting of a pillar surmounted by a sm is still standing. Limestone is abundant in the bourhood. Lead and zinc are obtained, and m the inhabitants are employed in working the mines, and in smelting the ore. The manufacture of hosiery and framework knitting is carried on, and combs are made here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £201, in the patron. of the bishop of the diocese. The church, which stands on a rock overlooking Bonsall dale, is dedicated to St. James. It is an ancient building, with a tower and handsome spire. In the interior over the pulpit, is a painting representing Moses and Aaron reading the Commandments. There are chapels belonging to the Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, and a free school for 50 children, founded in 1704 by William Cragge and Robert Ferne, having an income from endowment of about £100 per annum; also parochial schools for girls and infants. There are some other charities of small amount. Some trace of the Roman road to Manchester, which crossed this parish, may still be seen. Bonsall is within the honour of Tutbury, in the duchy of Lancaster.

BONT, a vil. in the par. of Llanwrtyd, hund. of Builth, in the co. of Brecknock, South Wales, 11 miles to the W. of Builth. The name of this place signifies a bridge, and is the same word as Pont.

BONT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfairtalhaiarn, hund. of Isaled, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 3 miles from Ruthin.

BONTEYEN, a vil. in the par. of Llangeitho, hund. of Penarth, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 8 miles to the N. of Lampeter.

BONTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Willoughby, and hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles to the S. of Alford. The Boston and Grimsby section of the Great Northern railway passes through the parish.

BONT-NEWYDD, a vil. in the par. of Llanbeblig, hund. of Is-Gorfai, in the co. of Carnarvon, not far from Carnarvon.

BONT-NEWYDD, a vil. in the par. of Llanwnda, hund. of Uwch-Gorfai, in the co. of Carnarvon, 2 miles south S. of Carnarvon. It is situated near the coast of the Menai Straits, and is a station on the Nantlle railway.

BONTRHYDYFERE, a vil. in the par. of Llanwrtyd hund. of Builth, in the co. of Brecknock, South Wales, 11 miles to the W. of Builth.

BONT-UCHEL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Trepark, and par. of Gyffylliog, hund. of Ruthin, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 5 miles to the W. of Ruthin.

BONVILSTON, BOLSTON, or TRE-SIMON, a par. in the hund. of Dinas-Powis, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 4 miles to the E. of Cowbridge. Cardiff is its post town. It is not far from the coast of the Bristol Channel. Limestone is quarried in the neighbourhood. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £83, in the patron. of J. J. Bassett, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £12 a year. Bonvilston Park is the principal seat.

BONWEN, a tnshp. joined with Rhuggatt, in the par. of Corwen, hund. of Edernion, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, not far from Corwen.

BONWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Skipsea, wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 10 miles to the E. of Great Driffield.

BONWYSON, a tnshp. in the par. of Gwyddelwern, hund. of Edernion, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, 11 miles to the W. of Builth.

BOOHAY, a hmlt. in the par. of Brixham, hund. of Hayr, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the N.E. of Dartmouth. It is situated on the coast of the English Channel.

BOOKHAM, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Effingham, in the co. of Surrey, 2 miles to the S.W. of Leatherhead. It is situated in a beautiful country near the river Mole. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £340, in the patron. of Viscount Downe. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. It has a side chapel, with a monument to Edmund Slyfield, sheriff of the county in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. In addition to the parish church there is a district church recently erected at Ranmore, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £150, in the patron. of G. Cubitt, Esq. The parochial charities amount to £53 per annum. In this parish is Polesden, a fine mansion with extensive and beautiful grounds, situated in a picturesque spot overlooking Box Hill. This estate belonged to Sheridan. The present house was erected by J. Bonsor, Esq. There are also several gentlemen's seats; among which are Eastwick House, formerly the seat of the Effingham family, and Bookham Grove.

BOOKHAM, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Effingham, in the co. of Surrey, close to Great Bookham. Leatherhead is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £156, in the patron. of the Pollens. The church contains a monumental brass of the year 1590. The charitable endowments, consisting of a bequest by Sir B. Maddox for the benefit of the parish clergyman and the poor, and other purposes, amount to £65 a year. There are almshouses for three persons.

BOOLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Stanton-upon-Hine-Heath, hund. of Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles to the S.E. of Wem.

BOOLYGLASS, a vil. in the bar. of Knocktopher, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles from Knocktopher.

BOON WATER, a stream which takes its rise in Twinlaw, and after passing through the par. of Legerwood, in the co. of Berwick, (where it gives name to Boon-Hill, which rises to the height of 1,096 feet), it joins the river Leader below Thirlestane Castle.

BOON WOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Gosforth, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 5 miles to the N. of Ravenglass. Two annual fairs are held here for the sale of cattle, on the 25th April and the 18th October.

BOOSELEY, UPPER and NETHER, vils. in the par. of Allstonefield, hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles to the S.W. of Longnor. They are near the border of Derbyshire.

BOOT, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Bees, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, ½ mile from Eskdale Church. It comprises about a dozen houses, with an inn. A cattle and pleasure fair is held here on the second Monday in September.

BOOTERSTOWN, a par. in the bars. of Dublin and Rathdown, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.E. of Dublin. It is a station on the Dublin and Kingstown railway. The parish is pleasantly situated on the coast of Dublin Bay, and contains the vils. of Booterstown, Williamstown, and part of Blackrock, watering-places on the bay. Limestone is found here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £148, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Dublin. The church, built in 1824, is in the perpendicular style, with a good tower and spire. There is a large Roman Catholic chapel, a dispensary, and several schools. In the vicinity are many seats of the gentry, among which may be mentioned St. Helen's, the residence of Field Marshal Viscount Gough, Sans Souci, Willow Park, and Mount Merrion.

BOOTH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Knedlington, and par. of Howden, wap. of Howdenshire, in the East Riding of the co. of York, not far from Howden. It is seated on the river Ouse, near the ferry named after the village.

BOOTHBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Welton-in-the-Marsh, wap. of Candleshoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles to the E. of Spilsby. It is at the south extremity of the Wolds.

BOOTHBY, or BOOTHBY-GRAFFO, a par. in the higher div. of the wap. of Boothby-Graffo, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 8 miles to the S. of Lincoln, its post town. A castle, called Somerton Castle, was founded here in 1305, by Anthony Bec, Bishop of Durham. It was defended by a double moat, and occupied a space about 250 feet in length and 200 feet in breadth. Circular towers stood at the four angles of the fortress. After the battle of Poictiers, John, King of France, was confined in this castle, in the custody of Sir Saier de Rochford, who was allowed 2s. a day for his services. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £638, in the patron. of J. Fullerton, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The ruins of the castle are about 2 miles from the village.

BOOTHBY-GRAFFO WAPENTAKE, one of the 30 waps. or subdivisions of the co. of Lincoln, situated in the parts of Kesteven, in the south div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the wap. of Lawress, on the E. by the lib. of Lincoln and the wap. of Langoe, on the S. by the wap. of Loveden, and on the W. by the co. of Nottingham. It is in two divisions, higher and lower. The higher div. contains the pars. of Boothby, Coleby, Harmston, Navenby, Skinnand, Swinethorpe, Welbourne, and Wellingore, with part of Eagle, and the ext. par. district of Eagle-Hall. The lower div. contains the pars. of Aubourn, Bassingham, Boultham, Carlton-le-Moorland, Doddington, North Hyckham, South Hyckham, Norton-Disney, North Scarle, Skellingthorpe, Stapleford, Swinderby, Thorpe-on-the-Hill, and Thurlby, with part of Eagle, and the ext. par. districts of Morton and Eagle Woodhouse. The entire wap. comprises an area of about 56,250 acres.

BOOTHBY-PAGNELL, a par. in the wap. of Winnibriggs and Threo, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles to the S.E. of Grantham. Colsterworth is its post town. It is about 2 miles from the Ponton station of the Great Northern railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £376, in the patron. of T. Fardell, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. Bishop Sanderson was rector of this parish about 40 years. The chief residence is Boothby House, which is a meet for the Belvoir hounds.

BOOTHEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Stoke-upon-Trent, hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, not far from Stoke.

BOOTHROYD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. and par. of Dewsbury, wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the W. of Wakefield.

BOOTHS, HIGHER, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, and hund. of Blackburn, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles to the S.W. of Burnley. The inhabitants are principally employed in the cotton manufacture and the neighbouring coal-mines.

BOOTHS, LOWER, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, and hund. of Blackburn, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, near Higher Booth's. The cotton trade forms the chief occupation of the people.

BOOTHSTOWN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Worsley, and par. of Eccles, hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 6 miles to the W. of Manchester.

BOOTH-TOWN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of North Owram, and par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile from Halifax.

BOOTLE, anciently BOTHILL, a par. and small town in the ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 8 miles to the S. of Ravenglass, and 24 from Whitehaven. It is a station on the Whitehaven and Furness Junction railway. The parish is situated in the southern extremity of the county, in a district abounding in fine scenery, and extends about 8 miles along the coast, from Whitbeck to the mouth of the Esk, and is about 4 miles in breadth. To the S.E. is Black Combe, a mountain above 1,900 feet in height, from whose summit the prospect extends in favourable weather over 14 counties of England and Scotland, to the Isle of Man, and the mountains of North Wales and Ireland. Seaton, in this parish, was the site of a nunnery of the Benedictine order, founded before 1413, which was dedicated to St. Leonard, and had a revenue at the Dissolution of about £14. The site was given to Sir Henry Askew.—Bootle is among the smallest market towns in England, consisting chiefly of one long street, situated on the small river Anna, about two miles from the Irish Sea. Formerly a market was held on Wednesday and Saturday, but it has long become obsolete. The district is highly cultivated, and the pursuits of the people are mostly agricultural. The principal trade is in corn, pork, and hams. Bootle is a polling place for the western division of the county, and is the seat of a Poor-law Union for 12 parishes. It contains the Union poorhouse, which was erected in 1856, for the accommodation of 100 inmates.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, of the annual val. of £199, in the patron. of the Earl of Lonsdale. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. Part of the building is very ancient, the chancel being of Saxon origin, but the greater portion is in the early English style. The tower of the church is built of rubble and red sandstone, and was entirely repaired in 1837, when two new transepts were added. There is a magnificent tower in course of erection, which will be 90 feet in height, surmounted with battlements and crocketed pinnacles. It contains a monumental brass of Sir Hugh Askew, of Seaton Hall, who died in 1560, and a fine old font of red sandstone. The latter, sufficiently large for immersion, is circular in form, and adorned with shields. It is supposed to have been presented by the Huddlestones in the 15th century. There is an endowed chapel belonging to the Independents, and at the adjoining hmlt. of Hycham is a free school, founded in 1713 by Henry Sandwith, which has an income from several endowments of £30 a year. There are other charities of trifling value. The National school was built in 1830, by Captain Sandwith, R.N., who, at his death, in 1849, left the sum of £500 for the repairs of the school-house, any surplus to be for the master. The rectory is a handsome Gothic house of stone, adjoining the church, and not far from it are the remains of the ancient market cross, still bearing traces of the arms of the Huddlestones. At Ewe Moor, in the vicinity, are traces of an ancient camp, and Roman relics have been found. Some remains of the chapel of the nunnery still exist. Seaton Hall, formerly the seat of the Askews, is a farmhouse.—Fairs are held on the 26th April, and the 24th September; and there are fairs for hiring servants on the Friday before Whitsuntide, and the Friday before the 11th November.

BOOTLE-CUM-LINACRE, a tnshp. in the par. of Walton-on-the-Hill, hund. of West Derby, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles to N. of Liverpool. It is a station on the Southport branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The village is pleasantly situated on the sea-coast, and was till recently much frequented as a watering-place. The Liverpool North Docks extend into Bootle, and occupy a great portion of the shore formerly frequented by bathers. Seaforth, Waterloo, and Crosby, higher up the coast, are considerably benefited by the influx of visitors. Linacre, a hmlt. included in this tnshp. The living is a perpetual cur. in the dioc. of Chester, of the val. of £194, in the patron. of W. S. Miller, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BOOTON, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Erpingham, in the co. of Norfolk, 1½ mile S.E. of Aylsham, and 5 miles to the S.W. of Aylsham. Norwich is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £228, in the patron. of H. Bolton, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. Booton Hall is the principal residence.

BOOYE, a hmlt. in the par. of Arkendarth, Div. of Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles from Reeth.

BORASTON, or BURASTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Burford, hund. of Overs, in the co. of Salop, 1 mile from Tenbury.

BORDALE, a small place on the southern shore of Ullswater, in the co. of Westmoreland, under Place Fell.

BORDEAN, a tythg. in the par. of East Meon, hund. of the same name, in the co. of Southampton, 3 miles to the W. of Petersfield. Near the village is Bordean House.

BORDEN, a par. in the hund. of Milton, lath of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles to the S.W. of Sittingbourne, its post town. The living is a vic.* in dio of Canterbury, of the val. of £290, in the patron. of J. Musgrave, Esq. The church is dedicated to SS. Pe r and Paul. It is a spacious ancient structure, with a massive western tower, a semicircular arched doorway wit zigzag ornaments, and other parts in the Norman sty. It contains the tomb of Dr. Plot, author of histories of the counties of Oxford and Stafford, who die in 1696. He was born at the manor-house in this par sh. Borden has the benefit of a valuable bequest by William Barrow, in 1707, for the support of 80 widows and other poor persons. The annual value of the endowment is about £1,000. There are some other sm charities.

BORDESLEY, a hmlt. joined with Deritend, in the par of Aston, hund. of Hemlingford, in the co. of Warwick, in the eastern suburbs of Birmingham. It is included within the bounds of the borough, and is a station on the Birmingham and Wolverhampton section of the Great Western railway. The Warwick canal passes by this place. It is the site of numerous factories and works, sharing in the general trade of Birmingham. The population, according to the last census was 21,338, of whom 13,683 were in the district of the Holy Trinity, and 7,655 in that of St. Andrew's. There are two churches in Bordesley—Holy Trinity, and St. Andrew's, the latter was consecrated in 1836, and has a district formed under Sir Robert Peel's Act. This church is in the decorated style. The living, val. £320, is a perpet. cur., in the alternate patron. of the bishop and trustees. The living of Holy Trinity is also a perpet. cur., in the gift of the vicar. Here are almshouses for 12 persons, founded by James Dovell; and others, erected in 1848, by the trustees of William Lench, who gave certain properties in Birmingham by deed, dated March 11, 1525. There are three other sets of almshouses in Birmingham, belonging to the same trust. Those in Bordesley are inhabited by a matron and 48 aged women. There are several charitable endowments worth about £35 per annum. Bordesley Hall, which stood near Camp Hill, was burnt down during the Birmingham riots of 1791. Camp Hill was the scene of the conflict between the Royalists, under Prince Rupert, and the inhabitants of Birmingham, when the latter were repulsed and the town taken.

BORDESLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Tardebigg, and hund. of Halfshire, in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles to the E. of Bromsgrove. The Redditch branch of the Bristol and Birmingham railway passes near this place. It was the site of a Cistercian abbey, founded by the Empress Maude, which was dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and had revenues amounting at the Dissolution to about £392. It was given by Henry VIII. to Andrews Lord Windsor, in exchange for the manor of Stanwell, which the king compelled him to part with. It is related that this nobleman, being ordered to quit Stanwell, his old family seat, without delay, left in the mansion the abundant provisions he had just made for a hospitable and merry Christmas, saying that they should not find it "bare Stanwell." There are no remains of the abbey. Near the village is Bordesley Park.

BORDWELL, a par. in the bars. of Clandonagh and Clarmallagh, in Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N.E. of Rathdowny. It contains Lough Grantstown and a small tract of bog. Limestone is found here. The living is a rect. in the dio. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, val. £119, in the patron. of the bishop of the diocese. The church is ded ed. Two castles formerly stood in this parish, of which there are still remains. Near the ruins of Grantstown Castle is Grantstown House.

BREATTON, or BRATTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Baschurch, and hund. of Pimhill, in the co. of Salop, 8 miles to the N.W. of Shrewsbury. Baschurch is a station on the Chester and Shrewsbury railway. The township lies on the banks of the river Perry. In the vicinity are Bratton Hall and Bratton Park.

BOREHAM, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, in the co. of Essex, 3½ miles to the N.E. of Chelmsford, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Chelmer, and is crossed by the Great Eastern railway. It is a place of great antiquity, and had the rank of a market town before the Norman Conquest. The par. contains the honour of New Hall. This mansion, originally founded, it is supposed, by the Butlers, in the reign of Henry VII., was a large and splendid structure. It was named Beaulieu by Henry VIII., who got possession of the manor and made it an honour. He also improved and adorned the hall, and made it the residence of the Princess Mary. The king himself kept the festival of St. George here in 1524. The estate was subsequently in the possession of the Ratcliffes, Villiers Duke of Buckingham, Cromwell, Monk Duke of Albemarle, &c. The fine chapel was taken down in the last century, and the great hall, 96 feet in length and 50 feet in breadth, has been converted into a chapel. A stained window from the old chapel is now in St. Margaret's church, Westminster. New Hall is now occupied as a nunnery, and has a Catholic school attached. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £432, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. It has a square embattled tower, and contains, in the Sussex chapel attached to it, several monuments, with recumbent statues in alabaster of the three last Ratcliffes, Earls of Sussex. A mausoleum of the Walthams, in the style of the Temple of the Winds, is in the churchyard. Here are National schools, supported by voluntary contributions; and a free school, founded and endowed in 1717 by Edmund Butler, the revenue of which amounts to about £156 per annum, the trustees of which are Dissenters. The par. of Little Barlow participates in this charity. There are several other charitable endowments producing about £13 a year. Near the village is Boreham House, the seat of Sir J. Tyrrell, Bart. The park contains two noble avenues, and a small lake in front of the mansion.

BOREHAM MANOR, or BOREHAM STREET, in the par. of Wartling, and hund. of Foxearle, rape of Hastings, in the co. of Sussex, 6 miles to the S.W. of Battle, and 6 N. of Pevensey. It is situated on the small river Ashburn, near Boreham Bridge, on the road from Battle to Lewes.

BOREHAM WOOD, a hmlt. a short distance to the N.E. of the vil. of Elstree, and 11 miles from London. It is situated near the old Roman road called Watling Street, and contains several villa residences. To the west of the village is a large reservoir. It is supposed that the ancient town of Sulloniacum was situated on Brockley Hill, which is 1 mile south.

BORELAND, a vil. in the par. of Dysart, Kirkcaldy district, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, near Dysart. The inhabitants are employed in the neighbouring coal-mines.

BORERAY, a small island to the W. of Bergera, one of the Western Islands. It is about 1 square mile in area, and forms part of the par. of Harris, in the Isle of Lewis, in the co. of Inverness, Scotland, and is included in the presb. of Uist, being situated at a short distance to the N. of North-Uist.

BORESFORD, a tnshp. united with Pedwardine, in the par. of Brampton Bryan, hund. of Wigmore, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles to the N.E. of Presteign.

BORESON'S END, a hmlt. near the vil. of Pelham, in the hund. of Edwinstree, in the co. of Herts, 6 miles E. of Buntingford, and 8 N.W. of Bishop Stortford railway station. The river Ash takes its rise in this neighbourhood.

BORGUE, a par. and vil. in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 4 miles to the S.W. of Kirkcudbright. It is situated on the sea-coast, on a peninsula lying between Kirkcudbright Bay on the E., and Wigton Bay on the S.W., and consists of the ancient pars. of Borgue, Kirkandrews, and Sandwick. The par. also includes the vils. of Kirkandrews and Chapelton, and the Island of Barloco, with some others. Along the coast, which is partly rocky, there are some good natural havens. Freestone and whinstone are abundant here. The chief landowners are the Earl of Selkirk, Sir W. Gordon, of Earlston, and a few others.—The living, of the val. of £231, is in the presb. of Kirkcudbright, and in the patron. of the crown. There is also a Free church. Ruins of the ancient kirks of Sandwick and Kirkandrews still exist. The former once belonged to the monks of Iona, and was afterwards given by William the Lion to Holyrood Abbey. Not far from the ruin is Frenchman's Rock, so called, it is said, from the circumstance of some French pirates, who were wrecked on it, carrying off the church plate. The par. is about 10 miles in length and 7 miles in breadth.

BORLAND PARK, a vil. in the par. of Auchterarder, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 6 miles to the E. of Muthill. It is seated on the banks of the river Earn.

BORLEY, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, in the co. of Essex, 2 miles from Sudbury. It is situated on the border of Suffolk, on the west bank of the river Stour. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £240, in the patron. of Frances, Countess of Waldegrave. The church, which stands on rising ground commanding a good prospect, contains a monument to Sir Edward Waldegrave, Master of the Wardrobe to Queen Mary. The common lands in this parish are of considerable extent.

BORLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Ombersley, hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles to the W. of Droitwich. It lies on the east side of the river Severn.

BORO, or BOW, two small rivers of Ireland; one a branch of the Suir, which takes its rise in the Blackstairs mountains, in the western part of the co. of Wexford; and the other, a feeder of Lough Derg, rises in the pass of Moynoe, in the bar. of Upper Tulla, in co. Clare.

BOROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanelly, and hund. of Carnwalton, in the co. of Carmarthen, not far from Llanelly. Here are extensive iron-works and coal-mines, in which the inhabitants are principally engaged.

BOROUGHBRIDGE, a hmlt. chiefly in the par. of Lyng, and hund. of Audersfield, but partly also in the par. of Weston Zoyland, and hund. of Whitley, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles to the N.W. of Langport. It is seated on the banks of the river Parret, which is navigable from Langport, and is here crossed by a stone bridge of three arches. On the east bank of the river is a lofty mound, on the top of which stand the ruins of an ancient chapel dedicated to St. Michael. It was built in the form of a cross, and belonged to the abbey of Athelney. During the civil war in the reign of Charles I. it was occupied some time by royalist troops, and afterwards captured for the parliament.

BOROUGHBRIDGE, a chplry. and market town in the par. of Aldborough, wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 17 miles to the N.W. of York, and 208 miles from London, or 213 miles by railway. It is connected with the North-Eastern railway by a branch line 6 miles in length from Pelmoor Junction. The town stands on the south bank of the navigable river Ure, and took its origin and its name from a bridge built here not long after the Norman Conquest. The great road to the north, which till that time had passed through Aldborough, was then diverted from its old course, and carried across the Ure at this spot. From that period the town of Aldborough began to decline in importance, and a new town rose up in its place. A battle was fought near Boroughbridge in 1321, between Edward II. and the barons headed by the Earl of Lancaster. The latter were defeated, and on the following day an attack was made on the town by the royal forces, and the great earl and other noblemen were captured and afterwards beheaded. Various relics have been discovered on the battle-field.—The town was made a borough and received the elective franchise in the reign of Queen Mary, from which time it returned two members to parliament until 1832, when it was disfranchised by the Reform Act.—The town contains some good modern houses, and has a convenient market-place. The principal business is the cor carrying trade by the river, and the hardware trad latter, however, being of less importance than forr The ancient bridge was of timber, and its place ha filled by a handsome stone structure. In the market formerly stood a column, 12 feet high, sometimes a cross. It has recently been removed to Aldbo and is of the Doric order and fluted.—The livin perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, worth £115, patron. of the Vicar of Aldborough. The church is cated to St. James. The Independents and Wes have chapels in the town. There are National a fant schools, and a small library.—Near the are the three massive stones or obelisks called the Arrows. They are blocks of ragstone ranged in north and south, the central one, which is ab in height from the ground, being distant 200 one end of the line and 360 feet from the is set 6 feet deep beneath the surface. The of antiquarians have not yet led to more than bable conjecture that they are of Celtic origin. have considered them Roman and others Britis ments. The neighbouring town of Aldborough Roman station Isurium, and many Roman ant have been found here; among them some fine tess pavements.—The market is held on Saturday for the sale of cattle and sheep are held on the 27th 28th April, and the 23rd and 24th October. T for hardware, held on the 22nd June, has much clined.

BOROUGH FEN, or BOROUGH FEN VILL ext. par. district in the lib. of Peterborough, in of Northampton, 5 miles to the N. of Peterboro comprises an area of about 3,130 acres of very grass and arable land, the property of Sir Culli Eardley, Bart., and lies on the north side of the Newborough.

BOROUGH GREEN, a hmlt. partly in the p Ightham and partly in that of Wrotham, hund. of tham, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 5 mi the N.E. of Sevenoaks.

BOROUGH GREEN. See BURROUGH GREEN.

bridge.

BORRAS HOVAH, or BWRAS HOVAH, a v in the par. of Wrexham, hund. of Bromfield, in of Denbigh, North Wales, 3 miles to the N.E. of W ham. The Chester and Shrewsbury railway p near it.

BORRAS-RIFFRE, or BWRAS-RIFFRE, a v in the par. of Gresford, hund. of Bromfield, in of Denbigh, North Wales, 3 miles to the N.E. of W ham.

BORRIS, a par. in the bar. of East Maryb Queen's County, in the prov. of Leinster, Ire miles to the W. of Athy, and 50 miles from Dub contains the market town of Maryborough. See M BOROUGH.

BORRIS, or BORRIS-IDRONE, a vil. in the p Clonygoose, bar. of East Idrone, in the co. of Ca prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 17 miles to the S. of Ca or 19 miles by railway, and 67 miles from Dublin, miles by railway. It is a station on the Bagna and Wexford branch of the Great Southern and W railway. It is seated near the river Barrow, on Borris rivulet, within view of Mount Leinster, B stairs, and the White Mountain, which present a picturesque appearance from the town. It conta court-house, in which petty sessions are held a fortnight, and small barracks, and is a chief stati police. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, a school-house, a dispensary, and two Church Edu schools, supported by Mr. Kavanagh. Borris H a fine old mansion in a spacious and well-w park, a great resort of pleasure parties and pic summer, is the seat of the Kavanaghs, a family trace their descent from M'Murrough, the last of Leinster, and who have resided here for cent The house stood a siege by the Irish in 1642, an defenders repulsed two assaults in 1798. There pri te chapel connected with the mansion, beautifully co ructed, which now answers as a parish church. Mr Kavanagh has just completed extensive saw-mills wi in the domain, and near the town is a handsome vi uct of 16 arches, belonging to the Bagnalstown ra ay. Fairs for the sale of cattle, sheep, &c., are hel in the village on the 1st January, the 5th February, the 1st May, the 2nd July, the 15th August, the 4th Oc er, and the 14th November.

DRRIS-IN-OSSORY, a vil. in the par. of Aghaboe, ba of Clandonagh, in Queen's County, prov. of Leinste Ireland, 15 miles to the S.W. of Maryborough, and 69 iles from Dublin. It is situated on the confines of Tipperary, not far from the Slieve Bloom mountains, on the uth bank of the river Nore. The Great Southern a Western railway passes near it. This place was the ite of a castle erected at a remote period by the Fi atricks, to whom the district then belonged, and wa an important post on the pass to Munster. The cas was besieged in 1641, and again in the following ye and was partially destroyed some years later, b was rebuilt in the last century. A market is held in the village, which consists of one long street. There is police station, a court-house, and a dispensary. Quarter and petty sessions are held here. There are son ruins of the old castle adjoining the present mansion. Fa are held on the 25th January, the 21st March, the 31s May, the 24th June, the 15th August, the 11th Oc ber, the 21st November, and the 20th December.

DRRISMORE, a par. in the bar. of Galmoy, in the co. f Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S. of Johnstown. It was formerly held by the n ts of Jerpoint. The living is included in the union of Burnchurch, in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Le lin. Borrismore House is the chief residence.

DRRISNAFARNEY, a par. in the bar. of Clonlisk, Kin's County, in the prov. of Leinster, but extending also into the bar. of Skerrin, in the co. of Tipperary, pro of Munster, Ireland, not far from Moneygall. It is suated in a fertile district at the foot of the Devil's Bit mountains, at the head of the small river Allitrim. The living is a rect. united with the vic. of Bourney, in the dioc. of Killaloe, Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacdush. There are several seats of the gentry in the par., among which are Loughton, the residence of Lor Bloomfield; Thorn Vale, Larch Vale, &c. There are vestiges of an ancient castle at Loughton. Trout are und in the Allitrim.

RRISOKANE, a par. in the bar. of Lower Ormo, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Irelan 16 miles to the W. of Roscrea, and 90 miles from Dubn. It is situated in a boggy district, eastward of Lough Derg, and contains the vil. of Goatstown. Good limstone is quarried here. There is a police station, and etty sessions are held weekly. The town also contai a small prison, a dispensary, and a fever hospital. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduagh, of the val. of £122, in the patn. of the bishop. There is a spacious Roman Catolic chapel, and several parochial and other schools. The principal mansions are Kyle House, Arran Hill (belonging to the Marquis of Ormonde), Bushey Park, &c. Fairs take place, in April, June, September, and December.

DRRISOLEAGH, a vil. in the par. of Glenkeen, bar of Upper Kilnamanagh, in the co. of Tipperary, pro of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.W. of Templetore, and 92 miles from Dublin. It is a chief station of police, and petty sessions are held every other week. The village contains the parish church and a Roman Catolic chapel. Fairs are held on the 9th June, the 6th August, and the 27th November.

DRROWASH, a vil. and railway station in the par. of Ockbrook, and hund. of Morleston, in the co. of Derby, 4 miles E. of Derby, and 128 from London. It is situated on the Nottingham canal and the Derby and Nottingham railway, which has a station here. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyans, and a National school, erected in 1840. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the extensive cotton and lace factory of Messrs. Towle. There are also water and steam flour-mills, and a brick-yard, BORROWBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Leake, wap. of Allertonshire, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the N. of Thirsk. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village, and there are charitable endowments, chiefly for education, producing £8 per annum.

BORROWBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Lythe, lib. of Langbaurgh, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 10 miles to the N.W. of Whitby. It is not far from the coast.

BORROWDALE, a chplry. in the par. of Crosthwaite, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 6 miles to the S. of Keswick, its post town. It is situated in a narrow valley, bearing the same name, at the head of Derwentwater. The district is wild and mountainous, abounding in scenery of varied grandeur and beauty. The river Derwent takes its rise at Sparkling Tarn, at the head of the valley, runs between beautiful meadows shut in by mountains on both sides, rising to the height of 400 or 500 feet, and expands into the fine lake which bears its name. The mountain sides are covered with woods. The Dale contains the hmlts. of Grange, picturesquely situated at the entrance, Rosthwaite, Seathwaite, and Seatoller. It was once a possession of the monks of Furness. Near the hmlt. of Grange is Castle Cragg, a conical hill, commanding a fine prospect. Its sides are wooded, and on its summit are remains of an old entrenchment. Another object of interest is the remarkable detached mass of rock called the Bowder Stone. It rests on a narrow base, and is about 62 feet long. It is estimated to weigh nearly 1,800 tons. The hmlt. of Rosthwaite stands at the junction of three valleys. The most important feature of this district is the famous mine, yielding the so-called black-lead, now named more accurately "graphite." It is also called wad, plumbago, and black cawke. The mine is at Giller Coom, near Seathwaite, in the side of a steep hill of grey porphyry. The valuable mineral, which occurs in modules in hollows of the mountain, is found here in greater abundance and of purer quality than anywhere in the world, the sale sometimes producing £100,000 per annum. It has been recently stated by scientific men that the supply cannot last many years, and the working is at present suspended. The workmen were not allowed to quit the mine without an examination in the entrance-room, where firearms are kept, as a security against theft. The lead is sometimes found in lumps weighing as much as 50lbs. Blue slate is quarried in several parts of the Dale, and copper and lead exist in small quantities. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Crosthwaite. The chapel, rebuilt in 1824, stands near Rosthwaite. There is also a Church of England chapel, recently erected, at Grange, besides places of worship for Dissenters at Grange and Rosthwaite. A sheep fair is held at Borrowdale on the first Wednesday in September.

BORROWDALE, a hmlt. in the par. of Orton, East ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 4 miles to the S.W. of Orton. The Lancaster and Carlisle railway passes by it. The village is seated in a mountainous country, under Tebay Fells, at the junction of the rivers Lune and Borrow. The latter has its source at Hartop Pike, Shap Fells, and flows in a south-easterly direction, through the wild dale, to the village, where it is crossed by Borrowdale bridge. There are remains of an old camp at Castle Dykes, from which the river and the dale are said to have taken their name, which is a corruption of burgh or borrow.

BORROWDON, or BURRADON, a tnshp. in the par. of Allenton, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 6 miles to the N.W. of Rothbury. It is situated near the river Coquet.

BORROWSTON, a vil. in the par. of Reay, in the co. of Caithness, Scotland, 6 miles W. of Thurso, and 4 miles from Reay. It is seated on the coast of the North Sea, at the mouth of Forse Water.

BORROWSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Borrowstowness, in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 2 miles to the N. of Linlithgow. It is situated on the coast of the Frith of Forth, and is a station on the Monkland railway.

BORROWSTOWNNESS, or BO'NESS, a par. and seaport town in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 3 miles to the N. of Linlithgow. It is a station on the Monkland railway. The parish is situated on the south coast of the Frith of Forth, at the mouth of the river Avon, and contains the villages of Borrowstown and Newtown. The town is a burgh of barony under the Duke of Hamilton, and one of the oldest seaports in Scotland. Till about 1650, it formed part of the ancient parish of Kinneil. The district is fertile and well cultivated, and contains coal and iron, limestone, freestone, &c. The town stands on a low spot by the Frith, and is irregularly built. The principal occupation of the inhabitants is the shipping trade, which is chiefly coastwise, and of less extent than formerly. The port, about the close of the 17th century, ranked next in importance to Leith. Subordinate to it are the ports of Bruceshaven, Limekilns, Charlestown, Inverkeithing, and St. David's. About 80 vessels belong to the port. The harbour is safe, and well protected by two long piers. There is in the town a large distillery, a pottery, a foundry, and a rope work. Ship-building is carried on, and there is a patent slip. A custom-house is established here. The living, which is of the val. of £272, is in the presb. of Linlithgow, and in the patron. of the Duke of Hamilton. The church was built on the creation of the parish, in the 17th century. The old church at Kinneil is decayed. There is a Free church for Borrowstownness and Carriden, and also a church belonging to the United Presbyterians. Kinneil House, a seat of the Duke of Hamilton, is pleasantly situated on the Frith, and was for a long time the residence of the philosopher Dugald Stewart. The wall of Antoninus crossed this parish, and remains of it still exist at Graham's Dyke.

BORSTAL. See BOARSTALL, Buckinghamshire.

BORTH, a vil. in the tnshp. of Cyfoeth-y-Brenin, and par. of Llanfihangel Geneur Glynn, hund. of Geneur Glynn, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 5 miles to the N. of Aberystwith. Borth Sands extend northward from this village, which stands on the coast of Cardigan Bay, to the mouth of the river Dovey, a distance of 3 miles.

BORTHIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandisilio, hunds. of Troedyraur and Moyddin, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 7 miles to the E. of Newcastle Emlyn. It is situated on the north bank of the river Teify.

BORTHWICK, a par. in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 11 miles to the S.E. of Edinburgh. The Edinburgh and Hawick section of the North British railway runs through it. The parish lies at the foot of the Lammermuir hills, and is watered by the river Gore, which joins the South Esk at the western extremity of the parish. The surface is hilly, and partly moorland; but the greater part is well cultivated. There are several villages scattered over the parish, among which are Dewarton, Newlandrig, Castleton, Middleton, Stobbs, &c. Limestone and freestone are abundant, and coal is largely wrought at Vogrie. There is a powder manufactory at Stobbs.—Borthwick is chiefly interesting as the site of a fine old castle, still in good preservation. It is situated on an eminence above the Gore, on the site of the more ancient fortress of Locherwart, and was founded in 1430 by Sir William Borthwick, under a license obtained for the purpose from James I. The castle consists of a single donjon, or tower, of immense strength, surrounded by a wall. It is built of hewn stone, and is about 110 feet high. Its sides measure 74 by 68 feet, and the walls are 13 feet thick at the base, gradually diminishing to 6 feet at the summit. It consisted of three stories, the lower hall being remarkable for its loftiness and elegance. One small room is called the Queen's Room, and is said to have been occupied by Mary, Queen of Scots, in June, 1567, during the brief interval between her marriage with Bothwell and the battle of Carberry Hill. After the day of Dunbar Cromwell summoned the governor of this castle to surrender it, which, not being done, he had to "batter his cannon against it," and so took it. The wall still shows the effect of the cannonade, and the autograph letter of Cromwell, summoning Lord Booth to surrender, is in the possession of the Borthwicks of Crookston, the proprietors of the castle and farm upon which it stands. It was from this family, a branch of the ancient family, that the parish took its present name, having been called before they had possession of it Locherwart.—The living, of the val. of £200, with glebe of the value of £30, is in the presb. of Dalkeith and in the patron. of Dundas of Arniston, one of the proprietors of the parish, whose seat is the noble mansion called Arniston House. The foundation-stone of the church was laid on the 13th June, 1862. It occupies the site of the old one, which was destroyed by fire eight years ago. It is a handsome Gothic edifice, and incorporates what remained of the old walls. It is beautifully situated, and forms the crowning object in the sweet valley as it is seen from the railway. It is a noble gift of David Kidd, Esq., merchant in Leith, a native of the parish, and has been erected as a token of his affectionate regard for the spot where the remains of his fathers repose. The parish was a possession of the collegiate kirk of Crichton until 1596, when James VI. made it a separate charge. The manse of Borthwick was the birthplace (1721) of Principal Robertson, the historian, whose father was at that time minister of the parish. A new manse was built about eleven years ago upon the site of the old one. Travellers in the old coach days will remember Fushie Inn, in this parish, the first stage upon the London road from Edinburgh. Sir Walter Scott found his "Meg Dods" in the quondam woman who sat upon a stool at the door, and rated her gude man to take care of the horses while she conducted her guests within.—At Arniston is the family seat of the Dundas family, of whom was the Right Honourable Henry Dundas, afterwards Lord Melville, President of the Court of Session. James Stirling, the mechanician, was also a native of Borthwick. The par. extends about 6 miles in length from N. to S., and about 4 in breadth from E. to W.

BORVA, or BURFA, a tnshp. united with Bareland, in the par. of Old Radnor, and borough of New Radnor, in the co. of Radnor, South Wales, 5 miles to the S. of New Radnor. It is situated in a level and woody district on the borders of Herefordshire, on the north bank of the small river Hendwell. The township is crossed by Offa's Dyke.

BORWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Warton, and hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 7 miles to the N. of Lancaster. The Lancaster and Carlisle railway runs near the village, which is not far from the coast of Morecambe Bay. The seat or residence is Borwick Hall, the seat of the Stanley family. Charles II. was entertained here on his way from the north to Worcester, the army encamping in the neighbourhood.

BOSBURY, a par. in the hund. of Radlow, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles to the N. of Ledbury, its post-town. It is situated on the small river Leden, and contains the hmlt. of Upleadon. At this place was formerly a palace of the bishops of Hereford. The remains of it are now a farm-house. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. of £337, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is old, is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. It contains several monuments. There is a free grammar school, founded by Sir R. Morton, which has an income from endowment of £90 per annum. There are several other charitable endowments producing about £40 a year. Hops are cultivated in the parish. The Ledbury hounds meet here.

BOSCASTLE, a vil. and small seaport, partly in the par. of Forrabury, partly in that of Minster, hund. of Lesnewth, in the co. of Cornwall, 5 miles to the N. of Camelford. It is pleasantly situated on the sides of a lofty hill, and in part surrounded with orchards and gards. It was formerly a market town, and the curious old market-house still exists, and is sometimes used; near it are the remains of an old ecclesiastical building formerly used as a chapel. The place derives its name, which is a corruption of Botreaux Castle, from a castle founded by the baronial family of Botreaux, who were settled here as early as the middle of the 12th century. The port is subordinate to Padstow, and its vessels belonging to it are engaged in the coasting trade exporting corn, slate, and iron ore, and importing coals, timber, and general merchandise. The harbour is most romantic, being enclosed with high rocky eminences. The entrance has been compared with that to the harbour of Balaklava. There is a small island at the entrance, belonging to the adjoining parish of Tintagel, on which are remains of an ancient chapel, and a portion of King Arthur's Castle. But the most noteworthy object in the vicinity is St. Knighton's Kieve, about two miles from Boscastle. It is one of the most beautiful waterfalls in the West of England. Forrabury church commands a very distant view of the ocean, being situated on high ground, whilst Minster church is hidden, lying low in one of the most romantic, beautiful spots in the county. As its name denotes, there was formerly a monastery of black monks near where the church stands. The Wesleyans and two other religious sects have chapels in the village. There is a National school, in which there are about 80 children educated, belonging to the surrounding parishes, besides two other private schools. There is also a very comfortable, well-conducted hotel in the lower part of Boscastle. Fairs are held on the 5th August and the 22nd November.

BOSCOBEL, an ext. par. district in the Shiffnal div. of the hund. of Brimstree, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles to the E. of Shiffnal. It lies on the edge of Staffordshire, and formerly belonged to a Cistercian nunnery which stood in the neighbourhood, and of which the gatehouse and part of the church are still to be seen in a wooded spot. This district is the site of Boscobel House, noted as the retreat of Charles II., who took refuge here after the fatal fight of Worcester, September 3 1651. He entrusted himself to the keeping of Francis Penderell, a farmer, who then occupied the house and his four brothers. They disguised him in their clothes, and, faithful to their pledge, and proof against all allurements and all threats, kept him concealed in various places for several days. Part of the time they hid him at the nunnery, part at Boscobel House, and another time he took shelter in an oak. There is a tree now called the "Royal Oak," which is said to have sprung from an acorn of the genuine old tree. It is protected by a railing, and has a brass plate attached to it, with a suitable inscription. Boscobel House is a picturesque timbered structure, originally built for a forester's or hunting lodge. In the 16th century it was the seat of the Giffords.

BOSCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Amesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles to the S.E. of Amesbury, and 8 N.E. from Salisbury, its post town. It lies near the border of Hampshire, on the small river Bourne, a feeder of the Avon. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £330, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a small ancient building. The parochial charities consist of the endowment of four almshouses for widows and widowers, which have an income of £24 per annum. Richard Hooker was once rector of this parish, and while here wrote a large part of his great work on "Ecclesiastical Polity."

BOSDEN, a joint tnshp. with Handforth, in the par. of Cheadle, hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. palatine of Chester, 3 miles to the S. of Stockport. The London and North-Western railway passes through the township, with stations at Cheadle and Handforth.

BOSHAM, a par. in the hund. of the same name, rape of Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, 3 miles to the W. of Chichester, its post town. It is a station on the South Coast railway. It is situated on Chichester harbour, and contains the tythgs. of Broadbridge, Creed, New Fishbourne, Gosport, and Walton. Bosham is a very ancient place, and was the site of a monastery founded before the end of the 7th century by a Scottish monk, named Dicul, and given by Henry I. to Bishop Warlewast. The bishop founded a collegiate chapel on its site, which existed till the Dissolution, and was given by Queen Elizabeth to the Dean and Chapter of Chichester. The port was anciently of some importance, and was seized by Earl Godwin, whose son Sweyn effected a landing here in 1049. From this port soon afterwards Harold embarked, when he was shipwrecked on the coast of France. The village stands at the head of a creek, in a pleasant and well-wooded country. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £220, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, which was built by Bishop Warlewast, is dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and the prebendal stalls still remain. In the north wall is a niche with crocketed ornaments, enclosing a recumbent female figure, sculptured about the time of Edward I. The charitable endowments of the parish, including a small bequest for education, amount to £21 per annum. This village was the birthplace of Herbert de Bosham, secretary to Thomas à Becket.

BOSHAM HUNDRED, one of the 7 hunds. or subdivisions of the rape of Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, situated in the western div. of the co., and bounded on the N. and W. by the hund. of Westbourn and Singleton, on the E. by the hund. of Box and Stockbridge, and on the S. by Chichester harbour. It comprises the pars. of Bosham, Chidham, Funtington, West Stoke, and Thorney, and extends over an area of about 10,700 acres.

BOSHERSTON, a par. in the hund. of Castlemartin, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 6 miles to the S. of Pembroke, its post town. It is situated on the north coast of the Bristol Channel. The district consists partly of downs, and is remarkable for the numerous caverns of singular form which penetrate the sea cliffs. The most considerable of those caverns is called Boshersston Meer, which runs inland a considerable distance; and in a heavy storm of wind from the south, large volumes of water rush through a hole in the limestone cliff, and rise to the height of 70 or 80 feet, accompanied with noise equal to the report of the heaviest cannon. In a wild romantic spot near Bosherston Meer is the hermitage of St. Govan: a small chapel approached by steps, and a cell cut in the rock. Below is a well, also bearing the saint's name, and still regarded with some degree of traditional reverence. A neighbouring promontory is called St. Govan's Head. St. Govan is said to be identical with Sir Gawaine, one of the heroes of the Arthurian romances, and nephew of the "flower of kings." The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, and in the patron. of Earl Cawdor. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

BOSLEY, or BOSLY, a chplry. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. palatine of Chester, 4 miles to the N.E. of Congleton. It lies on the border of Staffordshire, and is a station on the North Staffordshire railway. The river Dane, a feeder of the Mersey, flows by this place. Here is an extensive reservoir connected with the Macclesfield canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, of the val. of £110, in the patron. of the Vicar of Prestbury.

BOSMERE AND CLAYDON HUNDRED, one of the 21 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Suffolk, situated in the eastern div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hunds. of Hartismere and Thredling, on the E. by the hund. of Carlford, on the S. by the lib. of Ipswich, and the hund. of Samford, and on the W. by the hunds. of Cosford and Stow. It contains the following pars.:—Akenham, Ash Bocking, Badley, Barham, Barking, Battisford, Baylham, Great Blakenham, Little Blakenham, Great Bricett, Claydon, Coddenham, Creeting All Saints, Creeting St. Mary, Creeting St. Olave, Crowfield, Flowton, Gosbeck, Helmingham, Helmingstone, Henley, Mickfield, Nettlestead, Offton, Ringshall, Somersham, Stoneham Aspall, Earl Stoneham, Little Stoneham, Swilland, and Willisham, with parts of the pars. of Westerfield, Whitton, and Bramford. The small lake (mere) from which this hundred took its name is in the neighbourhood of Needham Market. The union of the two hunds. of Bosmere and Claydon took place in 1765. This hundred has been constituted a Poor-law Union; but the limits of the latter do not exactly coincide with those of the former. The Union house is at Barham. The hund. comprises an area of about 50,640 acres.

BOSMERE HUNDRED, one of the 4 hunds. in the Fareham div. of the co. of Southampton, situated in the southern div. of the co., and bounded by the hund. of Portsdown, the co. of Sussex, and the English Channel. The larger part of this hund. is an island. It comprises the pars. of North Hayling, South Hayling, and Warblington, and extends over an area of about 6,000 acres.

BOSSALL, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 10 miles to the N.E. of York. It is situated on the banks of the river Derwent, and contains the chplries. of Buttercrambe and Claxton, and the tnshps. of Bossall, Harton, Sand Hutton, and Flaxton. The vil. of Bossall was of greater extent formerly than it is now. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £445, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Durham. The church, a handsome building in the form of a cross, with a central tower, is dedicated to St. Botolph. In addition to the parish church there are two district churches recently erected, one at Flaxton, and the other in the tnshp. of Sand Hutton. The living of the former is of the val. of £250, and of the latter £200, both in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Durham. There are some small charitable endowments, producing about £4 a year.

BOSSINEY, a vil. in the par. of Tintagel, hund. of Lesnewth, in the co. of Cornwall, 4 miles to the N.W. of Camelford. It is situated in a wild and rocky country on the sea-coast, and was once a market town and parliamentary borough. It was made a free borough by Richard Earl of Cornwall, in the 13th century, and from the reign of Edward VI. returned two members to parliament, until the passing of the Reform Act, under which it was disfranchised. The borough was anciently designated the Borough of Bossiney, comprising the village of Trevena and a portion of the parish of Tintagel. There is a National school supported by subscription. On a bold and rugged slate rock, projecting into the sea, are the remains of the old castle called King Arthur's. It is a structure of very great antiquity, and occupies a position difficult of access. This parish abounds in hill scenery of the most striking and picturesque description. At Trethavy there is a very beautiful waterfall, called St. Knighton's Kieve. Bossiney Haven and Trebsiwith Strand are objects of great beauty and interest.

BOSSINGHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Upper Hardres, hund. and union of Bridge, and lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, 5 miles to the S. of Canterbury. There are traces of the Roman road from Canterbury, called Stone Street.

BOSSINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Lower Thorngate, Romsey div. of the co. of Southampton, 3 miles to the S. of Stockbridge, its post town, 10 W. of Winchester, and 3 N. of Dunbridge railway station. It is situated on the banks of the small river Anton, and is crossed by the Roman road to Winchester, on the line of which many gold and silver ornaments have been found. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Broughton, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a handsome structure, rebuilt in 1839, of flint and stone, in the early English style.

BOSSINGTON, a tythg. in the par. of Porlock, hund. of Carhampton, in the co. of Somerset, near Porlock. It is in a pleasant spot on the coast of Porlock Bay, in the Bristol Channel.

BOSTOCK, a tnshp. in the par. of Davenham, hund. of Northwich, in the co. palatine of Chester, 2 miles to the N.W. of Middlewich. The Grand Junction railway passes near it. Bostock Hall is the principal mansion.

BOSTON, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Dunse in the co. of Berwick, Scotland, not far from Dunse. The living is in the patron. of the subscribers.

BOSTON, a par., market town, seaport, and municipal and parliamentary borough, in the wap. of Skirbeck, parts of Holland, in the co. of Lincoln, 31 miles to the S.E. of Lincoln, and 107 miles to the N. of London by railway, or 116 miles by road. It is a station on the Great Northern railway, by which it is connected with Peterborough and the south and with the Midland Counties.—Boston is situated in the Fens, on the eastern coast, on both banks of the river Witham, which falls into the Wash about 5 miles below the town. The Witham rises in Rutlandshire, runs northward by Grantham to Lincoln, where the Foss-dyke, a great artificial cut or drain, meets it, and then crosses the county in a south-easterly direction to the sea. By means of the river, and various canals connected with it, Boston has water communication with London and the Midland Counties.—Nothing is certainly known of the origin of this town, but the late Mr. Fisher Tomlinson, in his valuable work published in 1856, has brought together many interesting circumstances connected with its early history. One fact ascertained is, that it existed at an early period called St. Botolph, or Botolph's Town. The conjecture seems not improbable that it was the site of a monastery, built, as the Saxon Chronicle relates, to St. Botolph, patron of sailors, about the middle of the 7th century. The monastery existed above two centuries, and was destroyed by the Danes about 870. Admitting that supposition, the present name Boston appears to be a corruption of the early Botolph's Town. It is a remarkable circumstance that no mention of the place occurs in Domesday Book. Little is heard of it during the century following the Conquest, but it was of importance is recorded in connection with the levying of the so-called "fifteenth," in 1204. This tax was charged on the fifteenth part of land and goods in seaports, and Boston was second only to London in the amount of its contribution—London paying £800, and Boston £780. Its commercial importance must at this time have been considerable. It had an annual fair too, which attracted merchants and dealers from distant places. Numerous religious houses were founded here in the 13th and 14th centuries: a Dominican friary, in 1220; a Carmelite friary, in 1301; an Augustine, by one of the Tylney family, in 1307; and a Franciscan by the "Easterlinges," or merchants of North Germany, in 1332. By the Statute of Staple, passed in 1369, Boston was made a staple town—i.e., one of the places which, by special appointment, the English merchants were to bring their lead, tin, wool, and native productions, for sale to the foreign traders. Many foreigners settled in the town, and its commercial prosperity was confirmed and promoted. Several guilds, or associations partly religious, partly mercantile, in their character existed in Boston at this period. They were those of St. Botolph, Corpus Christi, the Blessed Mary, SS. Peter and Paul, St. George, and the Holy Trinity. Nothing is known of their foundation. The Guild of St Mary is said to have been the most important. It had a private chapel in the church. In 1346 Boston contributed ships to the fleet sent by Edward III. to the Calais, after the battle of Crecy. Two centuries later when Leland saw and wrote of the town, its importance had greatly declined. Its decay was hastened by the general dissolution of the monasteries under Henry VIII., and its early greatness has not been regained. Boston sustained serious damage from a fire in 1281 and from a flood five years later. It was visited by a great storm in 1571, and shortly afterwards by the plague. The plague broke out here again in the first year of the reign of Charles I. During the Civil War, Boston took the popular side, and was made for a short time, in 1643, the headquarters of Cromwell's army. It was an important post, and was called by Fairfax the "Key of the Associated Counties," and by Clarendon, "a m malignant place." The fervour of its zeal for the liberal cause was also testified by its vicar, John Cotton, who, to escape the Laudian persecution, fled to America with many of his congregation, and founded Boston in New England. As a mark of gratitude and respect, from the new town to the old, the vestry room in St. Botolph's church was, in 1857, rebuilt by subscription of American citizens, and is called the Cotton Chapel, in memory of the banished vicar.—The town is built on both banks of the Witham, the course of which is here from north to south. On the east bank are the long street called Bargate, a spacious market-place, and several minor streets; on the west bank, the long street, nearly parallel with the river, called High-street. The two parts of the river are connected by a very elegant iron bridge, built in 1807, under the direction of Rennie, and consisting of a single arch, with a span of 86 feet. The roadway is nearly level. The work was done at the expense of the corporation, and cost £22,000. The streets are paved and lighted with gas. Formerly the inhabitants suffered from a defective and irregular supply of water, and various attempts were made from time to time at great expense to remedy the evil, but without success. In 1847, however, an Act of Parliament was passed, under which effectual measures have been adopted, and a good supply of water secured. The town contains a market-house, with assembly-rooms, a custom-house, a new court-house erected about 1843, a guildhall, corn exchange, and county prison, and the union poorhouse. The guildhall is old, and contains a portrait of Sir Joseph Banks, who once held the office of recorder of Boston. — Boston was made a free borough by a charter granted by Henry VIII.; and at the dissolution of monasteries, the fees and possessions of the various religious houses and guilds existing there were given to the corporation. Its endowments were increased by a grant from Philip and Mary. Queen Elizabeth confirmed the charter of incorporation, and added to it a charter of admiralty. Under the Municipal Reform Act the borough is divided into two wards, and is governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, with the style of the "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Boston." The elective franchise was first conferred by Edward VI., and the borough has since returned two members to parliament. The bounds of the parliamentary borough were extended under the Reform Act, and include, besides the parish, which comprises an area of 5,220 acres, Skirbeck, Skirbeck Quarter, and the Fen Allotment to Boston. The mayor is the returning officer, and also admiral of the port. The revenue of the borough is about £5,400, and the area of the parliamentary borough, which is more extensive than the municipal, is 7,800 acres, comprising 3,89 inhabited houses, with a population of 17,885; while the municipal borough contains only 3,267 inhabited houses, with a population of 13,995, having declined from 14,7 in 1851, while the parliamentary has increased 367 in the same period.—The business of the town is dependent chiefly on the port and shipping. The harbour is approached by a channel along the west side of the Wash, called Boston Deeps, between the great sandy shoals which cover a great part of that inlet. A corresponding channel on the east side is named Lynn Deeps, and forms the approach to Lynn harbour. The intervening shoals are called the Long Sand, Dog's Head, Roger Knock, and Lynn Knock. In the middle of last century the river and harbour had from various causes become choked up with accumulations of silt, and inaccessible except to small vessels. The drainage works in the fens, and the diversion of the waters from the Witham, is said to have been one cause of this. By great and persevering efforts the state of the river was improved, and vessels of 300 tons burthen can now reach the town. The trade of the port has again become considerable, partly in consequence of the reclamation of a large tract of fen land in the neighbourhood of the town. Large quantities of corn, especially oats, and great numbers of cattle and sheep, pastured on the new enclosed lands, are here shipped for various places. The number of vessels belonging to the port are about 710, mostly of small tonnage. They are principally employed in the coasting trade. The exports are grain, wool, wood, &c. The imports are oilcake, hemp, timber, coal, tar, &c. Most of the foreign trade is with the Baltic. Subordinate to Boston are the ports of Saltfleet, Spalding, and Wainfleet. Many boats are employed in the fishery.—Shipbuilding is carried on in three yards, and there are various manufactures connected with the shipping trade, as those of sailcloth, sacking, canvas, ropes, &c. There are three iron-foundries and several breweries and malthouses. Many of the inhabitants are occupied as graziers; and there are at Wide Bargate and other parts of the town suitable spaces, with pens, &c., for the cattle and sheep, which are sold in large numbers here.—Boston is the head of a Poor-law Union and also of a County Court district. It is also a polling place for the south division of the county. Quarter and petty sessions are held in the town.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £360, in the patron. of the trustees of H. Ingram, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Botolph. It is the most noteworthy object and the chief ornament of the town. In size it is not equalled by any church without transepts in England, and its tower is one of the loftiest in the kingdom. Its foundation is assigned to the year 1309, and its style of architecture is the decorated English. It consists of a nave, two side aisles, and a chancel. The nave is separated from each aisle by seven arches, above each of which are two clerestory windows. The south porch is the principal entrance. The tower, which is said to have been modelled after that of the great church at Antwerp, is in three storeys, and is crowned with an octagonal lantern of exquisite design and workmanship. The height of this magnificent tower is about 270 feet. It is an important sea mark, being visible to a distance of 40 miles, and a conspicuous object over a large extent of the surrounding flat country. It can be seen in clear weather across the Wash from the Norfolk coast. The foundations of this fine structure are known to extend beneath the river, and its masonry is perfect. The dimensions of the church are—length, 245 feet; breadth, 98; height of the nave, 60 feet. The ceiling is of oak, and in the chancel are stalls curiously carved. There are an ancient font, four monumental brasses (one of which is canopied and bears the date of 1398), and some monuments of the Tylneys, by one of whom the first stone of the building was laid. A white marble statue of the late Mr. Herbert Ingram, a native of Boston, and one of its representatives in Parliament, designed and executed by Munro, was erected in the churchyard in October, 1862, in mournful commemoration of his public character, his local munificence, and his disastrous death. In a room over the south porch is the parish library, founded by Anthony Tuckney, and containing some scarce theological works. The church has not long ago been thoroughly repaired. A more ancient church, of which no traces are left except the graveyard attached to it, formerly existed here. It was built before the close of the 11th century, and was dedicated to St. John. A chapel of ease was erected in 1822. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £100, in the patron. of the trustees of the Rev. P. Alpe. The Roman Catholics, Baptists, Independents, Unitarians, and Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists have chapels in the town. The charitable endowments of the parish are numerous and valuable, producing altogether about £2,500 per annum. The free grammar school, founded in 1554, after temporary decline is now, under a new scheme, flourishing again. The school-house stands in the old mart-yard. There is a boy's free school founded in 1707, and endowed by Mr. Laughton and others, which has a revenue of £130 per annum. A blue-coat school for boys and girls (33 of each) was established in 1713, and has an income from endowment of £65 a year. There are also large National, British, infant, and other schools; a dispensary, and various other charitable institutions. The town contains a working men's college, two libraries, and a savings-bank. In the vicinity are some remains of its ancient monasteries, colleges, and castle, the latter of which was founded about 1220 by Ranulph Earl of Richmond. Near the town is Kyme Tower, sometimes called Richmond and Rochford Tower, which was surrounded by a moat, and approached by a fine avenue, long perished. It now belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The Hussey Tower, part of an ancient seat of Lord Hussey, stands in the town.—Boston was the birthplace (1517) of John Fox, author of the famous "Book of Martyrs;" and of Boston, the bibliographer. Stukeley, the antiquary, received his early education at the grammar school here. Boston gives the title of viscount to the Irby family. And last, not least, it has given its name to the literary metropolis of the United States.—Three newspapers are published in the town—the Lincolnshire Herald, the Lincolnshire Guardian, and the Boston Gazette. The market is held on Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the 4th May, the 11th August, the 30th November and three following days, and the 11th December. They are chiefly for the sale of cattle, sheep, and horses.

BOSTON, or THORPE ARCH, a tnshp. joined with Clifford, in the par. of Bramham, wap. of Barkstone Ash, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the S.E. of Wetherby. It is a station on the Harrogate branch of the North-Eastern railway. The village, which was founded in 1753, in consequence of the discovery of a mineral spring in the neighbourhood, is seated in a beautiful spot in the valley of the Wharfe, and has become an attractive watering-place. The spring rises at the foot of a rock, on the south bank of the river, which here runs rapidly, and has a picturesque fall. A pump-room and baths have been established. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £146, in the patron. of the Vicar of Bramham. Besides the Episcopal church, built in 1814, there is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyans. There is a small free school.

BOSWELL'S, ST., or LESSUDDEN, a par. and vil. in the district of Castleton-Melrose, in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland, 3 miles to the S.E. of Melrose. It is situated in a fertile and cultivated district at the foot of the Eildon Hills, on the south bank of the river Tweed, where the Boswell Burn falls into it. The Hawick branch of the North British railway passes near this place. The village of Lessudden is included in this parish. The scenery of the surrounding country is remarkably picturesque and beautiful. The living, val. £212, is in the presb. of Selkirk, in the patron. of the Duke of Buccleuch. There is also a Free church. The kirk was founded by St. Boisil, a disciple of St. Cuthbert, and a monk of Melrose, of whose name that of the parish is a corruption. An annual fair (the greatest in the south of Scotland) for cattle, sheep, horses, wool, &c., is held here on the 18th July, which is made an occasion of much rustic festivity; many gipsy tinkers resort to it.

BOSWIDDY, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Erth, hund. of Penwith, in the co. of Cornwall, 7 miles to the N.E. of Penzance. It is situated on the river Hayle, near its mouth.

BOSWORTH, HUSBAND'S, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, in the co. of Leicester, 2 miles to the N.W. of Welford, 6½ S.W. of Market Harborough, and 12 N.E. of Rugby, being 1½ mile equidistant from Welford and Theddingworth stations on the Rugby and Stamford branch railway. It lies on the borders of Northamptonshire, on the banks of the rivers Welland and Avon, and is crossed by the Grand Union canal, which is here carried through a tunnel nearly three-quarters of a mile long. The village is large and well-built, and in the neighbourhood are several brickfields. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the yearly val. of £966, in the patron. of G. Lamb, Esq. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient building in the early English style, with a square embattled tower, surmounted by pinnacles at the angles, and crowned by a lofty octagonal spire, with five bells. During a storm in the summer of 1755, the church was struck by lightning, and a breach above 30 feet long was made in the wall. The Baptists and Wesleyans have chapels in the village. There is a National school with a small endowment, and the charities amount to about £32 per annum. The poor rent 21 acres in garden allotments. The rectory of this parish was once held by Henry Spencer, afterwards Bishop of Norwich. He lived in the reign of Richard II., and distinguished himself by his military zeal in checking and executing the insurgent followers of Wat Tyler. A fair for horses and cattle is held on the 10th October, and a statute fair for hiring servants in March and September. The principal residence is Bosworth Hall, an ancient mansion, standing in an extensive well-wooded park, and contains a Roman Catholic chapel for the use of the family and inhabitants. It is at present the seat of G. F. Turville, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

BOSWORTH, MARKET, a par. and market town in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, in the co. of Leicester, 10 miles to the W. of Leicester, and 106 miles from London. The Leicester and Swannington branch of the Midland railway passes within a few miles of the town, and has a station at Desford, which is 6 miles E. The Ashby canal, connecting the Coventry and Grand Junction canals, is within a mile to the west of the town. The parish is situated in a fertile and pleasant district, and contains the chplries. of Carlton, Shenton, Barleston, and Sutton-Cheney, and parts of the tnshps. of Bosworth-in-the-Beans, and Osbaston.—This town has given name to the great and decisive battle which finally closed the wars of the Roses. It was fought between Richard III. and Henry Earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII., on the 22nd of August, 1485. The scene of the conflict—which was sharp and bloody, terminating in the death of Richard and the crowning of his rival on the field by Lord Stanley—is a fine plain to the south of the town. It was formerly called Redmore, and was open and uncultivated. It has since been named Bosworth Field, and is now enclosed and partly planted. Fragments of weapons, swords, lances, axes, &c., have frequently been found. A monument, bearing a suitable inscription, written by Dr. Parr, was erected on the field, about 1812. It stands over what is traditionally called Richard's Well. Crown Hill, in Stoke Golding, is pointed out as the spot where Richmond was crowned and proclaimed king.—The town is built upon a hill, and contains some good residences. Some of the workpeople are employed in the making of worsted stockings, but the chief support of the town is agriculture. Bosworth is the seat of a Poor-law Union and a County Court district, and contains the Union poorhouse.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val., with the several curs. of Carlton, Shenton, Barleston, and Sutton-Cheney, which are annexed to it, of £903, in the patron. of Sir A. H. Dixie, Bart. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a spacious and beautiful structure in the perpendicular style of architecture, with a tower and lofty spire. It was probably erected in the 14th century, and contains several monuments; the most remarkable is one in the chancel to the Rev. John Dixie, a former rector. The church has been recently restored, and has some painted windows by Messrs. Oliphant and Selwyn Evans. The chancel was restored in 1855, at the cost of £500, by the present rector. The Independents, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists have chapels in the town. Here is a free grammar school, founded and endowed in 1593 by Sir Wolstan Dixie, Knt., Lord Mayor of London, with two fellowships and four scholarships at Emmanuel College, Cambridge. For some time the school was suspended, and its affairs were in the Court of Chancery. The funds of the charity having accumulated, new buildings were erected about 1827, and more recently four new exhibitions of £80 per annum have been founded. The produce of the endowment is about £700 per annum. There are several other charities, the principal of which is an endowment by Ferrand Spencer for six widows.—This town was the birthplace of Thomas Simpson, the mathematician, a self-taught man, who was afterwards Professor of Mathematics at Woolwich, and died in 1761. Samuel Johnson was usher in the Bosworth grammar school for a short time while Anthony Blackwall was master. Among its pupils have been Richard Dawes, the philologist, and Salt, the African traveller. Bosworth Hall, pleasantly situated near the town, is a fine old seat of the time of Queen Anne. It is the residence of Sir A. B. C. Dixie, Bart., to whom the manor belongs.—Wednesday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 8th May and the 10th July, chiefly for cattle. The latter is called the Cherry Fair.

BOTANY BAY, a hmlt. in the par. of Enfield, hund. of Edmonton, in the co. of Middlesex, 3 miles to the N.E. of Chipping Barnet.

BOTARIE, a par. in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 4 miles from Huntly. It is now joined to the par. of Cairnie.

BOTCHERBY, and BOTCHERGATE, tnshps. in the city of Carlisle, locally in Cumberland ward, in the co. of Cumberland

BOTCHESTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Ratby, and hund. of Sparkenhoe, in the co. of Leicester, 5 miles to the E. of Market Bosworth.

BOTEGWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Abergele, hund. of Isdulas, in the co. of Denbigh, not far from Abergele.

BOTESDALE, a tnshp. and hmlt. in the par. of Redgrave and hund. of Hartismere, in the co. of Suffolk, 4½ miles W. of Millis railway station, 6 miles S.W. of Diss, in Norfolk, and 8 miles to the W. of Eye, being 87 from London. It is situated 2 miles south of the river Waveney, not far from the Great Eastern railway. The name of this place is a corruption of Botolph's Dale. It was formerly a market town, and is a polling place for the western division of the county. The living is a rect., annexed to Redgrave, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, which is dedicated to St. Botolph, is in the perpendicular style of architecture. Here is a grammar school, founded by Sir Nicholas Bacon in 1576, with an exhibition at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. It was designed to educate six free scholars, two each from the parishes of Redgrave, Botesdale, and Burgate; for which the master receives £30 per annum, which is a rent-charge on certain lands in Norfolk, together with a residence for him is attached a chapel extra parochial, where Divine service is performed on Sunday evenings. A free school was established in 1825 by John Dyer, and endowed by him with lands worth £30 a year. A fair is held on Holy Thursday for cattle and toys, and a statute fair on the Thursday before Michaelmas for hiring servants. The Riches of Rickinghall Inferior and Superior are situate near the town.

BOTHAL, a par. in the eastern div. of Morpeth ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 3 miles to the E. of Morpeth, and 2½ N. of Longhirst station, on the North-Eastern railway. It is situated in a hilly and picturesque country, not far from the sea-coast, on the north bank of the river Wansbeck, and contains the tnshps. of Angerton-with-Sheepwash, Longhirst, Bothal Demesne, Mill Moor, and Pegsworth. Bothal was the site of a castle, rebuilt in the reign of Edward III. by Robert Bertram, at that time governor of Newcastle, who distinguished himself against the Scots, and in the battle near Durham captured William Douglas. From the Bertrams the barony passed by marriage to the Ogles and the Cavendishes, and is now held by the Duke of Portland, who is lord of the barony and chief landowner. The district contains abundance of coal. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Durham, of the val., with the perpet. currs. of Sheepwash and Hebburn annexed to it, of £1.3[illegible], in the patron. of the Duke of Portland. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. In the chancel is a remarkably fine monument of alabaster to one of the Ogle family and his spouse, with recumbent effigies and other figures. There is a chapel of ease at Hebburn, and five schools for boys and girls within the parish, besides three Sunday-schools. There is a small free school at Causey Park, founded by the Ogles in 1740, which has an endowment of £15 a year. The other parochial charities, including a bequest for education, are worth about £10 a year. The ruins of the castle, consisting of the keep and a portion of the walls, stand on a rock in the valley of the Wansbeck, surrounded by rising grounds covered with woods. Cockle Park Tower, situated near the river, was the seat of the Bertrams and the Ogles. Near the village of Bothal are some remains of a Lady-chapel. The par. comprises an area of 7,593 acres, the sole property of the Duke of Portland. At Bothal Demesne is a considerable colliery.

BOTHAMSALL, a par. in the Hatfield div. of the hund. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 6 miles to the W. of Tuxford railway station, and 7 S.W. from Retford. Ollerton is its post town. It lies on the banks of the small rivers Poulter and Meden, branches of the Idle, not far from the Great Northern railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £52, in the patron. of the Duke of Newcastle, who is also lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1845. There are some charities of small value. Near the village is a barrow called Castle Hill.

BOTHEL, a tnshp. joined with Threapland, in the par. of Torpenhow, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 8 miles to the E. of Maryport. There is much limestone in the neighbourhood.

BOTHENHAMPTON, a par. in the lib. of Lothers and Bothenhampton, Bridport div. of the co. of Dorset, near Bridport. It is situated on the east shore of Bridport harbour. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £46, in the patron. of Sir M. H. Nepean, Bart. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity.

BOTH-HERGESTS, a tnshp. in the par. of Kington, hund. of Huntington, in the co. of Hereford, 2 miles from Kington.

BOTH KENNAR, a par. in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, 4 miles to the N. of Falkirk. It is situated in a level and cultivated country on the south bank of the Forth, and contains part of the vil. of Carronshore. The living, of the val. of £202, is in the presb. of Stirling, and in the patron. of J. Dallas, Esq.

BOTHWELL, a par. in Middle ward, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 9 miles to the S.E. of Glasgow. It is situated on the north bank of the river Clyde, where the South Calder meets it, and contains the vils. of Bothwell, Bellshill, Chapelhill, Holytown, Newarthill, and Uddingstone, comprising altogether a population of 17,898, according to the census of 1861. The Caledonian railway crosses the parish, and there are stations at Holytown and Uddingstone.—Bothwell is one of the most ancient baronies in Scotland, and has been held by several families, who have obtained a name in history, as the Murrays, Hepburns, Douglases, Stewarts, &c. The neighbourhood is rich in associations of the past. Here stood one of the most important fortresses in Scotland, founded at a very remote period, and early made the head of a barony. The castle fell into the hands of Edward I., in 1301, but he did not hold it long. In 1336 Edward III. took up his quarters there for a short time. The magnificent ruins of this castle, which was an immense quadrangular pile, flanked by two great circular towers, are situated on a hill rising from the Clyde, presenting a grand front to the south. The river curves pleasantly round the foot of the hill, and on the opposite (south) bank are the picturesque remains of the small priory of Blantyre. The banks of the river are wooded, and the scenery is striking and beautiful. How a poet is touched by the solemn visions of the past and the glorious beauty of the present, blended in this scene, Wordsworth has told us in one of his sonnets, and better still in the eloquent note appended to it. "Bothwell Banks" are the theme of a favourite Scottish song. Bothwell Bridge was the scene of the defeat of the Covenanters by the Duke of Monmouth, in June, 1679, about three weeks after their victory over Claverhouse at Drumclog. The bridge was at that time very narrow, and had a gateway at one end. It has been widened from 12 feet, the original breadth of the roadway, to 34 feet, and the gateway no longer exists. Near Bothwell Haugh, once the estate of Hamilton, the assassin of the Regent Murray, is another bridge of great antiquity, over the South Calder; it is generally considered a Roman work. Watling Street passed near this place.—The parish contains some valuable coal-fields and beds of ironstone. Freestone and millstone are found in abundance. Two-thirds of the inhabitants are employed in the coal and iron works, and the freestone quarries. The land is fertile and well cultivated, and the air is remarkably healthy.—The living, of the val. of £283, is in the presb. of Hamilton, and in the patron. of the Duke of Hamilton. The old parish church, not used since 1828, was erected about 1400, and was formerly the choir of the collegiate church of Bothwell. It is a Gothic building, with a lofty arched roof, covered with large slabs of stone. The new church, also Gothic, is attached to the ancient one, and has an elegant tower. It was completed in 1833. There is also a chapel of ease at Holytown; a Free church at Bothwell, and another at Holytown; four United Presbyterian churches at Bothwell, Uddingstone, Bellshill, and Newarthill; and two Congregational chapels at the two latter places. In 1825 an institution was founded at Orbiston, near Bellshill, for carrying out the theory of Robert Owen. The experiment was a failure, and the buildings having been taken down, the people called the place "Babylon."—The principal seats in the par. are Bothwell Castle, a modern mansion, the residence of the Earl of Home; Douglas Park, Woodhall, Cairnbroe, Cleland, &c. Bothwell was the birthplace of William Aiton, the botanist, author of "Hortus Kewensis," and Joanna Baillie, the poetess, whose father was minister of the parish. Bothwell par. is very extensive, stretching in extreme length 9 miles by 4 broad, and comprising 10,814 Scotch acres, or 13,600 imperial acres.

BOTLEY, a tythg. and hmlt. partly in the par. of Cumner, partly in that of North Hinksey, hund. of Hormer, in the co. of Berks, 1 mile from Oxford, and 5¾ miles N.W. of Abingdon, on the western bank of the Thames.

BOTLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Chesham, and hund. of Burnham, in the co. of Buckingham. It is a long straggling village, situate on a hill, and commences on the verge of the town of Chesham, extending for near 2 miles along the road to Hemel-Hempstead. There is a Baptist chapel.

BOTLEY, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Ullenhall, and par. of Wootton-Wawen, hund. of Barlichway, in the co. of Warwick, 1 mile from Henley-in-Arden.

BOTLEY, a par. and small market town, in the hund. of Upper Mainsbridge, Southampton div. of the co. of Southampton, 4 miles to the S.W. of Bishop's Waltham, 10 from Gosport, and 6 from Southampton, its post town. It is situated on the small river Hamble, and is about half a mile from the station on the Southampton railway. The Hamble falls into Southampton Water, and is navigable to this village for boats. There are several corn-mills on the river, and a good trade is carried on in flour and timber. In 1848 a market-house was built here at the cost of £650. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £399, in the patron. of H. Lee, Esq. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a plain edifice of brick, with a good tower. It was built in 1836, and was enlarged in 1859, when a chancel was added. It contains sittings for about 420, and has a curious old font. There are chapels belonging to the Independents and Baptists, and a commodious National school erected in 1856. In 1794 the forces commanded by the Earl of Moira encamped on the hills near Botley, previous to their embarkation for Ostend. On the same ground part of the army under Sir Ralph Abercrombie encamped, in 1800, before sailing for Egypt. The principal seats are Botley Grange and Botley Hill. Neither of these are in the parish of Botley, though close to the village. William Cobbett for long resided at a farm in this village. A market for corn, cattle, &c., is held on Monday, once a fortnight, but the fairs are now discontinued.

BOTLEYS, a vil. in the par. of Chertsey, second div. of the hund. of Godley, in the co. of Surrey, 2 miles the S.W. of Chertsey. The living is a perpet. cu[r]. the dioc. of Winchester, val. £100, in the patron. of bishop. The principal seat is Botleys Park.

BOTLOE HUNDRED, one of the 27 hunds. or divisions of the co. of Gloucester, situated in the w[est] div. of the co., and bounded on the N. and W the cos. of Hereford and Worcester, on the E. by hunds. of Dearhurst, and Dudstone and King's [Bar]ton, and on the S. by the Duchy of Lancaster. It comprises the pars. of Bromsberrow, Dymock, Ke[ss], Newent, Oxenhall, Pauntley, Taynton, Upleadon, part of Rudford. The hund. extends over an a[rea] about 25,300 acres.

BOTOLPH-BRIDGE, a par. joined with Orton L[on]ville, in the hund. of Norman Cross, in the co. of [Hun]ingdon, 2 miles to the S.W. of Peterborough. [Its] town. It lies near the river Nen, and the Great N[or]th and London and North-Western railways. The [liv]ing is a rect.* united with that of Orton Longvill[e], dioc. of Ely. The church, dedicated to All S[ain]ts, decayed.

BOTOLPH-CLAYDON, or BOTTLE-CLAY[DON], a hmlt. in the par. of East Claydon, hund. of [Ave]don, in the co. of Buckingham, 3 miles to the S.W. Winslow.

BOTOLPH'S. See BUTTOLPHS, Sussex.

BOTOLPH, ST., WITHOUT-ALDGATE, a [dis]t. SMITHFIELD, a lib. in the Tower div. of the [hund.] Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, 1 mile to the [W.] St. Paul's. It is the site of the Royal Mint, and [con]tains part of St. Katherine's Docks.

BOTREAL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfair [Dy]hunds. of Isaled and Isdulas, in the co. of [Den]bigh, North Wales, 4 miles to the S. of Abergele.

BOTRIPHINIE, a par. in the co. of Banff, Scotland. It is situated in the wooded valley of the Isla [wa]ter stone is abundant in the neighbourhood. The [liv]ing, worth £179, is in the presb. of Strathbogie, and [is a] patron. of the Earl of Fife. The church is [situ]miles S.W. of Keith. There is also a Free [Church] fair is held at Botriphinie on the 15th of Febru[ary] style). The par. extends about 3 miles in length [and] in breadth.

BOTTEGIR-BACH, an ext. par. district in the [par.] of Edernion, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales miles to the N.W. of Corwen.

BOTTESFORD, or BOTSWORTH, a par. in hund. of Framland, in the co. of Leicester, 7 miles to W. of Grantham, and 15 N. of Melton Mowbray lies at the north extremity of the county, on the of Nottinghamshire and Lincolnshire, on the [bank] the river Devon, and is a station on the Grant[ham] Nottingham branch of the Great Northern [Rail]Easthorpe and Normanton are hmlts. of this par. the Norman Conquest it was granted with other ships to Robert de Todeni, and passed subsequen the Manners family. The manor is now held Duke of Rutland. The village is situated in the Belvoir, and is composed of three streets—High Church-street, and Queen-street. The living is in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the annual val. of in the patron. of the Duke of Rutland. The chur dedicated to St. Mary. It is a spacious buildi form of a cross, with a western tower and lofty spire, rising 220 feet from the ground, and has cently repaired. It contains many monuments Manners family, whose burial-place it has been the dissolution of monasteries by Henry VIII. completion of the mausoleum at Belvoir Castle Some of the monuments were transferred from Priory to this church. Here are also two brass earliest being of a priest, who died in 1404. The chapels belonging to the Baptists, Independents, leyans, and Primitive Methodists, and a free founded in 1711, with an endowment of about year. Almshouses for 18 poor men were founded by the Earl of Rutland, which have now a rent £450. Almshouses for poor widows were erected 1832 by Samuel Fleming, the income of which is about £13 per annum. There are several other endowments for the benefit of the poor. The Grantham canal passes through Bottesford parish, about a mile south of the village. A National school has recently been erected at the cost of £800, collected by voluntary subscription.

BOTTESFORD, a par. in the eastern div. of the wapentake of Manley, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 7 miles to the W. of Brigg. It contains the tnshps. of Ashby and Burringham, and the hmlts. of Holme and Yadlethorpe. The living is a vic., united with that of Messingham, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

BOTTESLOW, or BOTTESLAW, a tnshp. in the par. of Stoke-upon-Trent, hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, not far from Newcastle-under-Lyne. The North Staffordshire railway runs near it.

BOTTISHAM, a par. in the hund. of Staine, in the co. of Cambridge, 6 miles to the E. of Cambridge, and 3 from the Six-Mile Bottom railway station. Cambridge is its post town. It includes the hmlts. of Bottisham-Lode and Longmeadow. In the former was a priory of Canons Regular, of the order of St. Augustine, founded by Richard de Clare, in an island called Anglesea, or Anglesey-in-the-Fens, hence the priory received the name of Anglesey Abbey. It was valued at its dissolution, according to Speed, at £149 18*s.* 6½*d.*, but according to Dugdale at £24 19*s.* The present remains of the old structure are a vaulted room and graduated corbel-table; but in connection with these a new building was subsequently erected, which has been converted by the present owner into a handsome family mansion. In 1712 a fire broke out and partly destroyed the village, and again on Feb. 7, 1846, it was much injured by an incendiary fire. An ornamental police station has recently been erected, at which petty sessions are held every alternate Wednesday. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £268, in the gift of the Master and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, a noble early English structure, is dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and contains several interesting monuments—one to Elias de Bekingham, justiciary of England in the reign of Edward I.; one to Sir Roger Jenyns, who died in 1740; and one by Bacon, to Soame Jenyns, who died in 1787. The register dates from 1563. At Bottisham-Lode, a chapel of ease dedicated to St. James, was built and consecrated in 1848, to which the Ecclesiastical Commissioners have been requested to assign a district, to embrace the hmlts. of Bottisham-Lode and Long Meadow. There is a small Independent meeting-house at Bottisham, and one of Baptists at Bottisham-Lode. In 1839, National and infant schools were built, to which a master's house was added in 1846; similar schools have recently been built at Bottisham-Lode. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £200 per annum, including the endowment of a green-coat school, founded by Sir Roger Jenyns, and a bequest of £120 per annum by a former vicar, to be distributed by the vicar for the time being. There is also a large tract of free land, producing turf and grass.

BOTTLE-BRIDGE. See BOTOLPH-BRIDGE, Huntingdonshire.

BOTTLE-CLAYDON. See BOTOLPH-CLAYDON, Buckinghamshire.

BOTTLE-END, a vil. in the par. of Great Stanway, in the hund. and union of Lexden, in the co. of Essex, 2½ miles S.E. of Great Stanway, 3 W. of Colchester, and 3 E. of the Mark's Tey station on the Great Eastern railway. Here was erected in 1845 a district church, dedicated to All Saints, at the cost of £3,000. It is a handsome structure, with a low tower, crowned by a spire. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, and in the patron. of the bishop. The district was formed out of the pars. of Lexden and Great Stanway.

BOTTOMS, a hmlt. in the par. of Blidworth, wap. of Thurgarton, in the co. of Nottingham, 5 miles to the S.E. of Mansfield.

BOTTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Melling, and hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, in the co. of Lancaster, 10 miles N.E. of Lancaster. It is situated near the river Hindburn and the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the silk-mills and nail manufacture.

BOTTWNOG, a par. in the hund. of Gafflogian, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 5 miles to the S. of Nevin. Pwllheli is its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Meylltyrn, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Beuno. Here is a free grammar school, founded and endowed by Bishop Rowland, which has a revenue of £206 per annum. There are other charitable endowments worth about £6 a year.

BOTUS-FLEMING, a par. in the south div. of East hund. in the co. of Cornwall, 3 miles to the N.W. of Saltash, its post town. It is situated near the river Tamar. It took the addition to its name from the Fleming family of Stoke-Fleming, who once held it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £250. The parochial charities amount to £3 a year. The principal mansion is Moditonham House, the seat of the Carpenters. It was rebuilt in 1730, and stands in pleasant grounds, commanding good views over the country and the Tamar.

BOTWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Hayes, hund. of Elthorne, in the co. of Middlesex, 4 miles to the S.E. of Uxbridge. It is near the Great Western railway, which has a station at Southall. The Paddington canal passes through this portion of the parish, and diverges at this point from the Grand Junction.

BOUGHROOD, or BACHRHYD, a par. in the hund. of Painscastle, in the co. of Radnor, South Wales, 6 miles to the W. of Hay, its post town. It is situated in a hilly, wooded, and beautiful country, on the east bank of the river Wye, at the "little ford" (bach-rhyd). The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £213, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Cynog. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel in the village. The parish has a share in the Boughrood charity, founded about 1687 by Rees Powel, vicar. The chief residence is Boughrood Castle, a modern house, on the site of a castle, the moat of which still remains.

BOUGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Diddington, hund. of Toseland, in the co. of Huntingdon, 3 miles to the N. of St. Neot's. It is on the west bank of the river Ouse. The Great Northern railway passes near Boughton.

BOUGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Asgarby, and wap. of Aswardhurn, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the E. of Sleaford. It is near the Boston and Grantham branch of the Great Northern railway.

BOUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, in the co. of Norfolk, 1 mile N. of Stoke Ferry, its post town, and 5 miles to the E. of Downham Market, its railway station. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £400, in the patron. of Sir J. W. B. Folkes, Bart. The church is dedicated to All Saints. Its tower was erected about the year 1416. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel, and there is a Sunday-school. The parish contains a large pool of clear water in the centre of the village.

BOUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Spelhoe, in the co. of Northampton, 3 miles to the N. of Northampton, its post town. The Northampton, Market Harborough, and Stamford branch of the London and North-Western railway passes near it. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £296, in the patron. of R. W. H. Vyse, Esq., M.P. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is now out of use; but there is a chapel near it, which has recently been much enlarged and re-decorated. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village. Boughton House was formerly the seat of the Earls of Strafford. A fair is held annually at Boughton Green, commencing on the 23rd June (St. John's Eve), and lasting till the 26th.

BOUGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Weekley, hund. of Corby, in the co. of Northampton, 3 miles to the N.E. of Kettering. Boughton Park is the seat of the Duke of Buccleuch. The mansion was originally erected by Ralph Duke of Montague, and was surrounded by grounds and gardens of immense extent, and adorned in the most costly style. In 1695 the duke entertained here King William III. and his whole court. The house was partly rebuilt by John, the second duke. It has a large collection of paintings, the most valuable of which are two of Raffaelle's cartoons, "Ezekiel's Vision," and a "Holy Family." There are portraits of Edward VI., and Thomas Wentworth, Earl of Strafford.

BOUGHTON, a par. in the Hatfield div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 2 miles to the N.E. of Ollerton, its post town. Hops are cultivated here. The living is a perpet. cur. attached to the vic. of Kneesall, in the dioc. of Lincoln.

BOUGHTON, a vil. in the par. of St. John Bedwardine, and hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 2 miles from Worcester. Boughton House is the principal residence.

BOUGHTON ALUPH, a par. in the hund. of Wye, lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 4 miles to the N.E. of Ashford, its post town. It is situated on the west bank of the river Stour. The South-Eastern railway runs through the parish. Part of the land is laid out in hop-grounds. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £216, in the patron. of the trustees of Dr. Breton. The church is a large ancient building of flint and ashlar, in the form of a cross, with a low tower at the centre. It is dedicated to All Saints, and has some remains of ancient stained windows, a piscina, and several monuments. In this parish are the manors of Seaton and Wilmington, which were anciently held by tenures of a singular character:—the former, by the service of following the king when he went to Gascony, leading a leash of hounds till shoes, worth a groat, were worn out; the latter, by the service of providing a pothook for the king's meat. The charitable endowments of the parish produce £8 a year. A pleasure fair is held at Lees on the 24th June.

BOUGHTON, GREAT, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Oswald, Chester, locally in the hund. of Broxton, in the co. palatine of Chester, in the east suburbs of the city. It is situated on the river Dee, and is crossed by the Chester and Crewe railway. It contains many good houses, and has a National school. Boughton Hall is the seat of Dr. Currie. Great Boughton is the head of a Poor-law Union, which includes several parishes in Flintshire.

BOUGHTON MALHERB, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 10 miles to the S.E. of Maidstone, its post town. It lies on the north confines of the Weald of Kent, and is intersected by a ridge of hills commanding extensive views. The par. contains some hop-grounds. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £176, in the patron. of the heirs of Earl Cornwallis. The church, which stands on the summit of the hill, is dedicated to St. Nicholas, and contains three monumental brasses, the earliest being of the year 1490, and fine monuments to the Wottons, especially to Sir Thomas and Sir Edward Wotton. The charitable endowments of the parish are worth £8 a year. The manor of Boughton Malherb, formerly belonging to the Stanhopes and Wottons, is now held by the heirs of Earl Cornwallis. Remains of the ancient mansion built by Sir Edward Wotton, and visited by Queen Elizabeth about 1573, still exist, and are converted into farm buildings. This house was the birthplace of Sir Henry Wotton, the distinguished diplomatist of the reign of James I., and the subject of one of Izaak Walton's delightful biographies. In this parish are the ruins of Collridge Castle, the ancient seat of the Peyforers; and near them is Chilstone House, which was built of the materials of the old castle.

BOUGHTON MONCHELSEA, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles to the S.E. of Maidstone, its post town. It lies on the north border of the Weald. Ragstone is quarried on the hills which cross the parish, and hops are grown. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £395, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Rochester. The church is dedi... St. Peter, and is a neat modern structure, built in ... to replace the old one, which was destroyed ... There are charitable endowments producing £2... annum. The principal residence is Boughton P... which stands in a well-wooded park, it is at pr... occupied by T. Rider, Esq., who is lord of the ma...

BOUGHTON SPITTLE, or SPITAL, an ... lib. in the city of Chester, locally in the par. of St. ... and hund. of Broxton, in the co. palatine of Ches...

BOUGHTON-UNDER-BLEAN, a par. in the ... of Boughton-under-Blean, lathe of Scray, in the ... Kent, 3 miles to the S.E. of Faversham, its post ... and 7 W. of Canterbury. The London, Chatha... Dover railway passes near it. The village is near ... Forest, once the haunt of wild beasts, and Bough... the view from which is considered one of the fin... land. There are hop-grounds in the parish. Th... is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. ... in the patron. of the archbishop. The churc... cated to SS. Peter and Paul, and stands about ... from the village. It has two chantries attached ... contains some brasses and family monuments. Th... had a spire till about 1600, when it fell down. ... Wesleyans have a chapel in the village, which w... in 1844, and has a spire. The parochial charity ... worth about £70 per annum.

BOUGHTON-UNDER-BLEAN HUNDRED, ... of the 17 hunds. or subdivisions of the lathe of ... in the co. of Kent, situated in the eastern div... co. and bounded on the N. by the Thames, on t... by the lathe of St. Augustine, on the S. by the ... of Felborough, and on the W. by the hund... sham. It contains the pars. of Boughton-under-... Graveney, Hernhill, and Selling, and extends ... area of about 9,662 acres.

BOULBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Easington, ... Langbaurgh, in the North Riding of the co. of Y... 10 miles to the N.W. of Whitby. It is situated ... sea-coast, and is the site of large and valuable ... works, established in 1615. The works are on the ... mit of a lofty cliff. Many interesting fossils are ... in the rocks here, the strata of which are remark... regular in their disposition. The old manor-h... a farmhouse, was the seat of a branch of the ... family, to whom the alum-works once belonged.

BOULDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Heldgate, ... hund. of Munslow, in the co. of Salop, 7 miles ... N. of Ludlow.

BOULGE, a par. in the hund. of Wilford, in the ... of Suffolk, 3 miles to the N. of Woodbridge, ... town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Nor... the val. with that of Debach united to it, ... the patron. of H. W. Field, Esq. The church is ... cated to St. Michael. In the vicinity is Boulge H...

BOULMER, a tnshp. united with Seaton H... the par. of Long Houghton, ward of Bamb... the co. of Northumberland, 5 miles to the E. ... wick. The village, consisting chiefly of cottages o... pied by fishermen, is seated on the sea-coast near B... mer Point. Boulmer Bay is a secluded creek, ... surrounded by rocks, and used to be a great re... smugglers. From this circumstance smuggled ... acquired the name of Boomer in the surrounding ...

BOULSDON, a tythg. united with Kilcot, in the ... of Newent, hund. of Botloe, in the co. of Glouces... miles to the N.W. of Gloucester. It is situated in ... Forest of Dean.

BOULSTON, or BULSTON, a par. in the hun... Dungleddy, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wa... miles to the S. of Haverfordwest, its post town. It ... on the east bank of the river Cleddw Wen. The li... is a don. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. 42... gift of R. J. Acland, Esq., to whom the manor b... In the neighbourhood are some tumuli, and the ru... an old mansion, formerly the seat of the Wogan fa...

BOULSTONE, or BOLSTON, a par. in the ... div. of the hund. of Wormelow, in the co. of Her... 6 miles to the S. of Hereford. The Hereford, Ross, ...

Gloucester railway passes near it. It is situated in a fertile and pleasant district on the west side of the river Wye. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Bm-Lacy, in the dioc. of Hereford.

BOULTHAM, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Lothby-Graffo, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the S. of Lincoln. The east branch (Nottingham and Lincoln) of the Midland railway passes through it. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £126, in the patron. of R. E. Ellison, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Helen. The chief residence is Boultham Hall.

BOULTON, a chplry. in the par. of St. Peter, Derby, hund. of Morleston and Litchurch, in the co. of Derby, 3 miles to the S.E. of Derby. The Midland railway and the Derby canal pass near it. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £120, in the patron. of the landholders. The church is old, and partly in the Norman style.

BOUNDARY LANDS, a vil. in the tnshp. of Leek-Field and par. of Leek, in the hund. of Todmorden, in the co. of Stafford, not far from Leek.

BOUNDS GREEN, a hmlt. 1 mile N.E. of Wood Green, in the hund. of Edmonton, in the co. of Middlesex, ½ mile N. of Hornsey, and 2 W. of Tottenham. The New River passes near.

BOUNTISBOROUGH HUNDRED, one of the 6 hunds. of the Winchester div. of the co. of Southampton, situated in the north div. of the co., and bounded by the hunds. of Mitcheldever, Mainborough, and Fawy. It comprises the pars. of Itchin-Abbas and Itchin-Stoke, and the ext. par. lib. of Godsfield, and has a area of about 4,990 acres.

BOURG, LE, a vil. in the par. of St. Clement, Isle of Jersey, Channel Islands, 2 miles from St. Helier. It is at the S.E. corner of the island.

BOURN, a par. in the hund. of Longstow, in the co. of Cambridge, 2 miles to the S.E. of Caxton, its post town, and 9 W. of Cambridge. It lies at the head of Bourn Brook, one of the sources of the river Cam, and was the site of a castle founded at an early period by the Scots. It was a moated fortress, and was demolished during the Barons' wars in the reign of Henry III. Before the Conquest the lordship had belonged to Earl Morcar. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £[illegible] in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Christ's College, Cambridge. The church, a large cruciform building in mixed styles, with a square tower, contains some monuments of the Huggar family, who long held the manor, and is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1653. The charitable endowments of the parish consist of the church estate, which produces £35 per annum, and several bequests worth about £7 a year. Bourn House, a picturesque old mansion, built of brick with stone dressings, and restored by Repton, stands on the site of the castle, the moat of which still exists. The mansion formerly belonged to the Loves, and is now the property of Earl Delawarr.

BOURN, a par. and market town in the wap. of Avelan, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 35 miles to the S. of Lincoln, and about 95 miles from London by the Great Northern railway, with which it is connected by a branch line of 6 miles from Essendine. An Act has also been obtained for making a railway from Bourn to Spalding. It is pleasantly situated on a small stream rising near the town at Bourn Well Head, or Peter's Pool, a spring remarkable for copiousness and purity. The stream falls into the Carsdyke. Bourn was probably a place of some note at a very remote period, but little is known of its early history. Roman pavements and coins have been found, and a castle was found here before 1040.. In the 9th century a body of Danish invaders were encountered and defeated by the Lord of Bourn. In 1138 an Augustine monastery was founded here by Baldwin Fitz-Gilbert, which flourished till the Dissolution, when its revenue amounted to £[illegible]8. The town has a large market-place, in which the four principal streets meet. On the east side of the market-place is the townhall, a commodious building, erected in 1822, near the site of an older one built by Cecil Lord Burleigh, and which bore his arms. As the town was twice partly burnt down in the years 1605 and 1637, most of the houses are of modern date, and well-built. The streets are lighted with gas, and there is a good supply of water. The pursuits of the neighbourhood are chiefly agricultural; but there is also a good trade in wool and malt. By means of the Bourn Eau the town has communication with Spalding and Boston, There are several large tanneries and breweries in the town. Bourn is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and a County Court district. Quarter and petty sessions are held, and polling for the south division of the county takes place here. The town contains the Union poorhouse. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £600, in the patron. of the executors of the late J. L. Ostler, Esq. The vicar is the Rev. Joseph Dodsworth, Rural Dean of Aveland, who resides in the Abbey-house. The church, which was that of the abbey, is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. It is a large building, partly in the Norman, partly in the early English and perpendicular styles of architecture, with, originally, two towers at the west end, one of which is fallen to decay. The west front is admired. The church contains an octagonal font, a piscina, and some monuments. The Independents, Baptists, and Wesleyans have chapels in the town. There is a free school, which was founded in 1653 by Thomas Trollope, and a hospital also endowed by him, which have together a revenue of £70 per annum. An almshouse, founded by William Fisher, has an income of £65 a year. But the most important endowment is that founded by Robert Harrington, in 1654, for the benefit of the poor of this parish, the revenue of which amounts to about £570 per annum. The entire yearly value of the parochial charities is above £700. Two National schools, and a library for mechanics, have been established. Bourn was the birthplace (in 1520) of William Cecil, Lord Burleigh, the great statesman of Queen Elizabeth's reign. Here, too, was born (in 1729) William Dodd, popular clergyman and royal chaplain, who was executed for forgery in 1777. His father was rector of this parish. Thursday and Saturday are the market-days. Fairs are held on the 7th April and May, and the 29th October.

BOURNE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Piddletown, in the co. of Dorset, 5 miles to the N.E. of Dorchester. It is situated on the river Piddle, and contains a manufactory of sailcloth.

BOURNE, a tythg. joined with Wrecklesham, in the par. and hund. of Farnham, in the co. of Surrey, near Farnham. Here is an extensive heath.

BOURNE, a tythg. in the par. of Bourne St. Mary, hund. of Upper Evingar, in the co. of Southampton, 3 miles to the N.W. of Whitchurch.

BOURNE, EAST. See EASTBOURNE, Sussex.

BOURNEMOUTH, a vil. in the par. and hund. of Christchurch, New Forest div. of the co. of Southampton, 4½ miles to the W. of the Christchurch station of the London and South-Western railway, 17 from Lymington, and 5 miles N.E. from Poole, its post town. It is seated in a pleasant spot near the border of Dorsetshire, on the coast of Poole Bay, and is a favourite bathing-place. It was founded by Sir G. Gervis, Bart. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £50, in the patron. of the late Sir G. Gervis. The church, founded in 1844, is in the middle pointed style, and is dedicated to St. Peter. It was enlarged in 1851, 1855, and 1859. There are chapels belonging to the Independents and the Scotch Church. The former, a handsome stone structure in the Gothic style, was opened in March, 1859, and cost about £2,000. The National school was erected in 1850, and is supported by voluntary contributions. Brick-making is carried on to a small extent; but the village, which contains some handsome and well-stocked shops, is mainly supported by the gentry, who resort to it as a fashionable and healthful retreat, equally enjoyable in summer and winter, owing to its sheltered situation, and the commanding views it enjoys of the Isle of Purbeck, Corfe Castle, the Isle of Wight, and the Needles. The town contains a splendid stone building, called the Sanatorium (opened in 1855, for convalescent consumptive patients, and supported by voluntary contributions), baths, library, and reading-rooms, and some good hotels. The surrounding scenery is rich and varied, especially from West Cliff, and there are many seats of the gentry in the neighbourhood. A small newspaper, the Bournemouth Visitors' Directory, is published fortnightly.

BOURNE ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Upper Evingar, Kingsclere div. of the co. of Southampton, 3 miles to the N.W. of Whitchurch railway station, and 5 N.E. from Andover, its post town. It includes the tythgs. of Binley, Bourne, Egburg, Stoke, and Week, and part of Swampton. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Hurstbourne-Priors, in the dioc. of Winchester, of the joint annual val. of £202, in the gift of the bishop. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £110. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient Norman structure, with pointed arches, resting on massive pillars. It has a square embattled tower, and contains a curious font, hewn out of a block of black marble; of which there are said to be only three other examples in England. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels here. The Earl of Portsmouth is lord of the manor.

BOURNE, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Westbourne and Singleton, rape of Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, 7 miles to the W. of Chichester. Emsworth is its post town. The South Coast railway passes through it. The parish is situated in a beautiful country on the sea-coast, opposite Thorney Island, and contains the hmlts. of Aldsworth, Hermitage, Nuthourne, Prinsted, and Woodmancot. This place is close to Hampshire, and the hmlt. of Hermitage is connected with the neighbouring port of Emsworth by a bridge across the small inlet between them. West Bourne is a coastguard station and the head of a Poor-law Union. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £280, in the patron. of the trustees of Mrs. Browne. The church, a neat building in the perpendicular style, with a tower, surmounted by a spire of oak, is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The spire was erected by the Earl of Halifax. The parochial charities, including a bequest for providing clothes for the poor, produce £60 a year.

BOURNEY, a par. in the bar. of Skerrin, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S. of Roscrea. It lies at the foot of the hill of Benduff, at the source of the rivers Nore and Suir. It comprises large tracts of bog and mountain. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduagh, of the val. with that of Borrisnafarney united to it, of £339, in the patron. of the bishop. There are ruins of several old castles.

BOURN-MOOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Houghton-le-Spring, ward of Easington, in the co. palatine of Durham, 4 miles to the S.W. of Sunderland. The Sunderland branch of the North-Eastern railway passes near it. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. In 1815 saltworks were established on the discovery of brine-springs here. The well is nearly 100 fathoms deep.

BOURTIE, a par. in the Garioch district of the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, near Old Meldrum. The surface is hilly, and there are remains of a circular Danish entrenchment on the summit of the hill of Barra. The living, worth £226, is in the presb. of Garioch, and in the patron. of the crown. The church is old, and contains a monument, conjectured to be that of Thomas de Longueville, one of the associates of William Wallace.

BOURTON, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Shrivenham, in the co. of Berks, 7 miles to the S.W. of Farringdon, and 6 from Swindon. The Great Western railway passes by it, and the Wilts and Berks canal has several wharfs here. There is a chapel of ease, built by Archdeacon Berens; also a Baptist chapel, built and supported by the great silk manufacturers, Messrs. Baker and Tucker, who, in 1842, likewise presented to the inhabitants a neat Gothic structure for a school, which is well attended, and several almshouses.

BOURTON, a hmlt. in the par. and borough of Buckingham, in the co. of Buckingham, 1 mile from Buckingham.

BOURTON, a chplry. in the par. and lib. of Gillingham, West Shaston div. of the co. of Dorset, 4 miles the E. from Wincanton, its post town, and 8 miles the N.W. of Shaftesbury. The village is pleasantly situated on the river Stour, and has an iron foundry, sacking manufactory, a tannery, and tile kilns. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £90, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. George, is a plain, Gothic building, and has undergone frequent repairs. The register commences at the year 1653. The Wesleyans and Baptists have chapels here. There is a Sunday-school and a few small charities. The Marquis of Westminster is lord of the manor.

BOURTON, or BURTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Much Wenlock, Wenlock borough, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles to the S. of Wenlock.

BOURTON, or FLAXBOURTON, a par. in the hund. of Portbury, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles to the S.W. of Bristol. It is situated in a beautiful country, and is a station on the Bristol and Exeter rail. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £90, in the patron. of the Rector of Nailsea.

BOURTON, a tythg. joined with Easton, in the parish of Bishop's Cannings, hund. of Potterne, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles to the N.E. of Devizes.

BOURTON, BLACK. See BLACKBOURTON, Oxfordshire.

BOURTON, GREAT and LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Cropredy, hund. of Banbury, in the co. of Oxford, 3½ miles to the N. of Banbury, and 26¼ N.W. of Oxford. Here is a free school, endowed by Thomas Cobb in 1666, with a revenue of about £25 per annum. The ancient chapel, dedicated to St. Michael, is occupied as the school-house. There is an Independent chapel in Great Bourton, and a Wesleyan chapel in Little Bourton, which is 1 mile nearer to Banbury.

BOURTON-HOLD, a hmlt. in the par. and borough of Buckingham, in the co. of Buckingham.

BOURTON-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the upper divs. of the hunds. of Tewkesbury and Westminster, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles to the S. of Chipping Campden. Moreton-in-the-Marsh is its post town. It is situated near the border of Warwickshire, in a hilly country, commanding much fine scenery. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the val. with the perpet. cur. of Moreton annexed to it, of £2 in the patron. of Lord Redesdale. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The National school has an endowment of £112 per annum. Bourton was the birthplace (1581) of Sir Thomas Overbury, who was imprisoned and poisoned in the Tower in the reign of James I., at the instigation of the favourite, Somerset.

BOURTON-ON-THE-WATER, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Slaughter, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles to the S. of Stow-on-the-Wold. Moreton-in-the-Marsh is its post town. It is intersected by several streams, which, meeting below the village, form the river Windrush. The parish lies near the confines of Oxfordshire, and contains a Roman encampment on the Fosse Way, where various remains have been found. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the val. with the perpet. curs. of Lower Slaughter and Clapton annexed to it, of £475, in the patronage of the Warden and Fellows of Wadham College, Oxford. The church, a modern building, partly of the Lancet architecture, is dedicated to St. Lawrence. There is a chapel belonging to the Baptists, and a free school, endowed by Collett with an income of £10 a year.

BOURTON-UPON-DUNSMORE, a par. in the Rugby div. of the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 5 miles to the S.W. of Rugby, its post town. The Rugby and Leamington branch of the London and North-Western railway passes near it, and has a station at Birdingbury, about 1½ mile to the north-east of the village. Draycote is a hmlt. of this par. The living is a ect. in the dioc. of Worcester, of the val. of £350, in e patron. of Mrs. Shuckburgh. The church is dedated to St. Mary. The charitable endowments of the arish are worth about £20 a year. The village is a me for the North Warwickshire hounds.

BOUSFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Orton, East wa, in the co. of Westmoreland, not far from Orton.

BOUSTA, a hmlt. in the par. of Dunrossness, Mainlan Shetland Islands. It is seated on the west side of the land, on the coast of St. Magnus' Bay.

BOUSTEAD HILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Burghby-nds, Cumberland ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 7 nes to the W. of Carlisle. The Ship canal, connecting arlisle with the Solway Frith, passes this place.

BOUTHROP. See LEACH-MARTIN, EAST, Glouceste re.

BOVENEY, LOWER, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of urnham, in the co. of Buckingham, 2 miles to the W. Windsor. It is situated on the north bank of the Th es. The living is a perpet. cur., annexed to the vic. of rnham, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church is dedicate to St. Mary Magdalene.

BOVENEY, UPPER, a lib. in the hund. of Burnham and co. of Buckingham, near Lower Boveney.

BOVENHILL, a prebend in the par. of Tottenhall, in t south div. of the hund. of Seisdon, in the co. of Staord.

BOVERAGH, a par. in the bar. of Keenaght, in the co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles from Dungiven. It is situated in a fertile and cultivated distct, on the banks of the river Roe, and was the site of monastery founded about the middle of the 6th centry by St. Columb, and demolished by the Danes. Here are valuable quarries of building stone, which supplie the material for the episcopal palace at Ballysculli nafterwards taken down, and the fine portico of wh adorns the church of St. George, Belfast. Dungive crystals are found in the neighbourhood. Some o e people are employed as linen weavers. The livin is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry and Raphoe, of the annual val. of £529, in the patron. of the bishop. The hurch is a handsome modern edifice, with a lofty w, standing near the river. It was built in 1823. The mains of the old church are near it. Vestiges of ancit stone circles and cromlechs exist here. The ncipal seats in the parish are Ballyharrigan, Streth Hon, and Ardenariff.

BOVERIDGE, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Cranborne, East Shaston div. of the co. of Dorset, 2 miles to the N. of Cranborne, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur., annexed to the vic. of Cranborne, in the dioc. of Salisbury. There is an almshouse in the villge. The principal residence is Boveridge House.

BOVERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Lantwit-Major, hund of Cowbridge, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wal, 4 miles to the S. of Cowbridge. The Roman way alled the Via Julia, passed by this place, which is lieved to have been the station Bovium. In the neighbourhood are two ancient encampments, and the ains of a castle which was granted by Henry VIII to the Duke of Bedford. Roman relics have been discovered here.

BOVEY, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Teignbridge, in the co. of Devon, 2 miles to the S.W. of Morton Hanstead. Exeter is its post town. It is situated in a pleasant district on the West Teign river, near East Dow Hill. Extensive tin-mines are worked in the neighbourhood. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £263, in the patron. of the Earl of Ilchester. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The charitable endowments, consisting of several bequests for education, produce £9 a year. A cattle fair held here on the Monday after Midsummer-day.

BOVEY-TRACEY, or SOUTH BOVEY, a par. in the hnd. of Teignbridge, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the W. of Chudleigh. Newton Abbott is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the Wrey, or West Teign river, and contains Bovey-Heathfield, an extensive level common, lying very low, and surrounded by hills. On this common are found beds of lignite, or wood coal, called generally Bovey coal, formed of trees which have sunk into the swamp. Its bad smell while burning unfits it for household purposes. The clay used in the pottery works is brought from King's-Teignton. Near the village is a manufactory of earthenware. Antimony and basalt occur in small quantities. Many of the inhabitants are employed in working the coal and in the pottery. Bovey was formerly a market town, under a grant to the lord of the manor by Henry III. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £450, in the patron. of the crown. The church is dedicated to St. Thomas à Becket. It is an ancient building, and contains a stone pulpit decorated with colour and gilding. There is also a small district church, recently built for the use of the pottery district, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist. The Baptists and Wesleyans have chapels in the village. There is a free school, endowed by several persons with an income of £40 per annum, and some other charities worth about £10 a year. An alien priory once existed here. The building was converted into a manufactory in 1772. In the village are some remains of an old cross. Fairs for the sale of cattle are held on Easter Monday, Holy Thursday, and the first Thursday in June and in November.

BOVIEL, a hmlt. in the bar. of Keenaght, in the co. of Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S.E. of Dungiven.

BOVINGDON, or HEMEL-BOVINGDON, a par. in the hund. of Dacorum, in the co. of Hertford, 3 miles to the S.W. of Hemel-Hempstead, its post town. It was till recently a chplry. of Hemel-Hempstead. The London and North-Western railway passes near it. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, and in the patron. of the Hon. G. D. Ryder. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. There are charitable endowments, producing £14 per annum.

BOW, or NYMET-TRACEY, a par. in the hund. of North Tawton with Winkley, in the co. of Devon, 7 miles to the W. of Crediton, its post town, and 14 miles to the N.W. of Exeter. It is situated on a small stream, a branch of the river Taw, and was formerly a market town. The grant of a market and a fair was obtained of Henry III. in 1258, by the Traceys, who then held the manor. In 1646 a body of royalists was surprised here by Cromwell. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. with that of Broad Nymet, of £533, in the patron. of F. Vandermeulen, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. Here is a chapel belonging to the Independents, and a free school for ten children, founded in 1682 by John Gould, and endowed with £8 a year. There are other charitable endowments, worth about £60 per annum.

BOW, or STRATFORD-BOW, a par. in the Tower div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, 3 miles to the E. of St. Paul's. It is a station on the North London railway, which is here joined by the North-Western and Docks Junction railway. The Blackwall railway is connected with the Great Eastern railway, which passes this place, and has a station at Stratford, by a short branch line from Bromley. The par. is situated on the river Lea, and three circumstances of the locality are alluded to in its compound name: that a Roman way (stratum) passed by it; that a ford existed here; and that the river was crossed by a bridge. The Roman road led to Leyton, in Essex. The bridge, a very ancient one, is said to have been built by order of Maud, Queen to Henry I., and consisted of three arches, the middle one being much larger than the others. It was by some assigned to a much earlier age. The roadway was very narrow, and after the addition of a new footway on the outside of the wall, the bridge was, in 1834, rebuilt. Bow was originally a chapelry to the parish of Stepney, and so remained till 1730, when it was constituted a parish of itself. It includes the district of Old Ford and part of Victoria Park. It is the site of the East London Waterworks, several large manufactories, Bow Brewery, and Grove Hall Lunatic Asylum. The par. is included in the borough of the Tower Hamlets, and a county court is held here three times in each month. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, of the val. of £297, in the patron. of the Principal and Fellows of Brasenose College, Oxford. The church, which is of the time of Henry VII., is dedicated to St. Mary, and stands in the centre of the road. The oldest portions of the building are the tower and chancel, which are in the Tudor or perpendicular style; the nave appears to have been repaired and altered at a later date. It contains a neat and unusual specimen of a waggon-roof, which was covered up by a flat ceiling, from 1701 to 1844. The upper part of the tower, which is low, was rebuilt about 1829, being finished with battlements, an octagonal tower at one corner, and two illuminated clocks. There is also a district church at Old Ford, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £200, in the gift of trustees. The church, which was erected in 1857, is dedicated to St. Stephen. A parsonage and schools have recently (1863) been built in connection with this church and district. The Wesleyans have built an elegant school-chapel in this neighbourhood, preparatory to opening a chapel of considerable pretensions in the Bow-road. Here are also chapels belonging to Baptists and other Dissenters. The Independent chapel is a neat building, in Harley-street. The charitable endowments of the parish are very considerable. The principal foundations are—the free school, founded by Sir John Jolles in 1613; the school endowed by Prisca Coburne in 1701, the revenue of which is now about £250; almshouses, founded by Sir J. Jolles, and those established by the Drapers' Company.

BOWBANK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Lunedale, and par. of Romaldkirk, wap. of Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 9 miles to the W. of Barnard Castle.

BOW-BRICKHILL. See BRICKHILL BOW.

BOWBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Stroud, hund. of Bisley, in the co. of Gloucester, not far from Stroud. It is seated in a fine country on the banks of the Thames, and the Thames and Severn canal.

BOW BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Low Abbotside, and par. of Aysgarth, wap. of Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, near Askrigg.

BOWCOMBE, a hmlt. in the par. of Carisbrook, lib. of West Medina, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Southampton, not far from Newport.

BOW COMMON, a chplry. in the par. of Stepney, in the co. of Middlesex, 3 miles to the E. of St. Paul's. It is a suburb of London, and has a church, dedicated to St. Paul. The living is a perpet. cur.,* val. £150, in the gift of W. Cotton, Esq.

BOWDEN, a par. in the Castleton Melrose district of the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland, 2½ miles W. of Lessudden, and 3 S. of Melrose. It contains a vil. of its own name, and also the vil. of Midlem. It is situated in a cultivated district on the banks of Ale Water, a feeder of the Tweed, under the Eildon Hills, which extend into the parish. The name Bowden, which may be traced through "Boulden" to the old form, "Botheldean," signifies "a dwelling in a low situation." The village stands low by the stream, but the ground rises at Eildon Hill to the height of 1,364 feet. The living, of the val. of £212, is in the presb. of Selkirk, in the patron. of the Duke of Roxburgh. The church was given by David I. to the monks of Kelso, who had a chapel and a seat at Haliedean, and enjoyed various privileges. Haliedean was afterwards granted to the ancestors of the present proprietor, the Duke of Roxburgh. A Roman road passed through the parish, and traces of it yet remain. The village is a meet for Lord Elcho's hounds.

BOWDEN-EDGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Chapel-en-le-Frith, hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 1 mile from Chapel-en-le-Frith. Bowden Hall, an ancient mansion near the village, is now a farmhouse. This tnshp. is within the honour of Tutbury, in the Duchy of Lancaster.

BOWDEN, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Rothwell, in the co. of Northampton, close to Market borough. The south-east branch of the Midland r passes through it. The par. contains the hmlt. of Oxenden. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of borough, of the val. of £293, in the patron. of the T. Barlow, rector. The church is dedicated Nicholas. The parochial charities, consisting o town estate, worth £72 per annum, and an endow for a school, amount to about £76. In the vicin Bowden Lodge.

BOWDEN MAGNA, a par. in the hund. of G in the co. of Leicester, 13 miles to the S. E. of L It is situated on the north bank of the river W and contains the chplry. and town of Market borough, which is its post town, and a station o south-east branch of the Midland railway. T canal passes through the par. The living is cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £86, in of the Dean and Canons of Christ Church ford. The church is dedicated to St. Pete charitable endowments, consisting chiefly of t estate, produce £47 per annum.

BOWDON, a par. in the hund. of Bucklow, i co. palatine of Chester, 8 miles to the S.W. chester. It is a station on the Manchester, Junction, and Altrincham railway. The par lies on the border of Lancashire, on the south the river Mersey, where the Bollin falls into great extent, and comprises the market town of cham, the chplries. of Carrington, St. Margaret ham-Massey, St. George's Altrincham, Ri Timperley, and the tnshps. of Agden, Ashley, Bollington, Hale, and Partington. Part of A of Bollington are in the par. of Rostherne Bridgwater canal passes through the par. Sin opening of the railway, many good resid been erected in the vicinity, which are occupied Manchester merchants and manufacturers. T is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chester, of the val of in the patron. of the bishop. The church, wh dedicated to St. Mary, and formerly belonged Priory of Birkenhead, has been rebuilt and enl great expense in 1860; the present church being fifth which has occupied the same site. It is a perpendicular style, with a mixture of the Tud aisles and clerestory. The glass is stained thr out, and there are several fine subject windows. building is entirely lined with stone; and upon whole it is one of the most beautiful and impos modern parish churches. It was annexed to the Chester at the Dissolution. It stands on high gr and commands from the tower an extensive pr over the surrounding level country. In the chan many handsome monuments of the Booth family among them one to the first Lord Delamere espoused the cause of Charles II. and took arms for but was defeated by the parliamentary troops Lambert. Here is also a monument by Westm Thomas Assheton, who died in 1759. The Wesl Methodists have a large and handsome chapel which was erected in 1857. Schools were found endowed by Edward Vawdrey in the 17th century income of which is now about £70. The charit bequests for the benefit of the poor are numerous produce above £400 per annum. A Roman road pa through Bowdon. The par. extends over an are 17,971 acres.

BOWER, a par. in the co. of Caithness, Scotl 10 miles to the N.W. of Wick. It is situated on coast of the North Sea, near Dunnet Head. The face is irregular, and partly under cultivation. highest point is at Heather Cow Cairn, from w there is a good prospect. There are two small l The living, worth £191, is in the presb. of Caith in the patron. of Sir James Colquhoun, Bart. The also a Free church. Stone Lude, or Lutt, about high, stands on a hill, and is considered a Scandina relic. Several cairns exist in the neighbourhood.

BOWER-ASHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Asht , hund. of Hartcliffe, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles the S.W. of Bristol. It is near the Bristol and Exet railway. The principal residence is Ashton Cour the seat of Sir J. Smyth, Bart.

BOWER-CHALK, a par. in the hund. of Chalk, in the c of Wilts, 7 miles to the S.W. of Wilton. It lies on t borders of Dorsetshire. The living is a vic. unite with the consolidated vic. of Broadchalk and Alve ton, in the dioc. of Salisbury. The church is dedic ed to the Holy Trinity. The par. contains an area 2,966 acres.

BOWER, EAST and WEST, hmlts. in the par. of Brid ater, hund. of North Petherton, in the co. of Some et, not far from Bridgwater.

BOWER, HINTON, a hmlt. joined with Hurst, in the p. and hund. of Martock, in the co. of Somerset, 2 mil from South Petherton.

BOWERS GIFFORD, a par. in the hund. of Barstabl in the co. of Essex, 6 miles to the S. of Billericay. Rale is its post town. It is situated in a flat marshy distri near the mouth of the river Thames, opposite to Conv Island. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Roch er, of the val. of £564, in the patron. of Mrs. Curt The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. Bowe Hall is the chief residence.

BOWES, a par. in the wap. of Gilling West, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the S.W. of B nard Castle, its post town. It is a very extensive par. mprising an area of 18,334 acres, and is situated in oak country, on the verge of Stainmoor Forest, and the banks of the river Greta. It contains the tnshp of Gillmonby, the hmlt. of Bowes-Cross, and als veral other hmlts. Bowes is a very ancient pla and the site of the Roman station, Lavatræ. The ilitary road may still be traced in the neighbourhood. Subsequently a castle was founded here y An Earl of Richmond, who had a gallows, and was led the Black Earl. This castle was afterwards held John Duke of Bedford, and later by Henry VI. Ruins of the pile stand on the brow of a hill above the Greta. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon val. £90, in the patron. of T. Harrison, Esq. The church is partly in the Norman style, and is dedicated St. Giles. This village was the home, and this is the burial-place, of the lovers "Edwin and Emm over whose passion and mournful fate, as told in Mal's pathetic ballad, so many hearts have ached, and so many eyes grown moist. They rest in one grave. Their names were Roger Wrighton and Martha Railton, and they died in March, 1714. In the village is a chapel for Wesleyans, and a free grammar school, established near the close of the 17th century by William Hutchinson, which has an income from endowment of £260 per annum and an exhibition at Cambridge University. There are some other small charities. Many Roman remains, coins, and stones with inscriptions, have been found in the parish. Camden mentions the use of one of the latter in the church as a communion table. Two miles from the village is God's-bridge, a natural bridge over the Greta, consisting of a rock of limestone through which the river has worn its way. It is about 15 feet in span and broad enough to serve for a good carriage way. A market was formerly held here on Friday, and a fair on the 1st October, but both are disused.

BOWLAND FOREST, HIGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Slaidburn, wap. of Staincliffe and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 9 miles to the S.W. of Settle. It is one of the largest tnshps. in England, extending over an area of 17,800 acres, and including the hmlts of Dunsap and Battrix. The par. of Slaidburn, with that of Mitton and part of Whalley, formed the ancient Bowland (or Bolland) Forest, on the banks of the river Hodder. Within the present century it was the haunt of wild deer. The office of head-forester is hereditary in the Parker family, whose seat is Browsholme Hall, near the village. The district is now enclosed and under tillage. It formed part of the honour of Clitheroe.

BOWLAND FOREST, LOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, wap. of Staincliffe and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, near High Bowland Forest. It contains the hmlt. of Harrop.

BOWLAND, LITTLE, a tnshp. united with Leagram, in the par. of Whalley, hund. of Blackburn, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 9 miles to the N.W. of Clitheroe. It is on the border of Yorkshire, on the banks of the river Hodder, and was part of the Forest of Bowland.

BOWLD, a hmlt. in the par. of Idbury, hund. of Chadlington, in the co. of Oxford, 5 miles to the N. of Burford. It is on the border of Gloucestershire.

BOWLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Bodenham, hund. of Broxash, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles to the S.E. of Leominster.

BOWLING, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Bradford, wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles from Bradford. It is a station on the Leeds, Bradford, and Halifax branch of the Great Northern railway. The tnshp. includes the vil. of Dudley Hill. This place participates in the general trade and manufactures of the district. Many persons are employed in the neighbouring coal and iron-works. There are good stone quarries. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Bradford. The church is dedicated to St. John. Bowling Hall, a fine old seat, was occupied by the Earl of Newcastle as his headquarters, in 1642, and from it he set out to meet Fairfax, whom he defeated on Adwalton Moor.

BOWLING BAY, a vil. in the par. of Old Kilpatrick, in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland, 4 miles to the E. of Dumbarton. It is a station on the Dumbartonshire railway. It stands on the north bank of the Clyde, where the Clyde and Forth canal meets it, and is a port subordinate to Glasgow. Bowling Bay forms a good harbour and has a lighthouse. Shipbuilding for small sea-going vessels has long been carried on here.

BOWLING GREEN, an ext. par. district in the borough of Guildford, hund. of Woking, in the co. of Surrey, near Guildford.

BOWMORE, a small seaport in the par. of Kilarrow, and island of Islay, in the co. of Argyle, Scotland, situated on the E. side of Loch Indaal. The parish church of Kilarrow is in this town, from which the par. is often called Bowmore. The living, worth £158, is in the presb. of Islay, and in the gift of the crown. Here is a large distillery. The principal seat is Islay House. The par. of Kilarrow, or Bowmore, extends in length about 17 miles, and in breadth 8 miles, including Kilmeny, Bridgend, Port Askeg, and the town of Bowmore, and is watered by the rivers Sorn and Laggan.

BOWNESS, or BOULNESS, a par. in Cumberland ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 12 miles to the W. of Carlisle, its post town, and 10 N. of Wigton. It is situated on the south coast of the Solway Frith, on a rocky promontory, where the Carlisle Ship canal terminates. Drumburgh station of the Carlisle and Silloth, and Port Carlisle railway is about 3 miles distant. The par. includes the tnshps. of Anthorn, Bowness, Drumburgh, and Fingland. The Solway is here 2 miles broad, and, from the accumulation of sand at its mouth, can be crossed at low water on foot. Opposite to Bowness is Annan, in Dumfriesshire. The great wall of Severus terminated at a point a little eastward of the village, where was the station Tunnocelum. The wall of Hadrian did not extend quite so far, but terminated near Drumburgh, at the station called Gabrosentum. The village stands on a rock projecting into the Solway, of which it commands a good prospect. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, of the val. of £393, in the patron. of the Earl of Lonsdale. The church, a small ancient building, is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities, including a free school, endowed by Thomas Pattinson in 1785, produce £24 per annum. Remains of the Roman wall still exist, and many coins and other relics have been found. Stone from the wall was used in the erection of the church and many private houses. The par. of Bowness is very extensive, and comprises an area of 17,947 acres. The name Bowness is applied to the peninsula bounded on the N. and W. by the Frith, and on the S. by Wampool Bay, as well as to the village.

BOWNESS, a large and flourishing vil. in the tnshp. of Undermillbeck, and par. of Windermere, in Kendal ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 8 miles to the N.W. of Kendal, and 6 S. of Ambleside. The Kendal and Windermere branch of the Lancaster and Carlisle railway terminates at Birthwaite, about 1¼ mile above Bowness. The village is seated in a pleasant spot on the east side of Windermere, of which it commands a fine view, and is the principal port on the lake. Three steam yachts ply regularly from here during the summer months, and there is a large traffic in wood, &c. It is the chief place in Windermere parish, and one of the polling places for the county. It is a favourite haunt of tourists, having several good inns and many first-rate boarding-houses. Here is the noble mansion known as Windermere Hydropathic Establishment, but now converted into a first-class ladies' school; it is situated on an eminence, commanding a view of the lake, and surrounding country, with its magnificent scenery. The museum, rich in local curiosities, has ceased to exist, but there is a flourishing mechanics' institute. Slate is quarried and exported, and there is an extensive fishery carried on for char, trout, &c. The char is potted and sent to the London markets. The parish church of Windermere stands in the village, and has a fine stained-glass window, which once belonged to Furness Abbey. The rectory-house is also an interesting object, with its fine old porch. But the chief ornament of the village is the handsome grammar school, erected at the expense of the late John Bolton, of Storr's Hall, the first stone of which was laid by the poet Wordsworth, who resided at Rydal Mount. The school, originally founded about the middle of the 17th century by inhabitants of the parish, has now a revenue from endowment of £150 a year. In the vicinity are many noble mansions, as Storr's Hall, the seat of Rev. T. Staniforth; Burnside, the seat of G. A. Anfiere, Esq.; Bell Field, the seat of James Bryans, Esq.; Quarry How, Ray Rigg, &c.

BOWOOD, a tythg. in the par. of Netherbury, hund. of Beaminster Forum and Redhone, in the co. of Dorset, 2 miles to the S.W. of Beaminster.

BOWOOD, an ext. par. lib., locally in the par. and hund. of Calne, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles S.W. from Calne, and 3 S.E. from Chippenham. This district was anciently part of the royal Forest of Pewisham, in which James I. is said to have frequently enjoyed the pleasures of the chase. Bowood House is the seat of the Marquis of Lansdowne. The mansion, chiefly built in the Italian style of architecture, after designs by Robert and James Adams, stands in a large and beautiful park, with varied scenery, and sheltered by rich woods. The late Marquis of Lansdowne added a new wing on the west side, 300 feet long, after the model of the Emperor Dioclesian's palace at Spalatro. A fine lake, of about 30 acres, winds among the grounds, and spreads out in front of the house. On a wooded hill is a mausoleum with a monument to John Earl of Shelburne, who died in 1761. There is a remarkable echo in one part of the grounds, which repeats the sound four times. The mansion contains some valuable paintings, among which are "St. John the Baptist," by Raphael, works by Gainsborough and Stanfield, and some interesting portraits. Here is also the statue of "Hagar," by Westmacott. Not far from Bowood is Sloperton Cottage, formerly the residence of the poet, Thomas Moore.

BOWRIEFAULD, a vil. in the par. of Dunnichen, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 4 miles from Forfar.

BOWSCALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Greystoke, Leath ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 8 miles to the N.E. of Keswick. It is situated on the river Calder, near Greystoke Park, the seat of the Howards.

BOWSDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Lowick, ward of Glendale, in the co. of Northumberland, 2 miles from Ancroft, and 7½ from Berwick. Coals and lime abound here, and a new coal-mine was opened in 1857, which promises to be very productive. There is a scho the village.

BOW STREET, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of T Mynach, and par. of Llanfihangel Geneur-Glynn, of Geneur-Glynn, in the co. of Cardigan, South W 2 miles to the N. of Aberystwith. It is on the co Cardigan Bay.

BOWTHORPE, a par. in the hund. of Forch the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the W. of Norwich. living is a don. cur. united with the cur. of Eartha the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated t Michael. After being converted into a granary for time, it was, in 1635, restored to its proper use living, originally a rect., was made a cur. about BOWTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ha brough, wap. of Ouse and Derwent, in the East of the co. of York, 4 miles to the N.W. of How is a joint tnshp. with Menthorpe.

BOWTHWAITE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of F tains Earth, and par. of Kirkby Malzeard, in of Claro, West Riding of the co. of York, not far Ripon.

BOX, a hmlt. in the par. of Minchinhampton, h of Longtree, in the co. of Gloucester, close to M hampton.

BOX, a par., tnshp., and large vil. in the hund. union of Chippenham, in the co. of Wilts, 5 miles N.E. of Bath, and 102 miles from London. It is a on the Great Western railway, which here passes a tunnel, called the Box Tunnel, nearly 2 miles which has a fall of 50 feet in a mile. The situated in a fine valley, on the great road from London, and contains the hmlt. of Box Quarr several others. Here are valuable quarries of stone called Bath stone, from being extensively used in city. It is exported in large quantities to a the kingdom. The existence of some mineral near the village led to the establishment of Spa; but the experiment failed, and the buildings converted into private dwellings. There are brewing and malting establishments. The living vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, va in the patron. of the Rev. H. D. C. S. Hodges. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas à Becket, ancient structure with spire, and contains a mon to Mrs. Bowdler. There is also a chapel of Kingsdown, and a Wesleyan chapel. There is school, endowed by several persons with an income £80 per annum, a large, private, girls' school, a National school. A Roman villa is supposed to stood at Cherry Court, in this parish, many Roman having been discovered there.

BOX AND STOCKBRIDGE HUNDRED, the 7 hunds. or subdivisions of Chichester rape, in of Sussex, situated in the western div. of the bounded by the rape of Arundel on the N., hunds. of Aldwick and Manhood on the E. and S. by the hunds. of Bosham and Aldwick on the W. comprises the pars. of Aldingbourn, Appledram grove, Donnington, Eartham, New Fishbourn, Ha ton, Merston, West Hampnett, North Mundham, Rumbold's Wyke, and Up-Waltham. The area of hund. is about 21,320 acres.

BOXFORD, a par. in the hund. of Faircross, in co. of Berks, 4 miles to the N.W. of Newbury, its town. It is situated on the river Lambourn, a tri of the Kennet, and contains the tythg. of Westl The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, annual val. of £761, in the patron. of the Rev Wells. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew Wesleyans have a chapel here. There are sev charitable endowments of trifling value.

BOXFORD, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, ext ing also into the hund. of Cosford, in the co. of Suf 5 miles to the W. of the market town of Hadle Colchester is its post town. It is situated in a pl valley, watered by two small streams, and contains hmlt. of Hadleigh. The living is a rect.* in the of Ely, of the val. of £710, in the patron. of the cr

The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Here is a free grammar school, founded by Queen Elizabeth, which has an income from endowment of £33 a year. The parish has the benefit of several other charities, producing about £60 per annum. Fairs are held in the village on Easter Monday and the 21st December.

BOXGROVE, a par. in the hund. of Box and Stockbridge, rape of Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, 3 miles to the N.E. of Chichester, its post town. The South Coast railway passes close by it. The par. includes the hmlts. of Croker Hill, East Hampnett, and part of Seabeach, and the tythgs. of Halnaker and Strellington. Halnaker was the site of a Benedictine priory, founded about 1117, by Robert de la Haye, and subordinate to the abbey De l'Essay, in Normandy. It had a revenue at the dissolution of £145, and was given to the Earl of Arundel. The manor is now held by the Duke of Richmond. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, of the annual val. of £687, in the patron. of the Duke of Richmond. The church, a cruciform structure in the early English style, with some traces of the Norman style, is dedicated to SS. Mary and Blaize. It was the church of the priory, and the burial-place of Adeliza, Queen of Henry I., and her daughters. It has a doorway with Norman arches, which formerly opened into a cloister extending to the refectory and the cloisters of the monks. The interior is remarkably fine, and has a handsome east window, recently (1862) erected by the tenantry on the Goodwood estate, to the memory of the late Duke of Richmond. The window consists of three lights, and three subjects are introduced into each light. The centre contains the Nativity, Crucifixion, and Ascension of our Lord. On the north side are three types of Victory so arranged as to bear upon the principal subjects, and emblematical of the late duke's taste for military life: the meeting of Abraham and Melchisedec after the slaughter of the kings; the Victory over the Amalekites, Jabin and Sisera; and the Passage of the Jordan. On the south are three of our Lord's parables introduced, as it were, to mark the duke's interest in agricultural pursuits: the Sower, the Casting out of the Vineyard, and "The Tares are the Angels." The effect of the whole is very striking. The colours are extremely rich, particularly where the tracing of the central light. The work has been designed and executed by the Messrs. O'Connor, of London. The church also contains monuments to one of the Pagnings, one of the Delawarrs, and several of the Morley family, one of the latter being Mary, Countess of Derby. Almshouses for 12 poor women, and a free school for the education and clothing of 12 children, were founded and endowed by the Countess of Derby about 1710. The revenue of the almshouses is £115; that of the school, £56 per annum. There are some other charitable endowments worth about £14 a year. Near the site of the old priory is the modern mansion called Boxgrove Priory. North-west of the village is Goodwood, the seat of the Duke of Richmond. This noble mansion consists of a centre and two wings, the former 166 feet in length, and each of the latter 106 feet, with circular towers at the four corners, surmounted by flat-domed roofs. The portico, which is formed by six Doric columns, supports the same number of Ionic columns above, surmounted by a balustrade. The park surrounding this magnificent pile lies for the most part in this parish, and is adorned with numerous cedars, Spanish chesnuts, Virginian tulip-trees, cork-trees, and other exotics, which contrast well with the native growth of oak and beech.

BOXHILL, a detached spur of the Surrey hills, 1 mile to the N.E. of Dorking, and about the same distance from Betchworth. It commands an extensive view from the South Downs of Sussex to the hills of Hertfordshire, including the whole of London and the valley of the Thames. On the summit are several fine box-trees, and beneath it the river Mole runs underground and reappears again on the other side. Some handsome villa residences adorn the slopes, and at its foot are the woods of Holmdale, where red deer roamed wild in the middle of the 17th century, and where the ancient barrows, called castles, mark the retreat of the Britons before the Saxons.

BOXLEY, a par. in the hund. of Maidstone, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles to the N.E. of Maidstone, its post town. It is situated near Boxley Hills, commanding an extensive and beautiful prospect over the surrounding rich country, and includes part of Penenden Heath, and a large rabbit-warren. In the middle of the 12th century, William d'Ypres, Earl of Kent, founded here a Cistercian abbey, which was mitred, and received from Henry III. the grant of a market. Its abbot sat in parliament in the reign of Edward I. The abbey was celebrated for the possession of a curious rood, or automaton crucifix, and an image of St. Rumbold, both of which were burnt at the Reformation, at Paul's Cross. The revenue of the abbey amounted at the Dissolution to £219. The site was given in 1540 to Sir Thomas Wyatt. The manor of Boxley had been held by the monks under a grant of Richard I. There are hop-grounds in the parish, and many persons are employed in the paper manufacture, which is carried on here in two large and excellent mills, said to be some of the best in England. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £834, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Rochester. The church, an ancient building, is dedicated to All Saints, and contains some monuments of the Wyatt and other families. Attached to the western entrance is a large porch, supposed to be either a Galilee or mortuary chapel, the burial-place of the Whatman family. The parochial charities amount to £4 a year. The principal residences are Boxley Abbey, The Firs, Park House, Park Place, Boxley House, and Brooklyn.

BOXMOOR, a vil., tnshp., and post town, in the par. of Hemel-Hempstead, hund. of Dacorum, in the co. of Hertford, 2 miles to the S. of Hemel-Hempstead, and 6 N.W. of St. Alban's. It is a station on the London and North-Western railway, 24½ miles from London, and is situated at the junction of the Bulbourn with the river Gade, and on the Grand Junction canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Hemel-Hempstead. The church is a chapel of ease to Hemel-Hempstead, and is called the District Chapelry.

BOXTED, a par. in the Colchester div. of the hund. of Lexden, in the co. of Essex, 2 miles from Neyland. Colchester is its post town. It lies on the south bank of the river Stour, here navigable, and contains a tract of heath. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £110, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and has a monument to Sir J. Poley. The charitable endowments produce £10 a year. Boxted Hall is the seat of the Poleys.

BOXTED, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, in the co. of Suffolk, 6 miles to the N.E. of Clare. Bury St. Edmund's is its post town. It is watered by a small stream, a branch of the river Stour. The living is a rect. consolidated with that of Hartest, in the dioc. of Ely. The parochial charities amount to £11 per annum.

BOX-TREE QUARTER, a district in the par. of Tamworth, hund. of Hemlingford, in the co. of Warwick, close to Tamworth.

BOXWELL, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Grumbald's Ash, in the co. of Gloucester, 5 miles to the W. of Tetbury. Wotton-under-Edge is its post town. It lies near the border of Wiltshire, on the small river Frome, and at an early date had a nunnery, which, it is said, the Danes destroyed. In the parish are some freestone quarries and some plantations of box. It is not far from the Cotswold hills. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the val. with the cur. of Leighterton, of £350, in the patron. of the Rev. R. W. Huntley, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew.

BOXWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Papworth, in the co. of Cambridge, 8 miles to the N.W. of Cambridge, and 3 S. of Swavesey railway station. Caxton is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £459, in the patron. of G. Thornhill, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Peter, and contains a monument to Dr. Nicholas Saunderson, the blind mathematician, and professor at Cambridge University, who died here in 1759. There are some charities of small value, and a village school, supported by subscription, instituted in 1839. The soil is stiff clay, with a blue gault subsoil.

BOYATT, a tythg. in the par. of Otterbourne, hund. of Lower Buddlesgate, in the co. of Southampton, 4 miles to the S. of Winchester. The London and South-Western railway passes near it.

BOYCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Pontesbury, hund. of Ford, in the co. of Salop, 7 miles to the S.W. of Shrewsbury. It is not far from the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway.

BOYCOTT, or BOYCUTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Stowe, in the hund. of Ploughley, and co. of Buckingham, 2 miles from Buckingham. Until recently it formed part of Oxfordshire.

BOYLAGH BARONY, one of the 6 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, situated on the western side of the co., and bounded on the N. and E. by the bar. of Kilmacrenan, on the S. by the bar. of Banagh, and on the W. by the Atlantic Ocean. It contains parts of the pars. of Inishkeel (including the vil. of Glenties), Lower Killybegs, Lettermacaward, and Templecrone, and comprises an area of about 158,500 acres.

BOYLE BARONY, one of the 9 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, situated in the north-west part of the co., and bounded on the N.W. by the cos. of Mayo and Sligo, on the E. by the co. of Leitrim, and on the S. by the bars. of Roscommon and Ballintobber. It contains the pars. of Ardcarn, Boyle, Esternow, Kilbryan, Killukin, Killummod, Kilronan, Keadew, and Tumna. The market town of Boyle, and part of Carrick-on-Shannon, are in this barony. It extends over an area of about 82,560 acres.

BOYLE, a par., market town, and nominal borough, in the bar. of Boyle, and co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 108 miles to the N.W. of Dublin. It is situated on the border of Sligo, in a narrow valley at the foot of the Curlew mountains, on the banks of the river Boyle. The river runs down from Lough Gara, on the south-west side of the town, to Lough Key on the north-east, and thence to the Shannon, which it meets above Carrick. This par., which is very extensive, comprising an area of about 19,618 acres, includes a large tract of bog and waste; the rest of the land is mostly cultivated, and there is abundance of limestone and freestone. A Cistercian monastery was founded on this spot in the middle of the 12th century, which was subordinate to Mellifont Abbey, in the co. of Louth, and flourished till the Dissolution. Around this monastery the town grew up. It is built on both sides of the river, —the older part on the north, and the more modern part on the south bank. They are connected by three bridges, one an elegant structure of three arches, on the site of an older one taken down; the second of one single-arch; and a third of five arches. Most of the houses are built of stone. The town contains a sessions-house, a bridewell, a market-house, barracks for infantry, and the union poor-house. The borough was incorporated in 1613 by a charter of James I., and returned two members to the Irish parliament till the Union. Boyle is the head of a Poor-law Union, and a chief police station. Quarter and petty sessions are held in the town. As the centre of a large agricultural district it has a good general trade. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, Ardagh, and Elphin, of the val., with seven vics. united to it, of £506, in the patron. of the bishop. Besides the parish church, there are two chapels belonging to the Roman Catholics, and one each to the Baptists and Wesleyans. There are a savings-bank, a charitable loan society, and two dispensaries. On Lough Key, 2 miles from Boyle, is Rockingham House, a noble mansion of the Ionic order of architecture, the seat of Lord Lorton, proprietor of the town. It is surrounded by an extensive and well-wooded park, and has four approaches. Other seats in the neighbourhood are Tangier (the residence of Captain Robertson), Abbeyview, and Mount Erris. There are some fine ruins of the abbey and the grounds of Tangier. They consist chiefly of the church and its noble tower. Remains of a round tower are near the bridge, and between the town and Lough Gara a large cromlech. A newspaper is published here, the Roscommon Gazette. The market is held on Saturday. Fairs are held on the 6th March, the 1st April, the 30th May, the 25th July, the 16th August the 4th October, and the 25th November.

BOYLSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, in the co. of Derby, 7 miles to the S. of Ashbourne, and 3 N. from Sudbury railway station. It is watered by a small stream, a feeder of the river Dove. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £260, in the gift of Robert Pool, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and has a small tower. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels in the village. There are some small charitable endowments, and a National school was built in 1845 near the church. John Broadhurst, Esq., is lord of the manor.

BOYNDIE, a par. in the co. of Banff, Scotland, which is situated on the coast of the Moray Frith, between two streams called Boyndie Burn, on the east, and Deveron Burn, on the west, and includes the vil. of Whitehills. The Banff, Portsoy, and Strathisla railway passes through the par. Three-fourths of the par. are under cultivation, the remainder being waste, pasture, or wood. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the fisheries. The living, val. £205, is in the presb. of Fordyce, in the gift of the Earl of Seafield. On the banks of the Deveron are the remains of Boyne Castle, formerly the seat of the Ogilvie family, the ancestors of the Earl of Seafield, who is now the sole landowner in the parish. There is a mineral spring at Red Well.

BOYNE, a river in Ireland, which takes its rise in the bog of Allen, near Carbury, in the co. of Kildare, and, pursuing a north-easterly course, enters the co. of Meath, dividing it into nearly equal parts, and then upon the co. of Louth, and enters the Irish Channel 5 miles below Drogheda. Its length is about 70 miles, and it has a total fall of nearly 240 feet. The principal towns on its banks are Clonard (where it enters Meath), Trim, Navan, Slane, and Drogheda. It has many tributary streams, of which the most important are the Deel, a river of West Meath, meeting it below Navan, and the Blackwater, running down from Cavan into Meath, and joining it at Navan. It is navigable up as Slane, and from thence, by means of locks, to Navan. The construction of the railway from Dublin to Navan has diminished the carriage by the river. Coals, corn, and timber are the chief goods conveyed. The navigation of the river is much impeded by a bar at its mouth, where the water is only from 2 to 3 feet deep. Three lighthouses are erected for the guidance of elevations, from 28 to 40 feet. Along the banks of the Boyne, especially in the co. of Meath, there are many scenery, the charm of which is heightened by the presence of numerous remains of antiquity, monastic and military. As Ireland itself has been named "the Island of Saints," so this river, from the number of its monastic and religious houses near it, centres once of light and knowledge, has acquired the designation of the "River of Science." The Boyne has acquired historic importance from the battle, so memorable in relation to English freedom, fought on its banks on the 1st July, 1690, between the English, led by their chosen leader and king, William III., and the Irish under James II. The scene of the decisive conflict was at the ford, 3 miles above Drogheda, then the site of a ford, but efficiently of a bridge. A memorial pillar, erected in 1736, stands on the north bank of the river, opposite the ford. It is 150 feet high, and covers the spot where Schomberg is said to have fallen. In the 9th century the Northmen sailed up this river and ravaged the neighbouring country.

BOYNE HILL, a chplry. in the par. of Bray, in co. of Berks. Maidenhead is its post town. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £120, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which has been recently erected, is dedicated to All Saints.

BOYNTON, a par. in the wap. of Dickering, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the W. of Bridlington, its post town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, and the val. of £141, in the patron. of Sir G. Strickland, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. Boynton Hall, situated in pleasant grounds, is the seat of the Stricklands. A pavilion stands on a hill near the hall, from which there are fine views over Bridlington Bay and a large extent of country.

BOYOUNAGH, a par. in the bars. of Ballymoe and Tyaquin in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 10 miles to the N.E. of Tuam. The district is boggy. Glennamaddy is a vil. in this par. The living is a vicarage united with the rect. of Kilkerrin, in the dioc. of Tuam, Killala, and Achonry.

BOYTOWN, or BALTIBOYS, a par. in the bar. of Lower Talbotstown, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S. of Blessington. It is situated in a mountainous district, on the banks of the river Liffey, and comprises an area of 25,135 acres. Granite and slate are quarried here. The living is a vic. united with that of Blessington, in the dioc. of Dublin. Glendalagh, and Kildare. In the neighbourhood are Baltiboys, the seat of Colonel Smith, and several other residences of the gentry.

BOYTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Foxholes, wap. of Dickering, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 11 miles to the W. of Burlington.

BOYTON, a par. in the hund. of Stratton, in the co. of Cornwall, extending also into the hund. of Black Torrington, in the co. of Devon, 5 miles to the N. of Launceston, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Tamar, here forming the boundary of the two counties, and the Bude and Launceston canal, and includes the hmlt. of Northcott. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, worth £120, in the patron. of the rev. G. Prideaux. Bearden House, the old seat of the Lovice family, and Bradridge, that of the Colleys, are now farmhouses. Agnes Rest, one of the royal residences under Queen Mary, was an inhabitant of Northcott. A fair is held in the vil. on the 5th August.

BOYTON, a par. in the hund. of Wilford, in the co. of Suffolk, 3 miles to the S.W. of Orford. Woodbridge is its post town. It lies near the sea-coast, on the banks of the river Alde, near its mouth. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £365, in the patronage of Mrs. Warner's trustees. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. Here are almshouses for 16 poor aged women, founded and endowed about 1743 by Mrs. Warner, the revenue of which now exceeds £1,300 per annum.

BOYTON, a par. in the hund. of Heytesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles to the S.E. of Heytesbury, its post town, and 7 from Warminster. The Salisbury branch of the Great Western railway passes near it. The par. is situated on the south side of the river Willy, a branch of the Nadder, and contains the hmlt. of Corton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £549, in the patron. of the President and Fellows of Magdalen College, Oxford. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is a good specimen of early English architecture, and has been recently restored. It was erected in 1301, and contains a fine circular window and an ancient font. There are some small charitable endowments. Boyton House, the old seat of the Lamberts, was built in 1618.

BOYONRATH, or LAGINSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S. of Cashel. It lies near the Great Southern and Western railway. The living is an impropriate rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore.

BOZEAR, a vil. in the par. of Stockbury, hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 7 miles to the S.E. of Rochester. It is in a rich and beautiful district.

BOZEAT, a par. in the hund. of Higham Ferrers, in the co. of Northampton, 6 miles to the S. of Wellingborough, its post town. It lies on the confines of Buckinghamshire and Bedfordshire. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. with the rect. of Strixton consolidated, of £275, in the patron. of Earl Spencer. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village. The charitable endowments produce £22 per annum.

BRABOURNE, EAST and WEST, a par. in the franchise and bar. of Bircholt, lathe of Shepway, in the co. of Kent, 6 miles to the E. of Ashford, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Westerhanger railway station. It is an ancient place, and had once the privilege of a market. The manor was held by Aylmer de Valence. The land is partly laid out in hop-grounds, and the soil is wet and clayey. There is a large rabbit-warren at Brabourne Lees, near which are extensive cavalry and infantry barracks. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. with the rect. of Monk's Horton consolidated, of £320, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is in the early English style, and is dedicated to St. Mary. It contains several ancient monuments, among which are those of the Scott family, to whom the manor belonged. A fine yew-tree, nearly 60 feet in girth, is mentioned by Evelyn as standing in this churchyard in his day. The tithes have been commuted for £270, with rectorial rent-charge of £613. There is a Baptist chapel. The parochial charities amount to £8 per annum. An annual pleasure fair is held in the village on the 31st May.

BRACADALE, a par. in the Isle of Skye, in the co. of Inverness, Scotland. It is situated in a wild hilly country on the south-west coast of the island, at the head of Loch Bracadale, and includes the small islands of Soay, Vuiay, Haversay, and Oronsay. The loch affords good anchorage. Gaelic is spoken by the people, many of whom are reputed to be endowed with the faculty of "second sight." The living, of the val. of £158, is in the presb. of Skye, and in the patron. of M'Leod of M'Leod, who is the sole landowner. There is also a Free church. The par. extends about 20 miles in length and 8 miles in breadth.

BRACEBOROUGH, a par. in the wap. of Ness, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles to the S. of Bourne. Stamford is its post town. It is situated on the river Glen, and is a station on the Bourne branch of the Great Northern railway. The par. includes the hmlt. of Shillingthorpe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £160, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret.

BRACEBRIDGE, a par. in the lib. of the city of Lincoln, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the S. of Lincoln, its post town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £203, in the patron. of Mrs. Bromehead. There is a small endowment for education. A nunnery formerly stood in this par., but nothing remains of the buildings except the foundations.

BRACEBY, a par. in the soke of Grantham, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles to the E. of Grantham. Folkingham is its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret.

BRACE-MEOLE, a par. in the Condover div. of the hund. of Condover, in the co. of Salop, 1 mile to the S. of Shrewsbury. It forms part of the borough of Shrewsbury, and includes the tnshps. of Newton and Nobold, with part of Pulley. In this par. is the Shrewsbury poorhouse. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. of £361, in the patron. of the Rev. E. Bather, vicar. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

BRACEWELL, a par. in the eastern div. of the wap. of Staincliff and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 9 miles to the W. of Skipton, its post town. It is situated in a hilly country, and includes the hamlet of Stock. Limestone is quarried in the neighbourhood. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ripon, of the val. of £123, in the patron. of J. T. Hopwood, Esq. The church is dedicated to St.

Michael. Bracewell Hall, a mansion built in the reign of Henry VIII., and long in ruins, was the seat of the Tempest family. Near its site are some remains of a more ancient house, built of stone, containing a room called "the King's parlour." It was one of the retreats of Henry VI. There are traces of earthworks in the parish which are attributed to the royalists during the civil war of the 17th century.

BRACKEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Kilnwick, wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the S.W. of Great Driffield. It is situated on the Wolds, and had formerly a chapel, the graveyard of which still remains.

BRACKENBER, a hmlt. in the par. of Shap, West ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, not far from Shap. It is seated in a mountainous district.

BRACKENBER, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Michael, Appleby, East ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 3 miles to the S.E. of Appleby. Brackenber Moor is locally noted as a resort for wild ducks.

BRACKENBOROUGH, a hmlt. about 6 miles to the N.W. of Penrith, in the co. of Cumberland.

BRACKENBOROUGH, a par. in the wap. of Ludborough, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the N. of Louth. The Great Northern railway passes near it. The village is a meet for the South Wold hounds.

BRACKENFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Morton, hund. of Scarsdale, in the co. of Derby, 4 miles to the E. of Matlock. Alfreton is its post town. The Midland railway runs near it. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, worth £62, in the patron. of the Rector of Morton. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity.

BRACKENFOOT, or BRACKENTHWAITE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Rigton, and par. of Kirkby-Overblow, in the wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the W. of Witherby.

BRACKEN-HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Roose, wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N. of Patrington. It is at a short distance from the sea-coast.

BRACKENHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Arthuret, ward of Eskdale, in the co. of Cumberland, 4 miles to the E. of Longtown. It lies on the borders of Scotland, and contains the hmlt. of Easton, which gave name to an ancient parish.

BRACKENHOLME, a tnshp. united with Woodhall, in the par. of Hemingbrough, wap. of Ouse and Derwent, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.W. of Howden. It is situated in a pleasant spot on the river Derwent, not far from the Selby and Market Weighton branch of the North-Eastern railway.

BRACKENTHWAITE, a tnshp. in the par. of Lorton, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 8 miles to the W. of Keswick. It is in a district abounding in fine scenery, at the head of Lowes-water, and near Grisdale Pike. Lead has been found in the hills.

BRACKHOLY. See PETTY, Inverness-shire.

BRACKHILL, a vil. in the par. of Kilcolman, and bar. of Trughanacmy, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, not far from Milltown.

BRACKLEY, a par., market town, and municipal borough, in the hund. of King's Sutton, in the co. of Northampton, 20 miles to the S. of Northampton, 8 miles to the W. of Buckingham, and 63 miles from London, or 67 miles by railway. It is a station on the Buckingham and Banbury branch of the London and North-Western railway. Brackley is situated on the borders of Buckinghamshire, on the banks of the river Ouse, not far from its source, and is a town of great antiquity. It was an important place before the Norman Conquest, and was at an early period the seat of a considerable trade in wool. In the reign of Edward II. it was made a staple town for wool, and in the reign of his successor it was represented in a council held at Westminster by three merchant staplers. The privilege of a market was granted before the year 1217, and a charter of incorporation early in the 14th century. Edwa conferred on the town the elective franchise, and th of returning two members to parliament. This r exercised till the Reform Act, under which it w franchised. The government of the borough is v its ancient charter in a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 2 gesses. The town stands on the slope of a hill from the river, and consists chiefly of one broad about a mile in length, running up from the br two arches, by which the river is crossed. The are mostly built of stone. In the middle of the a handsome townhall and market-house, erected by the first Duke of Bridgewater. The lace m and the boot and shoe trade are the principal local industry. Brackley is the seat of a U Union, the head of a County Court district, and a place for the south division of the county. It contains the Union poorhouse. For civil p Brackley is considered as two parishes, those of St and St. James, but for ecclesiastical purpose consolidated. The living is a vic. in the d borough, val. £359, in the patron. of the Sutherland. The church is dedicated to St is an ancient edifice in the early English sty embattled tower, and contains a curious old James's church, also old, has been taken burial service is performed in a small chap site. Divine service is occasionally perform pel connected with the old hospital of St bequest having been made for that purpose John Welchman. The hospital was found by Robert le Bossu, Earl of Leicester, and w Henry VIII. to Magdalene College, Oxford. pendents and Wesleyans have chapels in th is a free school, founded and endowed by Wi flete, about the middle of the 15th century, and for six widows, established in 1633 by Sir T which have an income from endowment of £ But the principal charity is the feoffee's estate benefit of the poor, producing £127 a year. A formerly existed in this parish, the site of which called Castle Hill. At Bayard's Green, near several tournaments were held in the 14th the reign of King John the barons assem the purpose of treating with him. Samue Orientalist, one of the contributors to Wa glot Bible, was a native (1624) of this tow gives the title of viscount to the Earl of The market, chiefly for corn, is held on W Fairs are held on the Wednesday after the 25th the second Wednesday in April, the Wednesday the 22nd June and the 11th October, and on t November (St. Andrew's Day).

BRACKLINTOWN, a vil. in the par. of and bar. of Ballymoe, in the co. of Galway, Connaught, Ireland, 12 miles to the W. of Ba BRACKNAL, or BRACKNELL, a hmlt. in of Easthampstead, hund. of Ripplesmere, in Berks, 4 miles from Wokingham. It is a sta the Richmond, Staines, and Reading branch of the don and South-Western railway. The living is a cur., annexed to the vic. of Warfield, in the Oxford, in the gift of the bishop. The church is stone structure in the pointed style, was erected in There is much fine scenery and many good resi the neighbourhood.

BRACO, otherwise called ARDSOP, a vil. in the of Muthell, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 5 miles of the vil. of Muthell. It is situated on the rivulet, a branch of the Allan. Here is a chapel a Free church, and an United Presbyterian ch also three very interesting Roman encampments

BRACON-ASH, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard the co. of Norfolk, 6 miles to the S.W. of Norwich miles from Flordon railway station. The living is a in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £245, in the g Mrs. E. Berney. The church, dedicated to St. N of a mixed style of architecture, and is built of a mi of flint, stone, and brick, plastered over. The re date from 1563. Bracon-Ash Hall is the principal residence. There is an almshouse in the village.

BRACONDALE, a hmlt. in the par. of Trowse, hund. of Hastead, in the co. of Norfolk, 1 mile from Norwich. It is included within the bounds of the city.

BRACTON. See BRATTON, Devonshire.

BRADBORNE, a par. in the hunds. of Appletree and Wirksworth, in the co. of Derby, 5 miles to the N. of Ashbourne. Wirksworth is its post town. It comprises the chlries. of Atlow, Ballidon, and Brassington; the tnshp. of Aldwark, and the hmlt. of Lea Hall. Limestone abounds in the district. The living is a vic. in the dio. of Lichfield, of the val. with the perpet. cur. of Bradon annexed to it, of £119, in the patron. of the Duke of Devonshire. The church is dedicated to All Saints. It has a tower in the Norman style. In addition to the parish church there are two district churches —one at Atlow, and the other at Brassington—the livings of which are perpet. curs.; the former, val. £148, the latter, val. £50, with residence. The charitable endowments amount to £21 per annum. Near the village is Tissington Hall, the seat of Sir H. Fitzherbert, Bart. Roman relics have been found in the neighbourhood. Bradborne is in the honour of Tutbury, in the duchy of Lancaster.

BRADBURY, a tnshp. in the par. of Sedgefield, Stockton ward, in the co. palatine of Durham, 10 miles to the N. of Darlington. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway. It is situated in a fine country, and commands extensive views.

BRADBY. See BRETBY, Derbyshire.

BRADDAN. See KIRK BRADDAN, Isle of Man.

BRADDEN, a par. in the hund. of Green's Norton, in the co. of Northampton, 3 miles to the W. of Towcester, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £227, in the patron. of the Rev. C. Ives, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities are worth about £50 a year. Bradden House is the principal residence.

BRADENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Desborough, co. of Buckingham, 4 miles to the N.W. of High Wycombe, its post town. It is situated in a pleasant district among the Chiltern Hills. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, worth £224, in the patron. of Mrs. Pearle. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is a small ancient structure, built of flint and stone, with an ivy-mantled porch and projecting buttresses. It has a side chapel, erected in 1542 by Sir William Windsor. There is an endowment for education, founded in 1713 by Catherine Pye. Bradenham House, lately the seat of the Right Hon. Benjamin Disraeli, M.P., is a spacious mansion, pleasantly situated, commanding a good prospect over the surrounding country, and was built in the reign of Henry VIII. Sir Andrew Windsor, who purchased the estate at the commencement of the 16th century, was created Lord Windsor in 1529, and the mansion was long the seat of that family. In 1566, Queen Elizabeth, on her return from Oxford, was entertained here by Edward, Lord Windsor. Isaac Disraeli, Esq., author of the "Curiosities of Literature," held the manor of Bradenham, and resided here till his death in 1848.

BRADENHAM, EAST, a par. in the south div. of the hund. of Greenhoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles to the N. of Watton, and 7 miles E. from Swaffham railway station. Shipdham is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £278, in the patron. of H. S. Adlington, Esq. The church, built of flint, is dedicated to St. Mary, and the east window has been recently filled with stained glass by the patron. There is a Wesleyan chapel. The parochial charities produce about £10 a year. Bradenham Hall is the chief residence.

BRADENHAM, WEST, a par. in the south div. of the hund. of Greenhoe, in the co. of Norfolk, close to East Bradenham, and 3 miles S. of Fransham railway station. Thetford is its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £290, in the gift of the Bishop. The church, which is old and built of flint, is dedicated to St. Andrew. There are charitable endowments which produce £24 per annum, and a National school has been recently built by subscription for the two pars. of East and West Bradenham.

BRADESTON, a par. in the hund. of Blofield, in the co. of Norfolk, 6 miles to the E. of Norwich. The Norfolk railway passes near it, and has a station at Brundall. The living is a rect. united with that of Strumpshaw, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a handsome building of flint, with a square tower.

BRADFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Theale, in the co. of Berks, 7 miles to the W. of Reading, its post town, and 45 miles from London. It is situated in a beautiful country, on a small stream called the Pang, which falls into the Thames at Pangbourn. A monastery is said to have been founded here before the end of the 7th century; but nothing is known of its history. Bradfield now gives its name to a rural deanery, and is the centre of a Poor-law Union, containing the Union poorhouse. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. with the perpet. cur. of Trinity Chapel annexed, of £788, in the gift of the Rev. T. Stevens, the incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. It has been lately rebuilt. There is a chapel belonging to the Primitive Methodists. St. Andrew's College, established in 1849, stands near the church. It was endowed as a foundation school in 1859, and has recently been incorporated by royal charter. There are some charitable endowments, producing about £30 a year. Pordage, who distinguished himself as a follower of Jacob Boehmen, was rector of this parish. There are many residences of the gentry in the neighbourhood.

BRADFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Tendring, in the co. of Essex, 3 miles to the S.E. of Manningtree, its post town. It is situated on the south bank of the navigable river Stour, and is a station on the Harwich branch of the Great Eastern railway. The living is a vic. united to the rect. of Mistley, in the dioc. of Rochester. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village. Bradfield was the birthplace of Sir Harbottle Grimston, Master of the Rolls and Speaker of the House of Commons in the reign of Charles II.

BRADFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Tunstead, in the co. of Norfolk, 2 miles to the N. of North Walsham, its post town, 5 S.E. of Cromer, and 17 from Norwich. The living consists of two moieties, of which one is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, worth £167, in the patron. of Lord Suffield; and the other is a don. cur. annexed to the vic. of Thorpe Market. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a Norman structure, with square tower. It has recently been new roofed and restored. The Independents have a chapel here.

BRADFIELD, a chplry. in the par. of Ecclesfield, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the N.W. of Sheffield, its post town. It lies on the border of Derbyshire, in a mountainous and moorland district, the surface rising at Bradfield Point to the height of 1,246 feet. The Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway passes near this place. The chplry. is of great extent, embracing an area of about 33,700 acres, and contains 18 hmlts., among which are Nether Bradfield, Bradfield Dale, Bolterstone, Midhope, Onesacre, Gate, Smallfield, &c. The district is watered by the river Don, along the banks of which there is much picturesque scenery. The pursuits of the inhabitants are chiefly agricultural, but many are employed in the various branches of the hardware manufacture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £200, in the patron. of the Vicar of Ecclesfield. The church is in the early English style of architecture, and is situated on a hill commanding a fine view. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists. At Bailey Hill, near the church, is a Saxon encampment; and at Castle Hill, on the opposite side of the village, is another ancient earthwork. There are several other remains of antiquity in the chplry. Fairs are held at Bradfield on the 17th June and the 9th December.

BRADFIELD-COMBUST, or BURNT BRADFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Thedwestry, in the co. of Suffolk, 5 miles to the S. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town. It derived the addition to its name from the circumstance of the hall, which at an early period belonged to the abbot of Bury, being burnt down in 1327 by the townsmen. The living is a discharged rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £180, in the patron. of the Rev. James Lukin, rector. In 1792 the church was endowed with £200 royal bounty; but in 1838 this was relinquished for a yearly modus of £231 10s., awarded in lieu of tithes. The church is dedicated to All Saints. In the chancel is an old piscina. There are mural monuments to the Young family, and tablets to the Edwards and Enraght families. Bradfield Hall was the seat of Arthur Young, the celebrated writer on agriculture, who was born at this village in 1741. It is now the residence of Arthur John Young, who, in 1857, erected the present noble mansion on the site of the old hall. It contains some excellent paintings, and a select library of 5,000 vols.

BRADFIELD ST. CLARE, a par. in the hund. of Thedwestry, in the co. of Suffolk, 1 mile from Bradfield-Combust. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £275, in the patron. of the Rev. R. Davers. The church is dedicated to St. Clare. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village.

BRADFIELD ST. GEORGE, a par. in the hund. of Thedwestry, in the co. of Suffolk, 5 miles to the S.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. with that of Rushbrook annexed, of £550, in the patron. of the Marquis of Bristol. The church is dedicated to St. George. The surrounding country is very flat, and the view from the top of the steeple is of considerable extent, embracing parts of Norfolk, Cambridgeshire, and Essex. It is said that 60 parish churches are within sight. There is a small endowment for education.

BRADFORD, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles to the N.E. of Holsworthy. Hatherleigh is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Torridge. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £308, in the patron. of the Rector of East Down, and others. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The charitable endowments, including a bequest by William Bickford, in 1745, for education, are worth £14 a year.

BRADFORD, a tnshp. in the par. and borough of Manchester, hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 1 mile to the E. of Manchester.

BRADFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Bamborough, Bamborough ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 4 miles to the E. of Belford. It lies near the sea-coast, and the North-Eastern railway passes within a short distance.

BRADFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Bolam, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 10 miles to the W. of Morpeth.

BRADFORD, a par. in the hund. of Taunton and Taunton Dean, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the N.E. of Wellington. Taunton is its post town. The Bristol and Exeter railway runs through it. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £120, in the patron. of the Rev. W. Burridge. The church is dedicated to St. Giles.

BRADFORD, GREAT, or BRADFORD-ON-AVON, a par. and market town, in the hund. of Bradford, in the co. of Wilts, 8 miles to the S.E. of Bath, 30 miles from Salisbury, and 102 miles W. from London by road, or 109 by railway. It is a station on the Great Western railway. The par. is situated on the banks of the river Avon, and the Kennet and Avon canal. It contains the chplries. of Atworth with South Wraxhall, Holt, and Winsley with Limpley Stoke, and the tythgs. of Leigh Woodley and Trowle.—The name of this place signifies "broad ford," and is a contraction of the Saxon Bradenford. A battle is said to have been fought here in the 7th century, in which Cenwulf, king of the West Saxons, defeated the insurgents under his kinsman Cuthred. Early in the following century, about the year 705, a monastery was founded here by St. Aldhelm. At a la[ter] the manor of Bradford was granted to the [abbess of] Shaftesbury. There is still a fine old barn, sit[uated on] the side of Grip Hill, called "Barton barn," w[hich] merly belonged to the "Grange," or principal [farm of] the abbess of Shaftesbury.—Bradford return[ed] members to parliament on one occasion during [the reign] of Edward I.; but has not since exercised the [elective] franchise. It still bears the appellation of the [borough] of Bradford; but whether it was ever incorporated [and] had a separate jurisdiction, seems not to be det[ermined]. It is at present governed by the county magistrates, [who] meet here once a month. The situation of the [town] pleasant and very picturesque. It stands on both [sides] of the Avon, which is crossed by two bridges, [one] date, one of nine, the other of four arches. The [town] rises sharply from the north bank of the river. The principal part of the town consists of three terraces, extending at different elevations [on] side. The houses are mostly gable-fronted, [built] stone, and roofed with the same material. The [streets] are generally narrow and irregularly built; [but] the passing of the Bradford Improvement Act some attempt has been made to widen and improve [them]. The town is now lighted with gas, and has a [supply] of water. There is much fine scenery in the neighbourhood, especially along the course of the Avon, on [which] are situated many respectable residences and [some] ancient mansions. Kingston House, once the [residence] of the celebrated Duchess of Kingston, has been restored in strict accordance with its original [style] the present proprietor, S. Moulton, Esq. Bradford noted seat of the woollen cloth manufacture, carried on here as early as the reign of Edward [III.] of the clothworkers invited over by Edward [III.] said to have settled in this town; and in 17[th century] facture of superfine broadcloth was greatly [improved] Flemings, brought over by Anthony Methuen, [ancestor] cestor of the present Lord Methuen, of Corsham. Its kerseymeres and fancy cloths are highly [esteemed] the former fabrics being first made at this place. [There] are numerous factories on the banks of the Avon, which many of the inhabitants are employed at. Bethel quarries are extensively worked by [Messrs.] Rogers. By means of the Kennet and Avon canal, which passes close by the town, Bradford has communication with London, Bath, and [other] many important towns.—In the town are a [handsome] market-house (a handsome stone structure in the English style lately erected), a savings-bank, and [a] —It is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and [is] a County Court district. The Union poor-house is Westwood, 2 miles from Bradford. The [living] in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. with [that of] Westwood, of £602, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The church is dedicated to Holy Trinity. It is a large and handsome [edifice] which, though now chiefly in the perpendicular [style of] architecture, has traces left of the original Norman structure, and contains some fine marble [monuments] and two brasses. It has two modern stained windows. Christ Church is a district church in the precincts of the town, built in 1849. It is a handsome structure in the perpendicular style, with a tower and lofty spire; the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* worth £150, and is in the gift of the vicar of the parish. There are chapels belonging to the Baptists, Independents, Unitarians, Countess of Huntingdon's Connection, and Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists. A free school for boys was founded and endowed in 1712 by Francis Smith, and further endowed subsequently by John Shawbridge. It has a revenue of about £50 per annum. There are also National, British, and infant schools, and two almshouses for men and women, with an endowment of £40 a year. They are of ancient date, and were partly founded by John Hall, a member of an old family of the town. The building now used as a gaol was anciently an oratory belonging to the monastery. A chapel formerly on the old bridge of nine arches. In the vicinity are several old seats, and numerous remains of ancient edifices such as the Priory, Chantry House, Tory Hermitage &c.—Saturday is the weekly market day, and a corn and cattle market is held on alternate Tuesdays. Fairs are held on Trinity Monday, and the Monday after St Bartholomew's Day. The latter is held at Leigh.

BRADFORD, a par. and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the wap. of Morley, West Riding of the co. of York, 10 miles to the W. of Leeds, 34 miles to the S.W. of York, and 201 miles by the Great Northern railway from London. It is a station on the Leeds, Bradford, and Halifax Junction railway, by which it is brought into connection with the Great Northern, Lancashire and Yorkshire, London and North-Western, and other important lines of railway. A short branch canal connects the town with the Leeds and Liverpool canal, which passes to the north, and thus gives communication with the German Ocean and the Irish Sea. The par. of Bradford, which lies on the south side of the river Aire, is of great extent, embracing an area of 34,146 acres, and comprises the chplries. of Bankfoot, Bierley, Bowling, Buttershaw, Clayton, Daisy Hill, Dudholme, Eccleshill, Girlington, Haworth, Horton, Lower Dyke, New Leeds, Low Moor, Manningham, Oxenhope, Shipley-with-Heaton, Stanbury, Thornton, Wibsey and Wilsden-with-Allerton, and several hmlts. Bradford is an ancient town, and was included before the Norman Conquest in the par. of Dewsbury. It was afterwards the site of a stronghold of the Laceys, lords of Pontefract, and became by marriage part of the Duchy of Lancaster. During the civil war of the 17th century the men of Bradford embraced the popular cause, and twice encountered and defeated bodies of royalist troops. Subsequently, the town was invested by the royalist army under the Earl of Newcastle, and was taken by storm, Fairfax, with a small body of men, escaping to Leeds. Bradford was the scene of a terrible riot in 1812, which was provoked by the introduction of some novel machinery. The rioters were called "Luddites," and seventeen of their number were executed. Bradford is situated in a pleasant country, consisting of three beautiful valleys. The district contains excellent coal and iron-ore, and has long been famous at of an extensive iron trade. It is in the very centre of the manufacturing districts of Yorkshire and Lancashire, and Bradford is itself one of the most flourishing manufacturing towns of the north. It is one of the chief seats of the cloth trade. The woollen manufacture employs about 4,000 hands, and the worsted mills manufacture about 2,500. A large number of persons are employed in the spinning and weaving of woollen and worsted yarns. There are some cotton mills and manufactories of combs and machinery. Near the town are extensive ironworks and foundries, at which great numbers of men are employed. From the discovery of a number of Roman coins in a mass of clay near Bradford—a circumstance alluded to in Hunter's History of Sheffield—it is conjectured that a station was brought here by the Romans. Bradford has recently attracted to it many merchants from Leeds and Manchester.—The town has a pleasant and cleanly aspect, the houses being mostly built of freestone, and the streets paved and lighted with gas. The Bradford corporation has recently (1862) sanctioned a plan of street improvements which are estimated to cost £35,000, and it is proposed to borrow this sum on security of the rates of the borough, and to spread the repayment of it over a period of 30 years. Proceedings are to be taken almost immediately, under the 75th section of the Local Government Act, 1858, for the purpose of effecting these improvements. Warehouse property in the town has already been decidedly enhanced in value by this resolution of the corporation. A pile of buildings occupied by one firm (Messrs. Craven) was sold by auction for the sum of 15,000, being several thousand pounds more than was offered for the same property four years ago. The noblest of the public buildings in Bradford is St. George's Hall, a spacious and splendid structure of stone, of the Corinthian order of architecture, erected in 1853 at a cost of £28,000. The Piece Hall, the market for woollen goods, built in 1773, is in Kirkgate, and is 144 feet long by 36 feet wide. A handsome market-house of stone was erected in 1824. The Exchange buildings, also of stone, and in the Grecian style, include a newsroom and a library. A handsome court-house was erected in 1833. The Infirmary, a fine building in the Tudor style, was founded in 1844. There are also a dispensary, established about 20 years earlier, and several other charitable institutions. The town contains cavalry barracks and two prisons. In the pleasant environs are many handsome residences of the wealthy classes.—Bradford received a charter of incorporation in 1847, under which it is divided into eight wards, and is governed by a mayor, 14 aldermen, and 42 councillors, with the style of the "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Bradford." The borough returns two members to the imperial parliament. The mayor is the returning officer. The bounds of the municipal coincide with those of the parliamentary borough, and include, besides the tnshp. of Bradford, those of Bowling, Great and Little Horton, and Manningham, containing, according to the census of 1861, 22,537 houses, inhabited by a population of 106,218, against 103,778 in 1851, showing an increase in the decimal period of 2,440. Bradford is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and the head of a County Court district. It is a polling-place for the West Riding, and quarter sessions for the riding are held here. The Union poorhouse is at Little Horton.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, of the val. of £600, in the patron. of the trustees of the late Rev. C. Simeon. The church, which was rebuilt in the reign of Henry VI., is chiefly in the perpendicular style, with a tower of somewhat later date, and is dedicated to St. Peter. It contains several mural monuments, among which is a fine work by Flaxman. Christ Church was founded as a chapel of ease in 1813. The living is a perpet. cur., worth £200, in the patron. of the vicar. The living of St. Jude's, erected in 1843, is a perpet. cur.,* worth £150, and in the same patron. Three new churches have been subsequently erected, the livings of which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £250 to £100. Besides these, no fewer than 21 district churches have been erected of late years in the various tnshps. of this par., as enumerated above. There are about 30 chapels belonging to the various sections of Dissenters,—Independents, Baptists, Presbyterians, Wesleyans, Unitarians, Society of Friends, and Roman Catholics. A free grammar school was founded here as early as the reign of Edward VI. It received a fresh charter and endowment from Charles II. in 1633, and has now an income of more than £400 per annum. The school-house was rebuilt in 1818. The school is one of twelve which send candidates for Lady Elizabeth Hastings' exhibition at Queen's College, Oxford. There are several colleges in the neighbourhood of Bradford belonging to the Dissenters. Airedale College, founded in 1665, is at Undercliffe. It is for the education of students for the ministry among the Independents, and is now connected with the University of London. It has an income from endowment of about £500 per annum. At Rawdon is a college of the same nature, belonging to the Baptists. It was founded in 1805, and has an income of £1,200 per annum. The building is newly erected, the college being formerly at Horton. A school for the sons of Wesleyan ministers was established at Woodhouse Grove in 1812. There are many National, British, Industrial, and other schools, in Bradford and the vicinity. There are mechanics' and Odd Fellows' literary institutions, each with its library and reading-rooms. The charitable endowments of the par. amount to about £900 a year.—Abraham Sharpe, who distinguished himself as a mathematician and astronomer, was a native of Little Horton. There is a monument to his memory in Bradford church. He died in 1742. John Sharp, Archbishop of York, a member of the same family, was born at Bradford in 1644, and received his education at the grammar school. It is to him the saying is attributed that "the Bible and Shakspeare had made him Archbishop of York." At Bradford the first English temperance society was established, and here alpaca cloth was first manufactured. Bishop Blase, as the inventor of wool-combing, is honoured here by a commemorative festival every seven years.—Thursday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 17th June and two following days, the 9th December, lasting the same time, and the 3rd and 4th March. The latter is for the sale of cattle.

BRADFORD ABBAS, a par. in the hund. of Sherborne, in the co. of Dorset, 3½ miles to the S.W. of Sherborne, its post town. It is near the Chippenham and Weymouth section of the Great Western railway, which has a station at Yeovil, 2 miles to the W. of the vil., which is situated on the river Yeo. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. with the rect. of Clifton Maybank consolidated with it, of £479, in the patron. of the Warden and Fellows of Winchester College. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with embattled tower. There is a free school, founded by the Rev. William Preston in 1738, and further endowed in 1781 by Mark West and William Read, which has an income of £24 per annum. W. Clayton Clayton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

BRADFORD HUNDRED, one of the 29 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Wilts, situated in the north parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of Chippenham, on the E. by the hund. of Melksham, on the S. by the hund. of Westbury, and on the W. by the co. of Somerset. It comprises the pars. of Great Bradford, Broughton-Gifford, Great Chalfield, Monkton-Farleigh, and Wingfield, and extends over an area of about 18,760 acres.

BRADFORD, NORTH, HUNDRED, one of the 12 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Salop, situated in the north parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by Cheshire and part of Flintshire; on the E. by Staffordshire; on the S. by the hund. of South Bradford; and on the W. by the Albrighton div. of the hund. of Pimhill. This hund. is separated into three divs.—Drayton, Wem, and Whitchurch. The Drayton div. contains the pars. of Adderley, Cheswardine, Drayton-in-Hales, Child's Ercall, Hinstock, Moreton-Say, Norton-in-Hales, Stoke-upon-Tern, with parts of Hodnet and Muckleston. This div. comprises an area of about 56,000 acres. The Wem div. contains the pars. of Moreton-Corbet, Shawbury, and Wem, with part of Hodnet, and has an area of about 22,090 acres. The Whitchurch div. contains the pars. of Ightfield, Lee Brockhurst, Prees, Stanton-upon-Hine Heath, and part of Whitchurch, and extends over an area of about 36,340 acres.

BRADFORD, SOUTH, HUNDRED, one of the 12 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Salop, situated in the north parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of North Bradford; on the E. by Staffordshire and the hund. of Brimstree; on the S. by the hund. of Condover and the borough of Wenlock; and on the W. by the Albrighton div. of the co. It is in two parts, the Wellington and Newport divs. In the Wellington div. are the pars. of Atcham, Buildwas, Dawley Magna, Eaton Constantine, Ercall Magna, Eyton-upon-the-Wild-Moors, Leighton, Longdon-upon-Tern, Roddington, Stirchley, Uppington, Upton Magna, Upton Parva, Wellington, Withington, Wombridge, Wrockwardine, and Wroxeter. This div. covers an area of about 54,460 acres. The Newport div. contains the pars. of Bolas Magna, Chetwynd, Edgmond, Kinnersley, Lilleshall, Longford, Newport, Preston-upon-the-Wild-Moors, and part of Sheriff-Hales, and comprises about 28,800 acres.

BRADFORD-PEVERILL, a par. in the hund. of St. George, in the co. of Dorset, 3 miles to the N.W. of Dorchester, its post town. It is situated in a valley on the banks of the river Frome, near Bradford Down, and contains the hmlt. of Muckleford. The Weymouth, Somerset, and Wilts railway passes through the parish. The village, which is small, has a few neat and new built houses. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £215, in the patron. of the Warden and Fellows of Winchester College. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a handsome modern structure, rebuilt in 1853 in the early English style. It has a spire and painted windows, one emblazoned with the arms of William of Wykeham, the founder of Winchester College, and two very handsome modern memorial ones by Hardman. Dr. Howley held this living in 1813, when he was made Bishop of London. There is a National school, built in 1836. The Roman road to Ilchester passes through the village, and Roman urns and other remains have been found in the neighbourhood, at Penn Hill, and on all the Downs, are numerous, the most remarkable of which is Seabarrow.

BRADFORD ROAD, a district par. in the township of Manchester, and co. palatine of Lancaster, hund. of Salford, Manchester. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of trustees. A church has been recently erected.

BRADFORD, WEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Otley, wap. of Staincliff and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the N. of Clitheroe, situated on the river Ribble. There is a small endowment for education.

BRADGATE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kimberworth and par. of Rotherham, in the wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, West Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile from Rotherham.

BRADGATE PARK. See BROADGATE, Leicestershire.

BRADHOLME, a hmlt. in the par. of Thorne, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, not far from Thorne.

BRADING, a par. in the lib. of East Medina, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Southampton, 7 miles to the S.E. of Newport. It is situated on the west coast of the island, at the foot of Brading Down, and contains Adgeston, formerly a chplry., and the chplries of Bembridge and Sandown, now independent of Brading. Brading is an ancient town, and was formerly a place of some importance, being styled "the King's town" in Domesday. It had a market and a charter of incorporation granted in the reign of Edward VI., under which it was governed by two bailiffs, a recorder, and burgesses, and is said to have once returned members to parliament. Brading Haven, at the head of which the town stands, is a mere marsh, 800 or 900 acres in extent, covered by the sea at high tide. Several attempts have been made to reclaim this tract from the sea by embanking it, the most important being that made by Sir Edward Myddelton, in the reign of James I. The works cost about £7,000, but from various causes, chiefly from a high tide which made a breach in the embankment, the attempt failed. The inhabitants of Brading are chiefly employed in agricultural pursuits and fishing. There is a small ancient townhall, in which petty sessions and a market-house. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £250, in the patronage of the Master and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, which is of larger size than most in the island, is dedicated to St. Mary. It is said to occupy the site of, the most ancient church in the Isle of Wight, and one of the oldest in the kingdom. It is said to have been founded in 704 by Bishop Wilfrid. It has two side chapels, one of which is the burial-place of the Oglanders, a very ancient family, settled here soon after the Norman Conquest. The church contains several ancient monuments. Legh Richmond was curate of Brading, and the "little Jane" of his story is buried in this churchyard. In the church is the well-known epitaph, set to music by Callcott, beginning with the line, "Forgive, blest shade, the tribute of a tear." There are a chapel belonging to the Independents, and National and British schools. Close to the village is Nunwell, the fine old mansion of the Oglanders, with park and extensive woods, and sea-views from some of the higher grounds. A road leads from Brading over Brading Down to the Culver Cliff, a chalk range boldly om the sea to the height of 400 feet. At the entran to Brading Haven is Bembridge Point, on which a lighthouse. Sandown Fort, founded in the reign o Henry VIII., is about 2 miles to the S. of the town, the coast of Sandown Bay. Fairs are held at Bradin on the 1st May and the 21st September. The par., wh includes the ancient forest of Borthwood, extend over an area of 10,107 acres.

BRALE, a tythg. in the par. of Church Knowle, hund. Hasilor, in the co. of Dorset, 1 mile from Corfe Castle.

BRALE. See BROADWELL, Gloucestershire.

BRALEY, a tythg. in the par. of Cumnor, hund. of Hormer in the co. of Berks, 4 miles to the S.W. of Oxford.

BRALEY, a hmlt. in the lordship and par. of Frodsham, hd. of Eddisbury, in the co. palatine of Chester, 1 mile the E. of Frodsham.

BRALEY, a tnshp. in the par of Malpas, and hund. of Bro n, in the co. palatine of Chester, 2 miles to the S.E. of alpas.

BRALEY, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, in the co. of Derby, 3 miles to the E. of Ashbourne, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £25 in the patron. of the bishop. The church, a small building of ancient date, is dedicated to All Saints. Bradley is one of the pars. which share in common the benefit of Gisborne's Charity, the annual produce of which is early £700. Bradley Park is not far from the village.

BRALEY, a joint tythg. with Sinwell, in the par. of Wotton-under-Edge, hund. of Berkeley, in the co. of Gloucester, close to Wotton-under-Edge.

BRALEY, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Fawley Bromondspit, in the co. of Southampton, 6 miles to the N.W of Alton. Mitcheldever is its post town, and station on the London and South-Western railway. The living is rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. £ 0, in the patron. of C. E. Rumbold, Esq. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There are charitable bequests which amount to about £20 a year.

BRALEY, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Holt, par. of Great Dalby, in the hund. of Gartree, and co. of Leicester, 7 miles to the N.E. of Market Harborough. This hamlet is on the border of Rutlandshire, and was the site of a small Augustine priory, founded by Robert de Vipont, in the early years of the 13th century, which had revenues of about £21.

BRADLEY, a par. in the wap. of Bradley Haverstoe, part of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles to the S.W. of Great Grimsby, its post town. The living is rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £151, in the patron. of Sir J. Nelthorpe, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. George. The Brocklesby hounds meet at Bradley Wood. The benefit of the free school in the neighbouring village of Laceby, founded in 1712, is enjoyed by the children of this parish.

BRADLEY, a tnshp. joined with Farley, in the par. of Much Wenlock, Wenlock borough, in the co. of Salop, 1 mile to the N.E. of Much Wenlock.

BRADLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Burslem, hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, not far from Burslem. Here is a subterranean fire, which has been burning above 70 years in one of the coal-mines.

BRADLEY, a par. in the west div. of the hund. of Cuttleston, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles to the S.W. of Stafford. Penkridge is its post town. The London and North Western railway runs near it. The libs. of Billington and Woollaston are included in this par. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, worth £75, in the patron. of the Duke of Sutherland. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyans, and a free grammar school of ancient date, which has an income from endowment of £132 per annum. There are other parochial charities worth about £10 a year.

BRADLEY, a chplry. united with Stock, in the par. of Fladbury, hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 6 miles to the E. of Droitwich. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Fladbury, in the dioc. of Worcester.

BRADLEY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. and par. of Huddersfield, wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, near Huddersfield. The London and North-Western railway passes near it.

BRADLEY FIELD, a joint chplry. with Underbarrow, in the par. of Kendal, Kendal ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 3 miles to the W. of Kendal.

BRADLEY, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, in the co. of Suffolk, 6½ miles to the N.E. of Haverhill, and 8 S. from Newmarket, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £407, in the patron. of the trustees of the Rev. W. S. P. Wilder. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was entirely repaired in 1841. A considerable part of the parish belongs to St. John's College, Cambridge.

BRADLEY GREEN, a vil. in the par. of Biddulph, hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 5 miles to the N. of Burslem.

BRADLEY HAVERSTOE WAPENTAKE, one of the 30 waps. or subdivisions of the co. of Lincoln, situated in the parts of Lindsey, and the north parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. and E. by the German ocean; on the S. by the waps. of Washcroft, Ludborough, and Louth Esk; and on the W. by the wap. of Yarborough. It contains the pars. of Ashby, Aylesby, Barnoldby-le-Beck, Beelsby, Bradley, Brigsley, Cabourne, Clee, Great Coates, Little Coates, North Coates, Cuxwold, Fulstow, Grainsby, Grimsby, Hatcliffe, Hawerby, Healing, Holton-le-Clay, Humberstone, Ireby, Laceby, Marsh Chapel, Newton Wold, East Ravendale, Rothwell, Scartho, Swallow, Swinhope, Tetney, North Thoresby, Waith, and Waltham. The wap. extends over an area of about 66,450 acres.

BRADLEY HUNDRED, one of the 27 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Gloucester, situated in the east parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hunds. of Kiftsgate and Deerhurst; on the E. by the hund. of Slaughter; on the S. by the hunds. of Brightwell's Barrow and Rapsgate; and on the W. by the hund. of Cheltenham. It contains the pars. of Aston Blank, Colne Rogers, Compton Abdale, Dowdeswell, Farmington, Hampnett, Hazleton, Northleach, Notgrove, Salperton, Sevenhampton, Shipton Oliffe, Shipton Sollars, Stowell, Turkdean, Whittington, Withington, and parts of Naunton and Bibury. The hund. covers an area of about 39,250 acres.

BRADLEY-IN-THE-MOORS, a par. in the south div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles to the E. of Cheadle, its post town. The North Staffordshire railway passes near it. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, worth £58, in the patron. of the Earl of Shrewsbury. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

BRADLEY, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, in the co. of Suffolk, 1 mile from Great Bradley. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £250, in the patron. of W. and C. Lamprell, Esqrs. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and contains five monumental brasses, the earliest being of the year 1508.

BRADLEY, MAIDEN. See MAIDEN BRADLEY, Wiltshire and Somersetshire.

BRADLEY MILLS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Dalton and par. of Kirk-heaton, in the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the N.E. of Huddersfield.

BRADLEY, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Whorwelsdown, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles to the S. of Trowbridge, its post town. It lies on the confines of Somersetshire, on the east side of the river Frome. A small stream, a branch of the Frome, crosses the par. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £398, in the patron. of the Warden and Fellows of Winchester College. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. There is another church, called Christ Church, erected by Dr. Daubeny, Archdeacon of Salisbury, at the village of Road Hill, the living of which is a perpet. cur. val. £159, in the patron. of the vicar. There is also a chapel belonging to the Baptists. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £123 per annum, consisting chiefly of the income of the asylum for 4 poor persons, and the free school, founded and endowed by Dr. Daubeny.

BRADLEYS, BOTH, or BRADLEY, LOWER and UPPER, a tnshp. in the par. of Kildwick, wap. of Staincliff and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the S. of Skipton.

BRADLEY, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Glaston-Twelve-Hides, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles to the E. of Glastonbury, its post town. It includes the hmlt. of Parbrook. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of East Pennard, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells.

BRADMORE, a par. in the north div. of the wap. of Rushcliffe, in the co. of Nottingham, 5 miles to the S. of Nottingham, its post town. Many of the villagers are employed in the manufacture of hosiery, above thirty frames being at work. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Bunny, in the dioc. of Lincoln. Of the church only the tower is standing, the rest of the building having been burnt down.

BRADNEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, and hund. of Brimstree, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles to the N.E. of Bridgnorth.

BRADNINCH, a par. and decayed borough in the hund. of Hayridge, in the co. of Devon, 2 miles to the S.S.W. of Cullompton, its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the small river Culme, about 1 mile from the Hele station of the Bristol and Exeter railway. Its ancient name was Bradenesse or Branies, and it was once of sufficient importance to send representatives to parliament in the reign of Edward II. It is still governed under an ancient charter, renewed and extended by James I., by a mayor, 12 masters, and a recorder. The town suffered greatly during the Civil War, being held alternately by the royalists and parliamentarians, and has been several times partly burnt down. The town contains a guildhall, a prison, and a court-house of recent erection. Quarter and petty sessions are held here. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the pursuits of agriculture, but some are engaged in the two large paper-mills. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £102, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Windsor. The church, erected in the reign of Henry VII., is dedicated to St. Dionysius. It is in the perpendicular style, with a tower of later erection, and contains a fine screen of carved oak and a rood-loft. It has been recently restored, at a cost of £1,100. The Baptists and Wealeyans have chapels in the town. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £70 per annum. There is a National school. Bradninch gives the title of baron to the dukes of Cornwall.

BRADNOP, a tnshp. in the par. of Leek, and hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles to the S.E. of Leek. There are copper mines in the neighbourhood, in which many of the inhabitants are employed.

BRADNOR, a joint tnshp. with Barton, in the par. of Kington, hund. of Huntington, in the co. of Hereford, not far from Kington. Bradnor Hill has on its summit the remains of an ancient camp, and commands an extensive prospect over the surrounding country.

BRADOCK. See BROADOAK, Cornwall.

BRADON, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Abdick and Bulstone, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the N. of Ilminster, its post town. It includes North Bradon. An old par. adjacent to this, called Goose or Gouiz Bradon, has long been depopulated. The living is a sinecure rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £133, in the patron. of the Earl of Egremont. The church is in ruins. It was dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene.

BRADPOLE, a par. in the hund. of Beaminster Forum and Redhone, in the co. of Dorset, 1 mile to the N.E. of Bridport, its post town, within which borough it is included. The Bridport and Dorchester branch of the Great Western railway passes by it. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. with the cur. of St. Andrew's annexed, of £265, in the pat. the lord chancellor. The church is ded. Holy Trinity. In addition to the parish chur is a chapel of ease, built in 1860. It is in th decorated style, and is dedicated to St. Andrew are National schools supported by subscription

BRADSHAW, a chplry. in the par. of B Moors, hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of L ter, 3 miles to the N.E. of Bolton. The Lancas Yorkshire railway runs near it. In the chpl large bleach-grounds. The living is a perpet the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the pat Vicar of Bolton. Bradshaw Hall is the old branch of the Bradshaw family related to J shaw, president of the court before which was tried.

BRADSHAW, a vil. in the tnshp. of Ov par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, in the West the co. of York, 1 mile to the N.W. of Ha town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the d val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Hal BRADSHAW EDGE, a tnshp. in the par en-le-Frith, hund. of High Peak, in the co. of mile from Chapel-en-le-Frith. In this tnsh shaw Hall, the residence of John Bradsh at the trial of Charles I.

BRADSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Lift co. of Devon, 4 miles to the S.E. of Laun stock is its post town. It lies on the confines wall, on the east bank of the river Tamar. is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. in the patron. of the bishop. The church to St. Nun.

BRADWALL, a tnshp. in the par. of hund. of Northwich, in the co. palatine of miles to the N. of Sandbach. The L Western railway runs through it. The p dence is Bradwall Hall, the residence of D

BRADWELL, a par. in the hund. of the co. of Buckingham, 3 miles to the Stratford, its post town. The London and North-W railway passes through it. The living is a dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £191, in the the lord chancellor. The church is d Lawrence. There are charitable benefit of the poor, amounting to £50 per Bradwell Grove is a meet for the Heythrop h

BRADWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 2 miles to Castleton. It is situated near the Peak, well Water and the river Noe, which here and calamine are found in the neighbourhood, a extensive works give employment to many Some of the inhabitants are engaged in cotton Divine service is performed in a licensed room clergyman from Hope. The Wesleyans, Methodists, and Unitarians have chapels and there is a small bequest for education, left Birley, who founded the school in 1825. A beautiful cavern exists in the neighbourhood shawe, and extends for nearly half a mile. It covered in 1807, and is lined with fine stalactites designations of Music Chamber, Grotto of Cupid are applied to different parts of it. A Roman is believed to have existed at Brough Castle, where coins, tiles, and other relics have been found. Bradwell forms part of the honour of Tutbury duchy of Lancaster. Near Eden Tree are two springs, similar to those at Buxton.

BRADWELL, a par. in the hund. of Mutford Lothingland, in the co. of Suffolk, 3 miles to of Yarmouth, its post town, and 8 from Lowestoft East Suffolk section of the Great Eastern railway near it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Nor of the val. of £632, in the patron. of J. Wodeh The tithes have been commuted. The church dedicated to St. Nicholas, and contains an organ. It has been recently restored, and a fine east w added by the Rev. W. Trivett, the incumbent.

regist dates from the year 1616. The par. comprises an ar of about 2,383 acres, principally the property of Sir S. M. Peto, Bart., who is lord of the manor. A Nation school was built here in 1851.

BR WELL ABBEY, an ext. par. lib. in the hund. of Ne port, in the co. of Buckingham, near Bradwell. It wa he site of a small Dominican priory, founded in the 12 century as a cell to Luffield Abbey, by Meinfelin, ron of Wolverton. It had a revenue of about £58 at e Dissolution.

BR WELL-NEXT-COGGESHALL, a par. in the hund. Witham, in the co. of Essex, 2 miles to the W. of oggeshall, its post town. It is situated on the river ackwater, and is a port subordinate to the port of Ma on. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochest of the val. of £258, in the patron. of M. P. C. Brunw , Esq. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity and contains monuments of the Maxey family, to wh the manor formerly belonged. The parochial charit produce £25 per annum.

BRA WELL-NEXT-THE-SEA, a par. in the hund. of Le ie, in the co. of Essex, 10 miles N. of Burnham, 15 miles to the E. of Maldon, its post town. It is situated on the coast of the German Ocean, at the mouth the river Blackwater, and is supposed to be the Oth a of the Romans, and the Ithanchester at which St. Ch built a church. It is called in Domesday Survey, Ithchester, and stands on a promontory, forming the so h horn of the Blackwater estuary. A coast-guar station stationed here, and there are several decoys for wild fo l in the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the annual val. of £1,624, in the patron. f W. M. Warner, Esq. The church, which has a lofty ick tower, commanding extensive views of the sea, is dicated to St. Thomas the Apostle. The chancel ha recently been rebuilt at the sole cost of the rector. Th re free schools, endowed by Dr. Buckeridge, wi h a revenue of £280 per annum. Near the coast are l remains of an ancient chapel, called Capella de la , now used as a barn. Bradwell Lodge is the rec- e, and was formerly the residence of the Rev. y Bate Dudley, Bart.

...A WOOD-WIDGER. See BROADWOOD-WIDGER, ...evre.

BR WORTHY, a par. in the hund. of Black Torr... on the co. of Devon, 7 miles to the N. of Holsworthy's post town. It lies on the border of Cornwall, on he Bude canal. The living is a vic.* in the ... of Exeter, of the val. with the perpet. cur. of Poughra Wyke annexed, of £243, in the patron. of the rown. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. T Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here.

BRA HEAD, a vil. in the par. of Carnwath, in the o. of Lark, Scotland, 6 miles to the E. of Lanark. Here s United Presbyterian church.

BRAE AR and CRATHIE, a par., forming part of the ... district of Braemar, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland It is the largest par. in Aberdeenshire, and is situat in the mountainous country towards the head of the rir Dee. The scenery is magnificent and finely diversifi large tracts being covered with forest, and the valle running up among the towering mountains. ...ochnagh, 3,789 feet high, is partly within the par., in which c tains, besides, the lofty peaks of Cairntoul, rising 4 20 feet above the level of the sea; Ben Muichdhi or Beinn-muic-Dhuidh, 4,292, being the second h est mountain in Britain; and Ben-na-Baird, ,940 fee Granite is the prevailing rock of the district; but there re immense masses of slate and some limestone. here are large native woods of birch, with thickets poplar, mountain ash, &c., but the forest of Mar, including the Balloch-buie, is most famed for the size and uality of its Scotch fir. It is well-stocked with red nd roe deer, and many kinds of game. The forest, for erly held by the Earl of Mar, and forfeited by him w n he headed the rebellion of 1715, now belongs to t Earl of Fife, and the Farquharsons of Invercauld. The Dee is the principal river, intersecting the paris from west to east, and dividing it into two nearly equal parts. There are several waterfalls, of which the most remarkable are the Garrawalt, Corriemulzie, and the Linn of Dee. The chief lake is Loch Callater, about 2 miles in circuit. The par. contains the vils. of Castletown and Auchindryne, the former of which has the remains of an ancient castle, or hunting-seat, according to tradition, of Malcolm Canmore. The inhabitants of the parish speak the Gaelic language; but English is generally understood. The living, worth about £300 a year, is in the presb. of Kincardine O'Niel, and in the gift of the crown. The church of Crathie, in which the minister of the united parishes preaches, is a plain edifice. It is not known at what time the parish of Braemar was annexed to that of Crathie. The Established Church of Scotland, in Braemar, is supplied by a missionary on the Royal Bounty, besides which there is a Roman Catholic chapel and a Free church, in connection with which last there is also one now building at Crathie, on the Abergeldie property. Near Castletown is Braemar Castle, the property of the Invercaulds. Near to the village of Monaltrie, in Crathie, beside the Dee, is a cairn called Cairn na Cuimhne, or "Cairn of Remembrance," to which the clansmen, when called out by their chieftains, used to resort. There are several schools in the parish, a friendly society, and a savings-bank. It extends in length 28 miles eastward, and its greatest breadth is 15 miles. Since 1848 the royal family have spent the autumn at Balmoral, in Crathie; and, by the building of the castle there, and the carrying out further improvements in the neighbourhood, fresh interest has been added to this part of the country. In addition to Balmoral Castle, there is also Abergeldie, a little to the east, belonging to Admiral Gordon; and farther up the country, Invercauld House, the universally-admired seat of the Farquharsons; as also Corriemulzie Cottage and Mar Lodge, the hunting seats of Lord Fife.

BRAFFERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Aycliffe, ward of Darlington, in the co. palatine of Durham, 4 miles to the N. of Darlington. The North-Eastern railway passes by it, and has a station at Aycliffe.

BRAFFERTON, a par. partly in the wap. of Bulmer, partly in that of Hallikeld, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.E. of Boroughbridge, its post town. It is a station on the Boroughbridge and Pilmoor branch of the North-Eastern railway. The par. includes the tnshps. of Brafferton, Thornton-Bridge, and Helperby. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £307, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

BRAFFORDS, a vil. in the tnshp. of Swanland, and par. of North Ferriby, in the wap. of Harthill, East Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the W. of Kingston-upon-Hull. The Hull, Selby, and Milford Junction railway passes by it, and there is a station at Ferriby.

BRAFIELD, or BRAYFIELD ON THE GREEN, a par. in the hund. of Wymersley, in the co. of Northampton, 5 miles to the E. of Northampton. The Northampton and Peterborough branch of the London and North-Western railway passes near it. The living is a vic. united with that of Little Houghton, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. There are some charitable endowments for the benefit of the poor, amounting to £16 a year.

BRAGBURY END, a hmlt. in the par. of Datchworth, hund. of Broadwater, in the co. of Hertford. It is situated 1 mile N. of the vil. of Datchworth, 3 N.W. of Welwyn railway station, 4 S.E. from Stevenage, its post town, and 27 from London.

BRAGRUM, a vil. in the par. of Methven, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 4 miles to the N.W. of Perth.

BRAICH-MELYN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanllechid, hund. of Uchaf, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 3 miles to the S.E. of Bangor.

BRAIDLEY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Carlton Highdale, and par. of Coverham, in the wap. of Hang, North Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles to the S.W. of Middleham.

BRAIDWOOD, a vil. in the par. of Carluke, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 4 miles to the N.W. of Lanark. It is a station on the Caledonian railway. The Roman way, Watling Street, passed through this place. Coal and limestone are obtained in the neighbourhood, and the works give employment to many of the inhabitants.

BRAILES, a par. in the Brailes div. of the hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, 3 miles to the E. of Shipston-on-Stour. It lies on the border of Oxfordshire, and contains the hmlts. of Chelmscott and Winderton. Brailes was anciently a market town, and the manor was held by the Earls of Warwick under a grant from William the Conqueror. There is some fine scenery in the neighbourhood. In the village is a manufactory of shag and plush, and a factory belonging to J. Gillett, the patentee of the rick ventilator. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, of the val. of £344, in the patron. of J. Thornton, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. George, is a handsome stone structure with a square tower, and is partly in the early English style. The Society of Friends have a chapel, and there is a library and reading-room. Here is an endowed free school founded in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, which has a revenue of £64 per annum; also a National school, and a Roman Catholic chapel with a school attached. The parish has the enjoyment of several other charitable endowments, producing about £70 a year. Brailes House is the seat of the Sheldon family, who have long held the manor and are the chief landholders. Brailes Cover is a mile from the village.

BRAILSFORD, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, in the co. of Derby, 7 miles to the N.W. of Derby, its post town. Ednaston is a hmlt. of this par. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £673, in the patron. of Earl Ferrers. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here. There are some charities of small value.

BRAINTFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Cashio, in the co. of Hertford, 3 miles to the N.W. of Hertford, its post town. The Hertford branch of the Great Northern railway passes near it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £267, in the patron. of Abel Smith, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. Thomas à Becket is said to have held the rectory of this parish as his first preferment in the Church. The principal residence is Braintfield Place.

BRAINTREE, a par. and market town in the hund. of Hinckford, in the co. of Essex, 11 miles to the N. of Chelmsford, and about 44 miles to the N.E. of London by the Great Eastern railway, with which it is connected by a branch line of 6 miles from Witham Junction. It is situated on the banks of the river Pant or Blackwater, and is a town of great antiquity. It is mentioned in the Norman survey under the name of Raines, and was at an early time one of the possessions of the see of London. An episcopal palace is said to have existed here, but there are no remains of it. One of the principal roads leading from the metropolis into East Anglia passed through this place, and many pilgrims to the shrines of St. Edmund at Bury, and of Our Lady of Walsingham, were lodged and entertained here on their way. The privilege of a market was granted to the town in the reign of King John. Flemish artizans, driven from their own country by the cruel persecution of Protestants by the Duke of Alva, settled here in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and introduced the woollen manufacture, which was for a long time carried on to a considerable extent, but has now entirely disappeared. The town stands on rising ground, and consists of several narrow irregular streets. Many of the houses are very old and built of timber. The principal business is the silk manufacture, which has superseded the woollen trade, and gives employment to 1,000 hands. There are several flour-mills and a brush manufactory. A few persons are engaged in making straw-plait. Braintree was formerly governed by the town magistrates and a body of 24 parishioners, who bore the title of governors of the town. It is now within the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, who hold petty sessions here weekly for South Hinchford division. It is the head of a Poor-law Union comp 14 parishes, the seat of a County Court, whic monthly, and a polling place for the north di county. The living is a vic.* in the dioc of the val. of £300, in the patron. of Ralph L Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. It on an elevated spot, and is a large structure of the perpendicular style of architecture, with surmounted by a shingle spire. The tower is early English style, and the spire of more recent tion. In the reign of Henry VIII. three pe of "mysteries," or religious plays, took pla church, the profits of which were applied to the ment of the building. The church contains a mo to Dr. Collins, physician to the Czar, Peter the There are chapels in the town belonging to the Independents, Wesleyans, and the Society of There are two free schools; one of which was and endowed by James Coker in 1702, and has of £18 a year. John Ray, the naturalist, education at this school. But the principal that founded in the reign of Charles I. by Henry (usually known as "Dog Smith,") for the poor of this and thirteen neighbouring parishes, produce of which is now about £325 per mechanics' institute was established in the town years since. Ruins of a very ancient church in the parish, and Roman relics have frequently discovered. Braintree has suffered several plague on several occasions, and especially in the following year, when more than 1,000 victims to it. Wednesday is the market day held on the 7th May for toys and fancy goods the 2nd October for cattle, hops, &c. each three days. Though Braintree and Bocking distinct parishes, they form one continuous tending a mile on the road between Chelmsford Clare, and the rivers Blackwater and Pod BRAISEWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Hoxne in the co. of Suffolk, 2 miles to the S. of Eye town. The Great Eastern railway passes has a station at Mellis, which is 4 miles distant south-east. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £149, in the patron. of Sir E. Kerrison, Bart. who is lord of the manor. The church of St. Mary old building, now disused, a handsome new church ing been recently erected in another part of the parish.

BRAISTY WOOD, a hmlt. in the chapelry of Ledsham with, par. of Kirkby Malzeard, in the wapentake of West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the W. of Ripley.

BRAITHWAITE, a tnshp. in the par. of Crosthwaite, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the county of Cumberland, 3 miles to the W. of Keswick. It lies near the northern extremity of Derwentwater, at the foot of the lofty Whinlatter Fells, from which there is a magnificent prospect over the surrounding district of mountain and lake. Some of the villagers are employed in the woollen manufacture, and in working the lead mines.

BRAITHWAITE, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Mary Carlisle, Leath ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 6 miles to the E. of Hesket-Newmarket. It is grouped with the hamlet of Middlesceugh; and, like it, lies in the valley at some distance from the parish to which it belongs.

BRAITHWAITE, a hmlt. in the par. of Burghwap. of Staincliff and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, not far from Keighley.

BRAITHWAITE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkby with, wap. of Osgoldcross, in the West Riding of the of York, 4 miles to the W. of Thorne.

BRAITHWELL, a par. in the south div. of the of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding co. of York, 7 miles to the S.W. of Doncaster Bawham is its post town. It includes the tnshp. of Ryley. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. of £330, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. church is dedicated to St. James, and contains ancient monuments; one of large size to the fo the church, and the other to Thomas Sheffield, of parish, who died in 1406. Remains of an old cross, with an inscription in French, exist in the village. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here. There is a free school, endowed by Thomas Bosville in 1818, which has an income of £14 per annum. The other charitable endowments of the parish are worth £10 a year. Roman antiquities have been found in the neighbourhood.

BRAKES, a tnshp. in the par. of Leintwardine, hund. of Wigmore, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles to the W. of Ludlow.

BRAMBELEY, the ancient name of Bromley, Middlesex.

BRAMBER, a par. in the hund. of Steyning and rape of Bramber, in the co. of Sussex, contiguous to Steyning, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Adar, and though now an inconsiderable village, is a very ancient place, and was formerly of some importance. The manor was given by William the Conqueror to William de Braose, one of his followers, by whose descendants a castle, previously belonging to the Saxon kings, was much enlarged and strengthened. It was a market town and a borough by prescription, returning two members to parliament until it was disfranchised by the Reform Act in 1832. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, of the val. with the vic. of Botolph united to it, £160, in the patron. of the President and Fellow of Magdalene College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. It is a very ancient building of small size, partly in the Norman style of architecture, and is now in ruins. The castle, which was of considerable extent and surrounded by a moat, stood on the Roman road, now called Bramber Street, which passed through the parish. The remains consist of the gateway, parts of the walls, and a fine window. From the castle there is a good prospect southward to the sea. The manor and castle of Bramber are now held by the Duke of Norfolk.

BRAMBER RAPE, one of the six subdivisions of the county of Sussex, situated in the western parliamentary division of the co., and bounded on the N. by the co. of Surrey, on the E. by the rape of Lewes; on the S. by the English Channel; and on the W. by the rape of Arundel. It contains the hunds. of Brightford, Burbeach, East Eastwrith, Fishergate, Patching, Singlecross, Steyning, Tarring, Tipnoak, West Grinstead, and Windham, and Ewhurst. The whole of this rape, with the exception of the borough of Horsham, has, since 1771, been included within the bounds of the borough of New Shoreham. It extends over an area of about 116,650 acres.

BRAMCOTE, a par. in the south div. of the wap. of Broxtow, in the co. of Nottingham, 4½ miles to the S.E. of Nottingham, its post town. It lies near the border of Derbyshire, amongst lofty hills, and is crossed by the Nottingham canal. The Midland railway runs near this place, and has a station at Beeston, about 2 miles to the W. of the vil. There is a large tract of moor in the par., in which a colliery has been lately opened by Lord Middleton. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of lace and hosiery, and there are several malting establishments. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Attenborough, in the dioc. of Lincoln. In the church, which is an old building with a tower, are some monuments of the Handley family, to whom the manor once belonged. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school. In 1852, Miss Longden built and endowed four almshouses for poor women. The other charitable endowments of the par. amount to £26 per annum. Near the village are the Bramcote Hills, on which is a detached mass of rock, called the Hemlock Stone. The principal residences are Bramcote House and Bramcote Grove.

BRAMCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Bulkington, partly also in the par. of Wolvey, in the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 4 miles to the S.E. of Nuneaton.

BRAMDEAN, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Meonstoke, in the co. of Southampton, 3 miles to the S.E. of New Alresford, its post town, and 9 E. from Winchester. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £201, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to SS. Simon and Jude, is a small ancient structure, with a small spire and pointed roof. The south transept has been recently added. A Roman pavement, of great extent and in good preservation, has been discovered at this place, on the estate of Colonel Greenwood.

BRAMERTON, a par. in the hund. of Henstead, in the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles to the S.E. of Norwich, its post town. The Great Eastern railway passes near. Many interesting fossils have been found in the crag beds in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, and in the patron. of R. Fellowes, Esq. The church, which is dedicated to St. Peter, is of ancient foundation, and was rebuilt in 1462. It contains some family monuments of the Houghtons and Corrys. The register dates from 1560. A handsome National school was erected in 1853. There is also a free school, endowed with a small sum, the bequest of William Berney, in 1715. Near the village is Bramerton Hall. The common was enclosed in 1852, when two acres were appropriated for recreation grounds, and two more for garden plots for the poor.

BRAMFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Blything, in the co. of Suffolk, 3 miles to the S. of Halesworth. Saxmundham is its post town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £172, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, which is dedicated to St. Andrew, was entirely repaired by Abel Smith, Esq., M.P., in 1847, and contains a monument to Arthur, third son of Sir Edward Coke. It has a round tower standing detached. The parochial charities, consisting of the income of an almshouse for 4 persons, and a small free school, amount to about £30 per annum. The National school was erected at the sole expense of Mr. Smith, in 1847. Bramfield Hall is the chief residence.

BRAMFORD, a par. in the hund. of Bosmere and Claydon, in the co. of Suffolk, 3 miles to the N.W. of Ipswich, its post town, and 70¾ from London. It is a considerable vil., and a station on the Great Eastern railway. The par. is intersected by the navigable river Gipping, and the Stowmarket and Ipswich canal. There are 10 acres of common and 10 acres of cottage gardens. The greater part of the soil belongs to Sir G. Broke Middleton, Bart., who is lord of the manor. There is a large paper-mill, flour-mill, and two manure factories on the river. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. with the perpet. cur. of Burstall, of £79, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Stephen, is in the early English and decorated styles of architecture; it has recently been restored, and has three fine arches in the chancel, with a square tower and leaden spire. The charitable endowments produce about £25 a year, and there are good schools for 150 children, built in 1860. There is an Independent chapel. Bramford Hall is the principal mansion. It is built in the modern style, and at present occupied by Lieutenant-Colonel Phillips, but is the property of Sir G. Broke Middleton.

BRAMHALL, or BRAMALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Stockport, hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. palatine of Chester, 3 miles to the S. of Stockport. It is a station on the Macclesfield branch of the London and North-Western railway. Bramhall Hall is an interesting specimen of the domestic architecture of the latter half of the 15th century. It is an irregular and picturesque pile, chiefly timbered, and pleasantly situated on high ground between two valleys, and is the seat of the Davenport family. The domestic chapel, in the S.E. angle of the building, contains some remarkably fine carving, and some good stained windows. Among the apartments of the house are the Paradise Room, the Plaster Room, and the Great Chamber, the last of which is approached by a spiral staircase formed of solid blocks of oak. The hall contains many old portraits.

BRAMHAM, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Barkstone-Ash, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the W. of Tadcaster, its post town. It includes the chplries. of Clifford, and Boston Spa. Northward of the vil. is Bramham Moor, across which ran the Roman road, Watling Street. On this moor a battle was fought in 1408, in which the Earl of Northumberland was defeated and slain by Sir Thomas Rokeby, and the crown thereby secured to Henry IV. From the centre of the moor, which is considerably elevated, there is an extensive prospect over the surrounding country, three navigable rivers and 10 towns, with a great number of seats and parks, being within sight. The district contains abundance of limestone and coal. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £300, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Christ Church College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to All Saints. In addition to the parish church there are two district churches, one at Boston Spa and the other at Clifford. The livings of both are perpet. curs.* the former of the val. of £180, and the latter of £65. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village. There is a small free school, with an endowment of £18 per annum, the produce of several bequests. The other parochial charities are worth about £30 a year. The principal seats are Bramham Park and Bramham Biggin. The former was the seat of Lord Bingley, who erected the mansion, a large and handsome edifice, with fine gardens and well-planted grounds. The latter, once the seat of Sir Philip Musgrave, Bart., is now the property of Lord Headley.

BRAMHOPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Otley, and wap. of Skyrack, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the S.E. of Otley, its post town. The Leeds and Thirsk section of the North-Eastern railway passes through it. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, of the val. of £148, in the patron. of the Vicar of Otley. There is a small endowed school, with an income of £9 a year. Bramhope Hall is the chief residence.

BRAMINGHAM, GREAT and LITTLE, hmlts. in the par. of Luton, hund. of Flitt, in the co. of Bedford, 4 miles to the N. of Luton.

BRAMLEY, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Basingstoke, in the co. of Southampton, 5 miles to the N. of Basingstoke, its post town. Part of the par. is laid out in hop-grounds. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £385, in the patron. of the Provost and Fellows of Queen's College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and has a monumental brass of the year 1508.

BRAMLEY, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Blackheath, in the co. of Surrey, 3 miles to the S. of Guildford, its post town. It is intersected by the Arun and Wey canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £160, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is partly in the early English style, and is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. There are some charitable endowments worth £6 per annum. Bramley House is the seat of Captain Wyndham.

BRAMLEY, a chplry. in the par. and borough of Leeds, locally in the wap. of Skyrack, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.W. of Leeds, its post town. It is a station on the Leeds, Bradford, and Halifax Junction railway. The chplry. contains part of Stanningley, Rodley, and other vils. Bramley forms one of the 12 wards of the borough of Leeds, and the inhabitants are principally employed in the cloth trade of the district. The Leeds and Liverpool canal passes near this place, and there are some extensive and valuable quarries of slate and sandstone.—The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, of the val. of £239, in the patron. of the Vicar of Leeds. The Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists have chapels here, and there is an endowment for education, producing about £30 per annum. The value of the other parochial charities is about £70 a year.

BRAMLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Braithwell, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the E. of Rotherham. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. Bramley Grange, a pleasant residence, was formerly connected with the abbey of Roche.

BRAMLEY HEAD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of [illegible] cross, and par. of Fewston, in the wap. of [illegible] Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles to the W. [illegible]

BRAMPFORD-SPEKE, a par. in the hund. of [illegible] ford, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the N. of [illegible] its post town. It is situated on the E. side of the Exe, and is crossed by the Bristol and Exeter r[illegible] The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the of £216, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. church is dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial consisting of the parish lands, are worth about £[illegible] In 1849 the Rev. George Gorham was presented vic. of Brampford-Speke, and the famous "Gorham Case," in the Ecclesiastical Courts, grew out opposition of the Bishop of Exeter to that presentation on the ground of the theological opinions Gorham.

BRAMPTON, a par. and market town in [illegible] ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 9 miles [illegible] Carlisle, and 50 W. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, situated in a hilly country, on the banks of the Irthing and Gelt, about 1¼ miles from the Newcastle Carlisle railway, which passes to the S. and has a station at Milton. The tnshps. of Easby and Newby are included in this par. Brampton is a town of great antiquity, and is conjectured by Camden, the [illegible] to have been the site of the Roman station Banna, which is now usually assigned to Old Church, which is about 2 miles to the S. of the wall of Hadrian. The parish is parcel of the ancient barony of Gilsland, the lords of which had their principal seat in Naworth Castle, now one of the seats of the Earl of Carlisle. The town suffered to a great extent in the troubles of the 14th century. It was held for the Pretender in the rebellion of 1715, and was occupied by Prince Charles Stuart in 1745. It stands in a deep valley, surrounded by well-wooded hills, and consists of the principal streets (the houses of which, being old, are irregularly built), and a spacious market-place. Many improvements, however, have lately been made, and many of the houses have been rebuilt in a superior style. It is lighted with gas, and has a good supply of water. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of ginghams and checks. There are also [illegible] a tannery, skin-yard, and several factories for [illegible] A branch railway connects Brampton with the [illegible] collieries and lime-works at Tindal Fell. Limestone is quarried in the neighbourhood. The town-hall is a modern house, built in 1817 by the Earl of Carlisle, in an octagonal structure, surmounted by a cupola. The petty sessions are held by the county magistrates every Wednesday in the police-office, which was erected in 1857. Brampton is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and the place for the eastern division of the county. It contains a mechanics' institute, workmen's reading-room, gas-works, stamp-office, and [illegible] The county court is held every alternate [illegible] at the "Howard Arms," and courts-leet are held by the [illegible] rony of Gilsland at Easter and Michaelmas. The poorhouse is situated half a mile to the south of the town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. of £166, in the patron. of the Earl of Carlisle. The church is dedicated to St. Martin, and was rebuilt in 1788, partly out of the materials of the ancient parish church, which stood above a mile from the town, on the south bank of the Irthing. In 1827 the [illegible] was considerably enlarged, and the tower, which contains a peal of six bells, the largest of which weighs half a ton. Part of the old church is still standing, and the chancel serves for a cemetery chapel. There are chapels belonging to the Independents, Presbyterians, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists. An hospital for 12 aged persons was projected, and the [illegible] ted by the Earl of Carlisle in 1688, but the endowment was not carried out. There are [illegible] National, Congregational, and infant schools. The [illegible] is a handsome building, completed in 1857 at [illegible]

£1,260 and has an average attendance of 150 children. The in[fant]-school has an average attendance of 100 children. [It] on a rock by the river Gelt, 2 miles to the S. of Bramp[ton], is a Roman inscription, attributed by some to the sol[diers] of Agricola, but by others considered to be of mu[ch] later origin, probably about the year 207. Nawor[th] Castle and Lanercost Priory are each about 2 miles [from] this town. Eastward of Brampton is a lofty c[on]ical mount, called the Mote, or the Castle Hill, at the [foot] of which are traces of an ancient camp, and th[e] summit of which commands a very wide prospect — [east]ward over Carlisle and the flat country to the Solway [Firth], northwards towards Bewcastle and the Scottis[h] mountains, and eastward to the Cheviot Hills and T[he] Vale Fell. The market, chiefly for corn, is held on W[ednes]day. Fairs for the sale of cattle, pigs, horses, and sh[eep], are held on the 20th April, the second Wednesday after Whitsuntide, the second Wednesday in Septe[mber], and the 23rd October; and for the sale of w[ool] on the 17th June. An annual regatta and wrest[ling] match is held in the month of August at a short d[ista]nce from the town, on the banks of a small lake [called] Talkin Tarn.

BRAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Scarsdale, in the co. of [Der]by, 3 miles to the W. of Chesterfield, its post town, [and] 160 from London. It is situated on the Chesterfield [Canal] and Gainsborough canal, and contains the hmlt. of C[alow]pe. Coal and ironstone are abundant here, and [there] are some extensive iron-works in the neighbourhood. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of pottery, fire-bricks, tobacco-pipes, &c. There are also factories for the manufacture of indiarubber needles, cotton-wicks, and lint. The church is dedicated to St. Peter is a plain building, with a square tower, and contains several ancient family monuments. A new church has been erected in the eastern part of the parish, called New Brampton, and is dedicated to St. Thomas; it contains 700 sittings, of which half are free. The livings of both are perpet. curs.* severally £150, and in the patron. of the bishop. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels here. There is a National school and a small endowed school with an income of £11 a year. The parochial charities produce altogether about £85 per annum. Brampton Hall is one of the principal mansions. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor.

BRAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Leightonstone, in the co. of Huntingdon, 1 mile to the W. of Huntingdon, its post town. It lies on the W. side of the river Ouse. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £60, in the patron. of the Bishop of Ely. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is partly in the perpendicular style of architecture, and has a beautiful porch on the south side. It contains a monument to Sir John Barnard Bart., of Brampton Park, who died in 1679. The charitable endowments of the parish are worth £16 a year. Brampton was the birthplace (1632) of Samuel Pepys, author of the well-known "Diary." He filled the office of Secretary to the Admiralty, and was elected President of the Royal Society in 1684. Brampton Park is the seat of Lady Olivia B. Sparrow. The mansion was rebuilt in 1820, and contains several interesting portraits of the St. John family.

BRAMPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Torksey and wap. of Well, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 7 miles to the S. of Gainsborough. It lies not far from the river Trent.

BRAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, in the co. of Norfolk, 2 miles to the S.E. of Aylsham, its post town. It is situated on the river Bure, which is here navigable for barges, &c. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £160, in the patron. of H. J. Marsham, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Peter, and has a round tower with an octangular lantern. There are some charities of small amount. Roman urns and relics have been found here.

BRAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Corby, in the co. of Northampton, 6 miles to the S.W. of Rockingham. Market Harborough is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £400, in the patron. of Earl Spencer. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, contains two monumental brasses. The parochial charities amount to £6 a year. The rectory of this parish was once held by Bishop Cumberland.

BRAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Blything, in the co. of Suffolk, 4 miles to the N.E. of Halesworth. Wangford is its post town. It is a station on the East Suffolk section of the Great Eastern railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £434, in the patron. of the Rev. G. O. Leman. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The charitable endowments of the parish, including £9, the income of a school, amount to £65 per annum. Brampton Hall has long been the seat of the Leman family, who hold the manor. About 1 mile from the village is Brampton Old Hall.

BRAMPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Long Marton, East ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 2 miles to the N. of Appleby, and 1 mile from the Appleby station of the Eden Valley railway. There are no remains of the mansion formerly existing here, the seat of the Burtons, who had the manor through the Viteriponts, Greystocks, and other families.

BRAMPTON-ABBOTT'S, a par. in the hund. of Greytree, in the co. of Hereford, 1 mile to the N. of Ross, its post town. It is situated on the E. bank of the river Wye, near the Hereford, Ross, and Gloucester branch of the Great Western railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. of £245, in the patron. of the bishop of the diocese. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities are of small value.

BRAMPTON-BIERLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Wath-upon-Dearne, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S.E. of Barnsley. Rotherham is its post town. It is situated on the Dove and Dearne canal, and includes the hmlt. of Coley Lane and several others. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the extensive iron-foundries, of which there are several in the neighbourhood. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Wath-upon-Dearne. The church was erected in 1855. The charitable endowments consist of bequests by George Ellis in 1711, and by John Higson in 1814, for various benevolent purposes, and produce about £170 per annum. The income is principally applied to the support of a free school, which was founded in 1818 by the trustees of George Ellis.

BRAMPTON-BRYAN, a par. chiefly in the hund. of Wigmore, in the co. of Hereford, but partly also in the hund. of Knighton, in the co. of Radnor, South Wales, 6 miles to the N. of Presteign. Shrewsbury is its post town. It lies on the S. bank of the river Teme, and includes the tnshps. of Boresford, the hmlts. of Pedwardine and Brampton-Bryan, and the lordship of Stanage, the last being the only part of the par. in Radnorshire. The castle, which was founded here before the reign of Edward I., was the seat of the Harley family. It stood several sieges, and being garrisoned for the parliament in the civil war of the reign of Charles I., was at last burnt by the royalists. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. of £350, in the patron. of Lady Langdale. The church is dedicated to St. Barnabas, and contains a monument to Robert Harley, the first Earl of Oxford, by whose son, the second earl, the valuable collection of MSS. named after him the Harleian, and now in the British Museum, was formed. Part of the church was destroyed with the castle during the Civil War. There is a free school, endowed with £19 a year, the produce of a bequest by the Hon. Edward Harley in 1721. Coxwall Knoll, in an adjacent township, is interesting as the site of a camp occupied by the Britons under Caractacus, before his final defeat by Ostorius. Not far from the church are the remains of the ancient castle, consisting of the gatehouse, flanked by two round towers, and part of the walls. Brampton Park occupies an elevated situation, and covers an area of above 6 miles in circuit, but contains no residence. A cattle fair is held in the village on the 22nd of June.

BRAMPTON-CHAPEL, a par. in the hund. of Nobottle-Grove, in the co. of Northampton, 4 miles to the N. of Northampton, its post town. It is a station on the Northampton, Market Harborough, and Stamford branch of the London and North-Western railway. There is no church.

BRAMPTON-CHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Nobottle-Grove, in the co. of Northampton, close to Brampton-Chapel. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £346, in the patron. of the President and Fellows of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The church, which is partly in the perpendicular and partly in the decorated style, is dedicated to St. Botolph. It contains a round font, and had formerly a rood-loft. The parochial charities are worth £6 a year. The chief residence is Brampton Lodge.

BRAMPTON-CROFTS-END, a vil. in the par. of Long Marton, East ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 2 miles to the N. of Appleby.

BRAMPTON-EN-LE-MORTHEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Treeton, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S.E. of Rotherham.

BRAMPTON, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Presteign, hund. of Wigmore, in the co. of Hereford, 2 miles to the S. of Presteign. It lies on the border of Radnorshire, and is united to the tnshp. of Rodd.

BRAMPTON, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hopesay, and hund. of Purslow, in the co. of Salop, 5 miles to the S.E. of Bishop's Castle.

BRAMSHALL, or BROMSHALL, a par. in the south div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles to the W. of Uttoxeter, its post town, and 13 N.E. of Stafford. It is a station on the Crewe, Stoke, and Uttoxeter branch of the North Staffordshire railway. Dugdale is a hmlt. of this par. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £200, with 40 acres of glebe, in the patron. of the dowager Lady Willoughby de Broke, to whom also the manor belongs. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a neat structure, in the early English style, with low embattled tower. It stands on an eminence about half a mile south of the vil., and was rebuilt in 1835. There is a free school, supported by Lady Broke. The parochial charities, consisting of the produce of the church lands, are worth about £16 per annum.

BRAMSHALL, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Uttoxeter, hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, about 2 miles from Uttoxeter.

BRAMSHAW, a par. chiefly in the hund. of Redbridge, in the co. of Southampton, but partly also in the hund. of Cawden and Cadworth, in the co. of Wilts, 6 miles to the N. of Lyndhurst, its post town. It includes the hmlts. of Brook and Fritham. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £161, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Peter. It is said to have been founded at the period of the Conquest, but its original character has been lost through modern alterations. Bramshaw House is one of the chief residences.

BRAMSHILL, GREAT, a tythg. in the par. of Eversley, hund. of Holdshott, in the co. of Southampton, 5 miles to the N. of Odiham. Bramshill House, the seat of Sir J. Cope, Bart., is a stately mansion, well situated, and is said to have been erected by Edward Lord Zouch in 1607, as a residence for Prince Henry, eldest son of James I. It has long been the property of the Cope family.

BRAMSHILL, LITTLE, a tythg. in the par. of Eversley, hund. of Holdshott, in the co. of Southampton, close to Great Bramshill.

BRAMSHOTT, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Finch-Dean, in the co. of Southampton, 4 miles to the W. of Haslemere, 9 N.W. of Petersfield, and 10 S. from Farnham railway station. It lies on the border of Surrey, in the midst of extensive heaths, and contains the hmlt. of Liphook, which is a considerable village, post town, and railway station on the London Portsmouth direct line. The living is a rec the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £785, patron. of the Provost and Fellows of Queen's, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St Mary is a small structure in the form of a cross, n early English style of architecture, with a central and shingled spire. It stands on high ground, manding an extensive prospect, and was enlarged in 1836 at the cost of £1,500. There is school, endowed by the liberality of a former portion of Woolmer Forest, now converted into a tary camp, is in this parish; as also Boarhun formerly a detached part of Sussex, and Hampshire in 1844. The parish extends over 6,676 acres, a large proportion of which is waste Cattle fairs are held at Liphook (where there chapel for Bible Christians) on the first Wed March and the 11th June.

BRAMWITH, KIRK, a par. in the upper d wap. of Osgoldcross, in the West Riding of York, 6 miles to the N.E. of Doncaster, its post It is a station on the South Yorkshire railway waite, Hawkhouse Green, and Kirkhouse Gre hmlts. included in this par. The Stainforth and canal passes through it. The living is a rect dioc. of York, of the val. of £517, in the patron Duchy of Lancaster. The church is dedicated Mary. There are some small charitable endowme worth £4 a year.

BRAMWITH, SAND, or SOUTH BRAMWITH hmlt. in the tnshp. of Stainforth, and par. of wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Ri the co. of York, close to Kirk Bramwith.

BRANAR, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangerniew of Isaled, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales to the N.E. of Llanrwst. It is a joint tnshp Marchalad.

BRANCASTER, a par. in the hund. of Smithd the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles to the W. of Burnham and 6 from Hunstanton, a watering-place, at railway station. Lynn is its post town. It is situated on the coast of the German Ocean, of its own name, and was the site of the Roman called Brannodunum, of which few traces are For defence against the Saxons, a body of cavalry was stationed here, whose commander title of Count of the Saxon Shore. In the vicar very large malthouse, capable of wetting 12 quarters barley per week, but not now used for the purpose is above 300 feet in length by 31 feet broad. built of the remains of the ancient fortress, which above six acres of ground above the Marsh. and stones are still visible. The living is a rec the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £821, in of the Rev. O. Sadler, incumbent. The church cated to St. Mary, and was thoroughly repaired It contains an ancient font, and a register wh from 1538. The Dissenters have a chapel. charitable endowments of the parish produce per annum; which sum is chiefly the income free school, rebuilt in 1861, and of the charities widows, founded about 1600 by Robert Smith dowed by his sister. There is also a girls' school in 1861, at the cost of the government. A corps stationed at Brancaster. Numerous Roman consisting of coins, urns, knives, &c., have times been discovered on the site of the station to the east of the village. The Roman road, Jew's Way, passed through the parish from to the Roman station at Caistor, near Yarmouth.

BRANCASTER-STRAITH, is a vil in the par., consisting of detached houses, and is distant 1 mile E. of the church.

BRANCEPETH, a par. in the north-west di the ward of Darlington, in the co. palatine of Dur 4 miles to the S.W. of Durham, its post town, 254 from London. It lies to the N. of the river W and is a station on the Durham and Bishop Auck branch f the North-Eastern railway. The parish is of great ent, and comprises the chplries. of Crook and Willin on, and the tnshps. of Brancepeth, Brandon-with-B shottles, Billy Row, Hedley Hope, Helmington Row, d Stockley. It is the site of a castle founded by the ulmers in the reign of Stephen, which passed afterw ls by marriage to the Nevilles, who long held possess n of it. Coal is extensively worked, and there e numerous coke ovens, besides some stone quarri and several mineral springs. Brancepeth collier is situated S.W. of the village. The living is a r t.* in the dioc. of Durham, of the val. of £811, the patron. of Viscount Boyne. The church is dedi ted to St. Brandon. It is an ancient structure in th orm of a cross, and contains some stalls with fine c ved work, a monumental brass of a priest who d 1 in 1456, and several family monuments of the B mers and Nevilles. The rectory is a very hands e building, in a pleasant situation adjoining the ch ch. Besides the parish church, there are two distric churches—one at Willington, recently erected, and t other at Crook, a very considerable village. They both in the Gothic style; the former dedicated to St. tephen, and the latter to St. Catherine. The livings f both are perpet. curs.,* val. £100 and £150 respe ely, in the patron. of the Rector of Brancepeth. The Wesleyan, New Connexion, and Primitive Methodists ve chapels, and a handsome Roman Catholic church has lately been erected in the Gothic style, with s ools attached. There are also National schools, and a mechanics' institute, erected in 1851. The paroch l charities produce about £40 per annum. The C stle f Brancepeth, which is a stately but irregular pile, nds on a steep bank over a small stream, a br nch of the river Wear, and was almost entirely re built bout 1820 by Matthew Russell, Esq. It is now the se of Viscount Boyne. Brandon Hill, in an adjace township, commands a very wide prospect. The I ke of Gloucester (afterwards Richard III.) is said have frequently visited Brancepeth for the sake of hunting the wild boars, which were once numerous in the eighbourhood. The par. spreads over an area of 22,5 acres, of which 4,515 acres are comprised within he tnshp. of Brancepeth, the sole property of Lord yne.

BRANCH AND DOLE HUNDRED, one of the 28 hundr r subdivisions of the co. of Wilts, situated in the sou parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N., y the hund. of Swanborough; on the E. by the hunds. f Amesbury and Underditch; on the S. by the hund. f Dunworth and Cawden; and on the W. by the hund. of Heytesbury. It contains the pars. of Berwick Sherton-Anger, Fugglestone, Little Langford, Steeple Langford, Maddington, South Newton, Orcheston St Mary, Sherrington, Shrewton, Stapleford, Tilshead, Wylye, Stoke Winterbourne, and Great Wishford, with part of the par. of Wilton. The hund. comprises an area of about 38,440 acres.

BRANDESTON, a par. in the hund. of Loes, in the co. of Suffolk, 4 miles to the S.W. of Framlingham, 5 from Wickham Market, its post town, and 12 N.E. of Ipswich. It is situated on the banks of the river Deben. A branch of the Great Eastern railway runs from Wickham Market to Framlingham. The living is a vic.* in the dio. of Norwich, val. £100, in the patron. of the Rev. T. Smythe. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a Gothic building, with square tower. There is an Independent chapel, built in 1838, capable of accommodating 00 persons. The school is supported by Charles Austin Esq., J.P., who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. There are some poor's land and other charitable endowments of small value. A new vicarage has lately been built.

BRANDISTONE, a par. in the hund. of Eynsford, in the . of Norfolk, 4 miles to the S.W. of Aylsham. Attleborough is its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £180, in the patron. of the President and Fellows of Magdalene College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The poor have the benefit of charitable bequests, producing about £23 per annum. Brandistone Hall, the seat of the Atthills, is the principal residence.

BRANDON, a tnshp. united with Byshottles, in the par. of Brancepeth, ward of Darlington, in the co. palatine of Durham, 3 miles to the S.W. of Durham. The Durham and Bishop Auckland branch railway passes near it, with a station at Brancepeth. The village contains a paper-mill, which gives employment to some of the inhabitants. Brandon Hill, in this tnshp., rises to the height of nearly 880 feet, and has on its summit a remarkable tumulus, oblong in form, and about 24 feet high. The view from this hill is of great extent, and includes not fewer than eight castles.

BRANDON, a vil. in the bar. of Corkaguiney, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 20 miles to the W. of Tralee. It is seated on the coast of Brandon Bay, near the headland bearing the same name. The Crosbie family took the title of baron from this place.

BRANDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Hough-on-the-Hill, wap. of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 7 miles to the N. of Grantham. It is not far from the Great Northern railway.

BRANDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Eglingham, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 7 miles to the S. of Wooler. It is watered by the river Breamish.

BRANDON, or BRANDON-FERRY, a par. and market town, in the hund. of Lackford, in the co. of Suffolk, 7 miles to the N.W. of Thetford, and 78 miles N.E. from London by road, or 88¼ miles by the Great Eastern railway, on which it is a station. It is pleasantly situated on the banks of the Little Ouse, which is also called the Brandon river, and is here crossed by a stone bridge. About a mile below the town is a ferry to the Isle of Ely. At Lakenheath and other places in the neighbourhood are very extensive warrens, from which large supplies of rabbits are obtained, and sent to the London market, affording a source of great employment to the furriers. The existence of a chalk deposit, rich in flint of excellent quality, led to the establishment here of a large manufactory of gun-flints, from which for a long time the supply of the army was almost exclusively drawn, the description of flint obtained from the common, about 1 mile S.E. of Brandon, being reckoned more certain in its fire and lasting longer than any other. There used to be from 70 to 100 men constantly employed in this branch; but the introduction of percussion caps has occasioned a great falling off in this manufacture, which has entirely disappeared from the towns of Greenhithe, Maidstone, and Northfleet. A good trade is still carried on in corn, malt, coal, timber, and bricks. There are besides several breweries, three whiting mills, an agate powder-mill, and an extensive steam saw-mill. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. with the rect. of Wangford annexed to it, of £800, in the patron. of the Rev. Samuel Warren, incumbent. The church, an ancient structure of flint and stone, with a fine tower and porch in the Norman style, is dedicated to St. Peter, and has been recently repaired. There are chapels belonging to the Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Baptists, and Latter-day Saints. The chapels, like the cottages in this locality, are principally built with flint. Adjoining the church is a National school, built in 1843, on the site of the old workhouse. A free school, founded by Thomas Wright in 1646, further endowed by Joanna Wright, and restored in 1862, has a revenue of £51 per annum. The town has recently very considerably improved in its trade, chiefly owing to the commodious railway station, communicating with Norwich, Yarmouth, Lowestoft, Lynn, Ely, Cambridge, and London. It contains several comfortable inns, a branch of the Harvey and Hudson Norwich bank, and a central post-office; but the streets are yet unlighted. In High-street are six almshouses, appropriated to poor widows; and near the church, which is a quarter of a mile W. of the town, are three others, founded by Mrs. Ann Curtis in 1675, but rebuilt in 1840. There are charitable endowments (exclusive of the free school) producing about £170 a year. Brandon was the birthplace of Eyre, Lord Mayor of London in the middle of the 15th century, and founder of Leadenhall Market. The Brandons, Dukes of Suffolk, had their name from this place, which also gives the title of duke to the Duke of Hamilton and Brandon. In the vicinity are the remains of a Roman encampment. Brandon Park is the seat of the Baron de Bliss, lord of the manor. In the neighbourhood are several other pleasant seats and residences of the gentry; the chief of which are Brandon Hall, North Court Lodge, and Brandon House, a handsome brick building on the Norfolk side of the river. Thursday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 14th February, the 11th June, and the 11th November, chiefly for cattle and toys.

BRANDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wolston, and hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 5 miles to the E. of Coventry. It is seated on the banks of the river Avon, and is a station on the London and North-Western railway. A castle was founded here soon after the Norman Conquest, and traces of it still exist. The chief residence is Brandon House.

BRANDON PARVA, a par. in the hund. of Forehoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles to the N. of Wymondham, its post town. The Great Eastern railway passes within a short distance. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £281, in the patron. of Isaac Preston, Esq. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is a free school, endowed with £12 a year, and other charities which produce about £15 per annum.

BRANDSBURTON, a par. in the northern div. of the wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles to the N.E. of Beverley, its post town. The geological formation of this district is particularly interesting from the numerous irregular mounds of gravel and sand, which denote the ancient effects of sea-currents, for all Holderness was a sea-bed in the glacial period. Of these, the long, curved mound of Brandsburton, called the Barff, is one of the most singular, and in it have been found the remains of the mammoth. At the beginning of the 17th century the manor belonged to Lady Dacres, and was given by her to the lord mayor and aldermen of London in trust for Emanuel Hospital, Westminster, which was founded by her, and now derives a rental from these lands of £4,115 19*s.* 4*d., which is, however, at present injudiciously applied, and requires to be investigated by a Royal Commission. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, of the annual val. of £895, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, which is chiefly in the perpendicular style, is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains a monumental brass of a priest who died in 1364, and another of one of the St. Quintins and his lady. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here, and there are free schools with an income from endowment of £25 per annum, which is augmented by the trustees of Emanuel Hospital to £150. The other parochial charities produce about £7 a year. The Holderness hounds occasionally meet at Brandsburton Moor.

BRANDSBY, or BRANSBY, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the N.E. of Easingwold. York is its post town. It includes the hmlt. of Stearsby. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £628, in the patron. of F. Cholmeley, Esq. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The produce of the parochial charities is about £7 a year. The principal seat is Brandsby Hall.

BRAND'S-FEET, a lib., chiefly in the par. of Little Missenden, hund. of Aylesbury, but partly in the par. of Hitchenden, hund. of Desborough, in the co. of Buckingham, 3 miles to the N. of High Wycombe.

BRANDWOOD, and BRANDWOOD HIGHER and LOWER ENDS, hmlts. in the tnshp. of Spotland, and par. of Rochdale, in the hund. of Salford, co. palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles to the N. of Rochdale.

BRANDY-STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Selworthy, hund. of Carhampton, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the W. of Minehead. It is seated in a beautiful district near the coast of the Bristol Channel.

BRANFIELD. See BRAINTFIELD, Hertfordsh

BRANKSEA, a chplry. in the par. of Stud the co. of Dorset, not far from Poole, its post tow living is a perpet. cur., val. £60, in the patron. Michel.

BRANNOCKSTOWN, or BRANNIXTOWN in the bar. of South Naas, in the co. of Kildar of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles to the E. of K The living is united with the perpet. cur of K in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kild

BRANSBURY, a tythg. in the par and Barton-Stacey, in the co. of Southampton, the S.E. of Andover. It is situated on a river Test, and has the remains of an old BRANSBY, a tnshp. in the par. of St Well, and parts of Lindsey, in the co. of L miles to the N.W. of Lincoln.

BRANSCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the E. of S post town. It is pleasantly situated on th on a bay of the same name, and contains some v quarries of limestone. The living is a vi of Exeter, of the val. of £190, in the patr Dean and Chapter of Exeter. The church is to St. Winifred.

BRANSDALE EAST-SIDE, a hmlt in the of Farndale High Quarter, and par. of Ki side, in the wap. of Ryedale, North Riding York, 2 miles to the E. of Bransdale West-S

BRANSDALE WEST-SIDE, a tnshp. in of Kirkdale, wap. of Ryedale, in the North the co. of York, 9 miles to the N. of Helmsley. in a hilly country.

BRANSFORD, a chplry. in the par. of Le of Pershore, in the co. of Worcester, 4 miles S.W. of Worcester. It extends also into Powick. Bransford Road is a station on the and Hereford branch of the West Midland This chplry. is situated on the banks of the which is here crossed by a bridge on the Worcester to Hereford. Hops are cultivated there are rich meadow lands along the river. is an impropriate vic. in the dioc. of Wo church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist.

BRANSGORE, a vil. in the par. hmt., County Court district of Christchurch, in Southampton, 5 miles to the N.E. of Christ 6 from Ringwood, its post town. Christ is the nearest railway station. The p principally employed in agriculture and making, for which this locality is famous. is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, in the patron. of the trustees of the late T. The church, which is in the perpendic a tower and spire, was erected in 18 £2,700, which in part was defrayed by the Commissioners. It has a painted window and contains 280 free sittings. Near the parsonage-house, a neat brick building, and the National school, supported by v tributions. The principal residences are the residence of Henry Castleman, Esq., Lodge, the seat of Lady Bingham; and of W. P. Jesson, Esq.

BRANSON. See BRANSTONE, Staffordshir

BRANSTON, or BRAUNSTON, a par in of Framland, in the co. of Leicester, 8 miles of Melton Mowbray, its post town. The rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the in the patron. of the Duke of Rutland. The dedicated to St. Guthlake.

BRANSTON, or BRANSON, one of the comprised in the lib. of the city of Lincoln, sey, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles to the S its post town. It is near the Boston and L of the Great Northern railway. The living in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £677, in the of the Rev. P. Curtois. The church is All Saints. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, here a charitable endowments producing £25 per annum.

BRANSTONE, or BRANSON, a tnshp. in the par. of Burton-upon-Trent, hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles to the S.W. of Burton, and 2 N. of Barton railway station. It is intersected by the Birmingham and Derby branch of the Midland railway and the Grand Trunk canal. There is an Independent chapel, erected in 1834, and a National school. In the neighbourhood are the remains of a Roman camp. The chief residence is Sinai Park, built upon an eminence, from which there is an extensive view. The Marquis of Anglesey is lord of the manor.

BRASWELL. See BRAUNCEWELL, Lincolnshire.

BRANT BROUGHTON. See BROUGHTON BRANT, Lincolnshire.

BRANTHAM, a par. in the hund. of Samford, in the co. of Suffolk, 2 miles to the N. of Manningtree, its post town and railway station, and 9 S.W. of Ipswich. It is situated on the banks of the navigable river Stour, and the Great Eastern railway passes through the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. with the perpet. cur. of East Bergholt, of £1,117, in the patron. the Master and Fellows of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The register dates from the year 1634. The Wesleyans have a chapel here.

BRAITHWAITE, a tnshp. in the par. of Dean, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent in the co. of Cumberland, 4 miles S.E. of Workington. Freestone of good quality is quarried here. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen and paper manufactures. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel in the village.

BRANTINGHAM, a par. partly in the Hunsley-Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, and partly in the wap. of Howdenshire, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles W. of Hull. Brough is its post town. It is on the Hull, Selby, and Melford Junction railway, and includes the tnshps. of Thorpe Brantingham and Welton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, of the val. with the perpet. cur. of Ellerker annexed, of which the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Durham. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

BRANTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Eglingham, ward of Glendale, in the co. of Northumberland, 8 miles to the N.W. of Wooler. There is a chapel belonging to the Presbyterians.

BRANTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Cantley, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles from Doncaster.

BRANTON-GREEN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Upper Dunsforth, in the par. of Aldborough, wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the S.E. of Boroughbridge.

BRANXTON, a par. in the western div. of Glendale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 8 miles to the N.W. of Wooler. Coldstream is its post town. The village, which is now but small, was once a market town. It is situated on the borders of Scotland, at the foot of Flodden Hill. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, of the val. of £270, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, is a handsome stone edifice, rebuilt in 1849, the beautiful Norman arch in the chancel being the only portion of the old church preserved. The font is of Norman design, supported on four columns, but of modern workmanship. This village was the birthplace (1736) of Percival Stockdale, poet and miscellaneous writer, whose father at that time held the rectory of Branxton. On the western summit of Flodden Hill, where the Scots encamped on the 9th of September, 1513, is a rock still called the King's Chair. The fatal battle, however, took place in and about the village of Branxton, principally to the south-west of the church. The Scotch, under James IV., took up their position on the ridge of Branxton Hill, and the Earl of Surrey drew up his men almost in a line opposite the different Scottish divisions. The rising ground, a few hundred yards west of the church, considered to be Piper's Hill, marks the spot where the king fell, with the greater part of the nobility of Scotland, and about the foot of this eminence the most deadly fight took place. The pillar of unhewn basalt in the vicinity of the village, generally assumed by historians to have been erected as a memorial stone of the battle of Flodden, is now considered to be nothing more than a "gathering stone," about which the different invading armies met when about to commit raids in either country.

BRASCOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Newbold Verdon, hund. of Sparkenhoe, in the co. of Leicester, 2 miles to the E. of Market Bosworth.

BRASHFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Mitchelmersh, hund. of Thorngate, in the co. of Southampton, 3 miles to the N. of Romsey.

BRASSINGTON, a chplry. in the par. of Bradborne and hund. of Wirksworth, in the co. of Derby, 3 miles to the W. of Wirksworth, its post town. The living is a perpet cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £50, in the patron. of Tidd Pratt, Esq. The church is in various styles of architecture. There is a small endowment for education. The principal residence is Brassington Hall.

BRASTED, a par. in the hund. of Codsheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 2½ miles E. of Westerham, and 4½ W. of Seven Oaks, its post town. It is situated on the borders of Surrey, on the edge of the Weald of Kent, and is watered by the river Darent. Part of the land is laid out in hop-grounds. From its elevated situation this place commands fine prospects over the rich surrounding country. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £673, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, which contains some monuments of the Heath family, is dedicated to St. Martin. The parish has the benefit of charitable endowments, which produce about £35 per annum, and there is a National school and several paper-mills. The principal seat is Brasted Place, once the residence of the Lords Willoughby de Broke. Brasted Common is 1 mile S. of the village. A fair is held on Holy Thursday for horses and cattle.

BRATHAY, a vil. in the par. of Hawkshead, hund. of North Lonsdale, in the co. of Lancashire, 1 mile to the S.W. of Ambleside, its post town. It is seated at the head of Windermere, on the banks of the Brathay river, which takes its rise on the edge of Cumberland, at Bow Fell, and after a course of about 10 miles, through Langdale and Elterwater, falls into the lake of Windermere. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, worth £40, in the patron. of G. Redmayne, Esq. Near the village is Brathay Park.

BRATOFT. See BRAYTOFT, Lincolnshire.

BRATTLEBY, a par. in the wap. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 6 miles to the N. of Lincoln, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £260, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Balliol College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Cuthbert.

BRATTON. See BOREATTON, Shropshire.

BRATTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wrockwardine, hund. of Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles from Wellington. The Shropshire Union railway passes near it, with a station in the neighbouring tnshp. of Admaston.

BRATTON, a chplry. in the par. and borough of Westbury, hund. of the same name, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles to the E. of Westbury, its post town. It formerly contained the hmlts. of Heywood and Hawkeridge, which are now distinct. Wool spinning and carding are carried on here, and there is an extensive iron-foundry for the manufacture of agricultural implements. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Salisbury, and is at present wholly unendowed. The church is dedicated to St. James. The Baptists have a chapel in the village. There are charitable endowments producing about £35 per annum. On a hill southward of the village is an ancient British camp, called Bratton Castle, nearly a mile in circuit, and comprising an area of 23 acres. The Romans, Danes, and Saxons are said to have occupied this entrenchment. On the hill-side below it is the figure of a white horse, to which an early origin has been assigned, but which is known to have been cut about the middle of the last century. It bears some resemblance to the famous White Horse which gives name to a hill in Berkshire. Various military remains have been found in the neighbourhood.

BRATTON-CLOVELLY, a par. in the hund. of Lifton, in the co. of Devon, 8 miles to the W. of Okehampton, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £412, in the patron. of the Bishop of Exeter. In this village was born the distinguished lawyer, Henry de Bracton, who flourished in the 13th century, and was author of the well-known work entitled "De Legibus et Consuetudinibus Angliæ." On a hill to the N. of this place, are the remains of a Roman encampment, called Broadbury Castle, with a rampart and ditch.

BRATTON-FLEMING, a par. in the hund. of Braunton, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles to the N.E. of Barnstaple, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £551, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Caius College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. Remains of an ancient circle of stones exist at Nightacott, near this place. The North Devon hounds meet at Bratton.

BRATTON MANOR, a hmlt. in the par. of Minehead, hund. of Carhampton, in the co. of Somerset, near Minehead.

BRATTON, ST. MAUR, or BRATTON SEYMOUR, a par. in the hund. of Norton-Ferris, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles to the N.W. of Wincanton, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the val. of £161, in the patron. of Sir R. Lopes, Bart., and J. Hodges, Esq., alternately. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity.

BRAUGHIN, a par. in the hund. of Braughin, in the co. of Hertford, 3¼ miles to the S.E. of Buntingford, 6 N.W. of Bishop Stortford railway station, and 28 miles from London. Ware is its post town. It is situated on the E. side of the river Rib, and is intersected by a small stream called the Quin, which joins the Rib just below the town. Braughin is supposed to have been the Roman station "Ad Fines," and was a royal demesne in the Saxon period, when it was named Brooking. Mention is made of it in Domesday Book under the name of Brachinges. The ancient way called Ermine Street passed by it, and a Roman camp of considerable extent existed in the vicinity of the town. It was formerly a market town under a charter obtained in the reign of Stephen. The par. includes part of the hmlt. of Puckeridge. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £260, in the patron. of the heirs of the late Rev. W. Tower. The church, a large building with an embattled tower and spire, is dedicated to St. Mary. It contains several monuments of the Brograve family, whose chapel attached to the chancel is now converted into school and vestry rooms. There is a chapel belonging to the Independents, a National school, and an almshouse for widows. The charitable endowments of the parish, including the income of a small free school and a bequest for the repair of bridges and other purposes, amount to £28 per annum. A house near the churchyard was conveniently furnished and given by Mr. Jenyns for the use of poor couples on occasion of their marriage, but it is not now applied to such purpose. At Campwood, S. of the village, on the banks of the river, are remains of a Roman camp, which covered about 40 acres. A fair is held on Whit-Monday and Whit-Tuesday.

BRAUGHIN HUNDRED, one of the eight hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Hertford, situated in the eastern part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of Edwinstree, on the S. and E. by the co. of Essex, and on the W. by the hunds. of Broadwater and Hertford. It contains the pars. of Bishop Stortford, Braughin, Eastwick, Gilston, Hunsdon, Sawbridgeworth, Standon, Stanstead Abbot's, Thorley, Thundridge, Ware, Westmill, and Widford. The area of the hund. is about 38,400 acres.

BRAUNCEWELL, or BRANSWELL, a par. to which that of Dunsby is joined, in the wap. of Flaxwell, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 m[iles] the N. of Sleaford, its post town. The living is a [rect.] in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the yearly val. with [that] of Anwick and the rect. of Dunsby united, [£]4[00], the patron. of the Marquis of Bristol. The [church] dedicated to All Saints.

BRAUNSTON, a par. in the hund. of Fawsley, [in the] co. of Northampton, 3 miles to the N.W. of [Daven]try Rugby is its post town. It is situated on the confi[nes of] Warwickshire, on the Oxford and Grand Junction [Canal] which here unite. The living is a rect.* in the [dioc. of] Peterborough, of the annual val. of £837, in the [gift] of the Principal and Fellows of Jesus College, [Oxford]. The church, which was entirely rebuilt in [1864], is a large and handsome building in the decorated [style] of architecture. It has a remarkably good [tower], octagonal and crocketed, 150 feet in height, [and] dedicated to St. Giles. It stands on the brow of a [hill] west end of the village, and forms a fine feature [in the] landscape. There are chapels belonging to the [Baptists] and Wesleyans, and a National school partly [supported] by endowment, the produce of a bequest by W[illiam] Makepeace in 1733. The value of the two [latter] is about £200 per annum. Reynolds, afterwards Bi[shop] of Norwich, was once rector of this parish. The [market] stone cross, which formerly stood in the [village], consisted of a single block of stone, 11 feet [high], is now placed in the rectory garden. A curious [custo]mary tenure exists in the manor of Braunston, [by] which the widow of a copyhold tenant [has power] for her life on presenting yearly at the court of [the] one groat in a leathern purse.

BRAUNSTON, or BRANSTON, a par. in [the hund.] of Oakham Soke, in the co. of Rutland, 5 miles [to the] S.W. of Oakham, its post town. It lies on the [border] of Leicestershire, on the banks of the small river [Eye], not far from the Syston and Peterborough [branch] Midland railway. The living is a vic. in the [diocese of] Peterborough, annexed to the vic. of Hambleton. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parish [has] including an endowment for education, [which] amount to about £60 per annum. Braunston [Hall] about a mile from the village.

BRAUNSTONE, a chplry. in the par. of Glen[field], hund. of Sparkenhoe, in the co. of Leicester, [4] to the S.W. of Leicester, its post town. It [lies] the Midland railway, and contains the ext. par. [of] Braunstone Frith. The living is a perpetual [curacy] to the rect. of Glenfield, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The chief residence is Braunstone Hall, once the seat of the Hastings family.

BRAUNSTONE-FRITH, an ext. par. hlt. in the par. of Glenfield, and hund. of Sparkenhoe, in the co. of Leicester, near Braunstone.

BRAUNTON, a par. in the hund. of Braunton, in the co. of Devon, 5 miles to the W. of Barnstaple, its post town. It is situated on the coast of the Bristol Channel, near the mouth of the navigable river Taw, and contains a tract of very rich land, which was originally claimed from the sea. There are two lighthouses in the parish, erected in 1820 for the guidance of vessels over the bar at the entrance of the Taw. They stand about 300 yards apart, and the lights, which are fixed, are visible, one at the distance of 11, and the other of 14 miles. Manganese has been found in this district. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £[illegible], in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Brannock, and contains a monumental brass of the year 1548. The Independents have a chapel [and] there is an endowed free school, with a revenue of [£]30 per annum, and some other charities producing about £[illegible] a year. Remains of six ancient chapels are found in Braunton.

BRAUNTON HUNDRED, one of the 33 hund[reds] subdivisions of the co. of Devon, situated in the [South] parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. and W. by the Bristol Channel, on the E. by the hund. of Sherwill, and on the S. by the hunds. of South Mo[lton] and Frinington. It contains the pars. of Ashford, Barnstaple, Berrynarbor, Bittadon, Bratton-Fleming, Braunton, East Buckland, West Buckland, Combe Martin, East Down, West Down, Filleigh, Georgeham, Goodleigh, Heanton-Punchardon, Ilfracombe, Kentisbury, Marwood, Morthoe, Pilton, and Trentishoe. The hund. extends over an area of about 68,830 acres.

BRAWBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Salton, and wap. of Ryedale, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the N.W. of New Malton. It lies on the banks of the river Rye. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village.

BRAWDY, a par. in the hund. of Dewisland, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 6 miles to the E. of St. David's, its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, of the val. with that of Hay's Castle united, £115, in the patron. of the bishop.

BRAWITH, a hmlt. in the par. of Leake, and wap. of Allertonshire, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N. of Thirsk. It is joined with the tnshp. of Knayton. The principal residence is Brawith Hall.

BRAWNY BARONY, one of the 12 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Westmeath, in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland, situated in the south-western part of the co., and bounded on the N. by Lough Ree, on the N.E. by the bar. of Kilkenny West, on the S.E. by the bar. of Clonlonan, and on the W. by the river Shannon. It contains the par. of St. Mary's, which includes part of the market town of Athlone. The area of the bar., which is the ancient seat of the O'Briens, is about 11,[illegible] acres.

BRAXTEAD, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Witham, in the co. of Essex, 2 miles to the E. of Witham, its post town. The Great Eastern railway runs near this place. Striptree, in this par., was the site of a priory of the Austine order, founded about the end of the 13th century, by Mary de Valence, Countess of Pembroke, the revenue of which at the Dissolution was [illegible]. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. of £544, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. The church, some portions of which are in the Norman style, is dedicated to All Saints. It is a neat building, with a tower, belfry and leaden spire, but richly fitted within, having several stained glass windows, and a white marble monument to the Rev. J. M. Wallace, once rector of the par. It is situated within the domain of Great Braxtead, which comprises about 500 acres, well stocked with deer, and ornamented with a winding lake. There are charitable endowments worth about £20 a year. Braxtead Park is the principal seat, and is at present the residence of Charles Du Cane, Esq., M.P. for North Essex, who is lord of the manor. The National school for girls was built a few years ago at the sole expense of the late Captain Du Cane, R.N.

BRAXTEAD, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Witham in the co. of Essex, 1 mile from Witham, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Blackwater, near the Great Eastern railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £118, in the patron. of Mrs. E. D. Clarke. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. It has a round chancel and Norman porch. The charitable endowments of the par. amount to £7 per annum.

BRAY, a par. in the hund. of Bray, in the co. of Berks, 4 miles to the E. of Reading. Maidenhead is its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Thames, near Monkey Island, and contains part of the town of Maidenhead, which is a station on the Great Western railway. Bray forms part of the lib. of Windsor Forest, and retains some privileges pertaining to it as a royal demesne. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £500, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, a spacious building partly in the early English, partly in the perpendicular style of architecture, is dedicated to St. Michael. It was entirely restored and partly rebuilt in 1862, under the direction of T. Witt, the architect. It has recently been enriched with stained-glass windows, and contains several monumental brasses, the earliest bearing the date of 1370, and some old family tombs. There is also a district church at Boyne Hill, dedicated to All Saints, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £120, in the patron. of the Bishop of Oxford. There is a free school for boys, founded and endowed by William Cherry, which has a revenue of £35; a hospital for 40 persons, founded by William Goddard, in 1627, and governed by the Fishmongers' Company; and a bequest by Sir John Norris, now lost. There are some other charitable endowments producing about £40 per annum.—The proverbial expression "the Vicar of Bray," commemorates an incumbent of this parish, who, according to Fuller, conformed to the Papist and Protestant churches in turn during the reigns of Henry VIII., Edward VI., Mary, and Elizabeth, holding fast through all changes to one principle —to live and die Vicar of Bray. His name will long remain as the type of the time-server, although his actual existence is now questioned.—In this parish is the curious old manor-house of Ockholt, or Ockwells, built by John Norreys in the latter half of the 15th century, and long the seat of his descendants. At Hollyport is the seat called Philberts, formerly Cresswells, which was originally erected for Nell Gwynne. Braywick Lodge, formerly the seat of Sir W. Waller, Bart., now of John Hibbert, stands on an elevated spot, commanding an extensive and beautiful prospect over the country, the Thames, Maidenhead, Windsor, &c. Bray Grove is another pleasant residence.

BRAY, a par. and market town in the bar. of Rathdown, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 12 miles to the S. of Dublin, with which it is connected by the Dublin and Bray railway. It is situated in a beautiful spot on the coast of St. George's Channel, on the banks of the Bray river. That part of the town which lies on the north side of the river is called Little Bray, and is in the par. of Old Connaught, in the co. of Dublin. The lordship of Bray was in early times included in the territories of the O'Tooles, and was given, in 1173, to a Norman knight named Walter de Riddlesford. In 1215 it passed into the possession of the abbey of St. Thomas, which held it till the Dissolution. It was then conferred upon Sir Thomas Brabazon, ancestor of the present proprietor, the Earl of Meath. The river is crossed by an ancient bridge of five arches, connecting the two parts of the town. The aspect of the town is pleasant and cheerful, and the surrounding scenery remarkably beautiful. To the southward is Bray Head, a bold and lofty promontory, rising to the height of about 800 feet above the level of the sea, and forming a conspicuous seamark. The river, which forms a small haven, with a bar at the entrance, falls into the sea 2 miles to the N. of this headland, after a course of about 10 miles from Glencree. Trout abound in it, and are taken in large quantities. Some small vessels are employed in the fishery and the coasting trade. The town contains a good hotel, a large brewery, and a flour-mill. Police and coastguard stations are established, and petty sessions are held here once a fortnight. Bray has long been a favourite watering-place, and the number of visitors has increased since the construction of the railway. In Little Bray are the remains of a castle, which are converted into a barrack. There are also in the town a hospital, with a dispensary, and a savings-bank. Provident and loan societies were established some years since. The living is a rect. united with the vic. of Old Connaught, in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, of the annual val. of £480, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built in 1609, and stands on high ground by the river. There is a handsome Roman Catholic chapel, a chapel belonging to the Presbyterians, and National, infant, and other schools. In the neighbourhood of Bray are many beautiful seats of the nobility and gentry. Kilruddery, the seat of the Earl of Meath, is a noble mansion in the perpendicular style of architecture, situated in a finely-wooded park of about 900 acres, lying south of the town, between Bray Head and the Little Sugar-loaf Hill. The latter rises to the height of 1,120 feet above the sea. Bray Head, the seat of G. Putland, Esq., is an elegant structure in the Italian style, beautifully situated in extensive grounds near the foot of the hill, and commanding splendid views of hill and sea. Among the other residences are Old Court, St. Valerie, Old Connaught House, the seat of Lord Plunket, Rich View, &c. There are remains of castles at Little Bray, Old Court, and Fassarow House. A martello tower stands near Bray Head. Tuesday and Saturday are the market days. Fairs are held on the 12th January, the 4th May, the 5th August, and the 12th November, for the sale of friezes; and on the 1st March, May, and July, the 15th August, the 20th September, and the 14th December, for the sale of cattle. There is a racecourse on the north bank of the river, where races are held once a year.

BRAYBROOKE, a par. in the hund. of Rothwell, in the co. of Northampton, 3 miles to the S.E. of Market Harborough, its post town. The south-east branch of the Midland railway passes by this place. A castle formerly existed here, which was the seat of the Griffins, one of whom, Sir John Griffin, was created Lord Braybrook in 1788. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £600, in the patron. of the Rev. J. W. Field. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and contains a monument of Sir Nicholas Griffin, who died in 1509, and a wooden figure of a knight supposed to be that of Sir T. Latimer. There is a chapel belonging to the Baptists in the village, and a National school erected in 1836 by Mrs. Bousquet. The charitable endowments, which include two small bequests for education, amount to £21 per annum. Robert de Braybrooke, lord chancellor in the reign of Henry IV., was born here. This place gives the title of baron to Lord Braybrooke, the present representative of the Griffin family.

BRAYDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Purton, hund. of Highworth, Cricklade, and Staple, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles to the S. of Cricklade.

BRAYFIELD, COLD, a par. in the hund. of Newport, in the co. of Buckingham, 3 miles to the E. of Olney, its post town. It is situated on the border of Bedfordshire, on the banks of the river Ouse. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Lavendon, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BRAY, HIGH, a par. in the hund. of Sherwill, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles to the N. of South Molton. It is situated on the confines of Somersetshire, on the banks of the river Bray, a branch of the Taw. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £280, in the patron. of T. P. Acland, Esq. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

BRAY HUNDRED, one of the 20 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Berks, situated in the eastern part of the co., and bounded by part of the hund. of Cookham on the N., by the river Thames on the E., and by the hund. of Beynhurst on the S. and W. It contains the par. of Bray, which includes part of the town of Maidenhead. Its area is 9,102 acres.

BRAYSTONES, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Lowside Quarter, and par. of St. Bees, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 3 miles to the S. of Egremont. It is a station on the Whitehaven and Furness Junction railway.

BRAYTHORNE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Stainburn, and par. of Kirkby Overblow, wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.E. of Otley.

BRAYTOFT, or BRATOFT, a par. in the Wold div. of the wap. of Candleshoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles to the N. of Wainfleet. Spilsby is its post town. The Boston and Grimsby section of the Great Northern railway passes near it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £255, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul.

BRAYTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Aspatria, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 7 miles to the S.W. of Wigton. It is a station on the Maryport and Carlisle railway. The principal seat is Brayton Hall. The tnshp. is joined to Aspatria.

BRAYTON, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Barkstone Ash, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile to the S.W. of Selby, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Ouse, and is crossed by the branch canal connecting the Ouse with the Aire, forming part of the Aire and Calder navigation, the Hull, Selby, and Milford Junction railway passes through the place. The par. includes the chplries. of Barlby, Gateforth, and the tnshps. of Brayton, Barn, Hambleton, and Thorpe-Willoughby. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £268, in the patron. of Lord Londesborough. The church is dedicated to St. Wilfrid. It is partly in the Norman style, but has various other styles of architecture. The tower at the west end is Norman, and is surmounted by a spire in the perpendicular style. In addition to the parish church, there are two chapels of ease—one at Barlby and the other at Gateforth. The parochial charities, including a small bequest for a school, amount to £40 per annum. Near the village is a hamlet called Brayton Barf. Lord Londesborough, and the Rev. J. Brooke, of Gateforth House, late Osbaldeston, are the principal landed proprietors.

BREACHWOOD GREEN, a hmlt 1 mile S. from the par. of King's Walden, in the co. of Hertford, 5 miles from Hitchin, and 5 from Welwyn railway station.

BREADALBANE DISTRICT, one of the ancient divs. or stewartries of the co. of Perth, situated in the western part of the co., and extending about 33 miles in length and 31 miles in breadth. Aberfeldy and Atholl form its northern boundary, Glencarn and Menteith its southern. It lies in the heart of the Grampian Mountains, contains not more than two or three villages of any importance, and is pastured on the hills, and some of the valleys under cultivation. Lochs Tay and Lyon are the principal lakes in the district. Limestone and granite are found in abundance, with small quantities of copper, lead, and other minerals. Peat, the chief fuel, is found in abundance. It gives the title of baron to a branch of the family of Campbell, to which it almost entirely belongs, and which has its chief seat at Taymouth Castle, near the northern extremity of Loch Tay. The name is sometimes written Breadalbin, and signifies a "hill country." Since the pacification of the country 100 years ago, and the stop put to the warlike incursions of troublesome neighbours, the inhabitants have acquired habits of industry, which have greatly improved the land and their own condition. Hugh Cameron, a humble millwright, began this part of the country, as well as the Highlands generally, by first constructing mills for spinning thread. He was a man of uncommon genius and integrity, and died in 1817 at the great age of 112 years.

BREADSALL, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, in the co. of Derby, 2 miles to the N. of Derby, its post town. The Derby water-works are in this parish, and it is crossed by the North Midland railway, the Derby Canal, the Eaton canal and the river Derwent. It was formerly the site of a house of Friars Eremites, founded, it is said, by the Dethick family, about the middle of the 14th century, and subsequently converted into an Augustine priory. It had a revenue of £13, and was given by Edward VI. to Henry, Duke of Suffolk. Good building stone is obtained in the parish, and some of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of hosiery. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the annual value with 452 acres of glebe land, in the patronage of Sir H. Crewe, Bart. The church, a spacious building with a tower and lofty spire, was repaired in 1850. It is dedicated to All Saints, and contains a monument to the botanist and poet, Dr. Darwin, who died in 1802. Breadsall Priory. The rectory of this parish was held for nearly 20 years by John Hieron, a learned Nonconformist of the 17th century. The Wesleyans have chapel and there is a free school, founded in 1788, and subsequently endowed by John Clayton with an income of £10 a year. There is also a handsome National school, erected in 1837 conjointly by the late Sir George Crewe and the Rev. Henry R. Crewe, the rector. The poor have the benefit of several other charitable bequests, producing about £50 per annum.

BREDSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Berkeley, in the co. of Gloucester, 2 miles from Berkeley.

BREGE and GERMOE, a par. in the hund. of Kerrier, in the co. of Cornwall, 3 miles to the W. of Helston, its post town. It is situated on the coast of Mounts Bay, and contains the chplries. of Cury-cum-Gunwalloe and Godolphin, and several hmlts. The remains of an old castle stand at Pengerswick. Granite abounds here, and at Wheal Vor is a rich and extensive tin-mine. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in working the mines and stone-quarries. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, with the val. with the perpet. cur. of Germoe annexed, of £760, in the patron. of the crown. Besides the parish church there are two district churches, one at Cury and the other at Godolphin; the livings of both are perpet. curs., the former in the patron. of the trustees of the late Rev. J. Rogers, and the latter in that of the Crown and the Bishop of Exeter alternately. The parochial charities, consisting chiefly of some small bequests for education, amount to £8 a year. Godolphin, in this parish, originally the seat of a family of that name, is now the property of the Duke of Leeds. It was the birthplace (1702) of Lord Treasurer Godolphin. There are the traces of an ancient circular camp on Pencair or Pencoid Hill.

BREAGHWY, or BREAFY, a par. in the bar. of Tirerrill, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles from Castlebar. It lies on the banks of the river Finola, and contains a large tract of bog. The lands suffer greatly from the frequent inundations of the river. Building stone is quarried here. The living is a ... of the union of Castlebar, in the dioc. of Tuam, ... and Achonry. Among the gentlemen's seats of the neighbourhood are Breafy Lodge, Fisher Hill, and ... House. A monastery existed here at a very ... and some traces of it still remain.

BREAM, or BREEM, a chplry. in the par. of Newland, hund. of St. Briavell's, in the co. of Gloucester, ... the N.W. of Berkeley. Lydney is its post ... The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the val. of £150, in the patron. of ...

BREAMORE, a lib. in the Ringwood div. of the co. of Southampton, containing and co-extensive with the hmlt. Breamore.

BREAMORE, a par. in the lib. of the same name, ... div. of the co. of Southampton, 3 miles to the ... of Downton, and 7 miles to the S. of Salisbury, its post town. It is situated on the borders of Wiltshire and Hampshire, on the western bank of the river Avon, and contains the hmlt of Outwick. A priory of the Dominican order was founded here about 1130 by Baldwin, Earl of Devon, which had a revenue at the time of its suppression of £200, and was given in 1536 to the Marquis of Exeter. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £540, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Palmer. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are charitable endowments which amount to about £30 per annum. The principal seat is Breamore House, which is a meet for the New Forest hounds.

BREAN, a par. in the hund. of Bempstone, in the co. of Somerset, 8 miles to the W. of Axbridge, its post town. It lies in a detached part of the hund., within the hund. of Brent-with-Wrington. This parish is situated on the coast of the Bristol Channel, and is bounded on the E. by the river Axe, which falls into the Channel at the foot of Breane Down, a lofty promontory northward of the village, running out above a mile into the sea. The town rises to the height of 300 feet above the level of the sea. Some of the inhabitants of the village are employed in gathering samphire, which is found in abundance here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the val. of £216, in the patron. of W. Willes, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Bridget.

BREAREY, a hmlt. in the par. of Addle, and wap. of Skyrack, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the E. of Otley.

BREARTON. See BRIERTON, Durham.

BREARTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Knaresborough, and wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N. of Knaresborough, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, annexed to the vic. of Knaresborough. The charitable endowments of the township are worth about £3 a year.

BREASDON, or BREASTON, a chplry. in the par. of Wilne, in the hund. of Morleston and Litchurch, in the co. of Derby, 7 miles to the E. of Derby, its post town. The Midland railway runs through it. Many hands are here employed in the manufacture of hosiery, about 50 frames being at work. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £119, in the patron. of the Earl of Stamford. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There are several charitable endowments, producing about £16 a year.

BREATHER-HILLS, a hmlt. in the par. of Barrowby, wap. of Winnibriggs and Threo, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the W. of Grantham. It is near the Nottingham and Grantham branch of the Great Northern railway.

BRECHFA, a par. in the hund. of Cathinog, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 10 miles to the N.E. of Carmarthen, its post town. It is situated in a beautiful valley, on the banks of the river Cothy. The land is good and highly cultivated. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £72, in the alternate patron. of the families of Tregib and Aberothy. The church, which has no tower, is dedicated to St. Teilo. A cattle fair is held on the 3rd October.

BRECHIN, a par. and market town, royal and parliamentary burgh, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 11 miles to the N.E. of Forfar, and 70 miles to the N. of Edinburgh. The town is connected with the Scottish North-Eastern railway by a branch line of 4 miles from the Bridge-of-Dun junction. It is situated in a fertile district, on the N. bank of the South Esk, about 8 miles above its mouth, and includes the vils. of Little Brechin and Trinity Muir.—Brechin is a place of considerable antiquity, and the seat of a diocese founded by David I. in 1150. At an earlier period a house of the Culdees was established here. The town was formerly defended by walls and by a castle of great strength, which stood a siege of three weeks by the English, under Edward I., in 1303, and was only surrendered after its proprietor, Sir Thomas Maule, had been slain by a stone cast from an engine. The town was burnt by the Danes early in the 11th century, and by Montrose during the civil war of the reign of Charles I. On the 18th May, 1452, a battle was fought near Brechin, in which the Earl of Crawford was defeated by the forces of James II. of Scotland, under the Earl of Huntly.—The town, which has a clean and pleasant appearance, consists of two principal streets, one of which runs northward from the old bridge for about a mile, and the other meets it about midway. The ground rises steeply in some parts of the town. The manufacture of linens, sailcloths, and osnaburghs is carried on, employing many hands. Good building stone is quarried, and there are spinning-mills, lime-works, two distilleries, two tobacco manufactories, and a brewery. In the middle of the town is the market-place, or cross, and the townhouse. The principal public building is the mechanics' institution, erected and endowed by Lord Panmure in 1838. It is in the Tudor style of architecture, with a tower about 80 feet high. There are also an academy connected with the Maison Dieu (an ancient hospital), a dispensary, and a savings-bank.—Brechin has been a royal burgh from a remote antiquity. Under the Municipal Reform Act the government is vested in a provost, two bailies, and 11 councillors. It is also a parliamentary burgh, contributing with Montrose, Arbroath, Forfar, and Inverbervie to return one representative to parliament. This place was formerly the county town, and comprises within the limits of the borough 773 houses, inhabited by 1,869 separate families, or 7,180 individuals, of whom 1,118 were children between the ages of five and fifteen, attending school.—Brechin is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Angus and Mearns. The living is a collegiate charge, the stipend of the first minister being £292, and of the second £340. The parish church is part of the cathedral, dedicated to St. Ninian, which was built by David I. on the site of the ancient Culdee abbey. It was originally a handsome Gothic edifice, but has been disfigured and defaced by time and modern alterations. It stands on the edge of a ravine, opposite the castle. The Bishop of Brechin, in the reign of Charles I., is said to have distinguished himself by his determined conformity to the royal decree establishing the liturgy, and to have carried firearms with him into the pulpit. There are a chapel of ease, three Free churches, three belonging to the United Presbyterians, a Congregational chapel, and an Episcopal church.—Part of the ancient chapel of Maison Dieu still remains, and has been occupied as a slaughterhouse and a stable. Near the cathedral is a "round tower," one of the only two found in Scotland, the other being at Abernethy. The tower of Brechin is built of freestone, well wrought; it is 80 feet high, with a spire or conical roof 23 feet more, and is 16 feet in diameter at the base. There are curious carvings about the doorway. The tower is said to lean slightly, and to be shaken by high winds. Brechin Castle, now the seat of Lord Panmure, is built on the site of an ancient castle. It stands on a precipitous rock by the river, and is separated from the town by a deep ravine. Towards the W. it presents a handsome and regular front, but towards the S. a confused mass of ancient remains and modern additions. The picturesque aspect of the place has been injured by the destruction of old woods and trees which formerly adorned it.—Maitland, author of the histories of Edinburgh and London; Gillies, author of a history of Greece; and James Tytler, a contributor to the first edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica," were natives of this town.—Brechin supports a weekly newspaper, called the Brechin Advertiser. —Tuesday is the market-day. Cattle fairs are held on Trinity Muir, 1 mile to the N. of the town, on the third Wednesday in April, the second Wednesday in June and two following days, the second Thursday in August, and the Tuesday before the last Wednesday of September. The June fair, for cattle, horses, and sheep, is one of the most important in Scotland, and has been held from time immemorial.

BRECKENBOROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirby-Wiske, wap. of Birdforth, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.W. of Thirsk. It is joined with the tnshp. of Newsham. The chief residence is Breckenborough House.

BRECKLES, a par. in the hund. of Wayland, in the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles to the S. of Watton. Larling is its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £45, in the patron. of Sir E. Kerrison, Bart. The church, which has a round tower with an octangular top, is dedicated to St. Margaret. Breckles Hall is the seat of Sir E. Kerrison.

BRECKLES, LITTLE, a hmlt., once a separate par., now included in the par. of Shropham, hund. of the same name, in the co. of Norfolk. There is no church, and the rect. was annexed to the vic. of Shropham before 1332.

BRECKNOCKSHIRE, or BRECON-SHIRE, an inland co. of South Wales, bounded on the N. and N.E. by Radnorshire, on the E. by Herefordshire and Monmouthshire, on the S. by Monmouthshire and Glamorganshire, and on the W. by Carmarthenshire and Cardiganshire. It is about 35 miles in length from N. to S., and about 30 miles at its greatest breadth from E. to W., being in circuit about 140 miles, and comprising an area of about 750 square miles, or 460,158 acres. It is situated between 51° 45′ and 52° 17′ N. lat., and 3° 0′ and 3° 48′ W. long. Its outline is very irregular.—At the time of the Roman Conquest this district formed part of the territory of the Silures, who under Caractacus made so brave a resistance to the reign invaders. A Roman way was formed ... and there were two important stations. After the ... ture of the Romans, this territory became a ... principality, and acquired the name of Brycheiniog, which are derived the present Welsh name Brecknock and the English Brecknock. The rule of the ... princes, the last of whom was Bleddyn-ap-Maen... continued till about 1090, when the Norman ... Bernard Newmarch, invaded and got possession ... territory, defeating Bleddyn in a battle fought near Bannau. On the marriage of Bernard's ... ter, who succeeded to the lordship, it passed ... FitzWalter, afterwards Earl of Hereford. The ... of De Brecs held it for about a century, from ... passed to the De Bohuns. A quarrel having ... 1286 between Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of ... and the Earl of Gloucester, lord of Glamorgan, ... territories were declared to be forfeited, and ... sentenced to be imprisoned. On the payment ... fines these sentences were remitted. It was ... northern part of this district that the death of ... last prince of North Wales, took place in ... severe struggle having occurred between the ... and Welsh forces on the banks of the Irvon, ... latter being defeated, the prince fled, and was ... and slain by Adam de Francton, who did not ... recognise him. His remains were interred ... called Cefn-y-bedd ("Ridge of the Grave"), ... Builth. The lordship of Brecknock was ... 1321 on the younger Despencer, who retained ... death. With this exception it remained in ... sion of the De Bohuns till the extinction ... line, when it passed to the crown by the ... Mary, one of the daughters of Humphrey ... with Henry IV. In 1439, Brecknock was ... Henry, afterwards Duke of Buckingham, ... the battle of Northampton, in 1460, and transferred ... title and possessions to his grandson Henry ... distinguished himself as a supporter of Richard ... of Gloucester, afterwards Richard III. who ... large promises but did not fulfil them. ... bent on revenge, took arms against the ... betrayed into his hands and beheaded without ... title and estates were subsequently restored ... VII. to his son Edward, who was also made ... of England, and was the last to fill that ... extinction of the dukedom by his execution, ... Brecknock reverted to the crown, and from ... union of England and Wales took place, it ceased ... a separate history. — Brecknockshire is very ... tainous. Two principal ranges of mountains ... county in nearly parallel directions: that ... called the Eppynt Hills, or Mynydd-Eppynt ... tains, and that in the S. not having a ... name, but including the loftiest peaks in ... The former extends in a north-westerly ... the borders of Carmarthenshire to the ... river Wye and the border of Radnorshire, ... connected with the Plinlimmon range by an ... mass of barren hills. The latter (southern) ... eastward from the lofty hills called the Carmarthen ... Beacons on the western confines of the county ... howell, and terminates in Monmouthshire. The ... cipal summits in this chain, which are also the ... points in the county and in South Wales, are the ... Brecheiniog, or "Brecknockshire Beacons," ... spicuous peaks, about 4 miles to the S.W. of ... having an elevation of 2,862 feet above the ... the sea (these are sometimes called Cader Arthur, ... "Arthur's Chair"); Mount Capel-Isaac, rising ... height of 2,394 feet; and Trecastle Beacon, also ... called the Carmarthenshire Beacons, 2,536 feet ... of the Usk is another short chain called the ... Mountains, rising near Talgarth, the loftiest ... which is Pen Cader Fawr, or the "Cradle ... rising to the height of 2,545 feet. The highest ... of the Eppynt Hills is the mountain called ... near Builth, which is about 2,070 feet high. The dominant formation is the Old Red sandstone, especially in the districts S. of the Usk; and in the narrow valley of Cwmdwr, the junction of the Ludlow rocks with the Old Red sandstone is well laid open. In the western part of the county the grauwacke slates are found which, in one part, are penetrated by volcanic rocks. Trap and porphyry rocks of the transition series appear in the N.W., and present a striking contrast to those of the same series in the neighbouring counties, by being entirely destitute of limestone. The geology of Brecknockshire is of high interest, and has been profoundly studied by Sir R. S. Murchison, who in his great work 'Siluria," alludes to the tile-stones of Cwmdwr, on which Horeb Chapel stands, as full of the casts of shells among which are characteristic forms, such as the Trochidelicites, Turbo Williamsi, Bellerophon trilobatus, and many others. Part of the district belongs to the Silurian system of that geologist, the upper members of which system constitute the escarpments of Mynydd Bwlch-y-groes and Mynydd-Eppynt. The county abounds in wild, magnificent, and beautiful scenery.—There are many rivers in Brecknockshire, but none navigable. The principal are the Wye and the Usk. The Wye borders the county on the N.E. for above 30 miles, separating it from the county of Radnor. It flows by Builth and Hay, at the latter place entering Herefordshire, and subsequently joining the Severn. The scenery along its course is of singular beauty, and charmingly diversified. The Usk has its source on the Carmarthenshire Beacons, and flowing in a south-easterly direction, passes by Brecknock to Crickhowell, thence entering Monmouthshire. Among the other rivers are the Claerwen, on the northern border of the county; the Irvon, which falls into the Wye near Builth; the Honddhu, joining the Usk at Brecknock; the Taf, formed by the union of two streams, rises at the Brecknockshire Beacons, and pursuing a rapid course southwards, enters the county of Glamorgan to the W. of Merthyr Tydvil; the Neath, and the Tawe. The Neath is formed by two streams, the Mellte and the Hepsk, running southwards from the Beacons, on both of which there are cascades, and the latter of which is remarkable for having an underground course of above half a mile through a cavern called the Porth Ogov, after which it runs over a fall of 60 feet. There are several small lakes in the county, the principal of which is Llyn Safadda, a little to the E. of Brecknock. It is also called Llangorse pool, or Talyllyn, and is about 2 miles long by 1 broad. It contains pike and perch, and very fine eels. The privilege of fishing here under certain limitations was granted to the burgesses of Brecknock in 1235.—There are no important minerals in the county, with the exception of iron and coal; and these are found in the beds belonging to the great coal-field of South Wales, which extend across the boundary of Monmouthshire a short distance into this county. Limestone is found in the western part of the county. Near Penderyn and Pont Neath Vaughan are beds of excellent fire-clay. Traces of lead and copper have been discovered, but attempts to work them have not been successful.—Brecknockshire, from the great irregularity of its surface, the height of its mountains, and depth of its valleys, has a singularly various climate. The district of the Eppynt Hills, extending between Builth and Trecastle, is the most desolate part of the county, and the most subject to severe cold, snow, rain, and storms. The climate is similar on the lofty mountains of the southern range. In the valleys the temperature is milder. Although much rain falls, the air is not found to be unhealthy. There is a great variety of soils in this county, but the proportion of good land is very small. In the slaty tract of the north and the coal district on the southern border there is much clay, which keeps the surface cold and wet. A fertile loam exists along the banks of the Wye and the Irvon. In the red sandstone districts of the centre, along the valley of the Usk, the soil is remarkably light and sandy, but capable of yielding good grain crops. The best soil is found in the eastern quarter, in the hund. of Talgarth and Crickhowell, where excellent crops of wheat are produced. In this district are some hop-grounds, and orchards, from which good cider is made. An Agricultural Society was established at Brecknock in 1755, to whose exertions the county owes many of the improvements in farming which have been effected. It was the first society of the kind in Wales, and one of the earliest in Great Britain. Barley and oats are the principal crops grown on the cold clays, and oats on the high grounds. The produce of ordinary grain, peas, turnips, and potatoes is sufficient for home consumption. The mountainous tracts afford pasturage to the native breed of small black cattle and the small mountain sheep. In the valley of the Usk and other lowlands the Herefordshire breed of white-faced cattle is found, and many varieties have sprung from the intermixture of this and the native breed. Brecknockshire has also a good native breed of small horses.—The county is divided into the six hundreds of Builth, Crickhowell, Devynnock, Merthyr, Penkelly, and Talgarth. Brecknock is the county town and the only borough. The county contains four market towns — Brecknock, Builth, Crickhowell, and Hay, all of which are the heads of Poor-law Unions and County Court districts. The assizes are held at Brecknock, the county being included in the South Wales circuit.—For ecclesiastical purposes Brecknock is comprised in the archdeac. of Brecknock, in the dioc. of St. David's, and prov. of Canterbury. It contains 66 pars., 3 of which are in Brecknock, and 12,929 inhabited houses, with a population, according to the census of 1861, of 61,627, having increased 153 in the decennial period from 1851.—The county returns one member, and the borough of Brecknock one, to the imperial parliament. The local government is vested in a lord-lieutenant, a high sheriff, and a body of magistrates, in number between 40 and 50.—Brecknockshire has no important manufacture, except that of iron, which employs a large number of persons. The works are chiefly situated near the south-eastern border, and are those of Clydach, in Llanelly; Beaufort, in Llangattock; Romney, and Ynyscedemi. Attempts were at one time made to establish the linen and woollen manufactures, but without permanent success. Flannel, coarse cloth, baize, and stockings are made to a small extent. There are numerous tanyards, and the leather made is considered of excellent quality. The county exports cattle and sheep, manufactured iron, leather, fire-clay, &c.—The remains of antiquity in this county are numerous and interesting. Among those of British origin are several stone circles, camps, and cromlechs—one of the last mentioned is called Ty Illtyd; and remains of ancient camps or British towns may be seen at Penmyarth, Crûg Hywel, near Crickhowell, and at Venni Wood, Llanvillo, Aberbran, &c. Traces are found of two important Roman stations, the principal of which is the Caer Bannau, situated on the banks of the Usk, where the Yscir meets it. This is a rectangular camp, supposed to be identical with Bannium, a British town which preceded Brecknock, and was adopted as a station by the Roman general, Ostorius Scapula. This station occupied a space above 620 feet long and 456 feet broad, and the remains of it are still considerable, comprising the ruins of several ramparts and the foundations of walls, in several places from 3 to 6 feet high, partly overgrown with underwood. But the stones were removed by the Norman Conqueror of Brecknockshire, Newmarch, to his castle lower down the Usk, where the county town now stands. Here is also a curious ancient relic called Maen-y-morwynion, or the Maiden Stone, adorned with carving, and bearing a Latin inscription, now almost obliterated. The other station, also called Caer, or Gaer, and of about the same extent, is near Cwm Dhu, in the hund. of Crickhowell. Fragments of bricks are strewed over the sites, and Roman coins have been found at both stations. The way called the Via Julia Montana, a branch of that formed along the south coast of Wales, and called the Via Julia Maritima, entered this county near Abergavenny (the Roman Gobannium), and passing the Caer and the Caer Bannau, crossed into Carmarthenshire. Scarcely any vestiges of this road remain. There were two vicinal or cross roads connected with the Caer Bannau, now called the Sarn Hir and the Sarn Helen, which are easily traceable.—With the exception of the remains of Brecknock Priory and College, there are no ruins of religious houses in the county. Many castles formerly existed here, and there are still interesting ruins of those of Brecknock, Crickhowell, Devynnock, Trêtower, besides smaller remains of those of Dinas, Builth, and Penkelly. At Brynllys is a round tower in good preservation. The county contains a large number of ancient mansions, once the seats of the principal families, but now mostly occupied as farmhouses. Among the chief modern seats are Glan Usk, Gevernvale, Dinas, Llangoed Castle, Castle Madoc, Penpont, and Pennoyre House.—The construction of the Brecon canal was commenced in 1793 and completed in 1811. It is 33 miles in length, extending from Brecknock by Clydach and Abergavenny to Pont-y-pool, where it joins the Monmouth canal. In the 18 miles between Brecknock and Clydach it has a fall of 68 feet, with six locks. It passes along a noble aqueduct, 80 feet high, over the Clydach valley, whence it has a level course to Pont-y-pool. Easy communication is secured between this canal and the various extensive works on the confines of Monmouthshire, by several lines of railroad constructed shortly after its completion. There are also lines from Brecknock to Hay and Kington, and from Glan Usk to the Swansea canal, which enters the county in the south-west.—The principal roads in the county are the following: those from Brecknock to Crickhowell and Abergavenny; to Merthyr Tydvil; up the valley of the Usk to Trecastle; to Castle Madoc and Builth; and that from Hay to Talgarth and Crickhowell. A line of railway is projected to cross the county from N. to S., by Builth, Talgarth, and Brecknock, to meet the Vale of Neath railway at Merthyr Tydvil; and another line from Hereford, to enter the county at Hay, and meet the former at Talgarth.

BRECKNOCK, or BRECON, a market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hunds. of Merthyr-Cynog, Penkelly, and Devynnock, in the co. of Brecknock, South Wales, 171 miles to the W. of London. It is situated on the banks of the Usk, at the confluence of the Honddhu and Tarell with that river, and is the county town of Brecknockshire. It is a place of great antiquity, and is called by the Welsh, from its situation at the mouth of the Honddhu, Aberhonddhu. Its foundation is attributed to the Norman baron, Bernard Newmarch, who soon after the Conquest invaded and gained possession of the territory. Bleddyn-ap-Maenarch was at that time Prince of Brecheiniog, and he was defeated and slain in a fierce battle with the Normans, fought, it is said, near Caer Bannau. This spot, 3 miles to the W. of the present town of Brecknock, was the site of the important Roman station Bannium, on the Via Julia Montana, and a cross way meeting it here, now called Sarn Helen. It is thought probable that a British town existed on the same site before the Roman invasion took place. The present town dates from the year 1094, when Bernard selected the site for the erection of a castle, the materials for which he obtained from Caer Bannau. From the same place were procured materials for building of the town, which was defended by walls, with towers, and a moat. Before his death Bernard also founded and largely endowed a priory of the Benedictine order, as a cell to the abbey of Battle, in Sussex. The endowments and privileges of this house were extended by several charters, granted to the monks by Roger Fitzwalter, grandson of the founder. The history of the lordship, already sketched in the article on Brecknockshire, need not be repeated here. Under the De Bohuns, the castle was enlarged and beautified, privileges were conferred on the inhabitants of the town, an annual fair was established, and Brecknock became a more important and prosperous place than ever. After the abolition of the lordship marcher the castle fell into decay, and was at length dismantled during the civil war in the reign of Charles I. After the battle of Naseby, Charles was entertained at the Priory House by Sir Hubert Price.—The situation and general aspect of Brecknock is singularly picturesque. It stands in a fair open valley amidst of fine mountain scenery, on the banks of the river Usk, which is here joined by the Honddhu, a rapid stream running southward from the Eppynt Hills, by the Tarell, a rivulet running northward from the Brecknock Beacons. The Usk is crossed by a handsome bridge of seven arches, from which there is a fine view over the surrounding country. The Tarell is crossed by one bridge, and the Honddhu by three, one of which is an ancient stone structure of three arches erected near the juncture of that river with the Usk. The ivy-covered ruins of the castle, the entrance turret and gateway of the priory, wooded grounds along the Honddhu, picturesque mills, and, above all in, the magnificent mountains beyond, form the elements of a scene of rare and richly-varied beauty. The town, which with the suburb of Llanvaes extends about a mile in length, is irregularly built. There are, however, several good streets, well paved, and lighted with gas, and containing some handsome residences. The old county hall in High-street was rebuilt in 1841, and is now converted into an assembly-room; the assize courts having been erected about 1840. The latter is a handsome edifice of the Doric order of architecture, and cost £12,000. There is a new market-house from designs by Wyatt. The town contains also barracks, originally used as an armoury, the borough gaols, and a theatre. Brecknock has no manufactures, and its trade is chiefly in the supply of goods to the district surrounding the town. Its prosperity has been promoted by the construction of the [BRECKNOCKSHIRE.] There are two beautiful promenades, one along the banks of Usk, under the castle walls, the other, delightfully sequestered, through the grounds of the priory, on the site of a hermitage on the banks of the Honddhu.—Brecknock received a charter of incorporation from De Braose, styled Baron of Hereford; but the charter under which the corporation now exists was granted in the second and third years of the reign of William and Mary. The borough is governed under the Reform Act, by a mayor, recorder, 6 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the style of the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Brecknock. It has returned one member to the imperial parliament since the 27th of Henry VIII., when the elective franchise was first conferred. The borough is of greater extent formerly; comprising, besides the ancient parish, the extra-parochial districts of Castle Hill and the College. According to the census of 1851, the parliamentary borough includes within its limits 1,206 inhabited houses, with a population of 5,517, against 6,070 in 1841, showing a decrease in the decennial period of 553. The municipal borough has declined from 5,07[illegible] in the same period. Brecknock is the seat of a Poor Law Union, the head of a County Court district, and the quarters of the county militia. The assizes are held, and the county election takes place in the town. It is the head of an archdeac. in the dioc. of St. David's. The town comprises the greater part of the two parishes of St. John and St. David, the former including the chapelry of St. Mary. The living of St. John's is a vicarage in the dioc. of St. David's, of the val. with the chapelry of St. Mary's annexed, of £160, in the patronage of the Archdeacon of Brecknock. The church, which formerly belonged to the priory, and is still called the Priory Church, is a cruciform edifice in the early English style, with an embattled central tower. It is partly covered with ivy, and from the frequent repairs and alterations it has undergone retains little of its primitive appearance. It contains a screen, rood-loft, chapels for the various guilds, and [illegible]—one of large size, called the vicar's chapel—and a fine round font, and some interesting monuments. The transepts are said to have been appropriated as chapels, one for the use of the inhabitants of Battle, a neighbouring village, and the other for the Normans, or rod-loft. The entire structure is about 200 feet long, and [illegible] feet broad. The living of St. David's or Llanvaes [illegible] in the same dioc., of the val. of £110, in the patron[illegible]

Bishop and Dean and Chapter of St. David's. The church is of small dimensions, and in a decaying state. The living of St Mary's is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of St. John's. The church, which was rebuilt in the 16th century, is a handsome structure, chiefly in the perpendicular style, but with some vestiges of Norman architecture. It stands in the middle of the town, and has a square tower about 90 feet high. There are five chapels in the town, three of which belong to the Baptists, and two to the Independents.—Christ Church College, situated at Llanvaes, was founded here by Henry VIII. in 1538, on the site of an ancient Dominican priory, and has a income, from endowment, of £82 per annum. Part of the ancient church remains, with the stalls, some elegant windows, a stone cross, and several monuments, among which are those to Bishop Lucy, to his son, chancellor of the church, and to the father of Sir David Gam. There are some remains of the gateway and the refectory. The Boughrood charity school was founded and endowed about 1690 by Rees Powell, who bequeathed property of considerable value for various other benevolent purposes. There are British, infant, and other schools in the town. The Independents have an academy here for the training of young men for the ministry. A mechanics' institute, a young men's improvement society, the Agricultural Society, an infirmary, hospital and almshouses, and a savings-bank are among the social and charitable institutions of the town. The charitable endowments for the benefit of the poor are very numerous and valuable, producing (inclusive of the Boughrood Charity) about £520 per annum.—The castle ruins are on the N. bank of the Usk, on the verge of a hill, and have still a picturesque aspect. They consist chiefly of the Ely Tower (so called from being the place of imprisonment of Morton, Bishop of Ely, in the reign of Richard III.), and portions of two other towers. Part of the site of the old fortress is now occupied by the Castle Hotel. Near the castle is Brecknock Priory, the seat of Marquis Camden, who takes the title of baron from this town. The mansion was built of the materials of the old priory, by Sir J. Price, to whom the site was given at the Dissolution. There are several ancient seats in the neighbourhood, among which are Aelvanog, Pont Wen, Cwrt Sim Young, and Newton; the latter the birthplace of Sir David Gam, who accompanied Henry V. to Agincourt, and sacrificed his own life to save the king's. Close to Priory House is Frwdgrêch, a handsome modern residence, pleasantly situated in beautiful grounds. In the vicinity are Pennoyre and Dinas.—Dr. Hugh Price, founder of Jesus College, Oxford, was a native of Brecknock. He died in 1574, and is interred in St. John's church here. Dr. John David Rhys, poet, and author of a work on the Welsh language, spent the last years of his life at Clynhîr. Theophilus Jones, the county historian, was born at Brecknock, and was educated at the College School. He died in 1812. Mrs. Siddons, the actress, who died in 1831, is also said to have been born in this town, at the "Shoulder of Mutton" inn, while her parents were on a professional tour.—Wednesday and Saturday are the market-days. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in March, the 4th May, the 5th July, the 9th September, and the 16th November. There is a racecourse next the town, on which races are held annually in September.

BRECONGILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Coverham, wap. of Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the S.W. of Middleham.

BRECONHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Arthuret, ward of Eskdale, in the co. of Cumberland, close to Longtown. It is situated near the borders of Scotland.

BREDBURY, a tnshp. in the par. and borough of Stockport, hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. palatine of Chester, 2 miles to the E. of Stockport, its post town. The Peak Forest canal passes near it. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, of the val. of £160, in the alternate patron. of the crown and the Bishop of Chester. There are charitable endowments amounting to £16 per annum.

BREDE, a par. in the hund. of Gostrow, rape of Hastings, in the co. of Sussex, 5 miles to the N. of Hastings. It is pleasantly situated on the Brede river, which is crossed by a bridge, and joins the Rother below Winchelsea. Hops are cultivated here, and there is an iron-foundry, which gives employment to some of the inhabitants. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, of the val. of £1,023, in the patron. of T. Frewen, Esq. The church, which is in the perpendicular style, is dedicated to St. George, and contains a brass of the year 1483. Brede Place is a mansion built about the time of Henry VIII.

BREDENBURY, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, in the co. of Hereford, 3 miles to the W. of Bromyard. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £55, in the patron. of C. Dutton, Esq. Part of the land is laid out in hop-grounds. In the vicinity is Bredenbury Hill, with the remains of an old camp. Bredenbury House is the principal residence.

BREDFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Wilford, in the co. of Suffolk, 2 miles to the N. of Woodbridge, its post town. The East Suffolk railway runs near it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £249, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, which contains a monumental brass of the year 1611, is dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities produce about £8 a year. The principal seat is Bredfield Hall.

BREDGAR, a par. in the hund. of Milton, and lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles to the S. of Sittingbourn, its post town, which is a station on the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £180, in the patron. of Sir E. Dering, Bart. The church, which is an ancient building with a Saxon entrance, is dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and contains a monumental brass. It had formerly a small college attached, which was founded about 1400, and was given at the reformation to the Archbishop of Canterbury. There is a chapel for Wesleyans, a small free school endowed with £5 a year, and several other charitable endowments, producing about £23 a year.

BREDHURST, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 4 miles to the N.E. of Maidstone. Chatham is its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £101, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, which is old and of very small dimensions, is dedicated to St. Peter.

BREDICOT, a par. and small vil. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 3½ miles to the E. of Worcester, its post town. The Bristol and Birmingham railway passes through it, and has a station 1 mile N. of the vil., at Spetchley. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, annexed to the vic. of Tibberton, of the joint annual val. of £260, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester, who are also lords of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure recently restored. It has a painted window at the east end, and the chancel is paved with encaustic tiles. There are handsome National schools, in the Gothic style of architecture, with residences for the master and mistress. The chief residence is Bredicot Court.

BREDON, a par. partly in the upper, partly in the middle div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 2 miles to the N. of Ashchurch. Tewkesbury is its post town. It is a station on the Bristol and Birmingham section of the Midland railway. The par. is situated on the border of Gloucestershire, on the E. bank of the river Avon, and contains the chplries. of Norton-by-Bredon, Cutsdean (which is about 12 miles distant from Bredon, in the upper div. of the hund.), and the hmlts. of Hardwick, Mitton, Kinsham, and Westmancote. A small monastery was founded here during the Saxon period, which was given, before the Norman Conquest, to the see of Worcester; and in the churchyard may still be seen several ancient tombs of monastic dignitaries, probably superiors of this house. To the N.E. of the village is Bredon Hill, rising to the height of 900 feet, and commanding a wide and splendid prospect over the surrounding beautiful country, including the vales of Evesham and Gotswold, the towns of Cheltenham, Gloucester, and Tewkesbury, the course of the Severn and Avon, the Malvern Hills, the mountains of South Wales, &c. On the summit of the hill, which is green to the top, is an ancient encampment, covering about 20 acres, and surrounded by a double trench. Some of the villagers are employed in stocking-weaving. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, of the annual val., with the perpet. curs of Norton and Cutsdean annexed, of £2,300, in the patron. of the Duke of Portland. The church, which is very old, is dedicated to St. Giles, and was restored with much taste in 1845, when it was re-roofed. The tower rises upon arches between the nave and chancel, and is surmounted by an elegant spire. It has a porch of Saxon architecture, and contains monuments to Giles Read, who died in 1611, and one to Dr Prideaux, Bishop of Worcester in the reign of Charles I., but deprived of his see during the Civil War. There is a Baptist chapel at Kinsham. The charitable endowments of the parish are of considerable value, producing altogether about £366 per annum. The principal foundations are the free school for boys, founded by William Hancock in 1718, and rebuilt in 1845, which has a revenue of £130; and Read's almshouses for eight poor women, the revenue of which is £113. In the parish is Wollashill Hall, an ancient mansion, formerly the seat of the Hanford family. Bredon Hill is a meet for the Worcester hounds.

BREDWARDINE, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, in the co. of Hereford, 11 miles to the W. of Hereford, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Wye, and had formerly a castle, some ruins of which still remain, and which supplied material for the building of the court-house at the neighbouring village of Moccas. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. of £190, in the patron. of the Rev. N. D. H. Newton, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. There is an endowment, called Jarvis's Charity, for the support of a free school, and supply of clothing and books for the scholars. It produces about £1,250 a year. The old castle gave name to the family of which Thomas Bredwardine, Archbishop of Canterbury in 1349, was a member. He was a man of great learning, and acquired the title of the Profound Doctor.

BREDY, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Uggscombe, in the co. of Dorset, 6 miles to the W. of Dorchester. It is situated at the source of the river Brede, or Bride, which runs from a small lake called Bridehead. Here is a quarry of good building stone, which supplied the material for Winterborne Abbey. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Long Bredy, in the dioc. of Salisbury. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There are some charities, producing about £3 a year.

BREDY, LONG, a par. in the hund. of Eggerton, in the co. of Dorset, 8 miles to the W. of Dorchester, its post town. Upper Kingston is a hmlt. of this par. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. with the perpet. cur. of Little Bredy annexed, of £625, in the patron. of R. Williams, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The charitable endowments amount to £8 per annum.

BREE, a vil. in the bar. of Bantry, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.W. of Enniscorthy. It is near a branch of the river Slaney.

BREEDOGE-BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilnamanagh, and bar. of French-park, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.W. of Boyle. It is seated near the south-eastern extremity of Lough Gara, on the banks of the Breedoge river, which has its source in the adjacent bar. of Castlereagh, and falls into the lough a little below the village.

BREEDON-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the western div. of the hund. of Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, 5 miles to the N.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its post town. It is situated in a fertile and pleasant country, on the border of Derbyshire, and contains the chpries. of St. Anton-Harold, Tonge, Wilson, and Worthington, and the lib. of Newbold. A small priory of the Dominican was founded here in the 12th century, as a cell to priory of St. Oswald, at Nostall, in Yorkshire, by Robert Ferrers, Earl of Nottingham, had previously granted the church of Breedon, with some lands parish. Breedon priory had a revenue of about £4 was given, after the Dissolution, to John, Lord Lumstone is quarried here, and there are extensive works. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough of the val. of £205, in the patron. of the Earl of St and Warrington. The church, which stands on a hill, is dedicated to SS. Mary and Hardulph. It formerly the church of the priory, and contains monuments of the Shirleys. There is also a church at Worthington, the living of which is a cur., val. £100, in the patron. of Lord Scarsdale. Wesleyans have a chapel in the village. The schools for boys and girls, founded and endowed by Francis and Elizabeth Commins, the revenue is about £40. The other parochial charities £15 a year. The Earl of Stamford is lord of Breedon is in the honour of Tutbury, in the Lancaster.

BREGOGE, a par. partly in the bar. of Orrery in that of Kilmore, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Ireland, near Buttevant. The soil is fertile parish contains a tract of bog, and some limestone ries. The living is a vic. united with the parish Buttevant, in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and principal seat is Bregoge Castle, which is of modern date.

BREIGHTMET, a tnship in the par. of Moors, hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of 2 miles to the E. of Bolton. The inhabitants employed in the cotton manufacture and the of the neighbourhood. A free school was Roscow Fold in 1759, by William Hulme, quently endowed by other persons with £20 per annum.

BREIGHTON-CUM-GUMBY, a tnship in the of Bubwith, wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding co. of York, 5 miles to the N.W. of Howden. ated on the banks of the river Derwent, near ferry. The township includes a tract BREINTON, a par. in the hund. of the co. of Hereford, 2 miles to the W. of post town. It is situated on the banks and includes the hmlts. of Warchan and Upper The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of £109, in the patron. of the bishop. The cated to St. Michael. There is a free school with £6 a year, and some other charities nually about £11.

BRELADE, ST., a par. in the island of Jersey, nel Islands, 3 miles to the W. of St Pleasantly situated on the S. coast, and town of St. Aubin's and the vil. of Gorey is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. gift of the governor of the island. The stands close to the sea, is an ancient building dimensions, with a low round tower. In is a very ancient chapel, said to be of earlier the church, and still in good preservation. the Fishermen's Chapel.

BREMHILL, a par. in the hund. of Chippenham the co. of Wilts, 2 miles to the N.W. of E. from Chippenham, its post town. It is situated near the river Avon, and the Great railway, and contains the tythgs. of Foxham, Derton, Bremhill, Studley, &c. The Berkshire canal passes through the parish. The living in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £506, in the bishop. The church, which is dedicated to St stands on an elevated site, commanding an prospect over the surrounding country. It is structure, with a square embattled tower, and a rood-loft, a stone font, several monuments (the earliest being of the year 1616), and a to one of the Hungerford family, who had the Studl'. There is an old stone cross in the churchyard. Willi n Lisle Bowles, the poet, formerly held the vic. of Br hill, and died here in 1845. He wrote a history of the arish, which was published about 1828, and contains ustrations of several monuments of ancient times existi in the neighbourhood. The vicarage was then confe d by Bishop Denison on the late Archdeacon of Wilt the Venerable Henry Drury, M.A., Chaplain to the House of Commons, who died in January, 1863. The Wesl ans and Primitive Methodists have chapels here. The parochial charities consist of the produce of an endowment founded in 1478 by Maud Heath, for the maintenance of an old footpath, now amounting to about £105 per annum. The Roman way, Watling Street, passes through Bremhill, and in the vicinity are the ancient Wansdyke, and the venerable remains of the temple at Avebury. The Moravians have a settlement near East Tytherton. The old seat of the Hungerfords is now a farmhouse. The Marquis of Lansdowne is lord of the manor.

BRMILHAM, or COWAGE, a par. in the hund. of Malmsbury, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles to the W. of Malmsbury, its post town. It lies on the border of Gloucestershire. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the val. of £121, in the patron. of the Hon. and Rev. G. R. Bowles.

BRENCHLEY, a par. in the hund. of Brenchley and Horsmonden, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 6 miles to the E. of Tunbridge Wells. and 2½ from Maidstone junction railway station. Staplehurst is its post town. It includes the chplry. of Paddock Wood and the hmt. of Matfield Green, which is about 1½ mile W., with several others. The river Teise passes near the village. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the early val. of £749, in the patron of G. C. Courthope, Esq. The rectorial tithes have been commuted at £712 s., and the vicarial at £450, with 17*s.* per acre upon pps. The church, an ancient stone structure in the form of a cross, with a lofty tower, is dedicated to All Saints. There is a handsome district church lately erected at Paddock Wood, the living of which is a perpet. cur. of £235, likewise in the gift of G. C. Courthope, Esq. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village, and the Baptists one at Matfield Green, where there are several villa residences. The National schools, which are very handsome, stand at the entrance to the village, on the Wells road. The charitable endowments, which include a small bequest for education, are worth £17 per annum. The parish comprises an area of 7,780 acres, a considerable part of which is laid out in hop-grounds.

BRNCHLEY AND HORSEMONDEN HUNDRED, one of the 13 hunds. or subdivisions of the lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, situated in the western parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hnd. of Twyford, on the E. by the lathe of Scray, on the S. by Sussex, and on the W. by the hund. of Washlingstone. It comprises the pars. of Brenchley and Horsmonden, with a small part of Lamberhurst, and has an area of about 16,500 acres.

BRNDON, a par. in the hund. of Sherwill, in the co. of Devon, 15 miles to the E. of Ilfracombe. Lynton is its post town. It lies on the border of Somersetshire, near the coast of the Bristol Channel, on the banks of the river Lyn, which takes its rise on Exmoor, and falls into the Bristol Channel near Lynton. There is much wild and striking scenery along the course of this river. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £200, in the patron. of F. W. Knight, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Brendon. The village is a meet for the North Devon hounds.

BRNKLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Dinnington, Castleward, in the co. of Northumberland, 7 miles to the N. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. It is 1½ mile E. of the parish church.

BRNT, the name of two small rivers, the one rising in the south part of Hertfordshire, near Chipping Barnet, and after pursuing a south-westerly course of 16 miles, joins the Grand Junction canal near Hanwell, in Middlesex, and falls into the Thames at Brentford; the other flows through South Anglesea, and falls into the Menai Straits.

BRENT-CUM-WRINGTON HUNDRED, one of the 40 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Somerset, situated in the eastern parliamentary div. of the co. It is in two parts, which lie at the distance of several miles from each other; the Brent district being on the W. side of the Mendip hills, and surrounded by the Bristol Channel and the hunds. of Bempstone and Winterstoke; the Wrington district being bounded on the N. and E. by the hund. of Hartcliffe-with-Bedminster, and on the S. and W. by the hund. of Winterstoke. The pars. contained in the hund. are those of Berrow, East Brent, South Brent, Barrington, Lympsham, and Wrington. The hund. spreads over an area of about 18,200 acres.

BRENT, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Brent-cum-Wrington, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles to the W. of Axbridge. Weston-super-Mare is its post town. It is pleasantly situated near the coast of the Bristol Channel, and contains the hmlts. of Edingworth and Rook's Bridge. The Bristol and Exeter railway passes through the par. To the S. of the village is Brent Knoll, an insulated conical hill, rising about 500 feet above the level of the sea, and on the summit of which are remains of an ancient camp with a double rampart. Near it have been found many Roman coins, urns, parts of weapons, and other relics. A spot on the Knoll still bears the name Battleborough. The view from the top of the hill is magnificent, including the Quantocks to the S.W., the town of Bridgwater, the Bristol Channel, with the mountains of South Wales; and to the N., Brean Down, Bleadon Hill, and the Mendip range.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the annual val. of £902, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which stands on the rise of the hill, is large and handsome, with a square tower, surmounted by a spire 90 feet in height. It contains some good stained glass, and is dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin. There are three niches on the west face of the tower, with sculptures of our Lord in his humiliation and in his glory. The church once belonged to the abbey of Glastonbury, to which it was given by Ini, and the abbots had a seat here, which was taken down about the commencement of the 18th century. There are some small charities.

BRENT ELEIGH, or ELY BRENT, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, in the co. of Suffolk, 6 miles to the N.W. of Hadleigh, and 7 N.E. of Sudbury, its post town and railway station. It is situated on the banks of the river Brett, a branch of the Stour, and was once a market town under a grant by Henry III. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £369, in the patron. of Mrs. Brown. The church, a Norman structure with perpendicular tower, is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains in the chancel a parochial library of 1,500 volumes, founded by Dr. Colman, fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Here are almshouses for 12 persons, established and endowed in 1730 by Edward Colman, the revenue of which is about £70 per annum. The charitable endowments amount to £120 a year. The principal mansion is Brent Eleigh Hall, once the seat of the Shelton family, and since of Sir Felix Agar.

BRENTFORD, a market town, comprising New Brentford (also called West or Great Brentford), and Old or East Brentford; the former being in the par. of New Brentford, and hund. of Elthorne, the latter in the par. of Ealing, and hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, 7 miles to the W. of Hyde Park Corner. It is a station on a loop line of the London and Southampton railway, and is connected with the Great Western railway by a branch line 4 miles long from Southall. The town is situated on the northern bank of the river Thames, which is here crossed by a handsome stone bridge of seven arches, erected in 1789, and connecting Brentford with Kew. The two parts of the town are separated by the main road to Hanwell and the small river Brent, which, after being joined by the Grand Junction canal near Hanwell, falls into the Thames at this place. Brentford, formerly called Braynford, is an ancient town, and takes its name from the river and a very ancient ford across it, where now the bridge stands. The present bridge, a neat stone structure, was built about 1824, on the site of one which had existed here from a very early period, for the maintenance of which a toll was granted by Edward I.—A battle was fought at Brentford in the year 1016, in which the Danes, having been compelled to retire from London, were defeated with great loss by Edmund Ironside. Another battle took place here during the civil war of the 17th century, in which the royalist forces, led by Ruthen, Earl of Forth, defeated the forces of the parliament, led by Colonel Hollis. Ruthen was afterwards created Earl of Brentford for his services on this occasion. In 1445 a chapter of the order of the Garter was held at Brentford. About the same time a friary, or hospital, for a master and several brethren, was founded in a chapel at Old Brentford, by John Somerset, chancellor of the exchequer and the king's chaplain, the site of which was given at the Dissolution to Edward, Duke of Somerset. Six Protestant martyrs suffered death at the stake here in 1558.—The town consists chiefly of one street, narrow, irregularly built, and about a mile in length. Its situation on the great western road, the Grand Junction canal, and the railways, has made Brentford an important thoroughfare, and the seat of a good trade. Here are several extensive manufactories and works, including a soap-factory, saw-mills, an ale brewery, gas and water works; but the extensive distillery formerly situated here has recently been removed to Hamersmith. The water-works now belong to the Grand Junction Company, which has a chimney 150 feet in height, and a stand-pipe above 200 feet high. The market-gardens of the neighbourhood give employment to many of the workpeople. There is a townhall and market-house of recent erection, a savings-bank, and a dispensary situated in New Brentford. Brentford is the county town, and the elections for Middlesex take place here. It is also the head of a Poor-law Union (though the Union poorhouse is situated in Isleworth), of a County Court district, and the headquarters of the West Middlesex militia. Petty sessions are held once a fortnight by the county magistrates.—The living of New Brentford is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, of the val. of £360, in the patron. of the Rector of Hanwell. The church, a plain brick edifice, rebuilt about 1764, is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The tower is that of the old church. It contains six bells, one of which bears on it the date 1011, and the inscription "Sancta Anna, ora pro nobis!" The church contains a brass and several interesting monuments, among which are those of Noy, attorney-general in the reign of Charles I.; of the Clitherows, whose seat is Boston House, and to whom the manor belongs; of Dr. William Howell Ewin, by Flaxman; of Gifford, the actor; and of John Horne, father of John Horne Tooke, who held the curacy about eleven years. The living of Old Brentford is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London, of the val. of £141, in the patron. of the Vicar of Ealing. The church is dedicated to St. George. It contains an altar-piece by Zoffany, representing the Last Supper, in which the artist has introduced his own portrait as St. Peter, and those of eleven fishermen of the town as the other apostles. A new district has been recently formed out of Old Brentford, and a temporary iron church erected. There are in the town chapels belonging to the Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyan Methodists, a literary institution, and British and infant schools, besides National schools situated in New Brentford. The charitable endowments consist chiefly of the revenue of the free schools for boys and girls, the former endowed in 1719 by Lady Capel.—In the market-place of New Brentford is an old inn, called the "Three Pigeons," to which some interest is attached from its having been kept by Lowin, one of the earliest performers of the plays of Shakspeare, and from its being referred to by the early dramatists. Near the town are Sion House and Osterley Park, the former the residence of the Duke of Northumberland, the latter that of the Earl of Jersey.—Tuesday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 17th May, and the 12th September, each lasting three days, the former being for the sale of cattle, and the latter a pleasure fair.

BRENTFORD-END, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Isleworth, in the co. of Middlesex, 1 mile from Brentford. It is on the north side of the river Thames, and was the site of an ancient chapel erected in the reign of Henry VI.

BRENTINGBY, a chplry. in the par. of Wyfordby and hund. of Framland, in the co. of Leicester, 2 miles to the E. of Melton Mowbray, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Wreak, and is crossed by the Melton Mowbray and Oakham canal. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Thorpe Arnold, in the dioc. of Peterborough.

BRENT PELHAM, a par. in the hund. of Hertford, in the co. of Hertford, 5 miles to the E. of Buntingford. It lies on the border of Essex. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £120, with that of Furneux Pelham united to it, of £420, in the gift of the Treasurer of St. Paul's, London. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BRENT, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Stanborough, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles to the W. of Totnes, of which Brixburton is its post town. It is situated in a pleasant and fertile district on the banks of the river Avon, near a station on the South Devon railway. Brent is an inconsiderable market town, and the manor was formerly held by the abbots of Buckfastleigh, who had a gallows here, and the power of inflicting capital punishment. There is a picturesque waterfall close to the bridge over the Avon. On the neighbouring common tin was formerly worked. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £822, in the patron. of the Rev. N. Lucumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Petroc. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village. There are endowments, consisting of the parish lands, and a school for education by John Wilcocks and Thomas Ash, which produce about £140 per annum.

BRENT, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Brent and Wrington, in the co. of Somerset, 6 miles to the S.W. of Axbridge. Weston-super-Mare is its post town. It lies near the coast of the Bristol Channel, and the Bristol and Exeter railway, and contains the hmlt. of East Brent and Wick. Brent Knoll [see BRENT, EAST] is a conspicuous object in the vil. The manor was formerly held by the abbots of Glastonbury. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the annual val. of £548, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Wells. The church, which is dedicated to St. Michael, stands on a pleasant hill, and contains some Norman traces and a monument to the Somersets, to whom Henry VIII. gave the manor. Some of the ancient benches are adorned with carvings. There is a chapel for Wesleyan Methodists. The charitable endowments, producing £8 a year, consist of the parish consists of fine pasture land.

BRENT-TOR, a par. in the hund. of Tavistock, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the N. of Tavistock, its post town. It is situated in a rugged district on the small river Lid, at the foot of a lofty eminence, which has given name to the parish. The Tor rises to a considerable height from the elevated down, and is a conspicuous object at a great distance. It commands an extensive view, and in clear weather parts of Cornwall are visible both from the English and the Bristol Channel. Manganese is obtained in this parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £80, in the patron. of the Duke of Bedford. The church stands near the summit of the Tor, and is very difficult of approach. It forms a landmark for vessels entering the harbour of Plymouth, and is said to have been built as a monument of gratitude by a merchant who had escaped from shipwreck. It is dedicated to St. Mary.

BRENT-TOWN, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Faversham, lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, near Faversham.

BRENTWOOD, a chplry. and post town in the par. of South Weald, hund. of Chafford, in the co. of Essex, 6 miles N.E. of Romford, 11 miles to the S.W. of Chelmsford, and 18 miles to the N.E. of London. It is situated on the reat Eastern railway. Brentwood is an ancient place, a l was formerly a market town. In the Saxon period e manor was one of the possessions of Waltham Abbey. The town is situated on high ground, in a pleasant a healthy district, and consists chiefly of one street, th many ancient houses irregularly built. The remain of the old townhall and prison have been pulled down, reparatory to the erection of a new building. The assizes were once held here. There is a County Court, d petty sessions are held weekly by the county magistrates. Near the town is the new County Lunatic Asylum a handsome building in the Tudor style of architecture, and there are many good residences of modern rection in the vicinity. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £124, in the patron. of C. T. Tower, Esq. The church, a neat building with a square tower, was erected in 1835. The old church, which is still standing, was built about 1221, and was dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket; it was enlarged in 1856 by the addition of a chancel and chancel aisles. The building is partly in the early English style, and is now used as the National school-house. There are chapels belonging to the Independents, Wesleyans, and Roman Catholics, and a school connected with the of the latter. The endowed grammar school, founded in 1537 by Sir Anthony Browne, and the almshouses for 10 persons in South Weald, also endowed by him, has a revenue amounting to above £1,500 per annum, concerning the application of which an appeal has lately been made to Chancery. The school is free for boys living within 3 miles. An Industrial school has lately been established here for the pauper children of the parish of Shoreditch. Adjoining the town on the London side, at the foot of the hill, is the hamlet of Brook Street, and on the N. side is the village of Shenfield, which form, as it were, one continuous town with Brentwood. To the N. of the town is South Weald Park, the seat of the Tower family, near which are the vestiges of an ancient circular camp. About 2 miles to the S.E. of Brentwood is Thorndon Hall, the seat of Lord Petre. Cattle fairs are held on the 18th May and the 15th October.

BRENZETT, a par. partly in the lib. of Romney Marsh, and partly in the hund. of Aloesbridge, lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 4 miles to the N.W. of Romney, its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £93, in the patron. of the Rev. W. Brenzett. The church is dedicated to St. Eanswith. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel in the place.

BRECK, ST., a par. in the hund. of Pyder, in the co. of Cornwall, 7 miles to the N.W. of Bodmin. Wadebridge is its post town. It lies on the S.W. side of the river Camel, and contains part of the town of Wadebridge. The estuary of the Camel forms the harbour of Padstow, about 5 miles to the W., and is navigable as far as Wadebridge, where it is crossed by a fine bridge of 17 arches, erected in the latter part of the 15th century. In this parish is the manor of Pawton, which was early held by the bishops of Exeter, who had a palace and a deer park there. The parish itself is called Pawton in the Norman Survey. The manor of Pawton belonged once to the priory of Bodmin, and after the Dissolution was held by the crown till 1606, since which time it has passed to several families in succession. Clay and slate are obtained in the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the annual val. of £859, in the patron. of H. J. Smith, Esq. The church contains some old monuments and two brasses. The Bridge Estate is the principal charity. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Bible Christians have chapels here, and there is a free school. Brecock Beacon is a cromlech on the top of a hill, commanding a good view of the sea and coast. Cattle fairs are held on the 5th March, the 13th May, the 21st June, and the 10th October.

BRERETURST, a tnshp. in the par. of Wolstanton, hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles to the N. of Newcastle-under-Lyme. It lies near the North Staffordshire railway. The inhabitants are principally employed in the coal and iron works of the neighbourhood.

BRERETON, a vil. partly in the pars. of Longdon and Armitage, in the hund. of Offlow, and partly in the par. of Rugeley, hund. of Cuttlestone, in the co. of Stafford, 1 mile to the S.E. of Rugeley, its post town, and 6½ miles N.W. of Lichfield. It is situated close to the London and North-Western railway, which has a station near Rugeley, 1½ mile to the N. of the village. The neighbouring coal-mines, belonging to the Earl of Shrewsbury, and the Marquis of Anglesea, furnish employment to the inhabitants. Brereton is now a separate parish for ecclesiastical purposes. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £166, with 9 acres of glebe, in the patron. of the Vicar of Rugeley. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is in the early English style, with an ornamental spire. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel, and there is a free school, besides National and infant schools. The Earl of Shrewsbury is lord of the manor and chief owner of the soil, which is rich in coal and minerals. A branch line of railway, to connect these collieries with the London and North-Western railway is left incomplete, but there is a tramway to the Trent and Mersey canal.

BRERETON-CUM-SMETHWICK, a par. in the hund. of Northwich, in the co. palatine of Chester, 2 miles to the N.E. of Sandbach. Its post town is Congleton. It is situated on the river Crock, and is crossed by the London and North-Western railway. The manor was formerly held by the Brereton family. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, of the val. of £681, in the patron. of Mrs. E. Royds. The church, an ancient and handsome edifice, is dedicated to St. Oswald. It is in the perpendicular style of architecture, with a carved roof, and contains monuments of the Breretons and Smethwicks. Brereton was a chapelry to the parish of Astbury till the reign of Henry VIII., when it was constituted a separate parish. There are three chapels belonging to the Dissenters. The charitable endowments, consisting of bequests by Mr. Jepson and the Breretons, for the relief of the poor, amount to about £28 per annum. Brereton Hall is an ancient mansion, formerly the seat of the Brereton family, by one of whom, Sir William Brereton, afterwards Lord Brereton of Leighlin, it was erected about 1586. It has been partly taken down. Near the hall is a sheet of water, called Bagmere Pool, with which is connected the romantic tradition that the death of an heir of the Brereton family was foreshadowed by the appearance of trunks of trees floating on its surface.

BRESSAY ISLAND, a par. in the Shetland Islands, Scotland, situated E. of the mainland, and opposite to Lerwick, its post town. It comprises the islands of Bressay, Burra, Quarff, and Noss. The island of Bressay, about 5 miles long by 3 broad, is separated from the mainland by Bressay Sound, a spacious sheltered bay and harbour, with excellent anchorage, the resort of many vessels engaged in the whale and herring fisheries. In 1653 a fleet of 94 sail, under the command of Deans and Monk, and in 1665, another fleet of 92 men-of-war, under the Earl of Sandwich, found shelter in this bay, which is nearly landlocked. It has two entrances, one from the north, the other from the south. Outside the north entrance there is a sunken rock, called the Unicorn. The surface of the island is irregular and rocky, yielding, however, some good pasturage. Fishing is the principal occupation of the inhabitants, and some are employed in quarrying slate, which is abundant. The small and fertile island of Noss lies on the E. side of Bressay, with which it is connected by a rope bridge. The living, worth £153, is in the presb. of Lerwick, and in the gift of the Earl of Zetland. There are established churches in Quarff and Burra, served by a minister with a stipend of £120. The parish contains also a Wesleyan, an Independent, and a Baptist chapel.

BRESSINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Diss, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the N.W. of Diss, which is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The manor of Bressingham was formerly held by the Pilkingtons, who had their seat here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the annual val. of £455, in the patron. of C. Bidwell, Esq. The church, which was for the most part rebuilt in 1527, is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. It is an old building with lofty tower, and has a beautifully carved oak ceiling and painted window. There is a marble monument to the memory of Martin, the antiquary. Here is a free school with an income from endowment of £13, and some other charities worth about £20 a year.

BRETBY, or BRADBY, a chplry. in the par. of Repton, hund. of Repton and Gresley, in the co. of Derby, 3 miles to the E. of Burton-upon-Trent, its post town. A castle formerly existed here, which belonged to the Mowbrays as early as the reign of Richard II. The manor subsequently passed to the Berkeley family. A fine mansion, erected by the first Earl of Chesterfield, was fortified and held for Charles I. in 1642, but was captured by the parliamentary forces, and taken down about 1780. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £80, in the patron. of the Earl of Chesterfield. Bradby Park, which contains the sites of the ancient castle and the former mansion, is the seat of the Earl of Chesterfield. The present hall was built about 1814.

BRETFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Wolston, and hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 5 miles to the W. of Rugby. It is situated on the banks of the river Avon, over which was a broad ford, and near the London and North-Western railway. It had once a market, and the manor was held by the Verdon family.

BRETFORTON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Blackenhurst, in the co. of Worcester, 4 miles to the E of Evesham, its post town. It is situated on the border of Gloucestershire, and the village stands in one of the most pleasant spots in the Vale of Evesham. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, of the val. of £182, in the patron. of Admiral Morris. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard. There are some charities of small value. The parish has an area of 1,683 acres.

BRETHERDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Orton, East ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 5 miles to the S.W. of Orton.

BRETHERTON, formerly a tnshp. in the par. of Croston, but now a par. of itself, in the hund. of Leyland, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 7 miles to the W. of Chorley. It is seated on the banks of the river Douglas, near the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, which has a station at Croston. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, of the val. of £160, in the patron. of the Rector of Croston. The church is a new building in the early English style, dedicated to St. John the Baptist. There are chapels belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists and Independents.

BRETTELL-LANE, a hmlt. in the par. of King-Swinford, and hund. of North Seisdon, in the co. of Stafford. It forms a suburb of the market town of Brierley Hill, and is about 3 miles S.W. of Dudley. Glass is extensively manufactured here, and there are several potteries. The West Midland railway passes near it, viâ Worcester, thence by branch line.

BRETTENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Shropham, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles to the E. of Thetford, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Thet, a branch of the Little Ouse, not far from the Great Eastern and Norfolk railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £200, in the patron. of the Bishop of Ely. The church, which was rebuilt soon after 1693, when it was burnt down, is dedicated to St. Andrew.

BRETTENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Cosford, in the co. of Suffolk, 6 miles to the S.W. of Stowmarket. Bildeston is its post town. It is situated on the small river Bret, a branch of the Stour, and is considered to be the site of Combretonium, a Roman station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the yearly val. of £377, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are some church lands, and some charities of trifling amount. Brettenham is the principal seat.

BRETTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawarden, hund. of Mold, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 2 miles to the E. of Hawarden. It lies on the S. bank of the river Dee, near Saltney Marsh, not far from the Chester and Holyhead railway.

BRETTON MONK, or BURTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Royston, wap. of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the N.E of Barnsley, its post town. It is situated near the North Midland railway, and includes several hmlts. At Bretton Hall is the site of a Cluniac priory, founded about 1. by Adam Fitz-Swain, which had a revenue at the dissolution of £323. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Royston. The charitable endowments of the township, including the revenue of an almshouse for six poor persons, founded about 1654, amount to £56 per annum.

BRETTON, WEST, a tnshp., partly in the par. of Silkstone, and wap. of Staincross, and partly in the par. of Sandall, and wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S.W. of Wakefield. Bretton Hall, now the seat of the Beaumont family, was erected in 1720 by Sir William Wentworth. The township is pleasantly situated on high ground, and commands picturesque scenery, on the banks of the river Dearne.

BREWARD, ST., or SIMONWARD a par. in the hund. of Trigg, in the co. of Cornwall, 6 miles to the N.W. of Bodmin, its post town. The lofty hills, called Tor (or Rowtor) and Brown Willy, which command a view over an extensive district in the N.W. part of the county, and as far as the English and Bristol Channels, are in this par. Brown Willy has an elevation of 1,368 feet, and is said to be the highest ground in Cornwall. Granite and slate are abundant. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £355, and in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter. The church is an ancient building, partly in the Norman style, and is said to have been founded by William Brewer, Bishop of Exeter, about the middle of the 13th century, and dedicated to St. Briard. There are a logan stone and some stone circles on Rough Tor.

BREWHAM, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Brewham, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the N.E. of Bruton, its post town. It lies on the banks of the river Brew, or Brue. The ruins of the ancient chapel are now used as a barn.

BREWHAM, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Brewham, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the E. of Bruton. It is situated on the river Brew, and contains the hamlet of Hardway. The Frome canal passes through it. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the val. of £102, in the patronage of Sir Hugh Hoare, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. In the churchyard are the remains of a cross.

BREWHAM LODGE, an ext. par. lib. in the par. of Norton Ferris, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles to the N.E. of Bruton. It is situated on the borders of Wiltshire, near the source of the river Brew, and was one of the hunting seats of King John. It is now the property of the Hoare family, who have their seat at Stourhead. Not far off is the small camp of oval form called Castle, where urns, weapons, and other relics have been found. The district was the scene of many contests between the Danes and Saxons.

BREWHOUSE-YARD, an ext. par. lib. in the wap. of Broxtow, in the co. of Nottingham, not far from Nottingham.

BREWOOD, a par. and ancient town in the div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, in the co. of Stafford, 7 miles to the S. of Stafford, its post town, and 8 to Wolverhampton. It is situated on a branch of the river Penk, near the London and North-Western railway, which has a station at the Four Ashes, 1½ mile to the E. of the town. The Great Western and Shrewsbury line has a station about 4 miles to the S.W. of the town.

'odsall. The Birmingham and Liverpool, and the Staf-'ord and Worcester, canals pass through the par. Bre-ood is a ancient place, bearing evidence of its Roman occupa a, and about a mile to the N. of the town is he Roan way Watling Street. King John had a empora residence here, called in the Chronicles "anner regis." On the Patent Rolls, in the Public Record ffice, is a grant by Henry III., in 1221, to William le Cornhull, Bishop of Lichfield, licensing him o hold market on Friday. It had a small nunnery f the Benedictine order, founded in the 12th century y Isab Launder, and dedicated to the Blessed Virgin. The site till called Black Ladies, was given at the Dis-olution o the Giffords, whose seat is Chillington Hall. The tow is pleasantly situated on gently rising ground, he str s are paved, and there is a good supply of ater. he old market-house fell down in 1809, and as not een rebuilt. There is a savings-bank, a read-ng-roo (established in 1857), and a small parish brary. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, al. £67 in the patron. of the Dean of Lichfield. The hurch, dicated to St. Mary, is a large and handsome uildi gantly in the early English and partly in the erpe i lar style of architecture, with a lofty spire. t stan on high ground, and contains several hand-me numents of the Giffords, the Fowkes, the Foreto and other families of distinction. The regis-r dat from the year 1562. In addition to the parish urch here are two district churches, one at Bishops-ood, th other at Coven. The former was erected in 849, an has a parsonage-house and National schools ta h d the latter in 1857, also with parsonage and chools both have their separate districts assigned, and onstit a distinct parishes, though the patron. is vested the vi r, for the time being, of the mother church. here a chapels in the town belonging to the In-pende s, Primitive Methodists, and Roman Catho-, the latter erected in 1843. Here is a free grammar ... founded and endowed by Dr. Knightley in the reign E.. th. Its revenue, increased by later bequests, ... unts to about £410 per annum. The head ... house, and both the upper and lower school-... ve recently been rebuilt. The mastership ... by Dr. Johnson's friend, the Rev. William ... who died in 1745. Bishop Hurd, of Wor-... tutor of George IV., and who refused ... imacy of England; Dr. Beddoes, the eminent ysician of Bristol; Sir E. Littleton; Dr. Jeremiah ith, o Manchester, and other distinguished men, ceived heir education here. There are also an ... e school, a Roman Catholic school, and a ... ious national school, opened in 1860. The other ritable endowments of the parish are worth about 30 a yr. Roman coins and other remains have been und in the vicinity. The market is now obsolete. irs for the sale of horses and cattle are held on the ond Tursday in May, and the 19th September. hese fa s were opened with great ceremony by the ... d of t manor till the year 1834, when the tolls were ... and a stop put to the annual bull-baitings, hich u d to take place in the market-place. The ... in the neighbourhood are Brewood Hall, a ... ension the Elizabethan period, built by the Fowkes; illington, the family seat of the Giffords since the ... ign of enry III. (it is situated in an extensive park, ith a ... sheet of water, and was visited by Queen Eliza-eth in 15 5); Somerford Hall, the seat of the Barbors nd Mo tons; and Long Birch, formerly a seat of the iffords, nd subsequently the residence of the "vicars ostolic of the Midland Counties. The last is now a ... ruhe s BRIAN'S BELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Belbroughton, nd hund of Halfshire, in the co. of Worcester, 4 miles ... the S. Stourbridge.

BRIAVEL'S, ST., a par. in the hund. to which it ves nam , in the co. of Gloucester, 7 miles to the N. Chepstow. It is situated in a beautiful country on ... E. ba k of the river Wye, and is a very ancient ace. A castle was founded here in the reign of William II. by the Fitzwalters, of which the gatehouse, flanked by two round towers, still remains; it is now the property of the crown, but is gradually sinking into decay, though the parish school is still held in one of the rooms. The privilege of holding a market was granted to the town by Edward II., but it has long ceased to be exercised. The inhabitants, however, still use their ancient right to cut wood in a certain district of the Forest of Dean. The hoops, poles, and other articles which they make of the wood, are sent to Bristol. Many hands are employed in the neighbouring coal-works. The living is a very old vic., for some time held with that of Lydney, but now disunited; the pats. are the Dean and Chapter of Hereford, who have the great tithes, and are in fact the rectors. The church, an ancient edifice in the form of a cross, is in the Norman and early English styles, and is dedicated to St. Mary. The charitable endowments of the par. produce about £16 a year. The crown is lord of the manor. St. Briavel's Common now forms part of the par., and has its poor-rates, &c., levied just like the rest; but as yet no ecclesiastical assignment has been made, nor do the people dwelling on it pay tithe.

BRIAVEL'S, ST., COMMON, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Briavel's, in the hund. of the same name, in the co. of Gloucester. It is situated on the river Wye, and includes the libs. of Lower Mean and Hudnells, which are joined to it.

BRIAVEL'S, ST., HUNDRED, one of the 27 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Gloucester, situated in the western parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by Herefordshire, on the E. by the duchy of Lancaster and the hunds. of Westbury and Blidesloe, on the S. by the hund. of Westbury, and on the W. by Monmouthshire. It comprises the following pars.:—Abinghall, English-Bicknor, St. Briavel's, Dean Forest, Little Dean, Flaxley, Hewelsfield, Mitchell Dean, Newland, Ruardean, Staunton, and part of the par. of Lea. The hund. extends over an area of about 50,100 acres.

BRICETT, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Bosmere and Claydon, in the co. of Suffolk, 4 miles to the S.W. of Needham Market. Bildeston is its post town. It lies near the Great Eastern railway, Claydon being the nearest station. In this par. was formerly a priory of the Augustine order, founded by Ralph Fitz-Brian about the year 1110, which was given with the manor by Henry VI. to the Provost and Fellows of King's College, Cambridge, in 1426. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £110, in the patron. of the Provost and Fellows of King's College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to SS. Mary and Lawrence.

BRICETT, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Bosmere and Claydon, in the co. of Suffolk, near Great Bricett. It is united with the par. of Offton. The church fell into decay about 1500.

BRICKENDON, a lib. in the par. of All Saints, Hertford, in the hund. and co. of Hertford, 3 miles to the S. of Hertford. The principal residence is Brickendonbury, anciently a possession of Waltham Abbey, to which it was given after the Conquest.

BRICKENDOWN, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, not far from Cashel. It includes the vil. of Mocklershill. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore, val. £61, in the patron. of the bishop.

BRICKHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Rockbourne, and hund. of Fordingbridge, in the co. of Southampton, 3 miles to the N.W. of Fordingbridge. It is on the confines of Dorsetshire.

BRICKHILL, BOW, a par. in the hund. of Newport, in the co. of Buckingham, 2 miles to the N. of Fenny Stratford, its post town, and 15 E. of Buckingham. The Bedford branch of the London and North-Western railway passes near it. The par. lies on the edge of Bedfordshire, and is crossed by the Roman Watling Street. The manufacture of lace and straw-plait is carried on here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £370, in the patron. of the President and Fellows of Queen's College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to All Saints. It is built in a conspicuous situation on the verge of a steep hill, on the side of which, lower down, the village stands. There is a small endowed school for boys, and some other charities, the value of which is about £30 a year. The par. contains a small tract of common.

BRICKHILL, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Newport, in the co. of Buckingham, 4 miles to the S.E. of Fenny Stratford, its post town. It is situated on the border of Bedfordshire, on the banks of the river Ouzel, near the London and North-Western railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £425, in the patron. of Sir P. D. P. Duncombe, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Matthew, and contains several monuments of the Duncombe, Pauncefort, and other families. There are chapels belonging to the Baptists and Wesleyans. The charitable endowments of the par. amount to £55 per annum. The principal mansion is Great Brickhill House, the seat of the Duncombes, who hold the manor.

BRICKHILL, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Newport, in the co. of Buckingham, 2 miles to the S.E. of Fenny Stratford, its post town, and 46 from London. It is situated in a hilly district on the confines of Bedfordshire, near the river Ouzel and the London and North-Western railway. It was formerly a market and assize town, and a place of some importance. Some of the villagers are employed in making lace and straw-plait. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £119, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, a modern building, is dedicated to St. Mary. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village. The charitable endowments, including a small bequest for education, produce about £75 per annum. Fairs are held here on the 12th May and the 29th October.

BRICKLEHAMPTON, a chplry. in the par. of St. Andrew, Pershore, hund. of Pershore, in the co. of Worcester, 3 miles to the S.E. of Pershore, its post town. It lies near the West Midland railway. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of St. Andrew, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

BRICKLETON. See BRIGHT-WALTON, Berkshire.

BRICKLETON, a tythg. in the par. of Hurstbourn Tarrant, hund. of Pastrow, in the co. of Southampton, 5 miles to the N. of Andover.

BRIDE. See KIRK-BRIDE, Isle of Man.

BRIDEKIRK, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 2 miles to the N. of Cockermouth, its post town. It lies on the N. of the river Derwent, not far from the Maryport and Carlisle railway, and includes the tnshps. of Great Broughton, Little Broughton, Dovenby, Papcastle, Ribton, and Tallentire. The parish contains some quarries of limestone and freestone. This place was one of the possessions of Gisburn Monastery, on the dissolution of which the manor was granted by Henry VIII. to Henry Tolson, but the lands have long been enfranchised and are freehold. Bridekirk Hall, and the principal part of the demesne lands, are the property of F. L. B. Dykes, Esq., of Dovenby Hall, who is also patron of the living, which is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, of the val. of £240 per annum, and was conveyed by the Crown Commissioners about 1560, to Robert Lamplugh, Esq., of Doventry Hall, from whom it has descended to the present patron. The church, which is very ancient and partly in the Norman style, is dedicated to St. Bridget. It contains a very curious and interesting font, supposed to be of earlier date than the Conquest. It is about two feet high, and on its sides are curious symbolical sculptures and a Saxon inscription. The circumstances of the Fall, the Expulsion from Paradise, and the Baptism of Christ, are among the subjects represented. The meaning of the inscription appears to be doubtful at present. Camden conjectured that this font was brought from Papcastle, the probable site of a Roman station. Dovenby School and Dovenby Hospital, for six poor people, are in the patron. of F. L. B. Dykes, Esq. The poor have the benefit of several charitable [illegible] producing about £120 per annum. The [illegible] birthplace of Sir Joseph Williamson, Secretary to Charles II., and of Thomas Tickell, the [illegible] father held the vicarage.

BRIDELL, a par. in the hund. of Kilgerran, co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 3 miles to the S. [illegible] digan, its post town. The living is a rect. [illegible] of St. David's, of the val. of £110, in the [illegible] freeholders of the parish. The church, [illegible] by fine trees, is old, and is dedicated to St. [illegible] churchyard contains an ancient cross. There [illegible] charities of trifling value.

BRIDESCHURCH, a par. in the bar. of [illegible] co. of Kildare, and prov. of Leinster, [illegible] the N.W. of Naas. It is situated in a [illegible] vated country on the banks of the river [illegible] here crossed by the Grand canal. It is [illegible] Southern and Western railway, which [illegible] at Sallins. The living is a rect. united [illegible] Carragh, in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalough [illegible] dare. Lauderstown is one of the chief [illegible]

BRIDE'S, ST., SUPER-ELY, a par. [illegible] Dinas Powis, in the co. of Glamorgan, S. [illegible] miles to the W. of Llandaff. It lies on the [illegible] the small river Ely (from which it takes the addi[illegible] its name), not far from the South Wales [illegible] living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff [illegible] with that of Michaelstone united to it, of [illegible] patron of L. Traherne, Esq. The church [illegible] to St. Mary. St. Ynid is one of the chap[illegible]

BRIDE, ST., MAJOR, a par. in the hund. [illegible] in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 3 [illegible] of Bridgend, its post town. It is situated [illegible] of the Bristol Channel, at the mouth of the [illegible] and contains the hmlts. of Lamplas, South [illegible] Ynysawdre. A special interest attaches [illegible] the earliest seats of the native princes. [illegible] vestiges of the ancient castle of Dyndryt[illegible] the traditional residence of Caradoc [illegible] considerable remains of Ogmore Castle, [illegible] equal antiquity. The lordship of Ogmore [illegible] to the duchy of Lancaster. The living is [illegible] dioc. of Llandaff, of the val. with the [illegible] annexed, of £300, in the patron of E. T. [illegible] Esq., of Ewenny Abbey. The church [illegible] has some fine monuments of the Butler and [illegible] families, one to the former being an [illegible] figures of a knight and his lady. The [illegible] thodists have a chapel in the vil. Along the [illegible] several large and curiously-formed [illegible] of great depth, is called the "Wind Hole."

BRIDE, ST., MINOR, a par. in the hund. [illegible] castle, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, [illegible] from Bridgend, its post town, which is a station [illegible] South Wales railway. The parish is [illegible] tivated and picturesque country, on the [illegible] river Ogmore, in a district abounding in [illegible] inhabitants are chiefly employed in the [illegible] living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, [illegible] £176, in the patron. of the Earl of Dunraven.

BRIDE, ST., NETHERWENT, a par. in the [illegible] of Roose, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, [illegible] to the N.W. of Milford. Haverfordwest is the [illegible] town. It is situated in a beautiful district on the shore of the bay of the same name, and was [illegible] the seat of a great herring fishery. The sea has been encroaching upon this part of the coast. The bay, which is about 7 miles in depth from W. to E., is nearly the same in breadth from N. to S., and is a fine and safe harbour but for its openness to the winds. An inlet of the bay runs nearly up to the churchyard. The living is a rect.* in the archd. of St. David's, of the val. of £183, in the patronage of Sir [illegible] L. Phillips and Mrs. Mary B. Attenborough.

BRIDE, ST., NETHERWENT, a par. in the div. of the hund. of Caldicott, in the co. of Monmouth, 7 miles to the E. of Newport. Caerleon is 3 miles [illegible] It is situated near the South Wales railway, and ins the hlt. of Llandevenny. The living is a rect. the dio of Llandaff, of the val. of £178, in the patron. T. Perr Esq.

BRIDESTOW, a par. in the hund. of Lifton, in the . of Devn, 6 miles to the S.W. of Okehampton. Cre- ton is it ost town. It is watered by a small stream lled the Thistle Brook, a branch of the river Lyd. e living s a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. th the p pet. cur. of Sourton annexed, of £424, in the tron. of he bishop. The church, which is partly in e Norm style, is dedicated to St. Bridget. The rish has he benefit of some charitable endowments rth abo £6 a year. Leawood House is the principal t. Cat fairs are held in the village on the first ednesda in June and the 29th July.

BRIDE ST., WENTLLOOGE, a par. in the upper r. of the und. of Wentllooge, in the co. of Monmouth, miles to e S. of Newport, its post town. It is situ- d on th oast of the Bristol Channel, at the mouth the riv Usk, and has a lighthouse. The living is a .* in th lioc. of Llandaff, of the val. with the perpet. r. of Co ernew, of £120, in the gift of the bishop.

BRIDE VELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Cam, and bar. Athlo in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, land, 7 iles to the N.W. of Athlone. Here is an ient c el, built near a fine spring of water, which s given me to the village. The village has a dis- ry a police station.

BRIDE VELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilclone, bar. Upper ece, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, land, 5 les from Maynooth.

BRIDFORD, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, in the of Dev , 4 miles to the E. of Moreton Hampstead. dleigh its post town. It is situated in a hilly and oded dist ict, with picturesque scenery, near the river ..., a bra ch of which runs through the parish. The .. pal hi s are Coldston Down and Helter Rock. The .. is a ect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of in th patron. of Sir L. V. Palk, Bart. The church ... reen, a rood-loft, and a carved pulpit, and ... to St. Thomas-à-Becket. The parochial ...ount to £3 a year.

...LING, a par. in the hund. of Bridge and Petham, ... St Augustine, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles to the ... Canterbury, its post town. It is pleasantly situ- ... banks of the Little Stour, and is a place of ... ty. The river is crossed near the village by ancient ridge, The parish contains some hop- ds, a there are many good residences in the ity. he manor was once held by the Braems, a ily of tch origin. Bridge is now the seat of a ...-law ion. The living is a vic. united with that Patrixbourne, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church, ich is ...efly in the Norman style, is dedicated to Peter, nd contains several interesting sculptures. e Wes ans have a chapel in the village. Among ... the gentry are Bridge Hill House, the resi- ... of th Baroness de Montesquieu; Bourne House, ...s, &c

BRIDGE AND PETHAM HUNDRED, one of the ...lands. subdivisions of the lathe of St. Augustine, the co. Kent, situated in the parliamentary eastern ... of the ..., and bounded on the N. by the hunds. of ...stgate ad Downhamford, on the E. by the hund. of ...nshamrd, on the S. by the lathe of Shepway, and the W. by the lathe of Scray. It contains the pars. Beakshorne, Bridge, Upper Hardres, Lower Har- ..., Nackington, Patrixbourne, Petham, and Waltham, ... extend over an area of about 13,200 acres.

BRIDGFORD, GREAT and LITTLE, hmlts. in ... par. of eighford, hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of ...fford, 3 iles to the N.W. of Stafford. The London ...d North Western railway runs by them.

BRIDGEGATE, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of St. ...mas, Gl ow, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland. The ...ing is in he gift of the Church Building Society.

BRIDGEGREEN, a hmlt. near the vil. of Chrishall, the hun of Uttlesford, and co. of Essex, 7 miles W. Saffron Walden, and 6 N.W. of Newport railway station. It is situated near a range of hills on the borders of Cambridgeshire.

BRIDGE HEWICK, a tnshp. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, in the West Riding of the co. of York, near Ripon.

BRIDGE HILL, a vil. in the par. of Duffield, and hund. of Appletree, in the co. of Derby, not far from Belper. It is situated near the river Derwent and the Midland railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £130, in the alternate patron. of the bishop and the crown. The principal mansion is Bridge Hill House.

BRIDGEHOUSES, a vil. in the par. and borough of Sheffield, in the West Riding of the co. of York, in the suburbs of Sheffield.

BRIDGEMERE, a tnshp. in the par. of Wybunbury, and hund. of Nantwich, in the co. palatine of Chester, 6 miles to the S.E. of Nantwich. It lies on the border of Shropshire, near the London and North-Western railway.

BRIDGEND, a vil. in the par. of Dalkeith, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, not far from Dalkeith.

BRIDGEND, a vil. in the par. of Lintrathen, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 7 miles to the W. of Kirriemuir. It is near the south foot of the Grampians.

BRIDGEND, a market town in the pars. of Coyty and Newcastle, hund. of Newcastle, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 20 miles to the W. of Cardiff, and 180 miles from London. It is a station on the South Wales railway. The town is seated in a fertile and pleasant country on both banks of the river Ogmore, which is here crossed by two stone bridges, one a handsome structure of three arches and of modern date. The two parts of the town are distinguished by the names Oldcastle and Newcastle. There is one principal street, irregularly built, and some good residences in the neighbourhood. Freestone is quarried near the town. A branch railway connects the town with the great collieries and iron-works in the vicinity, and with the harbour of Porthcawl, 5 miles distant. There are a townhall and a savings-bank. Bridgend with Cowbridge is the head of a Poor-law Union and a County Court district. The election for the county takes place here, and petty sessions are held weekly. The town contains the Union poorhouse. The parish church of Newcastle stands in the west quarter of the town, and a chapel of ease to Coyty in the east quarter, or Oldcastle. There are chapels belonging to the Baptists, Independents, Methodists, and Unitarians, the latter having a small endowment. A National school is supported by subscription. Two castles existed here formerly. Bridgend was the birthplace of George C. Morgan, nephew of Dr. Price, and a writer and lecturer on Natural Philosophy. Trout and salmon are found in the river Ogmore.

BRIDGEND, a hmlt. in the par. of Bexley, and hund. of Ruxley, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles to the W. of Dartford. It is not far from the North Kent railway.

BRIDGEND, or KENDROCHAD, a vil. in the par. of Kenmore, Breadalbane district, in the co. of Perth, Scotland. It is situated in a mountainous country, on the banks of Loch Tay.

BRIDGEND, a vil. in the par. of Kinnoul, in the co. of Perth, Scotland. It is on the north bank of the Tay, and is a suburb of the city of Perth.

BRIDGEND, a vil. in the par. of Rosskeen, in the co. of Ross, Scotland, 10 miles to the S. of Tain. It is on the N. shore of Cromarty Frith.

BRIDGEND, a vil. in the par. of Melrose, and district of Castleton Melrose, in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland, near Melrose. It is pleasantly situated on the banks of the Tweed, near the bridge of the Edinburgh and Jedburgh railway.

BRIDGEND, a vil. in the par. of Kilarrow, or Bowmore, in the Island of Islay, co. of Argyle, Scotland. It is seated in a level district at the head of Loch Indaal, on the E. bank of the river Sorn.

BRIDGEND, a vil. in the par. of Muthil, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, not far from Crieff. The district is wooded and hilly, lying on the edge of the highlands.

BRIDGEND, a vil. in the par. of Cardross, in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland, not far from Dumbarton.

BRIDGEND, a hmlt. in the par. of Horbling, and wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles to the N.E. of Folkingham.

BRIDGEND, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Dogmell's, and hund. of Kemess, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, not far from Cardigan. It is on the banks of the river Teifi.

BRIDGEND, OLD, a vil. in the par. of Galston, Kyle district of the co. of Ayr, Scotland, not far from Kilmarnock. It is near the Newmilns branch of the Glasgow and South-Western railway.

BRIDGENESS, a vil. in the par. of Carriden, in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 1 mile from Bo'ness. It is on the S. bank of the Forth.

BRIDGE-PIECE, an ext. par. lib. in the par. of Frampton, wap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the S. of Boston.

BRIDGERULE, a par. partly in the hund. of Stratton, in the co. of Cornwall, and partly in the hund. of Black Torrington, in the co. of Devon, 5 miles to the S.E. of Stratton. It is situated on the banks of the river Tamar and on the Bude canal, and derives its name from the bridge which crosses the river here, and from Ruald or Reginald Adobed, who held the manor about the time of the Norman Conquest. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £150, in the patron. of the Rev. S. N. Kingdon, the present vicar. The church is in Devonshire. Tackbear is a very ancient seat, which was given to a relative of William the Conqueror.

BRIDGE-SOLLARS, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, in the co. of Hereford, 6 miles to the W. of Hereford, its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the river Wye, which below this place has a very winding course. The projected railway from Hereford to Brecon will pass near this village. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. of £100, in the patron. of Sir J. G. Cotterell, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew.

BRIDGETON, a vil. in the par. of Redgorton, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 3 miles from Perth.

BRIDGETON, a vil. in the par. of Kinghorn, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, not far from Kirkcaldy.

BRIDGETON, a quoad sacra par. in the Barony par., Glasgow, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland. The living is in the patron. of the Church Building Society.

BRIDGETOWN, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Tu'la, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles to the N.E. of Limerick. It is seated on the river Shannon, near the old bridge of 14 arches erected by O'Brien. Fairs are held here on the 10th June and the 3rd November.

BRIDGETOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Berry-Pomeroy, hund. of Haytor, in the co. of Devon, 2 miles to the E. of Totnes. It is pleasantly situated near the river Dart.

BRIDGETOWN, a vil. in the bar. of Bargy, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles to the S.W. of Wexford. It is seated on a small stream, to which it gives name, and which runs into Ballyteigne Lough. A police force is stationed here.

BRIDGE-TRAFFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Plemonstall, second div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, in the co. palatine of Chester, 4 miles to the N.E. of Chester. Morley Hall was a seat of the Trafford family.

BRIDGE-YATE, a hmlt. in the par. of Abson, and hund. of Pucklechurch, in the co. of Gloucester, 8 miles to the E. of Bristol. It is on the Cotswold hills.

BRIDGFORD, EAST, a par. in the northern div. of the wap. of Bingham, in the co. of Nottingham, 7 miles to the N.E. of Nottingham. It is situated in a pleasant district on the E. side of the river Trent, and takes its name from an ancient ford near the site of the village. The old Fosse Way crosses this parish, which contains at Castle Hill the site of the Roman station called Margidunum, where coins and other antiquities have been discovered. Gypsum of excellent quality is obtained in the neighbourhood, and the knitting of hosiery is carried on by some of the inhabita living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. of £752, in the patron. of the Presid lows of Magdalene College, Oxford. The dedicated to St. Mary. The Wesleyans hav here. There is a small free school, and some endowments, which produce about £12 a year.

BRIDGFORD, WEST, a par. in the north the wap. of Rushcliffe, but extending into the div. of the wap. of Bingham, in the co. of N 2 miles to the S.E. of Nottingham, its post to pleasantly situated on the S.E. bank of the r here crossed by a bridge, from which the view over the castle and town of Nottingh of Belvoir, and other parts of the surrou The Grantham canal passes through the p Nottingham and Grantham branch of the G railway is within a short distance, on the o the river. This place is said to have been the Saxon period, for aiding resistance to the vaders. The par. includes the tnshp. of G living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, £588, in the patron. of J. Musters, Esq. The dedicated to St. Giles. Here is a free sch and endowed by William Thompson, for the parish, the income of which is £27 a year chapels are conjectured to have existed at and the neighbouring hmlt. of Bassingfield.

BRIDGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Sm the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles to the E. of Th miles S. of East Harling, its post town, way station. It lies on the banks of the branch of the Little Ouse, near the Great E way. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of the val. of £388, in the patron. of the Ar lor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, well built, and has a fine Norman porch re-rooted, partly with slate, but the ch thatched, and surmounted by a cross. Th Wesleyan chapel, and a free school. The re is Bridgham House.

BRIDGHAMPTON, a tythg. in the par. ton, hund. of Somerton, in the co. of Somer from Ilchester.

BRIDGNORTH, a market town, parl municipal borough, locally situated in the Stottesden, in the co. of Salop, 10 miles railway station, 20 miles to the S.E. of Shr 139 miles to the N.W. of London. The Shrewsbury, along the upper valley of the S completed, and has a station at Bridgnorth very ancient, having been founded, prob Norman Conquest, and the earliest form of its Brigge, Brug, or Bruges, which denoted its the bridge which crossed the river Severn. dation of the town is by some ascribed daughter of Alfred the Great. At the of the 12th century, Robert de Belesme, bury, built, or perhaps rebuilt, the castle, same time strengthened the town with walls that when King Henry I., in 1102, besie only taken after a long and stout defence besieged by Henry II., in 1156, on rebellion of Hugh de Mortimer, to whom given by Henry I., and the castle was ag During this siege the life of the monarch been saved by the heroic self-sacrifice of lowers, who, seeing an archer aim at his forward and received the arrow in his town does not appear in history from that 17th century, when during the civil wa risoned for the king. The parliamentary effected an entrance by the church of St large part of the town was burnt down, and into which the royalists retired, sustained three weeks, and was then surrendered to ment, by whose orders it was dismantled. is noted for its picturesque situation and bourhood. It stands on both banks of the Se pally o the western, and a stone bridge of six arches onnects he two parts of the town, which are distinguished the Upper and Lower town. The west bank a rock f red sandstone rising sharply from the river the hi ht of 180 feet. Many handsome houses form rraces ne above another on the front of the rock, hich i also pierced by several caverns, and on the ighest ound are seen the two parish churches and e ruin f the castle. For the convenience of foot passngers ath has been constructed from the upper part the to n to the bridge, by cutting through the solid ck to depth of 20 feet, and forming several flights steps, ith handrails. The top of the hill commands striki and delightful prospect over the river, the wn, an the rich and varied scenery of the surrounding county,—rock and meadow lands, fields and wooded ills. During the last ten years great improvements ave bee effected in the town; the chief approach by nderhi street has been widened, and the Wolverampton oad improved. The streets are paved with roseby ricks and lighted with gas, and the inhabitants ar well supplied with water by the new waterorks. here is a large reservoir on the summit of e hill, om which soft water, obtained from the river, suppli to the houses. A spacious townhall and mar-et-hou was built about 1646, and new markets were ected i 1855, as also a commodious workhouse. The wn c ains the borough gaol, erected in 1823, a catra , ilt about the same time on part of the ancient cas -moat, a dispensary, an infirmary, a savings-ank, a echanics' institute, a circulating library (consisting wards of 4,000 volumes), a theological library ound d by Dean Stackhouse), subscription reading-oms, a several book clubs. The Agricultural Society h s an annual show of cattle, fruits, vegetables, nd imp ments of husbandry, and the Cottage Garden ety wards prizes to the best gardeners. Bridgn is e seat of a thriving trade, chiefly in connec- wi the navigation of the Severn, the building of s , and the export of corn and malt. There are fur-mills, tanneries, and an extensive malt- several manufactories of carpets and rugs, and d mills, besides a sack and linen factory. The re of tobacco-pipes and of nails is carried on, ter only to a small extent. The market, the ls, and the general trade with the neighbouring tribute greatly to the prosperity of the town. Various privileges and franchises were conferred on e town by Henry I. and Henry II., but the earliest rter o incorporation is said to have been granted by ng Jo , in 1215, the year in which Magna Charta as sign . The elective franchise was first received d exer ed in the 23rd year of Edward I., since which e the borough has continued to return two representat to parliament. The government of the borough is sted, by an Act passed in 1835, in a mayor, alderm , and 12 councillors, the style of the corporation b g the "bailiffs, aldermen, and burgesses of e borough of Bridgnorth." The limits of the parliamentary rough were considerably extended by the Reform Act nd now comprise, besides the town, the several rs. of Catford, Oldbury, Tasley, and Astley Abbot's, ith the s. of Romsley, in the par. of Alveley, and of Quatt-Ja is, in the par. of Quatt-Malvern, containing ltogethe 1,891 inhabited houses, with a population of ,892, ag nst 7,610 in 1851, showing an increase of 282 the decennial period; while the municipal borough contains 529 houses, inhabited by a population of 6,569, against 672 in 1851, showing an increase in the decennial perio of 397. The municipal borough has a revenue of about 1,320.—Bridgnorth is the seat of a Poor-law Union, a contains the Union poorhouse. It is also the head a County Court district, and a polling place for the south ivision of the county. Petty sessions for the borough are held once a fortnight, and quarter sessions are held the recorder. There is a local jurisdiction in ecclesi ical matters, a court for the probate of wills and gran g letters of administration, being part of the old royal eculiar of the deanery of Bridgnorth.—The town consists of two pars., St. Mary Magdalene and St. Leonard, the livings of both being perpet. curs.* in the dioc. of Hereford, in the patron. of T. Whitmore, Esq. The val. of St. Mary's is £250. The church, which is of the Ionic order of architecture, with a tower and cupola, was built at the close of the last century, and occupies the site of an ancient one, which was originally the chapel of the castle, but became the parish church about the year 1330. The val. of St. Leonard's is £308. The church, once a large and stately structure, was built about 1450 on the site of an earlier one. It was occupied by the parliamentary troops during the Civil War, and only a small portion of it escaped destruction. It has a noble tower, with battlements and pinnacles, and forms a conspicuous object from its situation on the summit of the rock. It contains a screen, and some remains of the ancient ceiling of oak. This church was once collegiate. The Baptists, Independents, and Irvingites have places of worship in the town. Here is a free grammar school, established by the corporation in 1503, and supported partly by an endowment producing £50 per annum, and partly by subscriptions. Three exhibitions to Christ Church College, Oxford, are connected with the school, which were founded, with 15 others in the same college, by Mr. Careswell, in 1689. There are also a blue-coat school, two National, and one infant school. The first was founded about 1720 with a small endowment, one of the ancient gates of the town being converted into the school-house. The divinity library, founded by the Rev. Hugh Stackhouse, has been since enlarged, and is kept in a handsome building near St. Leonard's church.—The charitable endowments of Bridgnorth are numerous and valuable, producing altogether above £2,200 per annum, the larger part of which sum consists of the endowment for the exhibitions at Oxford University, already mentioned. The other principal charities are a hospital for 10 widows, founded and endowed by Francis Palmer, in 1687, with a revenue of about £130; and almshouses for 12 widows or daughters of burgesses, with a revenue of about £160 per annum.—Nothing is left of the castle but a portion of the square tower, which, from being undermined, has long leaned from the perpendicular to a considerable extent. The walls originally enclosed about 14 acres. A monastery of the Grey Friars formerly existed here, founded by the Talbots, the remains of which, including the refectory in good preservation, are now used as a malthouse. Here was also, at an early period, a lazars' hospital, which, after being occupied as a priory for some time, was made a private residence. In the Lower town is an interesting old mansion, named Canhall, in which Prince Rupert resided for a short time during the Civil War. To the east of the town was anciently a forest or chase, called the Forest of Morfe, long since enclosed. It contains a cave called the Hermitage, the retreat, according to tradition, of Athelstan's brother. In the vicinity of Bridgnorth there are remains of several military works, forts, and entrenchments. Apley Park, the fine seat of the Whitmore family, is on the banks of the Severn, 3 miles to the N. of the town.—Bridgnorth was the birthplace (1729) of Bishop Percy, to whom we are indebted for a collection of the "Reliques of Ancient English Poetry;" and of Francis Moore, the originator of the medico-prophetic almanac which still passes under his name.—The market, principally for corn and beans, is held on Saturday. The annual fairs take place on the Thursday before Shrove-Tuesday, the nearest Thursday to the 15th March (for the sale of cattle and sheep), the 1st May, the 30th June, the 2nd August (for wool and cattle), the 15th September (for cattle and cheese), the 29th October and two following days (for butter, cheese, hops, &c.), and the 15th December (for cattle and general goods). Races are held in July.

BRIDGTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Fermoy, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, not far from Castletownroche. It is situated on the N. bank of the river Blackwater, and had formerly a monastery, of which there are some remains. They stand at the junction of the river Awbeg with the Blackwater, and consist of part of the church, with traces of the refectory and the cloisters. The soil is generally fertile, but in parts the surface is mountainous. A bridge, which crossed the Blackwater at this place, was destroyed during the Civil War by Cromwell's troops. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne, of the val. of £175, in the patron. of the bishop.

BRIDGWATER, a par. and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the northern div. of the hund. of Petherton, in the co. of Somerset, 33 miles to the S.W. of Bristol, and 151 miles to the W. of London, by the Great Western railway, on which it is a station. It is situated on the banks of the river Parret, about 10 miles from Bridgwater Bay, in the Bristol Channel, into which the Parret falls. Bridgwater is a very ancient place, and is mentioned in the Domesday Survey under the name of Brugie; it consisted then of a mill, meadow, and woodlands. Its present name is a corruption of Brugge-Walter, signifying the "Bridge of Walter;" the place having been given by William the Conqueror to Walter de Dowai, one of his followers. Early in the reign of king John, William de Briwere, who had obtained a grant of the manor from Henry II., erected a castle here (a stately and magnificent structure), commenced the rebuilding of the bridge over the Parret, and founded the Hospital of St. John for a master, brethren, and 13 poor persons of the order of St. Augustine. This hospital was munificently endowed, and flourished till the Dissolution, when its revenue amounted to £121. The bridge, a stone structure of three arches, remained unfinished till the reign of Edward I., when Sir Thomas Trivet undertook its completion. The town fell into the hands of the revolted barons in the reign of Henry III. No other historical event is connected with it till the civil war in the reign of Charles I., when the inhabitants espoused the cause of the king, and the castle was garrisoned by the royal forces under Colonel Wyndham. Besieged by the parliamentary forces under General Fairfax, the garrison made a brave defence, but was compelled to surrender, and the castle was then (July, 1645) dismantled. The Duke of Monmouth was warmly received and proclaimed king in this town just before the fatal fight on Sedgmoor, and heavy penalties were inflicted on the inhabitants at the hands of Judge Jeffreys and Colonel Kirke.—Bridgwater is situated in the centre of a level tract of country, fertile and well-wooded, extending from the coast along both sides of the river Parret, between the Mendip hills on the N.E., and the Quantocks on the S.W. The principal part of the town stands on the W. bank of the Parret, and is connected with the other part, called Eastover, by a good iron bridge of one arch. The streets, most of which are wide, are well paved, and lighted with gas. The houses are well built, and there is a good supply of water. There is a townhall, a borough gaol, and a market-house, the last a handsome modern edifice with an Ionic portico, and surmounted by a dome and lantern. The principal business of the place is the manufacture of bricks of various kinds, especially of those called Bath brick and scouring brick. These are made of the clay and sand from the bed of the river, and are fabrics peculiar to the place. A great number of persons are employed in this trade.—The Parret is navigable to Langport for small vessels, and the Taunton canal, constructed in 1825, meets the river at Bridgwater. There is a large and convenient quay below the bridge, accessible by vessels of large size. Great inconvenience is sometimes caused, and damage done to the shipping, by what is called the bore, a sudden rising of the water at spring-tides, common to several rivers falling into the Bristol Channel. The tide at such periods has a total rise of nearly 30 feet. The number of vessels belonging to the port is about 120, of which about 70 are above 50 tons burthen, besides two small steamers. Combwich, Minehead, and Watchet are subordinate ports to Bridgwater, which has a custom-house. The trade of the port is chiefly coastwise, but some vessels are engaged in the colonial and foreign trade; chiefly with Russia, America, and the West Indies. The chief articles of import are timber, grain, coals, wine, tallow, &c., and the principal export, Bath and other bricks. Coal is imported from South Wales.—Bridgwater was first incorporated under a charter granted by King John in the year 1200, the provisions of which were confirmed and extended by various charters granted by succeeding monarchs. Under the Act passed in 1835, the borough is divided into two wards, and governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, with the style of the "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Bridgwater." It has returned two members to parliament since the 23rd of Edward I., when the elective franchise was first conferred on it. The mayor is returning officer. The limits of the parliamentary are the same as those of the municipal borough, which comprises, according to the census of 1861, 2,124 inhabited houses, with a population of 11,561, against 10,317 in 1851, showing an increase of 1,044 in the decennial period. The borough has a revenue of about £2,360. Bridgwater is the seat of a Poor-law Union and the head of a County Court district. The summer assizes are held here and at Wells alternately. Quarter and petty sessions are held in the town by the county magistrates, and petty sessions for the borough are held weekly. The town is a polling-place for the western division of Somersetshire. Here is a coastguard station.—The living is a vic.* united with the rect. of Chilton, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the val. of £325, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is a large and ancient structure, with a good tower at the west end, surmounted by a spire about 170 feet high. It has a beautiful porch in the decorated style, and for the altar-piece a fine painting of the Descent from the Cross, taken from a French church during the revolutionary war. There are two chapels of ease, dedicated to the Holy Trinity and St. John the Baptist; the latter is situated at Eastover. The livings are perpet. curs.,* each worth £160, the former in the gift of the vicar of the parish, the latter in the alternate gift of the crown and the bishop of the dioc. There are chapels belonging to the Baptists, Independents, Quakers, Wesleyans, and Unitarians. The free grammar school, which was founded in 1561, has a small endowment worth about £28 a year. There are 7 free pupils. The master is appointed by the bishop. The free school, founded and endowed by John Morgan in 1723, has a revenue of £140 per annum. The scholars are 140 in number, 30 of them being also clothed from the charity. The school-room and master's house were built by the managers in 1816. There are in the town an infirmary, established in 1813, almshouses endowed by Major Ingram, a savings-bank, and the Union poorhouse.—Bridgwater was the birthplace 1599 of Admiral Blake, who also received his early education at the grammar school here. The weekly newspaper called the Bridgwater Times, formerly published in the town, is at present discontinued. The Egerton family took the titles of duke, marquis, and earl from this place.—Wednesday is the market day, chiefly for corn, cattle, and provisions; but markets are also held on Tuesday and Saturday. Cheese, made in the neighbourhood, is sold in large quantities. Fairs take place on the first Monday in Lent, the 24th June, the Wednesday after Michaelmas Day and two following days, and the 27th December. The most important is the Michaelmas fair, which is held under royal charter.

BRIDLINGTON, or BURLINGTON, a par., seaport, and market town in the wap. of Dickering, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 40 miles to the E.N.E. of York, and 204 miles to the N. of London by the Great Northern, and the Scarborough, Bridlington, and Hull section of the North-Eastern railway. It is an extensive par., embracing an area of 13,236 acres, and is situated in a tract of flat country, extending for some distance southward along the coast of the North Sea. It includes, besides the old town, Bridlington Quay, the chapelries of Grindall, Sewerby, and Speeton, and the tnships of Buckton, Easton, and Hilderthorpe. Bridlington (once written Brellington) is an ancient town. It is a question among antiquaries whether it was the site of a Roman station. The Danes for a long time held their ground in this part of the country, which was the scene of many conflicts. There are still remains of extensive earthworks in the neighbouring wolds, and many tumuli, both of Danish and Saxon origin. About the time of the Conquest the manor belonged to Earl Morcar, but was subsequently given by the Conqueror to one of his nephews. The most important fact in the early history of this place is the foundation of its priory in the reign of Henry I. by Walter de Gaunt, who at that time held the manor. It was for canons of the Augustine order, and by royal leave was fortified, to protect it from assault by sea. Many important privileges were granted to the priors, and the endowments and possessions of the house were of immense extent, so that, after flourishing for more than 400 years, its revenue amounted to about £682 per annum. The last prior being executed as a traitor, the possessions of the priory were forfeited to the crown, and soon after (in 1539) the conventual buildings were taken down. During the civil war in the reign of Charles I., his queen, having procured a supply of arms in the Netherlands, escaped the notice of the squadron stationed to intercept her, and effected a landing here under the convoy of Van Tromp. The town was then cannonaded for several hours by Admiral Batten. A combat took place in 1779, in Bridlington Bay, between the adventurer, Paul Jones, with four vessels, and two British warships. The latter were taken, and carried off as prizes to Texel.—The town, which consists chiefly of one long street, is situated about a mile from the coast, on ground rising gradually towards the north. The streets are narrow and irregular, and many of the houses old and poorly built. The town is lighted with gas, there is a good supply of water, and many improvements have been made of late years. There is a market-place with a new corn exchange, built in 1856, and a room in the old gateway of the priory is used as the townhall.—Bridlington Quay, a small, well-built, modern town, stands pleasantly in a recess of the bay, about a mile to the S.E. of Bridlington. It forms the port, and has become a favourite and much-frequented bathing-place. It has several good streets, the principal running down to the harbour, and is lighted with gas. It contains the custom-house, the baths, and the Victoria and Polytechnic rooms. The beach is firm and sandy. The two piers, constructed of stone for forming the harbour, make a delightful promenade, commanding good views over the bay, and of Flamborough Head, which encloses it on the S. Near the Quay is a chalybeate spring, and in the harbour an ebbing and flowing spring covered by every tide. It was discovered in 1811, and yields an abundant supply of pure water. Bridlington contains a small hat factory, several corn-mills, and a steam-mill for grinding bones. A good general trade is carried on with the towns and villages of the neighbourhood, and the resort of visitors for sea-bathing has contributed to the growth and prosperity of the place.—The port is subordinate to the port of Hull, and has between 30 and 40 vessels belonging to it, which are chiefly engaged in the coasting trade. Corn, malt, and bones are the principal exports, and coal, timber, and general merchandise are imported. The harbour covers an area of 11 acres, and is the best on that part of the coast, affording a safe retreat for many hasting vessels in bad weather. The bay, too, being well-sheltered from N. and N.W. winds, offers good and safe anchorage. The harbour is dry at low water. A coastguard is stationed here.—Bridlington is the seat of a Poor-law Union and the head of a County Court district. It is also a polling-place for the riding. Petty sessions are held in the town.—The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £130, in the patron. of the trustees of the Rev. C. Simeon. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is part of the ancient conventual church, and forms the most interesting feature of the town. The original structure appears to have been above 330 feet in length, and had two fine towers at the western end, the lower portions of which only remain. Of the towers and the north side of the church is in the early English, and the western front of the building chiefly in the perpendicular style. In architectural beauty this front resembles the fine church of Beverley. The window is 55 feet high and 27 feet broad. A thorough repair and restoration of the structure was effected a few years ago. The dimensions of the present church are — length, 185 feet; breadth, 68 feet; and height, 60 feet. In addition to the parish church there are three new churches: one at Bridlington Quay, erected about the year 1840. It is called Christ Church, and is in the early English style. The living is a perpet. cur.,* worth £150, in the gift of the Incumbent of Bridlington. The other two are situated, one at Sewerby, and the other at Speeton; the livings of both are perpet. curs., the former val. £181, in the patron. of G. J. Yarburgh, Esq., the latter, val. £50, in the gift of Lord Londesborough. There are chapels in Bridlington belonging to the Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, and for the two latter bodies and the Methodist Reformers at Bridlington Quay. The boys' free school, founded in 1637 by William Hustler, has an income from endowment of £40 a year. There are also a free school for girls, endowed in 1671, National and infant schools. The private schools are numerous; and there are public libraries, a mechanics' institute, and a museum.—Fossil remains abound in the chalk cliffs along this coast, and in a freshwater deposit of the neighbourhood was discovered some time ago the head of an elk, an extinct species, the horns of which measured 11 feet from tip to tip.—George Ripley, an alchemist, and author of a treatise in metre called the "Compound of Alchemie," written in 1471, was one of the canons of Bridlington Priory. William of Newburgh, who wrote in the reign of King John, and Prior John of Bridlington, who lived in the reign of Edward III., were probably natives of this town. It was also the birthplace (1695) of Richard Boyle, Earl of Burlington, by whom Burlington House was erected; and of the famous landscape gardener, Kent, who died in 1748. There are many pleasant seats of the gentry in the neighbourhood; among which are Boynton, the residence of Sir G. Strickland, Bart.; Thorpe Hall, Bessingby, and Sewerby. Lord Cavendish takes from this place the title of earl.—Saturday is the market day. Two annual fairs are held — on the Monday before Whitsuntide and the 21st October—for the sale of cattle and cloth. They are held on the Green, an open space which was formerly the priory close. Races take place in October.

BRIDPORT, a par., seaport, market town, and municipal and parliamentary borough, having separate jurisdiction, in the hund. of Sturminster, though locally in the hund. of Whitchurch-Canonicorum, Bridport div. of the co. of Dorset, 14 miles to the W. of Dorchester, and 134 miles by road to the S.W. of London, or 163 by the Great Western railway, on which it is a station. There are also two branch lines to Dorchester and to Maiden Newton, the former joining the South-Western line at Dorchester, and the latter the Great Western at Maiden Newton, thus forming two distinct lines of communication with the metropolis and other parts of the kingdom. Bridport was an important town before the Norman Conquest, and had a mint at the time of the great Survey. It was early noted for the manufacture of cordage, and in the reign of Henry VIII. the entire supply for the navy was ordered to be obtained at Bridport, or within 5 miles of the town. A "Bridport dagger" has long been a popular designation for a halter, and it is said of a man who has been hung, that he was "stabbed with a Bridport dagger." The town was alternately in the hands of the parliament and the royalists during the civil war of the 17th century.—Bridport is situated in a pleasant sheltered valley, skirted by the Brit and the Asker, which unite to form the harbour, and fall into the sea about 2 miles below the town. The principal streets, three in number, are spacious, well paved, and lighted with gas, and contain many good modern houses. In the centre of the town is the townhall and market-house, built in 1786, which occupies the site of an ancient chapel, dedicated to St. Andrew. The town contains the Union poorhouse, a custom-house, and a prison. The prosperity of Bridport depends chiefly on the trade of the port and the various manufactures carried on in connection with it. On the Brit is a large flax-mill, and another on the Bredy. The harbour being liable to injury from the accumulation of sand, it is only by great and repeated efforts and at immense cost that it has been made so safe and commodious as it now is. It is situated at the bottom of the spacious bay extending between Portland and Torbay, and the cliffs near its entrance rise at some points to the height of 200 feet. It is capable of admitting vessels of 250 tons burthen. Since the construction of railways the coasting-trade, which was of considerable extent, has greatly fallen off. The number of vessels belonging to the port is between 15 and 20. The principal articles imported are hemp, flax, tallow, and timber, from Russia and the Baltic; coals from Wales and the north of England; wines, slate, &c. The exports consist of the various manufactures which form the staple business of the town; these are fishing-nets, sail-cloth, twine, cordage, and webbing. Considerable quantities of cheese and butter were formerly sent to London, but that trade for some years past has been on the decline. Bridport has been noted for the building of smacks and small vessels of fine construction and fast sailing. Ship-building is still carried on here.—The town was first incorporated by a charter granted by Henry III., about 1253, which was confirmed and extended by several succeeding sovereigns. The limits of the borough were considerably enlarged by the Reform Act, and comprise now, besides the old borough and the parish, parts of the neighbouring parishes of Allington, Bradpole, Bothenhampton, Burton Bradstock, Symondsbury, and Walsditch, containing altogether 1,468 inhabited houses, occupied in 1861 by a population of 7,672, against 7,566 in 1851, showing an increase of 106 in the decennial period. The government of the borough, now divided into three wards, is vested under the new Act in a mayor or bailiffs, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, bearing the style of the "bailiffs and burgesses of the borough of Bridport." The borough has returned two representatives to parliament since the reign of Edward I., who conferred on it the elective franchise in 1295. The mayor or bailiffs are returning officers. Bridport is the seat of a Poor-law Union, the head of a County Court district, and a coast-guard station. The corporation hold a court of session annually, and a court of record once a fortnight.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £250, in the patron. of the Earl of Ilchester. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is an ancient edifice in the form of a cross, in the perpendicular style of architecture, with a good tower at the centre, crowned with pinnacles, and was admirably restored and considerably enlarged in 1859. It is said to be the finest church in the county, except Sherborne and Wimborne minsters, and contains an altar tomb of William, son of Sir Eustace Dabridgecourt, kinsman to Queen Philippa. There is also at Allington a new church, capable of accommodating 1,000 persons. There are chapels belonging to the Baptists, Independents, Society of Friends, Unitarians, Wesleyans, and Roman Catholics. A free school and an almshouse were founded and endowed about the close of the 17th century by Daniel Taylor, a member of the Society of Friends. The school has a revenue of about £80, and is managed by trustees; and the almshouse is endowed with about £70 per annum. There are also National and infant schools, and various charitable endowments producing about £100 a year. There are in the town a mechanics' institute and a savings-bank.—Bridport was the birthplace of Giles de Bridport, who was raised to the see of Salisbury about 1250. The Hood family take the title of viscount and baron from this place. Wednesday and Saturday are the market days. Fairs for cattle, cheese, &c., are held on the 6th April, and the 11th October.

BRIDPORT DIVISION, one of the nine divs. of Dorsetshire, situated in the western part of the co., and bounded on the N. by Somersetshire, on the E. by ... borne and Dorchester divs., on the S. by the ... Channel, and on the W. by Devonshire. It ... the following four hunds.—Beaminster Forum, Redhone, Eggerton, Godderthorne, and Whit... Canonicorum; and the four libs. of Broadw..., Frampton, Lothers, and Poorstock. The div. cover... area of about 93,200 acres.

BRIDSTOW, a par. in the lower div. of the ... Wormelow, in the co. of Hereford, 1 mile to the N. of Ross. It is situated in a pleasant country, ... west bank of the river Wye. The Hereford, Ross, ... Gloucester railway passes within a short distance ... living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, of the ... £276, in the patron. of the bishop. The church ... cated to St. Bridget. Between this village and ... the picturesque ivy-covered ruins of Wilton Castle, ... ancient seat of the Grey family, to whom it ... title of earl. It was burnt down during the civ... the reign of Charles I. The site now belongs ... trustees of Guy's Hospital, London. The ... on the W. bank of the river, near the old bridge, ... also forms a pleasing object in the landscape.

BRIERCLIFFE, a tnshp. united with Extwi... the par. of Whalley, and hund. of Blackburn, ... palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles to the N.E. of ... The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the ... ing coal-mines. The living is a perpet. cur. in ... of Manchester, of the val. of £150, in the patron. of Vicar of Whalley. The charities produce ... year.

BRIERLEY, a tnshp. in the par. and borou... Leominster, hund. of Wolphy, in the co. of H... mile from Leominster.

BRIERLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Felkirk, ... Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. ... miles to the N.E. of Barnsley. Grimethorpe ... of this tnshp. The workpeople are principally ... in the cloth manufacture.

BRIERLEY, a vil. in the par. of Sedgley, ... Seisdon, in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles to the S.W. ... verhampton.

BRIERLEY HILL, a market town and ... the par. of Kingswinford, and hund. of N... in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles to the S.W. ... 7 from Wolverhampton, and 11 from Birmingh... is a station on the West Midland railway. ... consists of one long street, nearly a mile in ... well paved and lighted with gas. There are ... rous shops, and the market is held in the ... street. There is a mechanics' institute, several ... ing societies, and an association for the ... of thieves. The chief manufactures are in ... glass, consisting of boiler-making, iron-rolling ... implements, nails, glass, fire-bricks, and ... ing establishments. There are many large ... and extensive iron-works in the neighbourhood ... fire-clay and porcelain stone. The living is a ... the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. with the ... Hart's Hill annexed, of £300, in the patron. ... Rector of Kingswinford. The church, dedi... St. Michael and All Angels, was built in 176... recently been twice enlarged. It contains a ... erected in 1844 at the cost of £500. From ... may be seen an extensive prospect, embracing 12 ... at once, with the Stour winding beneath, ... the Wrekin, in Shropshire, and the M... Worcestershire, to the S.W. The Baptists, ... dents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have ... and there are National and infant schools. The ... and Stourbridge canal passes through this distri... has many branches. The chapelry forms a ... parish for ecclesiastical purposes, though locally ... within the parish of Kingswinford. The market ... on Saturday.

BRIERS, a vil. in the par. of Halifax, and ... Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, ... to the E. of Halifax. The living is a perpet. ... dioc. of Ripon, of the val. of £150, in the patron...

Vic. of Halifax. The church is dedicated to St Ann in the Grove.

BIERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stranton, Stockton ward, in the co. palatine of Durham, 3 miles to the S.W. of Hartlepool. It lies near the West Hartlepool railway.

BIERY-COTTAGES, an ext. par. district in the ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, near Keswick. It is joined with the district of Grange Mills.

BIESTFIELD, or BRIESTWHISTLE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Lower Whitley, and par. of Thornhill, wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the E. of Huddersfield.

BIGG. See GLANDFORD-BRIGG, Lincolnshire.

BIGHAM, a par. and tnshp. in the ward of Allerdale above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 2½ miles W. of Cockermouth, 5 miles S.E. of Maryport, and 25 miles S.W. of Carlisle. There are two stations on the Cockermouth and Workington railway, one close to the village, and the other at Broughton Cross. The parish is situated in a hilly but cultivated country on the banks of the rivers Derwent and Cocker, Bassenthwaite-water forming part of its eastern, and the lakes Buttermere, Crummock, and Loweswater part of its western boundary. It is within the honour of Cockermouth, and contains the borough and market town of Cockermouth, the chplries. of Buttermere, Cockermouth, Embleton, Lorton, Mosser, Setmurthy, and Wythop, and the tnshps. of Blindbothel, Brigham, Eaglesfield, Graysouthen, and Whinfell. Limestone, freestone, and slate are quarried here, and some coal is obtained. The village is pleasantly seated on a hill, commanding a good prospect. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chester, of the val. of £220, in the patronage of the Earl of Lonsdale. The church, which stands by the Derwent, is an ancient edifice in the decorated style, dedicated to St. Bridget. The Wesleyans have a small chapel, built in 1856. The parish has the benefit of charitable endowments producing about £140 per annum; but the charities of the tnshp. amount only to £5 per annum. There is a parochial school for boys and girls, with an endowment of £3 per annum; also a Sunday-school, built in 1839. The vicarage is situated near the church, and was erected in 1847.

BIGHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Foston-on-the-Wolds, wap. of Dickering, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the S.E. of Great Driffield.

BIGHOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the S.E. of Halifax. It is situated on the banks of the river Calder, and is a station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The cotton, woollen, and worsted manufactures form the principal employment of the inhabitants. Good stone is quarried near the village. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, of the val. of £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Halifax. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists.

BRIGHT, a par. in the bar. of Lecale, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S. of Downpatrick. It is situated in a fertile and cultivated district, and was the site of a castle and an abbey. The latter, called the Abbey of Erynagh, was founded about 1127, and was destroyed about 50 years afterwards by De Courcy. There are remains of both buildings. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, Connor, and Dromore, the val. of £326, in the patron. of the crown. The church, which stands on a hill, was built in 1745, and is in the Grecian style of architecture. The chief seat is Oakley, a handsome mansion in well-wooded ground.

BRIHTFORD HUNDRED, one of the 11 hunds. or subdivisions of the rape of Bramber, in the co. of Sussex, situated in the western div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of Steyning, on the E. by the hund. of Fishergate, on the S. by the English Channel, and on the W. by the rape of Arundel. It contains the pars. of Broadwater, Clapham, Durrington, Findon, Heene, Lancing, and Sompting, and the town of Worthing. The hund. comprises an area of about 14,570 acres.

BRIGHTHAMPTON, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Bampton, in the co. of Oxford, 4 miles to the E. of Bampton.

BRIGHTHOLMLEE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Bradfield, and par. of Ecclesfield, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the N.W. of Sheffield.

BRIGHTLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Okehampton, hund. of Lifton, in the co. of Devon, not far from Okehampton.

BRIGHTLING, a par. in the hund. of Netherfield, rape of Hastings, in the co. of Sussex, 4 miles to the N.W. of Battle. It is situated in a fine country, near lofty downs rising to the height of about 650 feet above the level of the sea. There are hop-grounds in the par. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, of the val. of £563, in the patron. of the Rev. B. Hayley. The church, which is in the perpendicular style, is dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket. The charitable endowments, which include a bequest by Mary Herbert in 1728, for a girls' free school, are worth about £40 per annum.

BRIGHTLINGSEA, a par. in the hund. of Tendring, in the co. of Essex, 10 miles to the S.E. of Colchester. It is situated on the eastern bank of the estuary of the Colne, opposite Mersey Island, and is a peninsular district, surrounded on all sides but the N.E. by the river Colne and its branches. Brightlingsea is a port subordinate to Colchester, and a member of Sandwich, one of the Cinque Ports. A large number of the inhabitants are employed in the oyster and sprat fishery, which is carried on to a great extent, and forms the principal trade of the place. The harbour has good anchorage, and there are above 200 smacks belonging to the port. Boat-building is carried on to a small extent, and Morant says that copperas was formerly made here from the copper pyrites on the beach. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £213, in the patron. of the Bishop of Peterborough. The church, which stands more than a mile from the town, is dedicated to All Saints, and contains three monumental brasses. The tower, nearly 100 feet high, forms a conspicuous sea-mark. There is a chapel of ease built in the pointed style of architecture. There are both a free school and a National school, the latter erected in 1845; also chapels belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists, Independents, and Swedenborgians. A temperance hall has recently been erected. A fair is held here on St. Swithin's Day or the Thursday preceding.

BRIGHTON, or BRIGHTHELMSTON, a par., market-town, and municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Whalesbone, rape of Lewes, in the co. of Sussex, 52 miles to the S. of London by road, or 50 miles by the Brighton and South Coast railway. A town has probably existed on this spot from a very remote antiquity, but nothing is known of its origin and very little of its early history. At the period of the Conquest it was a fishing village, and in the great Survey it is called Bristelmestune. Vestiges of military works exist in the neighbourhood, and many Roman coins have been found in the town. At the Conquest the manor, previously held by Harold, was given to William de Warren, son-in-law to the Conqueror. In later times the town suffered from assaults by the French, who plundered and burnt it in 1513. It was found necessary to protect it by fortifications, and these were erected, strengthened, and enlarged during the reigns of Henry VIII. and Queen Elizabeth. During the latter half of the 17th century and the early years of the 18th, part of the town was destroyed and the neighbourhood inundated by several violent irruptions of the sea. All the houses which stood at the foot of the cliff perished during these storms. The fame of Brighton as a watering-place dates no further back than the reign of George II., and appears to have commenced with the publication of a work by Dr. R. Russell, a resident physician, on the use of sea-water. The discovery of a chalybeate spring attracted shortly afterwards a large number of visitors; and the erection in 1784 of the magnificent palace, known as the Pavilion, for the Prince of Wales (afterwards George IV.) confirmed the success of the undertaking.—Brighton, which stands in the first rank among English watering-places, and fourth amongst towns, is situated on the coast of the English Channel, at the foot of the South Downs, nearly midway between the promontories of Beachy Head and Selsea Bill. The town stretches about 3 miles along the coast, the eastern part occupying the summit of the lofty chalk cliffs, and the western part low ground sloping gently upwards from the sea. The cliff is now defended from encroachments of the sea by a fine wall of immense strength and admirable construction, erected at a cost of £100,000. It extends from Kemp Town, at the east end of the parish, to the Chain Pier, and is about 60 feet in height and 23 feet in breadth at the base. The pier, a prominent feature of the town, was erected in 1822, from designs by Captain Brown, R.N., at a cost of £30,000. It is a noble structure, consisting of four spans of equal length, suspended by eight massive chains carried over iron towers, which rest upon foundations of piles driven deep into the rock. The pier is 1,137 feet in length and about 14 feet broad. At its head is a transverse platform 60 feet long and 20 broad, paved with granite, and resting on piles. The pier is approached by an esplanade, 1,200 feet in length, which connects it with the ornamental ground called the Steyne. The Marine-parade, extending westward from Kemp Town for about a mile, forms a fine promenade with extensive prospects. It is united with the gardens and lawn in the centre of the grand crescent by a tunnel. This crescent is one of the principal features of Brighton, presenting a frontage towards the sea of 1,540 feet. The opening between the wings is 840 feet, and each of the wings 350 feet. The glacis is terminated by an esplanade, commanding a beautiful and sheltered prospect of the ocean. The Pavilion, situated next the west end of the Steyne, is a structure of singular and fanciful style, something like the Kremlin at Moscow. It is surmounted by many cupolas, pinnacles, and minarets. The stables are in the Moorish style, and are crowned with a dome of glass. The front of the building is about 200 feet in length. Since 1849 it has belonged to the corporation, who purchased it for £53,000, secured upon the local rates, and converted it, with the extensive grounds attached to it, into a place of public recreation. The Steyne, formerly an open area chiefly used by fishermen for drying their nets, is tastefully laid out and planted, and is the site of many handsome residences. It contains a bronze statue of George IV. by Chantrey, set up in 1827, and the Victoria fountain, erected in 1846. Brighton consists of about 400 streets, extending nearly 3 miles from east to west, and contains many fine squares, terraces, and ranges of handsome houses, principally erected since the commencement of the present century, during which the growth of the town has been rapid and immense. Among them may be named the Royal-crescent, the Marine and Pavilion parades, Brunswick square and terrace, Hanover-crescent, &c. Kemp Town, in the east, named after its founder, Thomas Read Kemp, was commenced in 1821, and stood at first apart from the town. There are barracks for cavalry and infantry, and the town is protected by a battery of six guns. A new townhall, with three double porticos, was built about 1830, at a cost of £50,000. It stands in Market-street, near the middle of the town, and includes a council-room, court-room, police offices, and many other apartments. The great room is frequently used for public meetings, and the upper story contains a handsome assembly-room. The market-house, opposite the townhall, is built in the form of the letter T, and is open daily for the sale of meat, poultry, fish, and vegetables. There are two banks: the one situated in North-street is called the Brighton Union Bank, and draws on Loyd and Co., Lothbury; the other is a branch of the London and County Bank, and is situated in Pavilion-buildings. The wants of invalids and the comfort of visitors are provided for by baths of various descriptions, numerous hotels and lodging-houses (some of which are establishments of immense extent and the highest elegance), literary institutions, mechanics' institutions, schools of art, reading-rooms, and several subscription libraries. But perhaps the most instructive is the town museum, which occupies a noble suite of rooms in the north wing of the Pavilion, and was opened by Professor Owen on the 5th of November, 1861. It contains collections of antiquities, natural history, geology, &c. The theatre is situated in New-street, and is well attended during the season for dramatic performances, between July and March. There are three assembly rooms, one at the Old Ship Hotel, another at the townhall, and the Royal Newburgh Rooms, Cannon-place. The park, which is entered through a Roman arch, is situated on the slope of the Downs, in the direction of Rock Gardens. It is agreeably laid out with flower-beds and shrubs, presenting a contrast to the barren downs which rise above it. Here is the German Spa and pump-room, open from March to October, where most of the continental waters are manufactured, and the famous seltzer-water. The town is lighted with gas, and well supplied with water raised from wells by powerful engines, situated in the Lewes-road, in the parish of Preston, where the reservoirs and works cover 15 acres. The mains and service-pipes are said to exceed 100 miles in length; but the rate of supply was high and unsatisfactory until the sinking of the "Warren Farm Well," which penetrates the chalk to the depth of 1,285 feet, at which depth an undercurrent of pure water was reached on the 16th of March, 1862, and gave occasion for a general festival, announced by the ringing of the church bells.—The trade of Brighton is almost exclusively connected with its character as a watering-place. Its communication with the metropolis, which, previously to the introduction of railways, employed above 30 coaches daily, has been facilitated and increased to an enormous extent. The railway terminus, situated at the north end of Queen-street, is a spacious pile of buildings, with a colonnade and an illuminated clock. It has recently been much enlarged, and, together with its offices and work-sheds, covers 20 acres, giving regular employment to above 1,000 men in the building and repairing of rolling-stock, and 150 men in the traffic department. The railway itself consists of three lines, radiating from Brighton as their common centre, and communicating with London, Portsmouth, and Hastings. The main line to the metropolis was completed in 1841, and passes by Pangdean, Hayward's Heath, Horsley, Reigate, Croydon, and Sydenham, to London Bridge; or by the Victoria Junction to the magnificent station in Victoria-street, Westminster, which was opened for traffic in 1861. It is carried through several tunnels, the principal of which are Clayton and Mersham tunnels, the former above a mile and a quarter, the latter above a mile in length. The others are Patcham tunnel, near Brighton, a quarter of a mile long, and that near Hayward's Heath, 727 yards. Branch lines run from Three Bridges to Horsham and Petworth on the W., and East Grinstead on the E.; and from Hayward's Heath to Lewes and Newhaven. Others run to the Crystal Palace, Wimbledon, Epsom and Leatherhead, Uckfield, &c. The western extension passes from Brighton by Shoreham, Worthing, Arundel, and Chichester, to Portsmouth, a distance of 45 miles; and the eastern by Lewes, Polegate, and Bexhill, to Hastings, a distance of 26 miles. From Polegate short branches run northward to Hailsham, and southward to Eastbourne. This railway is on the narrow guage, but is so well managed that it has rendered Brighton the most accessible, as it is the most fashionable, of sea-bathing places, having a magnificent sea-frontage of 3 miles, not to be surpassed in grandeur by any watering-place in Europe. The number of visitors during the summer is said to amount to above 20,000 weekly; excursion trains from London running at very low rates. It is said that the lodging-houses in Brighton are capable of accommodating 30,000 visitors. The traffic through Brighton to Paris, at one time considerable, has fallen off, the routes by Folkstone and Newhaven being preferred. From the dangerous nature of the coast few vessels can discharge their cargoes on the beach, and the traffic by sea is carried on through the ports of Newhaven and Shoreham. About 400 men are engaged in the fisheries, mackerel and herring being the chief fish taken, though the town is also well supplied with every other description of fish, brought from London. The number of boats employed is about 120. The fishermen hold a market on the beach, near the end of Market-street, and the mode of effecting sales is by Dutch auction. The manufacture of Tonbridge ware is carried on by some of the inhabitants.—Brighton was first constituted a parliamentary borough by the Reform Act, and has since returned two members to the imperial parliament. The parish of Hove, into which the western part of the town extends, is included within the limits of the borough. The local government was formerly conducted by a constable, eight headboroughs, and a numerous body of commissioners, elected under an act of parliament by the principal householders. It is now vested in a mayor, a recorder, 12 aldermen, and 36 councillors, under a charter obtained in 1854. The borough is divided into six wards, and contains within the parliamentary limits 13,946 houses, inhabited by a population of 87,311, according to the census of 1861, showing an increase of 17,638 in the decennial period. The municipal borough, however, is not co-extensive with the parliamentary, and contains only 12,708 houses, with a population of 77,693. Brighton forms a Poor-law Union of itself, having the management of its own poor, independently of the New Poor-Law Act. The police of the town is administered by a stipendiary magistrate, assisted by the mayor and a chief officer of police. It is the head of Excise and County Court districts, and a coastguard station. Six newspapers are published in the town, called the Brighton Gazette, Chronicle, Examiner, Guardian, Observer, and Herald.—The living of Brighton is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, consolidated with the rect. of West Blatchington, val. £900, in the patron. of the bishop. It is at present held by the Rev. Henry Michell Wagner, M.A., Surrogate, and Treasurer of Chichester Cathedral, an appointment of the val. of £200 per annum. The parish church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, and situate at the W. end of Church-street, was beautifully restored in 1854 conformably to the following resolution:—"Resolved that the restoration and enlargement of the parish church, wherein his Grace the Duke of Wellington, at an early period of his life, was wont to worship, would be an appropriate and enduring monument of our gratitude and veneration for his memory." It stands on the summit of a hill, commanding a splendid sea view, and is an ancient structure, chiefly in the perpendicular style of architecture, with a tower and spire, forming a conspicuous sea-mark. The church contains an oaken screen finely carved, and an ancient circular font ardoned with figures in relief, which were re-cut in the last century. The font was brought from Normandy soon after the Conquest. There are several interesting monuments, including one to Captain Tettersell, who assisted Charles II. to escape to France, after the battle of Worcester; and one to Phœbe Hessel, who served as a foot-soldier in the 5th Regiment at the battle of Fontenoy. There is also in the churchyard an ancient cross. The places of worship belonging to the Established Church are seventeen in number, viz. eleven churches and six proprietary chapels. With the exception of St. Mark's Church, the presentation to the churches and to the Chapel Royal is vested in the Vicar of Brighton, whereas the presentation to the respective proprietary chapels, with the exception of St. George's Chapel, is under the "40 years' Act," more than 35 of which years have now expired. The endowments of St. Peter's, Christ Church, St. Paul's, All Saints', St. Stephen's, St. Michael's, All Souls', and St. John's, arise from rented sittings; All Souls' possessing an additional endowment of £77 per annum, and St. John's of £93 7*s.* 10*d.* per annum. The church of St. Mary Magdalene, reared by the benevolence of the sister and son of the vicar, in a poor part of Brighton, mainly for the benefit of the poor, contains 600 open sittings without any pew-rental, fee, or reward whatsoever. The endowments of the proprietary chapels arise from rented sittings, selected and set apart by the Vicar of Brighton, calculated to produce £150 for each of the respective ministers of such chapels. A church in Burlington-street, Marine-parade, is in course of completion; and a site in the northern part of Brighton has been purchased for the erection of a church for the use of the poor, and at the conjoint expense of the sister and son of the vicar, similar in purpose and in detail to the church in Bread-street. The Roman Catholics have two churches, one dedicated to St. John the Baptist, in the Bristol-road, the other, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is a Gothic building, situated in Upper North-street, and was opened in February, 1862. The places of worship for Dissenters are very numerous, and some of them spacious and handsome buildings. They include four chapels belonging to the Baptists, seven to the Independents, four to the Wesleyans, two to the Presbyterians, and one each to the Society of Friends, Unitarians, Primitive Methodists, Irvingites, Bible Christians, and the Countess of Huntingdon's Connection, and a Jewish synagogue.—The situation and character of Brighton make it a favourite place for the establishment of schools; and besides the private boarding-schools, numbering more than 100, and numerous day-schools, there are several important institutions for education. The principal are the Brighton College, founded in 1848 (the buildings, situated on the cliffs and forming a quadrangle, are in the Tudor style, and were erected from the designs of G. G. Scott); St. Mary's Hall, at Kemp Town, founded about 1830 as a school for the daughters of clergymen; a noble central National school, capable of accommodating 650 children, in connection with which are two branch National schools and two infant schools; a proprietary school belonging to the Dissenters; and a training school for female teachers. There are several free schools, including one for girls, founded by Swan Downer in 1811, which has an income from endowment of about £300 per annum; a blue-coat school with an endowment of £70 a year, the produce of a bequest by William Grimmett in 1768; an orphan school, a school for the blind, one for children of fishermen, and several ragged schools. Brighton supports an Athenæum, a scientific institution, a savings-bank, and a working men's institute.—The town contains many important institutions for the relief of the sick poor. One of the chief of these is the County Hospital, a plain but noble building, situated in an airy spot near the Downs, and supported by subscriptions. It was originally founded in 1826, on a piece of land presented to it by T. R. Kemp, Esq. The Earl of Egremont and the Marquis of Bristol were the great benefactors of this hospital, which has been twice recently enlarged. The latter built at his sole expense the chapel. The Brighton and Sussex Dispensary, situated in Queen's-road, is a fine building of Kentish ragstone. The Lying-in Institution is in West-street, and the Girls' Orphan Asylum in the Eastern-road; as is also the Brighton Asylum for the Education of the Blind, erected in 1861, at the cost of £4,900. This last is a handsome Elizabethan building of red brick, faced with Bath stone. The almshouses are called the Percy and the Howell; the former, for six widows, has an endowment of £85 per annum, and Miss Wagner has lately built at her sole expense six more almshouses for the reception of aged spinsters in straitened circumstances. Other charitable institutions are the Provident Dispensary, Dorcas Society, an eye infirmary, two penitentiaries, and the Brighton Provident Society. This last has been in active operation for thirty-eight years, and includes a mendicity department, the object of which is to protect the charitable from imposition, and to relieve the deserving; of 117 begging letters sent for 'examination in 1862, only 19 were found deserving, and of the petitions 24 were sanctioned to the amount of £172 15*s.*, and 69 were rejected. The annual value of the parochial charities amounts to nearly £900.—There are two cemeteries, both situated to the N. of the town: one belongs to a private company, formed in 1851; and the other, called the parochial cemetery, was opened in 1859, in conformity with the Extramural Interment Act, on ground presented to the town by the Marquis of Bristol.—Remains of ancient camps exist at Whitehawk Hill, east of the town, and on Hollingsbury Hill, to the north; the latter is circular in form. An urn, containing a thousand Roman coins, was found near Brighton in 1750, and some fine specimens of Roman tesselated pavement at Lancing. The famous Devil's Dyke is 5 miles to the N. of the town.—A grant for holding a weekly market was first obtained in 1313, by John, the last Earl of Warren and Surrey, and a re-grant was obtained in 1773. Thursday is the market day for grain, which is disposed of by samples, at the King and Queen inn, in Marlborough-place; but a general market for meat, poultry, fish, and all other provisions, is held daily in the market-house. Fairs are held on Holy Thursday and the 4th September for pedlery only. The races are held annually in August, on a pleasant part of the Downs to the N.E. of the town, from which there are magnificent prospects over the ocean, the town, and the adjacent country. It was on this commanding position that the review took place, in 1862, when nearly 20,000 volunteer troops were manœuvred by Lord Clyde. Boat races take place occasionally.

BRIGHTON, NEW, a vil. in the tnshp. of Liscard, par. of Wallasey, hund. of Wirrall, in the co. palatine of Chester, 4 miles to the N.W. of Birkenhead. It is situated on the coast at the mouth of the river Mersey. The salubrity of its climate, and the excellence of its sands, have caused it recently to be much frequented in the summer months for sea-bathing. There is a sea-side institution for convalescent patients, a light-house, a life-boat station, three good hotels, and numerous lodging-houses; the building known as the College has been recently burnt down. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, of the average val. of £450 from pew-rents, in the gift of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a handsome stone structure in the early English style, with a tower and spire. It was erected in 1856, at the cost of £8,000. There are a chapel for Independents, reading-rooms, and a National school. The town is protected by a battery of 16 guns on the Black Rock. On the sands, opposite the battery, there is a fine spring of fresh water, covered by every tide; and the entrance to the river is defended by the Magazine Fort of eight guns.

BRIGHTSIDE BIERLOW, a tnshp. in the par. and borough of Sheffield, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.E. of Sheffield. Here is a station on the Sheffield and Rotherham branch of the Midland railway. The tnshp. is situated on the banks of the Don, and comprises the hmlts. of Brightside, Grimesthorpe, and some others. It is the seat of extensive iron-works, and many hands are employed in the cutlery manufacture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £130, in the patron. of the crown and the bishop alternately. There is an endowed free school at Grimesthorpe, with an income of about £15 a year. New Hall is one of the principal seats.

BRIGHT-WALTHAM, BRIGHT-WALTON, or BRICKLETON, a par. in the hund. of Faircross, in the co. of Berks, 3 miles to the W. of East Ilsley. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £700, in the patron. of J. R. Harman, Esq.

BRIGHTWELL, a par. in the hund. of Moreton, in the co. of Berks, 2 miles to the N.W. of Wallingford. It is situated on the S.W. bank of the Thames, not far from the Great Western railway, and is bounded on the S. by the small river Tadsey. A castle existed here at an early period, which is supposed to have been destroyed in the reign of Henry II., to whom it was surrendered. There are no remains of the building, and its site is uncertain. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the annual val. of £674, in the patron. of the Bishop of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Agatha, is a Norman structure, but the tower was rebuilt in 1797. The church was re-roofed in 1815, and again restored in 1858. It contains a monument to Dr. Thomas Godwyn, the archæologist, who once held the rectory, and died here in 1642. This living was also held by two other eminent men—Edward Bernard, Professor of Astronomy at Oxford, 1673—1684, and Thomas Wintle, the Hebraist. The latter was rector here for 40 years, being appointed in 1774 and dying in the parish in 1814. There is a chapel belonging to the Baptists in the village, but it has been recently closed; also a National school. The charitable endowments, including a small bequest for education, produce about £28 a year.

BRIGHTWELL, a par. in the hund. of Carlford, in the co. of Suffolk, 5 miles to the E. of Ipswich. It is watered by a small stream, a branch of the river Deben. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. with the cur. of Foxhall annexed, of £54, in the patron. of Sir J. K. Shaw, Bart. The church, partly rebuilt in the reign of Charles I., is dedicated to St. John the Baptist.

BRIGHTWELL BALDWIN, a par. in the hund. of Ewelme, in the co. of Oxford, 5 miles to the N.E. of Wallingford. Tetsworth is its post town. It lies in a pleasant country, on the eastern side of the Thames, and contains the tythg. of Cardwell. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £385, in the patron. of Lowndes Stone Norton, Esq. The church, an ancient structure in the early English style, with a Norman exterior staircase, is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. It contains several fine monumental brasses, the remains of a credence table, two piscinas, an ancient font, the tombs of the Stone and Carleton families, several very ancient stained windows, and some painted tiles. Several Roman urns and an ancient glass vessel were once discovered at Bushy Leas, near this village. The parochial charities are worth about £14 a year.

BLIGHTWELL-PRIOR and SALOME. See BURWELL, Oxfordshire.

BRIGHTWELL'S BARROW HUNDRED, one of the 27 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Gloucester, situated in the eastern parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hunds. of Slaughter and Bradley, on the E. by Oxfordshire, on the S. by Wiltshire and Berkshire, and on the W. by the hunds. of Rapsgate and Crowthorne. It contains the pars. of Aldsworth, Barnsley, St. Aldwin's Colne, East Leach Martin, East Leach Turville, Fairford, Hatherop, Kempsford, Lechlade, Quennington, and Southrop, with part of the par. of Bibury. The hund. extends over an area of about 36,850 acres.

BRIGHTWELL UPPER TOWN, a vil. in the par. of Brightwell Baldwin, and hund. of Ewelme, in the co. of Oxford, 3¼ miles from Watlington, and 5¼ N.W. of Wallingford.

BRIGMERSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Milston, hund. of Amesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles to the N. of Amesbury. It is seated on the banks of the river Avon. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Milston, in the dioc. of Salisbury.

BRIGNALL, a par. in the western div. of the wap. of Gilling, North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the S. of Barnard Castle. It is situated in a picturesque district on the small river Greta, a branch of the Tees, and contains the hmlt. of Greta Bridge. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ripon, of the val. of £300, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Roman remains are frequently found in the neighbourhood.

BRIGOWN, a par. in the bar. of Condons and Clangibbon, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 30 miles to the N.E. of Cork. It contains the market town of Mitchelstown. The soil is generally fertile, but the par. contains tracts of mountain and bog. Limestone is quarried in abundance and of excellent quality. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne, of the val. of £857, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, which stands in Mitchelstown, was erected at the expense of the Earl of Kingston. A round tower formerly existed here.

BRIGSLEY, a par. in the wap of Bradley Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles to the S. of Grimsby. It lies close to the Great Northern railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, worth £55, in the patron. of the Collegiate Church of Southwell. The church is dedicated to St. Helen.

BRIGSTEER, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Levens, and par. of Heversham, Kendal ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 3 miles to the S. of Kendal. The Stricklands have a seat here.

BRIGSTOCK, a par. in the hund. of Corby, in the co. of Northampton, 5 miles to the N.W. of Thrapston. It is situated on the banks of a small river which joins the Nen, near Thrapston, and was formerly a market town. A peculiar custom of inheritance exists in the manor of Brigstock: the younger son succeeding to the estates which the father had by descent, and the eldest to those which he obtained by purchase. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. with the cur. of Stanion annexed, of £236, in the patron. of the Duke of Cleveland. The church, which has some vestiges of Norman architecture, is dedicated to St. Andrew. Here is a free school, endowed with £20 a year, and there are other charities producing about £50 a year. Brigstock Park, in this parish, stands within the limits of Rockingham Forest, and was the ancient seat of the Montagues. Fairs are held on the 25th April, the 4th September, and the 22nd November.

BRILL, a par. and ancient town, in the hund. of Ashendon, in the co. of Buckingham, 7¾ miles to the N.W. of Thame, 12 N.E. of Oxford, and 13 W. of Aylesbury. It is situated on the border of Oxfordshire, in Bernwood Forest, and was the site of a palace or hunting-seat of the Saxon monarchs, the remains of which still exist. Edward the Confessor frequently resorted to this retreat, and Henry II. kept his court here in 1160, attended by Becket, at that time his chancellor. Two years later the king and court were here again. It is supposed that King John likewise occasionally resided here, as there are remains of a structure, called King John's Palace, subsequently converted into four cottages, and Henry III. held his court here in 1224. Shortly afterwards the manor of Brill came into the possession of Richard, Duke of Cornwall. In the following century Sir John Molins, who then held the manor, obtained the grant of an annual fair, which is still held. During the civil war in the reign of Charles I., Brill, which is strongly posted on the table land of a high hill, formerly called Brinkely, was garrisoned for the king, and an attack by the parliamentary forces under Hampden was successfully resisted. The town was evacuated by the royalists in 1643. The parish contains much fine pasture land, and some quarries of good building-stone. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the lace manufacture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. with that of Boarstall* annexed, of £101, in the patron. of Mrs. E. S. Ricketts. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is partly in the early English style, and was enlarged in 1837. There are chapels belonging to the Independents and Wesleyans, both here and in the village of Little London, and an endowed free school, founded by John Pym in 1637. There are National schools for boys and girls, with a daily attendance of 120 children. The parish has the benefit of several valuable charitable endowments, the principal of which is that called the Poor Folks' Charity, which has a revenue of £120 per annum. The annual value of the other charities is about £135, including the income of the school. Near the village is Muswell Hill, on which are remains of an encampment, and where a hermitage once stood. There is a fine view from the hill. The manor belongs to Mrs. Ricketts, the niece of the late Sir John Aubrey, one of the Aubreys of Dorton, descendants of Nigel, the Saxon huntsman, to whom it was given by the Confessor. At a short distance from the town is a spa, the waters of which are chalybeate, and an hotel has recently been erected near it for the accommodation of visitors.

BRILLEY, a par. in the hund. of Huntington, in the co. of Hereford, 5 miles to the N. of Hay. It is situated on the confines of Wales, on a branch of the river Wye. The living is a vic.* united with that of Kington, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charitable endowments, consisting chiefly of the revenue of a free school, founded by Morris, produce £56 a year.

BRIMFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Wolphy, in the co. of Hereford, 5 miles to the S. of Ludlow, and half a mile S.W. of Wofferton railway station. It lies on the S. side of the river Teme, near the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway, and contains the hmlt. of Wyson. The Kington and Leominster canal is carried across the Teme near this village. Part of the land is laid out in hop-grounds, and there is a tract of common. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £98, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a plain edifice with a tower, which was rebuilt in 1834. The register is ancient. There is a small Dissenting chapel, and a National school in course of erection. The charities amount to 5*s.* yearly. The celebrated Nunupton Oak, measuring 36 feet in circumference, formerly stood in this parish, but it has lately fallen.

BRIMHAM, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Hartwith, and par. of Kirkby Malzeard, in the wap. of Claro, West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.W. of Ripley. The place is chiefly noted for a remarkable group, or assemblage of groups, of shattered rocks, called Brimham Crags, which are scattered over a tract of 40 acres, They are blocks of gritstone. Among them are two called the Cannons, from being perforated, several rocking-stones of immense weight, yet moved by a touch, and others imagined to resemble idols and altars. It is conjectured that the spot may have been the scene of early religious rites. There are many tumuli in the neighbourhood.

BRIMINGTON, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Scarsdale, in the co. of Derby, 2 miles to the N.E. of Chesterfield. It was formerly a chplry. belonging to Chesterfield, but now forms a par. of itself. The village is modern and well built, and is situated near the Midland railway, which has a station at Chesterfield, and is about 1 mile distant from the Chesterfield canal. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £102, in the patron. of the vicar. The church, which was built in 1808, became too small for the population, and was taken down and rebuilt, all but the tower, in 1847. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels here. The parochial charities produce £6 a year. There is a National school. The chief seat is Brimington Hall.

BRIMPSFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Rapsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 8 miles to the S.E. of Gloucester. It is situated at the head of the Stroud Water, and contains the hmlt. of Caudle Green, and part of the vil. of Birdlip. A castle formerly existed here, a seat of the Giffard family, but no traces of it remain. This par. was also the site of an alien priory, which was suppressed in the reign of Henry V. St. George's Chapel, Windsor, was endowed with its possessions by Edward IV. Nothing is known of the origin of the priory, and no remains of the buildings are left. The ancient Ermine Street passed to the N. of Brimpsfield. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the val. with that of Cranham consolidated, of £410, in the patron. of W. Goodrich, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There are some charities of small value.

BRIMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Faircross, in the co. of Berks, 5 miles to the E. of Newbury. It is situated in a pleasant district on the border of Hampshire, on the banks of the river Kennet, and is bounded on the S. by the Emborne, a branch of the Kennet. The Hungerford branch of the Great Western railway passes near the village. A preceptory of the Knights Templars is said to have existed here in the 13th century. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £351, in the patron. of the Rev. G. B. Caffin, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The charitable endowments of the parish produce £24 per annum. Some remains of another ancient church are found here.

BRIMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Stone, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles to the W. of Yeovil. Alvington and Houndstone are hmlts. of this par. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the val. of £170, in the patron. of Mrs. Morris. The church, which is dedicated to St. Andrew, contains monuments of Sir John Sydenham, Bart., who died in 1626, and of other members of the same family, to whom the manor once belonged. The principal mansion is Brimpton House, a seat of the Earl of Westmoreland.

BRIMSCOMBE, or BRIMSCOMBE PORT, a chplry. in the par. of Minchinhampton, hund. of Longtree, in the co. of Gloucester, 2 miles to the N.E. of Minchinhampton. It is a station on the Gloucester and Cheltenham branch of the Great Western railway. The Thames and Severn canal passes by this place. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the cloth manufacture. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Minchinhampton, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol.

BRIMSLADE, an ext. par. district, in the hund. of Kinwardstone, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles to the S. of Marlborough. It is united with the district of South Savernake.

BRIMSTAGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bromborrow, hund. of Wirrall, in the co. palatine of Chester, 4 miles to the N.E. of Great Neston.

BRIMSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Hays Castle, hund. of Dewisland, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 6 miles to the N. of Haverfordwest.

BRIMSTREE HUNDRED, one of the 14 hunds. or subdivisions of Shropshire, situated in the S. parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. and E. by Staffordshire, on the S. by the hund. of Stottesden, and on the W. by the hund. of North Bradford and the borough of Wenlock. It consists of the three divs. of Bridgnorth, Halesowen, and Shiffnal: the first containing the pars. of Claverley, Worfield, and part of Bobbington; the second containing part. of the par. of Halesowen; and the third the pars. of Albrighton, Badger, Beckbury, Boningale, Donington, Kemberton, Ryton, Shiffnal, Stockton, Sutton Maddock, and Tong, with the ext. par. district of Boscobel. The hund. comprises an area of about 63,300 acres.

BRINCAMISIR, a tnshp. in the par. of Berriew, hund. of Newtown, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 3 miles from Montgomery.

BRINCHIL, or BRYNUCHEL, a tnshp. in the par. of Cemmes, hund. of Machynlleth, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 7 miles to the N.E. of Machynlleth.

BRINCLIFFE EDGE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ecclesshall Bierlow, in the par. and borough of Sheffield, West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the S.W. of Sheffield.

BRIND, a hmlt. in the par. of Wressel, wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the N. of Howden. It is situated close to the Hull, Selby, and Milford Junction railway.

BRINDLE, a par. in the hund. of Leyland, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles to the N. of Chorley. Muslin weaving is carried on by some of the inhabitants. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, of the val. of £515, in the patron. of the Duke of Devonshire. The church is dedicated to St. James. There is an endowed free school with an income of about £17 a year, the produce of several bequests. There are some other charities worth about £14 a year. Brindle Lodge is the principal mansion.

BRINDLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Acton, hund. of Nantwich, in the co. palatine of Chester, 4 miles to the W. of Nantwich.

BRINDLEYS, an ext. par. lib. in the wap. of Harthill, East Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N. of Howden.

BRINGHURST, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, in the co. of Leicester, 2 miles to the W. of Rockingham. It is situated on the border of Northamptonshire, on the N. bank of the river Welland, and contains the chplry. of Great Easton and the tnshp. of Drayton. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. with the perpet. cur. of Great Easton annexed, of £241, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas.

BRINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Leightonstone, in the co. of Huntingdon, 5 miles to the N. of Kimbolton. It lies on the confines of Northamptonshire. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. with the curs. of Bythorn and Old Weston annexed, of £492, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Clare Hall, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

BRINGTON, or BRINTON, popularly pronounced "Briton," a par. in the hund. of Nobottle Grove, in the co. of Northampton, 6 miles to the N.W. of Northampton. It contains the hmlts. of Little Brington and Nobottle (or Newbottle), and the ext. par. lib. of Althorp Park. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £434, in the patron. of Earl Spencer. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains a remarkably complete set of 15th century open benches, though the carved screen has disappeared. In the interior is a brass of a priest, and a series of fine monuments to the Spencer family from the reign of Henry VIII.; also the vault of the earls of Sunderland. It is a curious circumstance that there are no monuments to the earls of Sunderland, though all four of them lie buried in this vault, including the famous minister of James II. and William III., and his scarcely less celebrated son, minister to Queen Anne and George I. Of the first earl, we have good reason to believe that only the heart was brought back from the field of Newbury; but the vault contains the remains of the first countess, celebrated by Waller under the name of "Sacharissa." This church is also interesting as the burial-place of the last English ancestor of George Washington, whose family armorial bearings, from which it is believed that the stripes and stars of the American banner were taken, are carved upon the ledger tombstone. The Baptists have a chapel at Little Brington. The parish has the benefit of a valuable charity called the "poor's estate," which produces about £225 per annum. There are some other small endowments. The rect. of Brington was once held by Archbishop Chicheley.—Althorp Park is the seat of Earl Spencer, to whom it gives the title of viscount. The mansion, which was erected in 1688, stands on low ground, and is approached by fine avenues. It is celebrated for its large and valuable library, which occupies five apartments extending 300 feet in length, and for a good collection of pictures and family portraits. Among the pictures are a Raphael's Holy Family, and a portion of his cartoon for the Murder of the Innocents, and some portraits by Holbein, besides an antique encaustic painting.

BRINHYFEDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbadarnfawr, hunds. of Geneur-Glynn and Upper Iar, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 8 miles to the W. of Rhayader.

BRININGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Holt, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles to the S.W. of Holt. It is situated in a pleasant undulating country. On an elevated spot stands Belle Vue, a circular tower, commanding an extensive view over the valley of the Glaven, with its villages and picturesque old churches, the town of Holt on a hill beyond, and the wooded hills along the coast. The sea is visible in clear weather. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, in the gift of the Rev. S. Brereton. The church is dedicated to St. Maurice.

BRINKBURN, a par. partly in the eastern div. of the ward of Coquetdale, and partly in the western div. of the ward of Morpeth, in the co. of Northumberland, 4 miles to the S.E. of Rothbury. It is situated in a picturesque district on the N. bank of the Coquet, and comprises the tnshps. of Brinkburn High Ward, Low Ward, and South Side. It is the site of a Dominican priory, founded in the reign of Henry I. by William de Bertram, which flourished till the Dissolution, and had a revenue of £77. It was given to the Fenwicks by Edward VI. The ruins of the building stand in a romantic spot close to the river, which here takes a winding course, at the foot of a hill. They consist of the walls of the church, which was cruciform, the tower, and several arches and columns. The north and south entrances exhibit the Norman style. Valuable beds of limestone and coal exist in this parish. A branch of Watling Street crossed the Coquet near this place, and the foundations of the bridge are still traceable. There are also vestiges of a Roman station on the hill. Some antiquaries suppose that this place was the scene of the defeat of the Danes by Athelstane in 938. The principal seat is Brinkburn Abbey, the residence of Major H. Cadogan.

BRINKHILL, a par. in the hund. of Hill, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 6 miles to the N. of Spilsby. It is situated near the Great Northern railway. Veins of marcasite occur in a bed of blue clay here. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £137, in the patron. of R. Cracroft, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Philip. In the churchyard are remains of an old cross. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village. The parochial charities produce £8 a year.

BRINKLEY, a par. in the hund. of Radfield, in the co. of Cambridge, 6 miles to the S. of Newmarket, and 3 S.E. of the Sixmile-Bottom station on the Cambridge and Newmarket railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £241, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church is an old stone building, with a tower and six bells, dedicated to St. Mary. The children of the parish participate in the benefit of the free school at Histon, founded and endowed in 1729 by Mrs. March. There is also a National school. Brinkley Hall is an old mansion, once the seat of the Stotevilles, and subsequently a farmhouse.

BRINKLOW, a par. and large vil. in the Kirby div. of the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 5 miles to the N.W. of Rugby, and 7 E. of Coventry. It is situated near the Trent Valley line of the London and North-Western railway, which has a station at Stretton, about three-quarters of a mile from the village. It was the site of a castle, the seat of the Mowbrays, Stutevilles, and Segraves, who held the manor, but no traces of the castle now remain. The privilege of a weekly market was granted by king John. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, of the val. of £228, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure with a square tower. There are chapels belonging to the Independents and Primitive Methodists; also a National school, built in 1859. The charitable endowments, including a bequest by William Fairfax for education, amount to £48 per annum. Traces of an ancient camp are still found near the Fosse Way, which crosses the parish; and there is a high mound, supposed to be artificial. This village was long the residence of the family of Rous, the antiquary.

BRINKSWAY. a hmlt. in the borough of Stockport, hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. palatine of Chester, not far from Stockport.

BRINKWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Malmesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 6 miles to the S.E. of Malmesbury, and 5 N.W. from Wootton Basset railway station. It is situated on a branch of the river Avon, and contains the hmlt. of Grittenham. This village is one of the three polling-places for the borough of Cricklade, which now comprises the hund. of Malmesbury and four others. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the annual val. of £808, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Pembroke College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure in the early English style, with square tower. The Independents have a chapel here. The charitable endowments, including a small bequest for a school, amount to £26 per annum. The rect. of Brinkworth was held in 1627 by Dr. Tobias Crisp, a noted Antinomian writer. There are two manors in this parish; the Earl of Suffolk is lord of the manor of Brinkworth, and Lord Holland of that of Grittenham.

BRINNINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. and borough of Stockport, hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. palatine of Chester, 2 miles to the N.E. of Stockport. It is situated on the confines of Lancashire, on the E. bank of the Mersey, near the Stockbridge and Staleybridge branch railway.

BRINNY, a par. in the bars. of East Carbery, Kinalea, and Kinalmeaky, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N. of Bandon. It is a station on the Cork and Bandon railway. The parish lies in a cultivated district on the Brinny rivulet, a feeder of the river Bandon, and contains some stone-quarries. The living is a rect., with which that of Knockavilly is united, in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne, of the val. of £1,053, in the patron. of the bishop. The principal seats are Brinny House and Upton.

BRINSLEY, or BRUNSLEY, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Greasley, wap. of Broxtow, in the co. of Nottingham, 8 miles to the S.W. of Mansfield. It is seated on the banks of the river Erewash. The inhabitants are employed in the coal-mines and in the stocking manufacture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the gift of the Duke of Newcastle. The church is just completed.

BRINSOP, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, in the co. of Hereford, 5 miles to the W. of Hereford. It is on the west side of Creden Hill, and 3 miles from the river Wye. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. of £268, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. George, is a small stone edifice with a turret. It is supposed to have been built in the reign of King Stephen. In the interior are some ancient sculptures and two marble monuments to the memory of the Dansey family, who formerly resided at Brinsop Court. The vicarage is a handsome Elizabethan building, of modern erection. The parochial charities amount to about £15 per annum. The principal seat is Brinsop Court, where is a tree planted by the poet Wordsworth.

BRINSWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Rotherham, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the S.W. of Rotherham. It is crossed by the Midland railway, and contains the vil. of Ickles. Haworth is the principal mansion.

BRINTON, a par. in the hund. of Holt, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the W. of Holt, and 10 N.E. from Fakenham railway station. The living is a rect. united with that of Thornage, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and is in the later English style, with a square tower. The register dates from 1547. The parochial charities amount to £3 a year. The parish contains 625 acres, principally belonging to John Brereton, Esq., who has a handsome mansion here. Lord Hastings is lord of the manor.

BRISCOE, or BIRKSCEUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Cuthbert, Carlisle, in the ward and co. of Cumberland, 3 miles to the S. of Carlisle. It is situated on the river Petterill, and is crossed by the Lancaster and Carlisle railway, which has a station at Wreay. The first wheat crop in Cumberland was produced in this tnshp., at the beginning of the 18th century. Here are some print-works. Briscoe is included in the manor of Botchard Gate, but a small sum is paid as quit-rent to Sir Walter Brisco, of Crofton Hall, whose ancestors were its lords. The old mansion of Newbiggin was anciently the occasional abode of the priors of Carlisle, who built here a tower of defence against the Scots, and the walls of the mansion are 9 feet thick, with vaulted ceilings.

BRISCOE, a hmlt. in the par. of Lythe, and lib. of Langbaurgh, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the N.W. of Whitby. It is seated on the sea-coast.

BRISCOE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Cotherston, par. of Romaldkirk, and wap. of West Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.W. of Barnard Castle.

BRISKEDWIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandilotalyboot, hund. of Swansea, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 4 miles to the N. of Castell-Llwchwr. It is seated on the banks of the river Llwchwr.

BRISKEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfynydd, hund. of Cathinog, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 5 miles to the N.W. of Llandilofawr.

BRISLEY, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, in the co. of Norfolk, 6 miles to the N. of East Dereham. It is not far from the Dereham, Fakenham, and Wells branch railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. with the vic. of Gately annexed to it, of £486, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Christ's College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. The parochial charities consist of the revenue of the town lands.

BRISLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Keynsham, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the S.E. of Bristol. It is situated on the border of Gloucestershire, on the south bank of the river Avon, and is intersected by the Great Western railway. No remains exist of an ancient chapel dedicated to St. Anne, which was founded here at an early period. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the val. of £170, in the patron. of E. W. L. Popham, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Luke. The charitable endowments of the parish are worth about £12 a year. There are several seats of the gentry in the neighbourhood. Brislington House is a lunatic asylum, originally founded and conducted by Dr. Fox on an admirable system.

BRISTOL, a city, seaport, municipal and parliamentary borough, forming a co. of itself, on the borders of Gloucestershire, and Somersetshire, 12 miles to the N.W. of Bath, 38 to the S.W. of Gloucester, and 118¼ to the W. of London. It is situated on the rivers Avon and Frome, 8 miles above the junction of those rivers with that great arm of the Atlantic, the Bristol Channel. It has canal communication with the Severn and the Thames, and thus with all England; it is also the terminus of the Great Western railway, which connects it, through Bath and Reading, with the metropolis. This railway was formed between the years 1834 and 1838, according to the plans of Isambard Kingdom Brunel, and was the first of the broad gauge lines constructed in this country. Numerous branch lines have subsequently been added, connecting it with all the principal towns in the West. At Box, about 20 miles from Bristol, the rail is carried through a tunnel 30 feet wide and above 2 miles long. The cost of the line was above £56,730 per mile. A section of the Midland railway connects Bristol, through Gloucester, with Birmingham, the Midland counties, and the north; and another line connects it with Exeter and the south-western districts. From Yatton, a station on the latter line, a short branch runs to Clevedon, a pleasant watering-place on the coast of the Bristol Channel.—A town has existed on or near the site of Bristol from a remote antiquity. It was called by the ancient Britons Caer Brito, or Caer Oder, the latter signifying "town of the chasm," and denoting its position by the "rifted rock" through which the river here takes its course. Among the various conjectures hazarded as to the origin of the present name of the city, the balance of probability seems to incline in favour of that which deduces it from the Saxon compound, Brice-stow; a name having the recommendation, for the imagination, of a kindred meaning with the old British name, and pointing to the same natural fact in the situation of the town.—After the departure of the Romans, who had surrounded the town with walls, it was again under the dominion of the native princes, and formed part of the territory of the Cornish Britons. It is enumerated by Gildas and Nennius in their lists of fortified and eminent cities, and was taken in 584 by Crida, king of the West Saxons. It was visited by Jordan, one of the monks accompanying Augustin from Rome, and it is conjectured by some that the famous conference between the Romish missionary and the British bishops, in 603, took place here. About the period of the Norman Conquest the exportation of English slaves to Ireland was carried on to a serious extent through this port, but, at the instance of some eminent churchmen, the traffic was prohibited by a decree of the Conqueror. At the time of the Domesday Survey the town, then called Bristow, was a royal burgh, and had for its governor Hardinge, a merchant, said to be of Danish origin, whose son, Robert Fitzhardinge, first lord of Berkeley, held the government after him. In the reign of William Rufus the fortifications were strengthened, and troops were collected here by Bishop Godfrey, who supported the cause of Robert, the king's elder brother. About 1140 a monastery of the Augustine order was founded by Robert Fitzhardinge, which was made an abbey by Henry II., and flourished till the Dissolution, when its revenue amounted to £767. The abbey church is now the cathedral. Fitzhardinge was also the founder of the priory of St. James, the church of which was afterwards made parochial. A nunnery was founded by Eva his widow. In the reign of Stephen, Bristol was taken and held for Maud, by her brother, the Earl of Gloucester, and the castle was rebuilt, enlarged, and made one of the most formidable in the country. The walls are said to have been 25 feet in thickness, and to have enclosed an area of 6 acres. Stephen himself was for a short time a prisoner here, as was also Eleanor, the beautiful princess of Brittany. During the reign of Henry II. the trade of the port was considerable with Ireland, Norway, and other parts of Europe. In 1175 the king took possession of the castle, having, by a charter granted ten years previously, increased the commercial privileges of the town. These were still further extended by a subsequent charter granted by the same king. The town was visited by King John in 1209, and by Henry III. early in his reign. It was at this period that the cutting of a new channel for the river, and the construction of a new quay on an extensive scale, adapted to the immense and growing trade, was undertaken and accomplished in 1239. This was a remarkable engineering work for that time, as the channel was made 18 feet deep and 120 feet wide. In 1283 Edward I. visited Bristol, and again two years later, when he held a parliament there. It was the seat of a rebellion in the following reign, and held out for four years against the royal authority and forces. The manufactures of soap, cloth, and glass had been established here in the first half of the 13th century; and in 1353 Edward III. made Bristol one of the staple towns for wool, which greatly augmented its commerce. The same monarch, twenty years later, constituted the city a county in itself, and declared it free from all feudal obligations. Bristol contributed 22 vessels and 608 seamen, being as many as London, to the fleet sent to the siege of Calais, undertaken immediately after the victory at Crecy. Many weavers came over from Flanders and settled in the town during this reign, which greatly contributed to its prosperity, and made it a principal staple of the woollen manufacture. The town was besieged and taken in 1399 by Henry, Duke of Lancaster, who ascended the throne as Henry IV. the same year. In 1446 it was visited by Henry VI., and in 1459 by his brave queen Margaret of Anjou. Edward IV. was here in 1461 the year of his accession, and after some difficult negociations with the citizens, in which William Canynges or Canynges, one of the chief merchants, distinguished himself, confirmed them in the enjoyment of their privileges. Henry VII. visited Bristol in 1487, and availed himself of the pretext that the ladies dressed in too costly a style, for imposing a fine on such of the citizens as were worth £20. It was in this reign that Sebastian Cabot, a native of the town, sailed hence on his voyages of discovery to the shores of Labrador and the Cod Banks of Newfoundland, which contribute so immensely to the wealth of Bristol. On the dissolution of the monasteries by Henry VIII., Bristol, till then included in the dioc. of Salisbury, was made the seat of a bishopric, and the conventual church of St. Augustine was given for a cathedral. In 1574 the town was visited by Queen Elizabeth; and, on the approach of the Spanish Armada in 1588, four ships were despatched hence to join the fleet sent to oppose it. In the reign of Charles I. the inhabitants, especially concerned in the controversy about ship-money, embraced the cause of the parliament, and the town received a garrison of the popular forces. It was besieged in 1643 by Prince Rupert, and in three days, through the treachery of the governor, Nathaniel Fiennes, was surrendered. The royalists held it for two years, but in 1645 it was assaulted and retaken by Fairfax, the castle was then dismantled, and the fortifications destroyed by order of the parliament. In 1663 Charles II. visited the town. In 1753 great riots originated in the high price of bread; and in 1792 were others for abolishing the tolls collected at Bristol-bridge. At the time of the discussions in parliament on the Reform Bill, in 1831, very serious disturbances broke out here on occasion of Sir Charles Wetherell, then recorder of the city, visiting it. He was an opponent of reform, and had given his vote against the bill. A large number of the public buildings were attacked and burnt by the mob, besides many private houses, and the riot was only terminated by the intervention of the military. The destruction of property, estimated at £200,000, was so great, that it entailed upon the city the payment of a heavy annual rate towards compensation to the sufferers.—Bristol is situated in a hilly and picturesque district, at the southern extremity of the fertile vale lying between the Cotswold hills and the river Severn. The town, which spreads over an area nearly 10 miles in circuit, extends along the banks of the Avon and the Frome, which here unite. The surface is very irregular, so that within the limits of the town there are, as in ancient Rome, seven hills. The valley in which the town stands is surrounded and sheltered by lofty hills, commanding fine views of the rich and beautiful scenery around. Beneath the site of the city is a coal-field, extending between 20 and 30 miles in a direction from N. to S., and the principal rocks in the district are limestone and sandstone. Quartz, oolite, amygdaloid, and jasper are also found. Of the neighbouring heights the principal are Clifton, Kingsdown, Brandon Hill, and St. Michael's Hill, which rise about 250 feet above the level of the sea. There are several bridges across the Avon, the principal of which is the handsome stone structure of three arches connecting Redcliff, on the Somersetshire side, with the middle of the city. It was completed in 1768, and occupies the site of the ancient bridge erected in the 13th century, when Redcliff was first united to Bristol. In 1861 application was made to parliament for power to purchase the elegant suspension bridge which formerly crossed the Thames at Hungerford-market, and it was removed to Clifton in 1862. Two other iron bridges, each of one arch, span the Avon, and lead to the Bath and Exeter roads.—The old town covered a small space on a hill, which is now completely enclosed by streets and squares of modern erection. Many ancient houses are found in Temple-street, Peter-street, and Mary-le-Port, some of which are timbered structures, with projecting upper stories. The ground in some parts of the city rises very steeply, and the old streets and buildings resemble those of London previous to the great fire of 1666. But time is fast changing the aspect of the town. The modern streets are generally spacious, regular, and well paved, and contain many good and handsome houses, besides well-stocked shops and stores. The principal streets within the city are High-street, Broad-street, Clare-street, Corn-street, and Bridge-street. The extensive suburbs of Clifton and Redcliff display many magnificent squares, noble crescents, terraces, and parks, inhabited by the gentry, merchants, and manufacturers of Bristol. Bristol contains, besides the cathedral and numerous old churches, some of which are of remarkable interest, a great number of important public buildings. The guildhall, situated in Broad-street, is a noble structure, in the Tudor style of architecture, with wings and a central tower. It was erected in 1846 on the site of the old guildhall, and contains an assize court, court of requests, court of bankruptcy, and other apartments. The council house, built in 1824 on the site of St. Ewen's Church, is situated at the corner of Corn-street, and is adorned with a statue of Justice, by Baily, R.A., who was a native of Bristol. The exchange, a spacious square edifice, with an entrance of the Corinthian order, was built in 1781, at the cost of £50,000, defrayed by the Chamber of Bristol. The front, which is 110 feet in length, is elaborately carved with ideal figures, representing Great Britain receiving the products and manufactures of the four quarters of the globe. The whole building is of stone, and the piazza is now appropriated to the corn market. The commercial rooms, in Corn-street, were erected in 1811, at the cost of £17,000. The building is of stone, with an Ionic portico, and is provided with a telegraph, newspapers, and every appliance for the convenience of the merchants who meet here to transact business. The Branch Bank of England, situated in Broad-street, is a fine building, of the Doric order of architecture, and was opened for business in November, 1849. The post-office is situated in Corn-street, and is a plain stone structure. In the same street are the Bristol banks, the handsomest in architectural design being the West of England and South Wales District Bank, erected in 1857, from the designs of Messrs. Gingell and Lysaght: it is Venetian-Italian with a Grecian façade, richly sculptured with figures emblematical of the English towns. The custom-house, rebuilt after the burning of the old one during the riots of 1831, is situated in Queen's-square, close to the quay. The Victoria Rooms, in the Grecian style of architecture, with a richly sculptured portico of Corinthian columns, are situated in the Queen's-road, Clifton, and contain a fine hall 117 feet in length, and 55 feet in breadth, in which concerts and public meetings are held. The Theatre Royal is situated in King-street, and was commended by Garrick as the most complete for its dimensions of any provincial house. There were formerly many trading companies in the city, which had halls belonging to them. The only company still existing is that of the merchants, founded and incorporated in the reign of Edward VI. Their hall is in King-street. There are a large and handsome railway station, in the Tudor style, assembly-rooms, the county gaol, bridewell, and house of correction; also a police station, a savings-bank, gas and water works. These last were formed in 1847, under an Act of Parliament, obtained in the preceding year, empowering the company to convey the water from springs in the parish of Chewton Mendip, in Somersetshire, to the stone reservoirs at Harptree and Barrow Gurney, a distance of 15 miles. From here the water is conveyed in pipes, crossing the river Avon, near Bedminster, through a tubular arch, and distributed to 16,000 houses in the city of Bristol and suburbs.—The commercial importance of Bristol dates from a very early period. Its port had become of note at the time of the Norman Conquest, and from that time its trade grew rapidly, fostered both by numerous royal charters and by the enterprising spirit of the townsmen and merchants. In the early part of the 13th century the manufactures of soap, cloth, and glass were established at Redcliff, and were soon carried on on so large a scale as to supply the whole country with those articles for several centuries. Before the middle of the 15th century the port had 66 ships and about the same number of boats belonging to it, and carried on trade, not only with other coast towns of England and Wales, but also with Ireland, France, and Russia. One of the merchants of that time, William Canynges, already referred to, had 800 seamen and 100 artisans in his employ. A monument to this patriotic merchant, whose ships visited Iceland and Finmark, may still be seen in the church of St. Mary Redcliff; he was mayor of Bristol, and rivalled in wealth the celebrated William Compyes, who owned ten ships of his own, one of which was of 900 tons burthen. The number of sailing vessels now belonging to the port is about 350, of which 200 are above 50 tons burthen; and the number of steamers about 30. The foreign and colonial trade is of considerable extent, but the coasting trade is still more extensive. The former is chiefly with the West Indies, America, Australia, the Baltic, and West Africa. The traffic with Ireland is the most important part of the coastwise trade, though a brisk business is done with South Wales, North Somerset, and Devonshire. Among the chief articles of import are sugar, rum, wine, brandy, coffee, tobacco, timber, tar, hemp, palm-oil, hides, tallow, Irish linens, and provisions, &c.; and among the principal exports are iron, tin, and the various products of the local factories and works. The harbour was greatly improved between 1803 and 1809, by cutting a new channel for the Avon, converting the old one into a great floating dock, nearly 3 miles long, forming several graving docks, and enlarging the quay, which has now a length of 2,000 yards, extending along the banks of the Avon and the Frome. The works also included the construction of two capacious basins, the Cumberland and the Bathurst, for the accommodation of vessels. The floating dock covers a space of 82 acres, and the entire works cost above £600,000. After a gradual decline in the trade of the port for some years, in consequence of the high rate of the port dues in comparison with those of London, Liverpool, and other places, an Act of Parliament was procured in 1848 for transferring the management of the docks from the company to the corporation. A large reduction was then made in the port charges, better arrangements were made for the accommodation of the vessels resorting to the harbour, and a considerable increase of trade has naturally followed, by which the amount of the customs has risen from 30 to 40 per cent.; and the tonnage receipts in 1861 increased by 12 per cent. In 1861, the aggregate tonnage entering the Bristol Docks was—foreign, 260,861 tons; coastwise, 529,102 tons. The number of vessels entered inwards from foreign parts with cargoes, was—British, 43, of 9,970 tons; foreign, 27, of 9,599 tons. Vessels cleared outwards with cargoes — British, 15, of 3,067 tons; foreign, 6, of 2,733 tons. These returns exhibit a most flourishing state of affairs, and indicate the continued progress of Bristol since the triumph of the free port movement. Ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent, employing about 400 ship carpenters; and in its ship-yards were cradled the "Great Western" and "Great Britain" steamships, at costs respectively of £60,000 and £120,000.—The manufactures of Bristol are numerous. Connected with the shipping trade are those of rope-walks, anchors, chain-cables, sails, blocks, &c. Of the general manufactures the most important are those of glass, iron, brass, engines and machinery, leather, floorcloth, and stoneware. There are large sugar-refineries, tanneries, breweries, malt-houses, chemical works, saw-mills, alum and Epsom salt works, distilleries, one large chocolate and cocoa manufactory, copper and zinc works, and manufactories of shot, pins, tobacco-pipes, soap, brushes, &c. A large number of hands are employed in the Great Western Cotton Works, established about 1840, and in the manufactures of woollen, worsted, paper, silk, flax, linen, &c. Coal is abundant in the neighbourhood, and a large supply is obtained from the Parkfield colliery, and also from Coal-pit Heath, in Gloucestershire.—Bristol was first incorporated by a charter of Henry III., which was confirmed and extended by several succeeding monarchs, and under which the government was vested in a mayor, high steward, recorder, 12 aldermen, 28 councillors, besides subordinate officers. Under the Act passed in 1835, the borough is divided into 10 wards, and is governed by a mayor, 16 aldermen, and 48 councillors, assisted by 24 magistrates, a sheriff, and superintendent of police. The style of the corporation is "the mayor, burgesses, and commonalty of the city of Bristol," and its revenue is about £48,500. The elective franchise was first conferred on the town by Edward I., since whose reign it has regularly returned two members to parliament. The mayor is the returning officer. The limits of the parliamentary borough were extended under the Reform Act, and are co-extensive with those of the municipal borough: comprising, besides the 18 city parishes (which cover an area of 1,840 acres), those of the contiguous parishes of St. James, St. Paul, SS. Philip and Jacob in Clifton, besides Bedminster (a small part excepted), and part of Westbury. This district, which extends over 4,674 acres, comprises, according to the census of 1861, 23,578 houses, inhabited by a population of 154,093, against 137,328 in 1851, showing an increase of no less than 17,765 in the decennial period. Bristol is the seat of a Poor-law Union, co-extensive with the city, but not including the whole borough; part of the latter being within the Bedminster Union. It is also the head of Excise and County Court districts, and the seat of a Bankruptcy Court, the jurisdiction of which extends over the English counties of Gloucester and Monmouth, with parts of Wilts and Somersetshire, and the Welsh counties of Brecon, Cardigan, Carmarthen, Glamorgan, Pembroke, and Radnor. Quarter and petty sessions are held, and a Court of Requests sits weekly. A board of health is entrusted with the sanitary regulation of the city.—Bristol is, jointly with Gloucester, the head of a dioc., the sees having been united in 1836 by Act of Parliament, at the recommendation of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The jurisdiction of the dioc. of Bristol, as constituted by Henry VIII., extended over the city, a great part of Dorsetshire, and a few pars. in Gloucestershire; that of the united dioc. extends besides over the whole of Gloucestershire and parts of Wiltshire and Somersetshire. By an Order of Council, made 5th Oct., 1836, the co. and archdeac. of Dorset were transferred from the dioc. of Bristol to that of Salisbury. The cathedral church of Bristol is situated at College-green. It is dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and was originally the church of the abbey of St. Augustine. It is a venerable cruciform structure, chiefly in the early English style, with a lofty central embattled tower. The nave was destroyed during the Civil War. The length of the remaining portion of the building is nearly 200 feet, and its breadth through the transepts 128 feet. The interior has been recently restored, and the carvings and fittings entirely renovated; in order to permit the great oriel window to be seen to better advantage, it was found requisite to remove the screen; considerable improvement has also been effected by lowering the platform on which the communion table formerly stood, and substituting chairs for the antique benches. The communion table is of oak and walnut, inlaid with ebony. The bishop's throne has also been altered, and now covers the spot where Bishop Butler lies buried; this necessitated the removal of his monument, but the inscription written by the poet Southey, has been transferred to a brass adjoining the throne. There are some fine stained windows, and a great number of highly interesting monuments. Among the more ancient are one to Robert Fitzhardinge, first lord of Berkeley, and founder of the abbey; and several to abbots, bishops, and crusaders. Among those of modern date are one by Bacon to Mrs. Draper, the "Eliza" celebrated by Sterne; one to Lady Hesketh, the friend of Cowper; a monument to Southey by Baily; and a fine figure of Faith by Chantrey. At the western end of the cathedral is a rich Gothic gateway, considered one of the finest in England, bearing this inscription:—"Rex Henricus secundus, et Dominus Robertus filius Hardingi, filii regis Daciæ, hujus Monasterii primi fundatores extiterunt." The chapter-house, the Lady-chapel, and parts of the cloisters are in good preservation, but the bishop's palace was burnt by the rioters in 1831. The city comprises 18 parishes, with parts of several others, the livings being all in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. Many of the churches are ancient, and some of them highly interesting examples of church architecture. The number of churches and chapels belonging to the Church is about forty-two, and the number of livings twenty-seven. The living of All Saints is a vic., val. £160, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is very old, in the early English style, with a modern tower and steeple. St. Augustine's is a vic., worth £240, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, originally erected by the abbots, was rebuilt about the year 1480. Christ Church is a rect., of the val. with St. Ewen's united to it, of £290, in the gift of the Rev. James Robertson, incumbent. The church, a modern edifice in the Grecian style, stands on the site of an ancient one built at the beginning of the 11th century, and has a fine peal of 10 bells. St. John the Baptist's is a rect. with that of St. Lawrence consolidated, val. £229, in the gift of the corporation. The church, which stands near the old gate of the town, was erected about 1350. It is the smallest in Bristol, and contains a monumental brass of the year 1478, and two ancient figures of Brennus and Belinus. St. Leonard's is a vic. united with that of St. Nicholas, of the val. of £253, in the gift of the dean and chapter. The church of St. Nicholas is modern, with a tower and beautiful spire. St. Michael's is a rect.,* val. £250, in the gift of trustees. The church has a very ancient tower. St. Peter's is a rect., of the val. of £239, in the gift of the corporation. The church was built early in the 12th century, and has lost much of its original character by frequent alterations and repairs. It contains a brass of the year 1431, and a monument to the poet Richard Savage, who died in 1743. St. Stephen's is a rect., worth £292, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, which was rebuilt about 1470 on the site of an earlier one, by John Shipward, merchant and mayor of Bristol, is in the perpendicular style, with a remarkably fine tower 130 feet high, surmounted with pierced battlements and turrets. It has a richly ornamented porch. The living of Temple Church is a vic.,* of the val. of £270, in the gift of the corporation. The church, founded by the Knights Templars about the middle of the 12th century, is partly in the Norman style. It has a tower leaning several feet out of the perpendicular, which, according to Camden, rocks when the bells are rung, and contains two brasses of the year 1395. The living of St. Thomas is a vic., val. £120, in the patron of the bishop. The church was rebuilt in 1793, but the ancient tower erected in the 12th century is retained. St. Werburgh's is a rect., val. £70, in the gift of the lord chancellor. The church, rebuilt in 1761, on the site of a very old one, is in the perpendicular style, and contains a brass of the year 1546, and a monument to Robert Thorne, founder of the grammar school. It was in this church, in 1543, that the English Litany was first used. St. James's is a perpet. cur., of the val. of £551, in the gift of trustees. The church belonged to the priory of St. James, founded about 1130, and was made parochial in 1374. It is partly of Norman architecture, and has lately been restored. It is said to have been the burial-place of Robert Earl of Gloucester, who rebuilt the castle and founded the priory, and of Eleanor of Brittany, who was 40 years a prisoner in the castle. The living of SS. Philip and Jacob is a vic.,* val. £440, in the gift of trustees. The church, a large and venerable structure of the 12th century, with a good tower, has also been recently repaired. St. Mark's Church, now called the Mayor's Chapel, formerly collegiate, and attached to an ancient hospital, is a small elegant building of the 13th century, exhibiting various styles of architecture, and richly decorated. It has a beautiful tower, some stained windows, and several interesting monuments. The living of St. Mary Redcliff, is a vic., of the val. of £226, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is one of the finest specimens of Gothic architecture in the kingdom, and probably without a rival among parish churches. It was founded about the close of the 13th century, on the site of an ancient chapel, by Simon de Burton, and completed by William Canynges, by whose grandson it was partly rebuilt about 1460, after having been damaged by a storm. It is a large and stately structure, in the form of a cross, chiefly in the early English and perpendicular styles of architecture, with a noble tower and unfinished spire rising to the height of about 200 feet. The church is nearly 250 feet in length and 117 feet in breadth. It has a groined roof supported on graceful clustered columns, a fine stained east window, and a richly-decorated porch on the north side. The tower is at the west end. In the church are four brasses, the earliest being of the year 1439; a Lady-chapel, and monuments of Canynges and Admiral Penn, father of the celebrated founder of Pennsylvania. The muniment room in this church, containing chests with documents and records of the Canynges, is interesting as the scene of the alleged discovery of ancient poems by Chatterton, "the marvellous boy." The altar-piece was painted by Hogarth. The restoration of this fine building has been undertaken by an association formed for the purpose in 1846, and called the Canynge Society. St. Raphael's church is a modern structure, erected in 1859, at the sole cost of the Rev. R. H. W. Miles, for the benefit of the visitors frequenting that part. It has almshouses attached for disabled seamen. The other livings are those of St. Paul, St. Matthew at Kingsdown, St. Matthias at Weir, St. Barnabas, St. Luke, Holy Trinity, St. Simon, St. Jude at Coal-pit Heath, and St. Andrew Montpellier, all curs., generally worth £150 each; the rect. of St. Mary-le-Port, val. £150, in the patron. of the Duke of Buckingham; and the vic. of St. George, Brandon Hill, worth £285, in the gift of the dean and chapter. Besides these places of worship connected with the Church of England, there is an elegant cathedral, situated in Clifton, belonging to the Roman Catholics, and above 70 chapels belonging to the various bodies of Dissenters, many of recent erection, and some large and handsome buildings. Of these 19 belong to the Independents, 10 to the Baptists, 12 to the Wesleyan Methodists, 10 to the Wesleyan Reformers, others to the Society of Friends, Unitarians, Moravians, Primitive Methodists, Bible Christians, Plymouth Brethren, and Latter-day Saints. The Roman Catholics have six chapels, and the Jews a synagogue. The free grammar school, founded and endowed by Robert Thorne in 1532, and further endowed by subsequent benefactors, has been reconstructed, and adapted to modern requirements, under the authority of the Court of Chancery. It has five exhibitions and two fellowships at Oxford University. The number of scholars has greatly increased, and is now about 300. Connected with the cathedral is the College grammar school, founded by Henry VIII. for the benefit of the choristers. Queen Elizabeth's free grammar school in Redcliff, has an endowment of £21 a year, and is governed by a corporation of twelve. Besides these educational foundations there are two richly-endowed charity schools, called Queen Elizabeth's and Colston's hospitals. The former was founded in 1586 by John Carr, for the education and maintenance of 40 boys. In consequence of the large increase in the value of the endowment, the number admitted is now about 130. A large and handsome new building was erected about 1847, in a fine situation on Brandon Hill, after designs by Fosters. The hospital has a front nearly 400 feet long, and, with the grounds, covers an area of four acres. Its revenue is about £2,400 per annum. Colston's Hospital, or free school for 100 boys, was founded in 1708, and is managed by trustees, who have recently purchased the bishop's palace at Stapleton, near Bristol, and converted it into a school-house. It has a revenue of above £2,500 per annum. Chatterton was a scholar here for seven years. Other free schools were endowed by Edward Colston in Temple parish and in Pile-street, each for 40 boys. A free school for 40 girls was endowed by Alderman Whiston in 1627, and is called, from the distinctive dress worn, the Red Maids' school. A new school-house was erected about 1835, a handsome structure in the Tudor style of architecture, with a tower. The revenue of the school is about £600 per annum, and the number of scholars is raised to 120. The city contains numerous modern schools and institutions for education, among which are—the Bristol Academy and School of Practical Art, situated in the Queen's-road, erected in 1857, by subscription, and is attended by above 2,000 pupils: the building, in the Italian style, contains a bust of Flaxman; the Bristol Medical school, now affiliated to the London University; the Baptist College, founded in 1770, and endowed with about £90 a year; the Merchants' Hall school for 40 boys, endowed in 1738 by Susannah Holworthy; the Marine school; Bristol Education school, and many others, besides National, British, and infant schools. There are also several ragged schools.—The principal literary and scientific institutions are the Philosophical Institution, the athenæum, and the city, law, and medical libraries. The first-named comprises an art museum, a library and reading-room, a lecture theatre, and other apartments. The museum contains, among many valuable works of art, the fine statue of "Eve at the Fountain," by Baily, and a set of casts from the Elgin marbles. The building, situated in Park-street, is a handsome structure with a Grecian portico. It was completed in 1823, and is held in £25 shares. The athenæum, situated in Corn-street, was erected in 1854, and contains a magnificent library of 7,000 volumes, with lecture-hall, spacious reading and chess rooms, and other apartments. The law library is also situated in Corn-street, and was visited by Queen Elizabeth, who was received in the room now appropriated to the library. The walls are panelled with richly-carved oak, and projecting figures by Hugh Brown. The city library in King-street is a handsome stone building, with emblems of literary genius in front; it includes two collections of books—one left in trust to the corporation about the year 1730, not of much value; the other a library of useful books in all classes of literature, belonging to the Bristol Library Society, and comprising nearly 18,000 volumes—besides a small collection of fossils. The observatory, zoological gardens, &c., are in Clifton.—The hospitals, almshouses, and charitable institutions of Bristol are very numerous, and many of them richly endowed. Among the principal are Trinity Hospital, in Old Market-street, of very ancient date, with an income from endowment of above £800 per annum; Temple Hospital, founded in 1613, endowed with about £1,200 a year; St. Peter's Hospital; Stevens's almshouses, founded in 1679, and endowed with £650 per annum; Foster's, in 1492, with an income of £330; Colston's, in 1696, endowed with £345 a year; and the Merchants' Hospital for seamen. The Bristol Royal Infirmary, established in 1785, is a spacious building in Marlborough-street, supported by subscriptions, and capable of accommodating 200 in-patients. There are also two dispensaries, an eye infirmary, asylums for the blind, the deaf and dumb, a penitentiary, military hospital, &c. The Bristol General Hospital, situated near the floating harbour, was erected in 1858 in the Italian style, from designs by W. B. Gingell, architect. It is built round three sides of a quadrangle, with a handsome octagonal tower at the south-west angle, surmounted by a curved cupola. The Orphan Asylum, at Ashley Down, is a fine pile of buildings, erected at different periods since 1835, at the cost of £25,000. The last block was finished in 1861, and is intended to accommodate 1,150 children. The whole of this vast establishment is under the direction of Mr. George Müller, who has been its main supporter. The entire value of the charitable endowments is said to be about £20,000 per annum.—Of the ancient castle nothing remains but the moat and a crypt, the latter now occupied by a smith; and of the fortifications only two gateways are left. The other remains of antiquity consist chiefly of parts of churches and monastic and charitable houses, already referred to.—Bristol is distinguished as the birthplace of a great number of eminent men. Among these are Sebastian Cabot, born in 1477, who discovered Labrador in 1497; Grocyn, friend of Erasmus, and professor of Greek at Oxford, who died in 1519; Hugh Elliott, discoverer of Newfoundland; Dr. White, founder of Sion College and Temple Hospital, who died in 1623; Admiral Penn, born in 1621; Chatterton, born in 1752; Edward Colston, merchant and philanthropist, who died in 1721; the poet Southey, born in 1774; Sir Thomas Lawrence, in 1769; Captain Kater, the astronomer, in 1777; Richard Reynolds, the philanthropist, who died in 1816; and Baily, the sculptor. To these may be added the names of many other illustrious persons connected with Bristol, as William of Worcester, Hannah More, Robert Hall, Coleridge, the metaphysician; the two Herapaths, Conybeare, the geologist; and Pritchard, the great modern ethnologist.—From this port Dampier sailed in 1710, with whom returned, shortly afterwards, Alexander Selkirk, from his island solitude; and in 1682 William Penn embarked here for the New World. Sir Humphrey Davy, when a young man, was assistant to Dr. Beddoes at the Pneumatic Institution here. Blankets took their name from T. Blanket, a manufacturer of Bristol, by whom they were first made. Three Protestant martyrs died at the stake here in the reign of Queen Mary. The Harvey family take from this city the titles of earl and marquis.—The newspapers published in Bristol are the Bristol Gazette, an old-established paper with a large circulation, published on Wednesday (Liberal); the Bristol Times and Felix Farley's Bristol Journal, amalgamated in 1853 (Conservative); the Bristol Mercury, established in 1790, and published on Saturday (Liberal); the Bristol Daily Post, established in 1860, and published daily (Liberal); the Western Daily Press, established in 1858, published daily (Liberal); the Clifton Chronicle, established in 1850, and published on Wednesday (Conservative); and the Gospel Magazine, published monthly, besides several guide books, time tables, directories, &c. The markets of Bristol are numerous, and well supplied with provisions daily, although Wednesday and Saturday are more particularly considered the market days for general provisions, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday for corn. The cheese-market is held on Wednesday and Friday, and the meat-market daily in Nicholas-street. The new cattle-market, held on Thursday, is situated in the Temple Meadows, on the banks of the Avon, not far from the railway station. The old cattle and pig market, held on Monday, is situated in West-street. Cattle fairs are held on the 1st March and 1st September, each lasting nine days. Extensive sales of leather take place in the Leather Hall at the same periods.

BRISTON, a par. and town in the hund. of Holt, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles to the S. of Holt, and 19 N.E. of Elmham railway station. A small stream, a branch of the river Bure, runs through it. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £317, 1 stacy in the patron. of Lord Hastings. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and is in the decorated and later English styles; it had formerly a round tower, but now only a belfry. The register dates from 1689. The Independents, Primitive Methodists, and Wesleyans have chapels in the village. The parochial charities are worth £9 a year, and consist chiefly of an endowment for education founded in 1667. There is a market for stock held here every Tuesday, and a large cattle fair on the 26th May. The wakes are kept on the day after Old Michaelmas Day.

BRITAIN, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Exhall, hund. of Barlichway, in the co. of Warwick, 2 miles to the S.E. of Alcester.

BRITFORD, or BURFORD, a par. and vil. in the hund. of Cawden and Cadworth, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles S.E. from Salisbury. It is situated on the river Avon, and includes the hmlts. of East Harnham and Longford. It is supposed to have been a Roman settlement. The manor, which before the Norman Conquest was held by King Harold, now belongs to Viscount Folkestone, whose seat is Longford Castle. This mansion, which is a triangular structure with an inner court having circular turrets at each angle, was built in 1591 by Sir Thomas Gorges. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £281, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, a spacious edifice in the form of a cross, with a tower at the centre, is dedicated to St. Peter, and contains an ancient altar-tomb, sometimes said, but on doubtful authority, to be that of Henry Duke of Buckingham, who was beheaded by Richard III. Attached to the church is the mausoleum of the Beauverie family. In addition to the parish church there is a neat chapel of ease, built of flint and stone, recently erected. There is a National school, built in 1853. The chief residence is Britford Moat House. A fair for sheep is held in the village on the 12th August.

BRITHDIR, a hmlt. in the par. of Gelligaer, hund. of Caerphilly, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 7 miles to the S.E. of Merthyr Tydvil. It is situated in the midst of the great iron and coal district of South Wales, on the banks of the river Rumney. The scenery of the neighbourhood is very picturesque. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the collieries and iron-works. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Gelligaer, in the dioc. of Llandaff.

BRITHDIR, a tnshp. in the par. of Berriew, hunds. of Newtown and Pool, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 4 miles to the N.W. of Montgomery.

BRITHDIR, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaiadr-yn-Mochnant, hund. of Llanfyllin, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 4 miles to the N. of Llanfyllin.

BRITHDIR, a tnshp. in the par. and borough of Llanidloes, and hund. of the same name, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales.

BRITHDIR, ISAF and UCHAF, tnshps. in the par. of Dolgelly, and hund. of Talybont, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales.

BRITON FERRY, a par. in the hund. of Neath, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 2 miles to the S. of Neath. The village stands in a charming spot on the coast of Swansea Bay, at the mouth of the river Neath, and is a station on the South Wales railway. The Neath canal terminates at this place. The manor belongs to the Earl of Jersey. The inhabitants of the village are chiefly employed in the neighbouring coal-works. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, of the val. of £124, in the gift of the Earl of Jersey. The views from the church are remarkably fine. The poets Gray and Mason used to visit this place, and the latter celebrated its beauty in one of his poems.

BRITTENTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Standlake, hund. of Bampton, in the co. of Oxford, 4 miles to the S.E. of Witney. It is near the junction of the river Windrush with the Thames.

BRITTON, a vil. in the par. of Wakefield, and wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, not far from Wakefield. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, in the patron. of W. B. Beaumont, Esq.

BRITWAY, a par. in the bars. of Barrymore and Kinataloon, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S.E. of Rathcormack. It is situated in a fertile district, partly hilly, on the banks of the river Bride. The living is a rect. united with the vic. of Aghern, in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne.

BRITWELL, a lib. in the par. and hund. of Burnham, in the co. of Buckingham, 3 miles to the N.E. of Maidenhead.

BRITWELL-PRIOR, or BRIGHTWELL-PRIOR, a chplry. in the par. of Newington, and hund. of Ewelme, in the co. of Oxford, 1 mile from Watlington, and 8 N.E. of Wallingford. The living is united with the rect. of Newington. The church is a small ancient building, with several brasses. Many military remains have been found in this neighbourhood, which is supposed to have been the scene of one of Hampden's battles. It was the site of a small priory, of which there are no remains. A nunnery existed here some years ago. The principal residence is Britwell Grove.

BRITWELL-SALOME, or BRIGHTWELL-SALOME, a par. in the hund. of Lewknor, in the co. of Oxford, close to Britwell-Prior. It is situated near the ancient way called Icknield Street, which crossed Britwell Downs. On the downs are remains of a camp. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £240, in the patron. of Lord Carrington. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small stone building, with bell-cot for two bells. It contains a very ancient font and some brasses. The charities amount to £2 per annum.

BRIXHAM, UPPER and LOWER, a par., seaport, and market town, in the hund. of Haytor, in the co. of Devon, 4½ miles to the N.E. of Dartmouth, and 28 miles to the S. of Exeter. The Dartmouth and Torquay branch of the South Devon railway has a station at Brixham Road, about 2 miles from the town. Brixham is situated in a hilly and beautiful country, on the coast of the English Channel, near the southern extremity of Torbay. It is noted in history as the landing-place of William, Prince of Orange, on his arrival in England, on the 4th November, 1688, the event being recorded on a piece of stone, said to be a portion of the rock on which he first set foot, let into the base of a small granite obelisk now standing on the outer pier. Previous to the time of the French war, Brixham was a small country village—one part, that immediately round the church, inhabited by agriculturists, the other part, near a small jetty about a mile from the church, by fishermen. During the war the place increased rapidly, and was made a market-town in 1799.—The two parts of the town, called Higher and Lower, now nearly united, spread in an irregular manner from the water side up the hills, which approach the coast. There are many modern and good houses, some of which are pleasantly seated about the cliffs; but the greater part of the town is in a picturesque valley opening to the quay, and bounded on the E. by the lofty sea-cliffs and Berry Head, the most eastern point of the bay. On the north side of the bay is the fashionable watering-place of Torquay, being distant only 5 miles by water, or 9 by the carriage road, from Brixham. In the lower town, called also Brixham Quay, are the market-house and the custom-house. This is the larger and more important district, containing, according to the census of 1861, 4,581 inhabitants, with rateable property to the value of £5,000. At the close of 1862, a board was formed under the Local Government Act of 1858, for the better cleansing, draining, paving, and lighting this portion of the town. The public rooms, midway between the harbour and the upper extremity of the town, were built in 1835.—The port, which is subordinate to that of Dartmouth, consists of an inner and outer basin, communicating with each other; the former, constructed by the government in 1804, and the latter by the inhabitants about 1830, at a cost of about £5,300. An Act of Parliament was afterwards obtained for enlarging the breakwater, and building an extensive pier, which was commenced in 1843. The number of vessels belonging to the port in 1862 was 100, of an aggregate tonnage of 18,098 tons, value £181,649, besides 215 decked vessels for trawling. Large quantities of turbot, soles, mackerel, and other fish are taken, and exported to London, Bath, Exeter, and Bristol. The fisheries employ about 1,600 seamen, and yield an average of 20 tons of fish weekly. A small lighthouse was built on the pier-head in 1839. Brixham is a coastguard station. The exports consist of iron ore, sheep, and a little malt; the imports, coal from the North, cider, fruit, and cattle from France and the Channel Islands. Rope-making and ship-building are carried on here extensively. There are several fine limestone quarries in the neighbourhood; also two iron-mines on Furzeham Common—one opened in 1841, and the other in 1852; the ore, which is of a light yellow, crops out within a few feet of the surface, and is mixed with yellow ochre, which is manufactured into an excellent pigment and sold to the dockyards. In connection with the mine is a sewage-pipe and ironstone pottery, which renders available the clay thrown out by the miners.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val., with the perpet. curs. of Churston-Ferrers and Kingswear annexed, of £494, in the patron. of the crown. The church stands in the upper town, and is dedicated to St. Mary. It is a spacious ancient edifice in the perpendicular style, with an embattled tower, and was founded in the latter part of the 14th century by the prior of Totnes. It was repaired in 1852, when a new chancel was added at the cost of £700. The east window is of stained glass, and was presented by Sir J. B. Y. Buller, Bart., and the Rev. Robert Holdsworth. In the church are a richly-carved font of the 14th century, several old family monuments, and the cenotaph of Judge Buller. The register dates from the year 1468. A church was built at Lower Brixham, near the quay, in 1820; it has subsequently been enlarged to the extent of 800 sittings, and recently constituted into a district parish: the living is a perpet. cur.,* worth £280, with house and six acres of glebe, in the gift of the crown. There are three chapels in the town, belonging to the Baptists, Wesleyans, and Independents. An endowed school was founded in 1634, the income from endowment being about £100 per annum. A new National schoolhouse has been erected, capable of accommodating 400 boys and girls, and a British school supported by voluntary contributions. There is also an infant school in a building hired by the incumbent for the purpose; attendance about 120. All the schools are under government inspection. There are several charities, including one for the ransom of poor captives, which produce about £110 per annum.—Laywell, near the upper town, is a curious intermitting spring, usually ebbing and flowing about ten times in an hour, with occasional interruptions of half an hour. At a short distance from the town is the seat of the Right Honourable Lord Churston. The rocks of the district are of the Devonian, or Old Red sandstone formation. They are generally calcareous and fossiliferous. A very extensive bone cavern has lately been discovered, affording many valuable specimens of bones and flint knives. The discoveries made in the systematic examination of this cave will be found in Sir Charles Lyell's "Geological Evidences of the Antiquity of Man." Berry Head is conjectured to have been the site of a Roman camp, and old coins have been found there.—Tuesday and Saturday are the market days. A fair is held annually on Whit-Monday for the sale of cattle, and one on the two following days for pleasure. A regatta is regularly held in the month of September, in which from thirty to fifty yachts and other vessels compete.

BRIXTON, a par. in the hund. of Plympton, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the S.E. of Plymouth. It is situated on the banks of the small river Yealm, not far from the South Devon railway. Petty sessions are held in the village. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £107, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The parochial charities amount to £50 a year. The chief seats are Kitley House and Brixton Hall. The former is an old mansion, partly rebuilt by Repton, situated in pleasant grounds, and containing some good pictures by Sir Joshua Reynolds. The manor formerly belonged to the Pollexfens.

BRIXTON, a par. in the lib. of West Medina, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Southampton, 6 miles to the S.W. of Newport. It is situated on the south-west coast of the island, near Grange Chine, and includes the hmlt. of Limerston. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £515, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a school endowed by Noel Digby in 1814, with an income of £20 a year.

BRIXTON, a district par. partly in Lambeth and partly in Kennington, east div. of the hund. of Brixton, in the co. of Surrey, 3 miles to the S. of St. Paul's. All this neighbourhood, in Queen Elizabeth's time, abounded in deer, wild fowl, &c. It is now a delightful suburb of London, lying between Kennington Common, recently converted into a park, and the par. of Streatham, being about 2½ miles in length, on the Brighton road. For the greater part of the distance the road rises gradually, and is lined on either side with villas, mansions, and genteel houses, surrounded by gardens and pleasure grounds. Cowper, the poet, resided on Brixton Hill, where he composed many of his poems, and Oliver Cromwell is said to have lived at Loughborough House. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £700, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church is dedicated to St. Matthew. It is of the Doric order of architecture, with a tower at the east end, and was built in 1824. The original district parish of St. Matthew's, Brixton, has been subdivided frequently of late, owing to the vast increase of new streets and houses; the following churches are in it:—St. John's, Angelltown; St. Matthew's, Denmark-hill; the Episcopal chapel, Stockwell-green. Portions of the district have also been given to Holy Trinity church, Tulse-hill; All Saints, Clapham-park; and St. Paul's, Herne-hill. There are three chapels for the Independents and one for the Wesleyans, and National and infant schools. Almshouses for 12 aged women were founded by Thomas Bailey in 1824. On Brixton Hill is the house of correction for the county, in which 623 prisoners were confined in 1860. The City of London almshouses are also situated in this district.

BRIXTON DEVERILL, a par. in the hund. of Heytesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 5 miles to the S. of Warminster, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £480, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

BRIXTON HUNDRED, one of the 14 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Surrey, situated in the eastern parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the river Thames, separating it from the co. of Middlesex; on the E. by the co. of Kent, on the S. by the hund. of Wallington, and on the W. by the hund. of Kingston. There are two divs. of the hund., the eastern and the western. The former (anciently among the possessions of the abbey of Bermondsey) contains the pars of Bermondsey, Camberwell, Clapham, Lambeth, Newington, Rotherhithe, Streatham, with parts of those of Battersea and Deptford. The latter contains the pars of Barnes, Merton, Mortlake, Putney, Lower Tooting, Wandsworth, Wimbledon, and part of Battersea. Brixton hund. comprises an area of about 30,400 acres.

BRIXWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Orlingbury, in the co. of Northampton, 6 miles to the N. of Northampton. It is a station on the Northampton, Market Harborough, and Stamford branch of the London and North-Western railway. Brixworth was once a market town, and the manor was held by the Fitz-Simons. The par. contains iron and other stone-quarries, and some of the inhabitants are employed in the lace manufacture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is one of the most interesting in England, with its Saxon arches formed of Roman bricks, and exhibiting every subsequent style of architecture interposed up to the time of Henry VI. Mr. Britton concluded it to have been an Anglo-Roman building, Mr. Rickman a Norman; it appears, however, as deduced by Mr. Roberts, from the edition of his book in 1835, that he then classed it amongst the Saxon buildings of the country, though not earlier than those of Barton-on-Humber and Earl's Barton. It remained for Mr. Watkins, the present incumbent, to point out the great antiquity and real character of this building, which he found, by excavations carried on with untiring energy both within and without the church, to have been built upon the foundations of a still more ancient structure, the walls and piers of which could still be clearly defined, proving it to have been originally built for a Roman basilica; or, as Mr. Watkins more explicitly defines it, "a building in which the royal and sacerdotal functions, as united in one person, were exhibited—the civil and religious authorities exercised by the same individual—the rex Anius atque sacerdos having its type in the earliest periods of most ancient nations." This hypothesis he illustrated at a meeting of the British Archæological Association, held on the 15th of August, 1862, by reference to the foundation of a basilica in the ruins of Nineveh, as described by Mr. Layard corresponding in its several details to that at Brixworth, and by the slabs from Nineveh in the British Museum on which he thinks he has discovered the type of one of our Saxon arches, and beside it, on one of the blocks, a type of the Norman arch, with its chevron work. However this may be, there can be no doubt of the high antiquity of the present building, which was a venerable structure when the present south aisle was added, in the early part of the 14th century, as a chapel for Sir John de Verdun, lord of the manor, whose effigy is now enclosed in an arched recess of the south wall of that aisle. Fifty years later, the larger arch was opened, and a clerestory window above. In the north wall of this compartment a decorated and a Tudor window were afterwards inserted; the latter is now superseded by a decorated window, substituted at the time of rebuilding this wall in that part. The church contains three slabs of the 14th century; but the inscriptions are wearing out, and are now only preserved in Brydges. There were formerly some brasses, now missing. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyans, and an endowed school. The charitable endowments—consisting partly of the revenue of a free school founded in 1665 by Thomas Roe, and three fields—amount to £110 a year. Brixworth is the seat of a Poor-law Union. The Pytchley hounds are kept here. The principal seat is Brixworth Hall. An annual fair used to be held on the 5th June, but is now discontinued.

BROADBRIDGE, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Bosham, rape of Chichester, in the co. of Sussex, 3 miles to the W. of Chichester. Bosham is a station on the South Coast railway. Broadbridge Heath is a meet for the Horsham hounds.

BROAD-CAR, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Shropham, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the N. of East Harling. It was once a par. of itself.

BROADCARR, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Nether Hoyland, and par. of Wath-upon-Dearne, in the wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the S. of Barnsley.

BROAD-CHALK, a par. in the hund. of Chalk, in the co. of Wilts, 5 miles to the S.W. of Wilton, and 8 from Salisbury. It is situated on the Ebele, a branch of the river Avon, and contains the hmlts. of Knighton and Stoke Farthing. The manor was a possession of the abbey of Wilton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. with that of Bower-Chalk, of £336, in the patron. of the Provost and Fellows of King's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is in the early English style, and has been recently restored. The Rev. Dr. Rowland Williams, whose case has recently excited so much interest, as one of the writers in the "Essays and Reviews," is the incumbent. Near the village are several remains of ancient earthworks; at Bury Orchard is an extensive camp covering above 5 acres, and near it Gawen's Barrow. The latter, according to tradition, is named after the heroic Sir Gawaine, the kinsman of King Arthur. John Bekinsau, the friend of Leland, and author of a work in defence of the king's supremacy, published in the reign of Henry VIII., was a native of Broad-Chalk.

BROAD-CLIST, or BROAD-CLYST, a par. in the hund. of Cliston, in the co. of Devon, 5 miles to the N.E. of Exeter. It is situated in a pleasant country, on the river Clist, and is a station on the Yeovil and Exeter branch of the London and South-Western railway. This place, with several others in the neighbourhood, was burnt by the Danes in 1001. During the civil war in the reign of Charles I., Columb-John, an old mansion, since taken down, was garrisoned for the king by its owner, Sir John Acland. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £407, in the patron. of Sir T. D. Acland, Bart. The church, a handsome building in the perpendicular style, is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. It contains some stone stalls canopied and richly ornamented, a monument to Sir John Acland, who died in 1613, and a costly one to Edward Drewe, serjeant-at-law to Queen Elizabeth. Here are a free school with a small endowment, and almshouses for 12 persons, founded in 1605 by Mr. Burrough, and endowed with about £24 a year. The charitable endowments of the parish amount altogether to about £70 per annum. Killerton House is the seat of the Aclands. It is a modern mansion, built at the foot of a wooded hill, commanding a fine view. A chapel and gatehouse of the ancient house still remain. There were formerly several ancient chapels in this neighbourhood.

BROADFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Odsey, in the co. of Hertford, 3 miles to the N.W. of Buntingford. The living is a rect., annexed to that of the neighbouring par. of Cottered, in the dioc. of Rochester. The church has long been in ruins.

BROADFIELD, a tythg. in the par. of Wrington, hund. of Brent-with-Wrington, in the co. of Somerset, 7 miles to the S.W. of Bristol. It is near Broadfield Down, on the north side of the Mendip Hills.

BROADFORD, a vil. in the par. of Kilseily, bar. of Tulla, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 10 miles to the N. of Limerick, and 119 miles to the S.W. of Dublin. It is seated in a mountainous district, on the W. side of Lough Derg, and contains some quarries of good slate. Lake Doon, near the village, produces excellent pike and bream, and attracts many anglers. Sportsmen resort to the neighbourhood for the sake of grouse-shooting. In the village are the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, a police station, and a dispensary. There are several seats in the vicinity. Fairs are held on the 21st June and the 21st November.

BROADFORD, a vil. in the par. of Strath, Isle of Skye, in the co. of Inverness, Scotland. It is seated in a mountainous district on Broadford Bay, near the famous spar cave of Strathaird, and opposite the mouth of Loch Carron. Fairs are held here in May, August, and September.

BROADGATE, or BRADGATE PARK, an ext. par. district in the west div. of the hund. of Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, 5 miles to the N.W. of Leicester. It is on the border of Charnwood Forest, and was the site of a noble mansion, the seat of the Greys of Groby, erected by Thomas Grey, Marquis of Dorset, in the reign of Henry VIII., but destroyed by fire about the year 1694. This place derives its chief interest from the fact of its having been the birthplace of Lady Jane Grey, in 1537. The chapel still stands, besides part of the gatehouse and some portions of the walls of the tiltyard. In the chapel are some family monuments. The park, which is large and well wooded, is walled, and stocked with deer. A trout stream runs through it, and it is noted for its beautiful ferns.

BROAD-GREEN, a vil. in the hund. of West Derby, in the co. of Lancashire, 3 miles E. of Liverpool. The village, which is entirely modern, contains several pleasant villa residences.

BROADGREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Broadwas, hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles to the W. of Worcester.

BROADHAVEN, a vil. in the par. of West Walton, hund. of Roose, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 6 miles to the S.W. of Haverfordwest. It is situated in a pleasant spot, on the coast of St. Bride's Bay, and is frequented as a bathing-place.

BROADHEATH, UPPER and LOWER, a hmlt. in the par. of Hallow, hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 1 mile from Worcester.

BROADHEMBURY, a par. in the hund. of Hayridge, in the co. of Devon, 5 miles to the N.W. of Honiton. It lies in a fertile district, at the foot of the Black Down Hills, on a small stream, a branch of the river Otter, and contains the vils. of Collaton, Dulford, Kerswell or Carswell, and Luton. This place was once a market town, and the manor was held by the abbots of Dunkeswell. Kerswell was the site of a small religious house, a cell to the abbey of Montacute. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £299, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. It has been recently restored, and contains some very good stained-glass windows, by Hardman. The charitable endowments are of the yearly value of about £40. The vic. of this parish was held by Augustus M. Toplady, the once distinguished champion of Calvinistic theology. The Grange, an ancient mansion formerly belonging to Dunkeswell Abbey, is situated in beautiful grounds. In front of the house is a fine avenue of silver fir-trees. The house, which has been greatly altered, contains a spacious drawing-room, adorned with carved oak. Wolford Lodge is near the village. At the termination of the Black Down range of hills is Hembury Fort, the site of an old camp, with a triple rampart still in good preservation. An annual cattle fair is held on the 2nd Monday in December.

BROADHEMPSTON, a par. in the hund. of Haytor, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles to the N. of Totnes. It lies near the South Devon railway. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £311, in the patron. of the crown.

BROAD-HINTON, a lib. in the parochial chplry. of Hurst, which was formerly in the hund. of Amesbury, in the co. of Wilts, but is now included in the co. of Berks, 3 miles to the N. of Wokingham.

BROAD-HINTON, a par. partly in the hund. of Selkley, and partly in Kingsbridge, in the co. of Wilts, 6 miles to the S.W. of Swindon, and 5 S.E. from Wootton Bassett railway station. It is an extensive and widely-scattered village, surrounded for many miles by open downs, and included in the parliamentary borough of Cricklade. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £302, in the patron. of the Master of St. Nicholas' Hospital, in Salisbury. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, with square embattled tower. The interior was restored in 1850. There are in the parish two schools, one with an income from endowment of £42 a year, and other charities producing about £30 a year, including the fund for apprenticing boys.

BROADHOLME, a hmlt. in the par. of Thorney, north div. of the wap. of Newark, in the co. of Nottingham, 10 miles to the E. of Tuxford. It is on the confines of Lincolnshire, and was the site of a small nunnery, founded about 1150 by Agnes de Campville, which flourished till the Dissolution. It was then valued at about £17.

BROADLACY, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Ishmael, hund. of Kidwelly, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 3 miles to the N.W. of Kidwelly. It is situated on the coast of Carmarthen Bay, at the mouth of the river Towey, and contains the vil. and watering-place of Ferryside.

BROADLANDS, a hmlt. in the par. of Newport, West Medina lib., Isle of Wight, in the co. of Hants, 1 mile from Newport, and 4 from Osborne. Most of the inhabitants are employed in the extensive lace manufactory of Messrs. Henry and William Nunn, which is situated in this village, and which was visited in February, 1863, by the Prince and Princess of Hesse. The wedding robes of the Princess Alexandra of Denmark, now Princess of Wales, were manufactured here.

BROADLANDS, the seat of Viscount Palmerston, in the par. of Romsey, hund. of King's Somborne, in the co. of Hants, 1 mile S. of Romsey, 6½ N.W. of Southampton, and 79 from London, by the South-Western railway. The mansion is situated in the meadows of the river Test or Anton, near the Andover canal. It formerly belonged to the St. Barbes, and has a fine picture gallery, rich in the ancient masters, including Vandyck, Rembrandt, Poussin, Claude, Reynolds, Douw, and the sketch by Paul Veronese for his famous picture, the "Last Supper."

BROADLANE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawarden, hund. of Mold, in the co. of Flint, North Wales. Hawarden Castle, the seat of Sir S. Glynne, Bart., is in this tnshp.

BROADLANE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of North Curry, in the co. of Somerset, 6 miles to the E. of Taunton.

BROAD-MARSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Pebworth, hund. of Kiftsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles to the N. of Chipping Campden. It is on the border of Worcestershire, near the Stratford branch of the West Midland railway.

BROADMAYNE, a par. in the hund. of George, Dorchester div. of the co. of Dorset, 3 miles to the S.E. of Dorchester. The London and South-Western railway passes near it. The living is a rect. united with that of West Knighton, in the dioc. of Salisbury. The church is dedicated to St. Martin. The parochial charities are worth £3 a year.

BROADOAK, or BRADOCK, a par. in the hund. of West, in the co. of Cornwall, 7 miles to the W. of Liskeard. It is situated a little to the E. of the river Fowey, and includes the hmlt. of West Taphouse. After the Norman Conquest the lordship was held by the Earl of Mortaigne. During the civil war in the 17th century Braddock Down was the scene of an engagement between the royalists, under Sir Ralph Hopton, and the parliamentarians under Basset, in which the latter were defeated. In the following year, 1644, the Earl of Essex was nearly surrounded by the royalist forces here, and had to retire to the coast, whence he embarked for Plymouth. The living is a rect. consolidated with that of Boconnoc, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains an ancient font.

BROAD OAKGREEN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ecclesall Bierlow, par. and borough of Sheffield, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles from Sheffield.

BROAD PARKHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Parkham, hund. of Shebbear, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles to the S.W. of Bideford, It is not far from the coast of Barnstaple Bay.

BROADROYD HEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Darton, wap. of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.W. of Barnsley.

BROADSEA, a fishing vil. in the par. of Fraserburgh, Deer district, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland.

BROADSIDE, a grieveship in the par. of Allendale, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, not far from Allendale.

BROADSTAIRS, anciently Bradstow, a small seaport in the Isle of Thanet, hund. of Ringslow, and lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, 1½ mile to the N.E. of Ramsgate, 3 S.E. of Margate, and 75 from London by road, or 82 miles by the London, Chatham, and Dover railway, which has a station here. It is pleasantly situated near the North Foreland, and is under the corporate jurisdiction of the town and port of Dover, and possesses the privileges of a Cinque Port It was formerly included in the par. of St. Peter, but separated ecclesiastically in 1850. In consequence of the beauty of its situation, the excellence of its sands, and its extreme salubrity, it is much frequented by visitors, and was a favourite resort of her Majesty the Queen when Princess Royal. It contains baths, hotels, lodging houses, and abundant accommodation for visitors. There are several handsome marine villas in the neighbourhood. The inhabitants are chiefly of the seafaring class, called "hovellers," a term derived from the Saxon huffle, a merry-making. Originally the huffleers were men who carried out fresh provisions to vessels homeward-bound. They are noted for their gallantry and daring in aiding vessels in distress on the Goodwin Sands, which extend for several miles opposite this part of the coast. The harbour is formed by a small pier of wood, constructed in the reign of Henry VIII., and only admits small vessels. There is a coastguard station. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £230, in the patron. of the vicar of St. Peter. The church, which will seat 830 persons, was erected in 1830, but the tower in 1862. The Baptists have a chapel in the village. Near the shore is a building, formerly dedicated to the Virgin, upon which was placed her image, called Our Lady of Bradstow, in honour of which it was customary for passing ships to lower their topsails. It is now used as a young men's institute and reading room, and contains a good library, museum, &c. The approach from the sea to the village was anciently protected by a gateway of flint, called York Gate, erected, according to the inscription upon it in 1540, by George Culmer. The arch is still standing and was repaired in 1811 by Sir John Henniker, Bart., but the portcullis and gates have long since disappeared Roman coins have been found at Broadstairs, and other indications show that it was frequented by the Romans. About 1½ mile N. of Broadstairs is a hamlet named Kingsgate, from the circumstance of Charles II. having landed there in 1683. Near this spot were two extensive tumuli, called Hackendown Banks, which, when opened were found to contain human bones and several urns they are supposed to denote the site of a battle, which was fought in 853 between the Danes and Saxons.

BROADSTONE, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Munslow, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles to the S.E. of Church Stretton. The living is a perpet. cur. annexe to the rect. of Munslow, in the dioc. of Hereford.

BROAD TOWN, a district par. in the pars. of Cliff Pypard and Broad-Hinton, hund. of Kingsbridge, in th co. of Wilts, 3 miles to the S.E. of Wootton Bassett railway station. It is situated on the Downs. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £100, in the alternate patron. of the vicars of Cliffe-Pypard and Broad-Hinton.

BROADWARD, a tnshp. in the par. and borough of Leominster, hund. of Wolphy, in the co. of Hereford, 1 mile to the S. of Leominster.

BROADWARD, a tnshp. in the par. of Clungunford, hund. of Clun, in the co. of Salop, 7 miles to the W. of Ludlow. It is situated near the river Clun. In the vicinity is Broadward Hall.

BROADWAS, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, 6 miles to the W. of Worcester. It lies on the banks of the river Teme, near the Malvern and Hereford branch of the West Midland railway, and contains the hmlt. of Broadgreen. The parish has some rich meadow-lands, hop-grounds, and orchards. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £253, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. The parochial charities produce £7 a year.

BROADWATER HUNDRED, one of the eight hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Hertford, bounded on the N. by part of the hund. of Cashio, on the N.E. by the hund. of Odsey, on the E. by the hund. of Braughin, on the S.E. by the hund. of Hertford, on the S. by parts of the hunds. of Cashio and Dacorum, and on the W. by the hunds. of Cashio and Hitchin. It contains the pars. of Aston, Ayott St. Lawrence, Ayott St. Peter, Baldock, Bennington, Datchworth, Digswell, Graveley, Hatfield, Knebworth, Letchworth, Great Munden, Little Munden, Sacomb, Stevenage, Totteridge, Walkern, Watton, Welwyn, Weston, Willian, Great Wymondley, and Little Wymondley. The hund. comprises an area of about 60,600 acres.

BROADWATER, a par. in the hund. of Brightford, rape of Bramber, in the co. of Sussex, 11 miles to the W. of Brighton, and 61 miles to the S. of London by the South Coast railway, which crosses the parish. It is pleasantly situated on the coast of the English Channel, under the South Downs, and contains the seaport and market town of Worthing, which has a station on the above-named railway. Broadwater was formerly a market town and the site of a castle belonging to the lords Camois, who held the barony. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, commuted at £800, in the patron. of the Rev. E. K. Elliot, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is in the form of a cross, with a central tower, and partly in the Norman style. It contains a fine monument of one of the lords Delawarr, who died in 1524, and three brasses, the earliest being of a priest, who died in 1432. Besides the parish church there is a chapel of ease at Worthing, and a district church called Christ Church, the livings of which are perpet. curs., the former worth £150, and the latter £300, both in the gift of the rector. The charitable endowments are worth £25 per annum. Offington, in this parish, was the seat of the Delawarrs.

BROADWAY, a par. in the hund. of Culliford-Tree, in the Dorchester div. of the co. of Dorset, 3 miles to the N. of Weymouth, and 6 miles to the S. of Dorchester. It is situated on the banks of the river Wey, near the Great Western railway, and contains the hmlts. of Nottington and Little Moor. Stone is quarried here. The living is a rect., united with that of Bincombe, in the dioc. of Salisbury. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, was rebuilt in 1836. It is a small neat fabric. There are charitable endowments worth £9 a year. In this parish the celebrated mineral spring known as the Nottington Spa takes its rise, the waters of which are hepatic, and extremely efficacious in constitutional and cutaneous complaints. A spacious pump-room has recently been erected, with warm, cold, shower, and vapour baths.

BROADWAY, a par. in the hund. of Abdick and Bulstone, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles to the N. of Ilminster. It occupies part of the site of the ancient forest of Roche, or Neroche, and includes the tythgs. of Capland and Rapps. The forest was of great extent, and took its name from an ancient entrenchment called Roche Castle, situated on the brow of Blackdown Hill, which commands a wide and beautiful prospect. The forest was here intersected by a broad way, whence the village derived its name. The woollen cloth manufacture was at one time carried on at this place. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £167, in the patron. of the Misses Palmer. The church, dedicated to St. Aldelme, is a cruciform edifice, and the churchyard has part of a fine old cross. Evely's almshouses, for 7 poor people, are endowed with £21 per annum; and there are some other charities of trifling value.

BROADWAY, a vil. in the par. of St. Iberius, bar. of Forth, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S.E. of Killinick. It is seated on the banks of Lady's Island Lake. There are in the village a chapel for Wesleyans and a dispensary. Fairs take place on the Thursday after Trinity Sunday and the 18th October.

BROADWAY, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Pershore, in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles to the S.E. of Evesham. It is situated in a hilly country on the edge of Gloucestershire, near the West Midland railway. The hills command extensive prospects over the Vale of Evesham and the surrounding country, and are intersected by picturesque winding valleys. Freestone is quarried in the neighbourhood. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, of the val. of £240, in the patron. of trustees. The old church, dedicated to St. Eadburgh, contains a monument to one of the Sheldon family, but is no longer used. The new church, dedicated to St. Michael, was built twenty years ago. In the village are chapels belonging to the Independents, Wesleyans, and Roman Catholics, and a free school for boys, founded in 1686 by Thomas Hodges, and endowed with about £75 per annum. There are some other charities, the annual value of which is about £25 a year. In the vicinity are Farncombe, on the top of Broadway Hill; Middle Hill, the seat of Sir Thomas Phillipps, Bart., who has a very large and valuable collection of MSS., and many thousand documents of great historic and antiquarian interest; and Spring Hill, the property of Earl Beauchamp.

BROADWELL, or BRADLE, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Slaughter, in the co. of Gloucester, a mile to the N. of Stow-on-the-Wold. It is situated in a hilly district near the border of Oxfordshire, on the banks of a small stream which falls into the Evenlode, and is intersected by the old Fosse Way. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the val. with that of Addlestrop united, of £643, in the patron. of Lord Leigh. The church is dedicated to St. Paul. There are charitable endowments which produce £16 a year. Broadwell House is the seat of Lord Leigh.

BROADWELL, a par. in the hund. of Bampton, in the co. of Oxford, 4 miles to the W. of Bampton. It is situated in a pleasant country, and contains the chplry. of Holwell and the hmlts. of Filkins and Kelmscott. The old British way, Akeman Street, crosses the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. with the perpet. curs. of Holwell and Kelmscott annexed, of £270, in the patron. of the Rev. T. W. Goodlake. The church, a cruciform edifice, is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, and contains monuments of the Colston family. In the village are an ancient chapel and cross. The parochial charities are worth £8 a year. The chief residence is Broadwell Grove House, situated in the midst of fine woodland scenery. The mansion stands on the site of an older one, the seat of the Thomonds. Filkins Hall is the residence of the Colstons, who are descended from Edward Colston, the distinguished merchant and philanthropist of Bristol.

BROADWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Leamington Hastings, hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 3 miles to the N.E. of Southam.

BROADWINSOR, a lib. and par. in the Bridport div. of the co. of Dorset, 3 miles to the N.W. of Beaminster, and 9 miles N.E. of Axminster. It is near the border of Somersetshire, and contains the tythgs.

of Childhay, Dibberford, and Drimpton, with Blackdown and several other hmlts. There is a very considerable trade in sailcloth. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. with the cur. of Blackdown annexed, of £558, in the patronage of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient edifice in the Gothic style, with square tower. The Independents have a chapel here. There is a free school, endowed by Robert Smith in 1725, the income of which is about £23, and some other charities producing about £18 a year. In this parish are the two hills familiarly known to mariners as the Cow and Calf, the former rising to the height of 940 and the latter to 920 feet.

BROADWOOD-KELLY, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, in the co. of Devon, 5 miles to the E. of Hatherleigh. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £238, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Hole. The parochial charities are of small amount.

BROADWOOD-WIDGER, a par. in the hund. of Lifton, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles to the N.E. of Launceston. The Thistle Brook, which falls into the river Tamar, runs through the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. with that of Week St. German's annexed, of £148, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol.

BROBURY, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, in the co. of Hereford, 10 miles to the W. of Hereford. It is situated in a hilly district on the banks of the river Wye, abounding in striking scenery. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £180, in the patron. of the Rev. N. H. D. Newton, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are some charities of small value.

BROCKAGH, a vil. in the bar. of Dungannon, in the co. of Tyrone, and prov. of Ulster, Ireland, not far from the western shore of Lough Neagh.

BROCKAMIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Leigh. hund. of Pershore, in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles to the W. of Worcester.

BROCKDISH, a par. in the hund. of Earsham, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the S.W. of Harleston, and 6 E. of Diss railway station. It lies on the border of Suffolk, on the banks of the river Waveney. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £327, in the patron. of W. France, Esq. The church stands on a hill, and is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. It is an ancient structure with square tower, and has been recently adorned with new windows and a handsome font. The parsonage is a commodious residence in the Elizabethan style, situated near the church. Blomefield, author of the History of Norfolk, was rector of Brockdish. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyans, and a National school. The parochial charities are worth £17 per annum. Near the village is Brockdish Hall.

BROCKENHURST, a par. in the hund. of New Forest, Lymington div. of the co. of Hants, 4 miles to the N. of Lymington. It is a station on the London and South-Western railway. A village existed on this spot before the time of the Norman Survey, in which it is called Brocste. The parish is crossed by the Boldre Water, and contains much fine scenery. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Boldre, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church is a very ancient building, and though several times altered and repaired, exhibits still the Norman style; it has a curious old font. In the churchyard are an oak and a yew of very large size. There is a free school, endowed by Henry Thurston in 1745 with an income of £24 a year. The principal seats in the parish are Brookenhurst Park, containing fine old trees and beautiful scenery; and Watcombe House, or Brockenhurst Lodge, in which John Howard, the philanthropist, long resided. Near the village is a heath, called Sway Common, on which several tumuli and remains of entrenchments are found.

BROCKFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Wetheringsett, hund. of Hartismere, in the co. of Suffolk, 3 miles to the N.W of Debenham. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Wetheringsett, in the dioc. of Norwich. Near the village is Brockford Hall.

BROCKHALL, a par. in the hund. of Nobottle Grove, in the co. of Northampton, 4 miles to the E. of Daventry. The London and North-Western railway passes through it. On the western side of the parish are the Roman way, Watling Street, and the Grand Junction canal. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £238, in the patron. of T. R. Thornton, Esq. The church, which is old, is chiefly in the Norman and early English styles, and is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. Brockhall Park is the seat of the Thorntons. The mansion stands on high ground, commanding a pleasant view. It contains a good portrait of Robert Catesby, the conspirator, by an unknown hand.

BROCKHAM, a vil. and parochial chplry. in the par. of Betchworth, hund. of Reigate, in the co. of Surrey, 2 miles to the E. of Dorking, and 2 S.W. of Betchworth railway station. It is a beautiful and improving village, in the vicinity of Box Hill and Betchworth Castle. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £80, in the patron. of Colonel Goulburn. Christ Church is a neat structure in the Norman style, with a spire. There is a chapel belonging to the Baptists.

BROCKHAMPTON, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Buckland Newton, in the co. of Dorset, 3 miles to the N.E. of Cerne Abbas.

BROCKHAMPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Bishop's Cleeve, hund. of Cleeve, in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles to the N. of Cheltenham. It is joined with the hmlt. of Southam.

BROCKHAMPTON, a tythg. in the par. and lib. of Havant, Fareham div. of the co. of Hants.

BROCKHAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Greytree, in the co. of Hereford, 6 miles to the N. of Ross. It is situated on the banks of the river Wye, not far from the Hereford, Ross, and Gloucester branch of the Great Western railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, worth £74, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. Near the village is a Roman camp.

BROCKHAMPTON, a chplry. in the par. of Bromyard, hund. of Broxash, in the co. of Hereford, 3 miles to the E. of Bromyard. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, and in the patron. of J. Barnaby, Esq. The principal mansion is Brockhampton House.

BROCKHAMPTON. See BROOKHAMPTON, Oxfordshire.

BROCKHOLES, a tnshp. in the par. of Preston, hund. of Amounderness, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 2 miles to the E. of Preston. It is united with Grimsargh.

BROCKHURST, a hmlt. in the par. of Monk's Kirby, hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 5 miles to the N. of Rugby. It is near the London and North-Western railway.

BROCKLEBANK, a tnshp. in the par. of Westward, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 5 miles to the S. of Wigton. It lies near Brocklebank Fell, and is joined with Stoneraise.

BROCKLEHURST, OLD, a hmlt. in the par. of Mousewald, Annandale district in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 4 miles to the E. of Dumfries.

BROCKLESBY, a par. in the east div. of the wap. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 6 miles to the N. of Caistor. It is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The par. includes the hmlt. of Limber Parva and the ext. par. lib. of Newsham, the latter of which was the site of a monastery of the Gilbertine order, founded about the middle of the twelfth century. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £287, in the patron. of the Earl of Yarborough. The church is dedicated to All Saints. Brocklesby Park, a spacious and beautiful demesne, is the principal seat of the Earl of Yarborough. The mansion contains a picture gallery, erected in 1807 from designs by Tatham; and in the park are a chapel and mausoleum, built some years earlier by Wyatt. The former, situated on a tumulus, is a building of the Doric order of architecture, with a dome. The late Prince Consort was entertained at this seat on his way to Grimsby in 1849.

BROCKLEY, a par. in the hund. of Chewton, in the co. of Somerset, 9 miles to the S.W. of Bristol. It is situated in a romantic and beautiful country, not far from the coast of the Bristol Channel, and is crossed by the Bristol and Exeter railway. Near the village, on the south-east, is Brockley Coomb, a deep narrow glen, of singular beauty, sunk between steep rocks, rising at some points to the height of 300 feet. It is adorned with many noble trees, and all the fissures and ledges of the cliffs are enriched with a great variety of mosses and other forms of vegetation. Lead ore is found here, and there are masses of columnar basalt. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the val. of £128, in the patron. of the trustees of the late Rev. W. Piggott. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. There are charitable endowments worth about £9 a year. Brockley Hall, late the seat of the Piggotts, is a spacious mansion, surrounded by beautiful grounds and a large wooded park, stocked with deer and containing a heronry. From the summit of the rocks, along which there is a drive, the view is magnificent over the surrounding country and the Bristol Channel to the coast of Wales. In the hall was formerly a large collection of pictures and rarities, including works by Vandyck, Lely, Hobday, and Gainsborough, a bust of Napoleon by Canova, chairs and a couch of Napoleon brought from Malmaison, and some chairs of Cardinal Wolsey. The collection was dispersed by public sale in 1849.

BROCKLEY, a par. in the hund. of Thingoe, in the co. of Suffolk, 6 miles to the S. of Bury St. Edmund's. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £458, in the patron. of the Rev. W. Sprigge, incumbent. The tithes were commuted for an annual rent-charge of £463 in 1846, when a new rectory-house was built. The church, which is dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone building, containing a fine painting of Christ and the Doctors in the Temple. The register is very ancient. The Baptists have a neat chapel. There is an endowment for a school, and several charities, amounting in the aggregate to about £50 per annum.

BROCKMANTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Puddlestone, and hund. of Wolphy, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles to the E. of Leominster.

BROCKMOOR, a vil. in the par. of King's Swinford, and hund. of Seisdon, in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles to the N. of Stourbridge. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £150, in the alternate patron. of the crown and the bishop.

BROCKTHROP, or BROOKTHROP, a par. in the middle div. of the hund. of Dudstone, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles to the S. of Gloucester. It lies at the west foot of the Cotswold hills. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the val. with the perpet. cur. of Whaddon annexed, of £180, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester and J. Pitt, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Swithin.

BROCKTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Longford, and hund. of South Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles from Newport.

BROCKTON, a tnshp. in the par. of North Lydbury, hund. of Purslow, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles from Bishop's Castle.

BROCKTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Worthin, and hund. of Chirbury, in the co. of Salop, 9 miles to the N. of Bishop's Castle.

BROCKTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Baswich, hund. of Cuttlestone, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles to the S.E. of Stafford. There is a small endowed school in the village. The chief residences are Brockton House and Brockton Lodge. The tnshp. contains about 1,990 acres.

BROCKWEAR COMMON, an ext. par. district in the par. of Hewelsfield, hund. of St. Briavel's, in the co. of Gloucester, 5 miles to the N. of Chepstow. It lies on the border of Monmouthshire, on the E. bank of the river Wye.

BROCKWORTH, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Dudstone and King's Barton, in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles to the S.E. of Gloucester. It is situated at the foot of the Cotswold hills, and is crossed by the ancient Ermine Street. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £150, in the patron. of J. Watts, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. George. The charitable endowments produce £5 a year. The village is a meet for the Cotswold hounds.

BRODICK, a vil. in the par. of Kilbride, Isle of Arran, in the co. of Bute, Scotland, about 20 miles to the W. of Irvine, in Ayrshire. It is seated at the foot of Goatfell, on the coast of a small bay named after the village. Brodick Castle, which stands by the sea, on the site of an ancient fortress belonging to the Boyds and the Stuarts, is a seat of the Duke of Hamilton. The village has good accommodation for sea-bathing. A fair is held in June.

BRODSWORTH, a par. in the northern. div. of the wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N.W. of Doncaster. It includes the hmlts. of Pigburn and Scausby. Brown limestone of good quality is quarried here. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £367, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities, which consist of the endowment of a free school founded in 1696, and a more recent small bequest for education, produce £15 a year. Brodsworth Park became the seat of the Earl of Kinnoul in 1713, whose grandson sold the estate to Peter Thellusson, the father of Lord Rendlesham. The extraordinary provisions contained in the will of Thellusson for the accumulation of his immense property have become notorious by the frequent discussions and arguments in the courts of law and equity. They were finally annulled by the Court of Chancery, and an Act was passed in 39 and 40 George III. for prescribing the accumulation of property, known as the "Thellusson Act."

BROGDEN, a tnshp. joined with Admorgill, in the par. of Barnoldswick, wap. of Staincliffe and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 9 miles to the W. of Skipton.

BROKENBOROUGH, a par. and vil. in the hund. of Malmesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles to the N.W. of Malmesbury, of which borough it forms part. It is a very ancient place, having been a Roman settlement, and was called by the Saxons Caerderberge. The kings of Wessex had a seat here. The parish is on the border of Gloucestershire, and is crossed by the ancient way called Akeman Street, near which fragments of Roman pavements have been found. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Westport, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. There is a small charity school, and the parochial charities are worth £3 a year. The Earl of Suffolk is lord of the manor.

BROKENHAUGH, a quarter in the parochial chplry. of Haydon, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 5 miles to the W. of Hexham.

BROMBIL, or BRONBIL. See BROOMBILL, Glamorganshire.

BROMBLOW. See BROMLOW, Salop.

BROMBORROW, or BROMBOROUGH, a par. in the higher and lower divs. of the hund. of Wirrall, in the co. palatine of Chester, 4 miles to the S. of Birkenhead. It is a station on the Birkenhead railway. The par. lies on the W. bank of the river Mersey, and contains the tnshp. of Brimstage. It was the site of a small monastery, founded early in the 10th century by Ethelfleda, Countess of Mercia, which flourished but for a short time, being destroyed before the Norman Conquest. The manor afterwards formed part of the demesne of St. Werburgh's Abbey, Chester. The monks obtained the grant of a weekly market and an annual fair, which have long ceased to be held. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Chester, worth £51, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, a small building with a wooden tower, has some portions in the Norman style, and is dedicated to St. Barnabas. There are charitable endowments which produce £5 a year. Bromborough Hall is situated in a pleasant park on the banks of the Mersey, of which it commands a good view.

BROMBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Frodingham, wap. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 7 miles to the W. of Brigg. Near the village is Bromby Hall.

BROME, or BROOME, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, in the co. of Suffolk, 2 miles to the N. of Eye, and 2¼ miles S.E. of Diss station, on the Eastern Union section of the Great Eastern railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. with that of Oakley annexed, of £561, in the patron. of Sir E. Kerrison, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £18 per annum. Broome Hall, now the seat of the Kerrisons, was for some centuries the seat of the Cornwallis family, who take from it the title of viscount. In the reign of Henry VIII., Sir John Cornwallis was Steward of the Household to Prince Edward (afterwards Edward VI.); and Charles, fifth baron, was created Earl Cornwallis and Viscount Broome by George II., in 1753. The old mansion, which was erected about 1565, and contained some fine specimens of oak carving, has recently been taken down, and a new hall built on its site. It is approached by a magnificent avenue of oaks.

BROMEHOLME. See BROMHOLM, Norfolk.

BROMESWELL, a par. in the hund. of Wilford, in the co. of Suffolk, 2 miles to the N.E. of Woodbridge, and 4 S. from Wickham Market. It is situated on the banks of the river Deben, near the East Suffolk section of the Great Eastern railway, on which Woodbridge is a station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £150, in the patron. of the Marquis of Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, was repaired in 1844, when a new chancel was built, and was again redecorated in 1860. There is a handsome parsonage-house, built in 1845, and a new free school, erected in the following year. The parochial charities are worth £10 a year. The soil is extremely sandy, and a considerable portion of the parish is in heath.

BROMFIELD, a par. partly in the ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, and partly in the ward of Cumberland, in the co. of Cumberland, 5 miles to the W. of Wigton. The Carlisle and Maryport railway passes near the village. The parish, which is of great extent, (embracing an area of 14,644 acres), is situated on the coast of the Solway Frith, and includes the chplries. of Allonby and West Newton, and the tnshps. of Longrigg-with-Mealrigg, Blencogo, and Dundraw; the two latter being in Cumberland ward. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, of the val. of £270, in the patron. of the bishop of the dioc. The church, dedicated to St. Kentigern, was restored in 1862. It contains several old monuments. Here is a free grammar school founded in 1612 by Richard Osmotherley, the income of which, derived from endowments by the founder and subsequent benefactors, amounts to about £40 per annum. There are other charities of small value. Blencogo, in this parish, was the birthplace (1737) of Jonathan Boucher, antiquarian, and author of a Glossary of the English Language. Bromfield church has monuments to his father and mother, who are interred here. Some traces exist of Mungo Castle.

BROMFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Lower Munslow, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles to the N.W. of Ludlow. It is a station on the Newport section of the West Midland railway. The parish is situated on the banks of the river Onney, near its confluence with the Teme, and formerly contained the chplry. of Halford, with the tnshp. of Dinchope, now constituting a distinct par. A college of secular canons was established here at a very early period, and was converted in the 12th century into a priory of the Benedictine order, subordinate to the abbey of Gloucester. It flourished till the Dissolution, when it was valued at about £79. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. of £234, in the patron. of Lady Windsor Clive. The church, part of that which belonged to the priory, is dedicated to St. Mary. It is an ancient stone building with square tower, of different styles of architecture, and was repaired in 1850. The parochial charities are worth £3 a year. South of the village is Okeley Park, the seat of Lady Windsor Clive: it is an elegant mansion of modern construction. The Teme winds through the picturesque grounds, which command a good view of the castle and town of Ludlow. Over the old gateway of the Priory is a fine old room, now used for the parish school, which is supported by Lady Clive.

BROMFIELD HUNDRED, one of the 6 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, situated in the eastern part of the co., and bounded on the N., E., and S. by the river Dee, and on the W. by the hund. of Yale. It contains the pars. of Holt, Marchwiel, and Ruabon, with parts of those of Bangor, Erbistock, Gresford, and Wrexham.

BROMFLEET. See BROOMFLEET, Yorkshire.

BROMFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Wickford, hund. of Barstaple, in the co. of Essex, 9 miles W. of Rochford, and 8 S.E. of Ingatestone railway station. It derives its name from the Broom-ford over the river Crouch, 2½ miles to the W. of the village of Wickford. It lies on the high road from London to Rochford.

BROMHAM, a par. in the hund. of Willey, in the co. of Bedford, 3 miles to the N.W. of Bedford. The Midland railway runs near it. The parish lies on the banks of the river Ouse, which curves round it on three sides and is crossed by a bridge. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. with that of Oakley, of £336, in the patron. of the Provost and Fellows of Eton College. The church is dedicated to St. Owen. It contains several brasses and monuments to the families of Trevor and Dyve. One of the brasses is of earlier date than 1537. The principal residence is Bromham House, formerly the seat of the Trevors, and lately of the Viscountess Hampden. It stands in a small and pleasant park.

BROMHAM, a par. in the hund. of Potterne and Cannings, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles to the N.W. of Devizes, and 7 S.E. of Chippenham railway station. It is situated near the Devizes branch of the Great Western railway. The manor, which was held before the Norman conquest by Harold, has belonged to the Bayntun family since the reign of Henry VII. The Roman road to Bath passed a little to the north of the village, many of the houses in which are very ancient, built with timber and brick, without regard to regularity. The principal street, which is unpaved, turns nearly at right angles, facing the church on the east and south, while to the west is a fine view of the open country. The weaving of cloth is carried on by some of the inhabitants, and there is an extensive brewery. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £698, in the patron. of the Rev. Edward Edgell. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is very ancient, some of the monuments dating earlier than Henry II. It is in the Norman style of architecture, and has an embattled tower, surmounted by a spire rising above 180 feet from its base. The interior was restored in 1850, and a new stone pulpit added. It contains several brasses and monuments of the Bayntons, among which is one to Sir Edward Bayntun, who died in 1574. There is also a monument to one of the Beauchamps, and one to Dr. Henry Season, author of an almanac entitled, "Season on the Seasons." The Baptists and Wesleyans have chapels in the village, and there are National and British schools. An almshouse for 6 persons, endowed in 1644 by Sir Henry Baynton, has an income of £20 per annum. Spye Park, formerly the seat of the Bayntons, is 2 miles to the N. of Bromham. The mansion stands on high ground, commanding a fine view, and was once the residence of the witty and profligate Wilmot, Earl of Rochester, who flourished in the reign of Charles II., and died in 1680. Bromham House, in the vicinity, was built of the materials of the ruined castle of Devizes. A Roman pavement and other remains have been discovered in this parish. Bromham was the birthplace of George Webb, Bishop of Lincoln, who died in 1641; John Collinson, who wrote the History of Somersetshire, and died in 1796; and Dr. Season. It is also the resting-place of the immortal poet, Thomas Moore, who died at Sloperton Cottage, long his favourite residence in this parish. A plain stone slab in the churchyard marks the spot where the poet and his two children are interred.

BROMHILL, or BRUMHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Weeting, hund. of Grimshoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 1 mile to the N. of Brandon. It was the site of an Augustine priory, founded about the beginning of the 13th century by Hugh de Playz. Henry III. conferred on the prior the privilege of a fair and a market. On the suppression of the house by Clement VII., in 1528, its endowments were given, first to Wolsey, and afterwards to Christ College, Cambridge. A farmhouse now stands on the spot.

BROMHOLME, or BROOMHOLM, a hmlt. in the par. of Bacton, hund. of Tunstead, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles to the N.E. of North Walsham. It is seated on the sea-coast, and was once a place of some note and a market town. It has still some of the arches and walls of the ancient priory, founded in 1113 by William de Glanville, as a cell to the Cluniac monastery at Castleacre. At the Dissolution it was valued at £145, and was given to Sir Thomas Woodhouse, whose descendants still hold it. In 1233, Henry III., with his court, resided at the priory for a short time. A cross, in the possession of this house, was reputed to be made of the wood of the true cross, and attracted large numbers of pilgrims with costly offerings.

BROMLEY and BECKENHAM HUNDRED, one of the 8 hunds. or subdivisions of the lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, situated in the western parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of Blackheath, on the E. and S. by the hund. of Ruxley, and on the W. by the co. of Surrey. It contains the pars. of Beckenham and Bromley, and has an area of about 8,450 acres.

BROMLEY, a par. and market town in the hund. of Bromley and Beckenham, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, in the co. of Kent, 10 miles to the S.E. of London, and 4½ from Sydenham. It is a station on the London and Bickley branch of the South-Eastern railway, and also on the Dover and Chatham line. The parish is situated in a pleasant country on the banks of the Ravensbourne, and has been a possession of the see of Rochester for above a thousand years, the manor having been given to the bishop by Ethelbert, King of Kent, in the 8th century. The possession was interrupted, but only for a short time, by Odo, Bishop of Bayeux, who seized and held the manor after the Conquest, till 1076. The town consists chiefly of one street, extending along the high road to Tonbridge Wells, on the N. bank of the Ravensbourne, and before the construction of the railway was the seat of a large posting trade. The town is paved and lighted with gas, and contains many pretty and well-built houses. In the market place is an old market-house supported on pillars. There are also a police court and a savings-bank. Bromley is the seat of a Poor-law Union for 17 parishes, the head of a registration and County Court district, and a polling place for the western division of the county. Petty sessions are held in the town, for the western division of the county, the second Monday in every month. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £160, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church of St. Peter is a spacious edifice, with a massive embattled tower and a peal of eight bells, partly rebuilt about 1795, and repaired in 1830. It is partly in the perpendicular style, but has been much altered. It contains an old Norman font and some interesting monuments; among which are those of Dr. Zachary Pearce, and other bishops of Rochester; of Dr. Hawkesworth, author of "The Adventurer;" and of the wife of Dr. Johnson. There are several monumental brasses. The entrance gate to the churchyard affords a good example of the ancient lich-gates by which, in former times, the corpse was borne into the burial-ground. A church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was erected on Bromley Common in 1841. It is a handsome structure in the Gothic style of architecture. The cur.,* worth £132, is in the gift of the Bishop of Worcester. In the town are chapels belonging to the Independents and Wesleyan Methodists, and a literary institution. A college was founded and endowed here in 1666 by John Warner, Bishop of Rochester, for the support of 20 widows of clergymen, and a chaplain. The funds of the charity having been largely increased by later bequests, the number of inmates has been doubled. Each inmate receives £38 a year, besides an allowance for coals and candles; the management of the charity is vested in trustees. The college stands at the northern entrance to the town; its revenue amounts to about £2,000 per annum. The other charitable endowments of the parish, including the income (£40) of a free school, amount to about £42 per annum. Bromley Palace, situated on a hill near the town, is a plain brick building, erected on the site of the ancient palace of the bishops of Rochester, which had fallen into decay, in 1777. It is now the residence of Coles Child, Esq., who is lord of the manor. In the grounds is a chalybeate spring, once in high repute, and called St. Blaise's Well, after the patron saint of an ancient oratory established near it. The bishops of Rochester have their seat now at Danbury Palace, in Essex. There are many seats of the gentry in the neighbourhood, among which are Bickley Park, Eden Farm, Hayes Place, Langley Park, Sundridge Park, &c. Thursday is the market day. A cattle fair is held once a month. Extensive fairs for live stock also take place, in Widmore Lane and near the church, on the 14th February and the 5th August. Races are held annually in the month of September.

BROMLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, hund. of Brimstree, in the co. of Salop, 1 mile from Bridgnorth.

BROMLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleshall, hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, not far from Eccleshall.

BROMLEY, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Wortley, and par. of Tankersley, wap. of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the S.W. of Barnsley. It is crossed by the Midland railway.

BROMLEY, ABBOT'S, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 12 miles to the E. of Stafford, and 128 miles from London by the London and North-Western railway. Rugeley station is about 4 miles distant from this place. The par. is situated on the E. side of the river Blithe, a branch of the Trent, and includes the lib. of Bagot's Bromley, and the tnshp. of Bromley Hurst. Blithbury, in a neighbouring parish, was the site of a monastery of the Benedictine order, founded in the first half of the 12th century, and given at the Dissolution to the Pagets. From its proximity to this monastery the parish is supposed to have taken the addition to its name. Bromley was once a market town, and the old townhall and market-house is still standing. The principal business of the place is the malt trade. The parish includes a considerable tract of moorland. Bromley is one of the polling places for the north division of the county. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £187, in the patron. of the Marquis of Anglesea. The church, an ancient edifice altered and modernised, is dedicated to St. Nicholas. It is partly in the perpendicular style, and has a Norman entrance. The Independents have a chapel in the town. There are also a hospital and a free school: the former, founded by L. Bagot in 1702 for six old men, has an income from endowment of about £70 per annum; the latter, founded and endowed by Richard Clarke in 1606, has an income of about £35. The other charities produce about £90 a year. This parish is noted for having kept up the curious old custom, called the "hobby-horse dance," till the middle of the 17th century. The deer's horns, which a number of the dancers used to wear, are preserved in the church. Fairs for the sale of cattle are held on the 11th March, the 22nd May, and the 4th September.

BROMLEY, BAGOT'S. See BAGOT'S BROMLEY, Staffordshire.

BROMLEY, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Tendring, in the co. of Essex, 5 miles to the E. of Colchester.

It is not far from the Great Eastern railway. Petty sessions are occasionally held in the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the annual val. of £608, in the patron. of W. Graham, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. George, and possesses a fine monumental brass of a priest who died in 1432. The parochial charities, consisting of the produce of the church lands, are worth about £35 per annum.

BROMLEY, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Tendring, in the co. of Essex, near Great Bromley. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £493, in the patron. of the Warden and Fellows of Wadham College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are charitable endowments amounting to £10 a year.

BROMLEY REGIS, or KING'S BROMLEY, a par. in the northern div. of the hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, 5 miles to the N. of Lichfield. It is situated on the banks of the river Trent, not far from the London and North-Western railway. This place was the seat of the earls of Mercia, one of whom, Earl Leofric, husband of the famous Godiva, died here in 1057. For a long period after the Norman Conquest it was held by the crown, and thus acquired the distinctive name of "King's" Bromley. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, worth £72, in the patron. of the Prebendary of Alrewas and Weeford, in the cathedral church of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is in the perpendicular style, and contains some fine old family monuments. Here is a free school for boys, founded by Richard Crosse in 1699, which has an income from endowment of £105. The other parochial charities produce about £90 a year. Bromley Hall is the seat of J. Lane, Esq., a descendant of Colonel Lane, whose sister distinguished herself by her brave service to Charles II. after the battle of Worcester. Mary Cowper, an inhabitant of Bromley, is stated by Plot, in his history of the county, to have lived to so great an age that she saw six generations of her descendants.

BROMLEY ST. LEONARD, a par. and suburban district in the Tower div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, 3 miles to the E. of St. Paul's, London. It lies on the W. side of the river Lea, near the Regent's canal, and contains Bromley Newtown. A cut connects the river and the canal. A nunnery of the Benedictine order was founded here about the close of the 11th century, by William, Bishop of London, which flourished till the Dissolution, when it had a revenue of £122. Its site was given to Sir Ralph Sadler in 1540. Part of the parish consists of grass lands and market gardens, but the greater part is now built over, and contains, according to the census of 1861, a population of 24,072. The streets are paved and lighted with gas. There are some print-works, extensive distilleries, maltings, a manufactory of starch, and a brewery. The Tower Hamlets cemetery is partly in this parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, and in the patron. of J. Walter, Esq., M.P. The tithes are in the hands of a layman, but the income arising from pew-rents and surplice fees average £300 a year. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a neat brick building, having been entirely rebuilt in 1843. A missionary church for 700 people was erected in 1861 in the south part of the parish, and is used in the week days for a boys' school. The missionary curate appointed by the vicar receives £100 a year from the London Diocesan Church Building Society. There is a school for boys on Bow Common, also used for divine service on Sundays. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, and there are National and infant schools for 400 children, built in 1851. This parish participates in the benefit of the free school founded at Bow by Sir John Jolles in 1617. Here are situated the almshouses founded by Jolles, but rebuilt and managed by the Drapers' Company; also those founded by John Edmeston, and placed under the same management. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to about £150 per annum. The custom of gavelkind prevails in the manor of Bromley. In 1850 a union workhouse for the City of London was erected in this parish, at a cost of £70,000, designed to accommodate 800 inmates, and in 1862 another union workhouse for the parish of Stepney. The Merchant Seamen's orphan asylum has recently been pulled down, and removed to Snaresbrook.

BROMLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Worthin, hund. of Chirbury, in the co. of Salop, 8 miles to the N. of Bishop's Castle.

BROMPTON, a town and tnshp. in the par. of Gillingham, extending also into that of Chatham, hund. of Chatham and Gillingham, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent. It forms part of the borough of Chatham, and is within the lib. of the city of Rochester. It is situated on the summit of a hill to the N. of the town, overlooking the Medway and the dockyard, and is included within the lines, or fortifications for the defence of the naval arsenal, &c. It is the site of several barracks—infantry, marine, and those late of the East India Company; also of a military hospital and a museum. The inhabitants are principally employed in the dockyard. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £130, in the patron. of the Rev. W. Conway and Miss Conway. The church is a pretty Gothic edifice of stone and flint, with a tower and handsome spire. It was erected in 1848. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here.

BROMPTON, a district par. forming part of the ancient par. of St. Mary Abbots, Kensington, in the hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, 4 miles to the W. of St. Paul's, London. Its population, by the census of 1861, is 14,886. Its present title is the "ward of the Holy Trinity, Brompton" (the whole of Kensington being divided by a late Act of Parliament into three "wards"). The ward of Holy Trinity, Brompton, is now subdivided into three ecclesiastical district parishes, called Holy Trinity, Brompton (or Old Brompton), a perpet. cur., val. £639, in the gift of the Bishop of London; St. Mary's, West Brompton, a perpet. cur. in the gift of the Incumbent of Holy Trinity, Brompton; and St. Paul's, Onslow-square, in private patronage alternately with the bishop. These three churches accommodate 3,700 people. There is also an Episcopal chapel holding 700. The Roman Catholics have an oratory and chapel for 1,200, with several monastic houses affiliated. The Baptists have a chapel for 300, the Consumption Hospital a chapel for 200, and the cemetery a chapel for 100. There are Church schools for 1000 children, and the usual charitable clubs, an almshouse for poor women, and a library for the poor. The "South Kensington," or, more properly, "Brompton," Museum of Art, is in Holy Trinity, Brompton. The Exhibition building of 1862, and the Horticultural Society's gardens, occupy in Brompton the site of the former "Nurseries." The rosaries are now all extinct. Brompton is the site of the large hospital for consumption and diseases of the chest, founded by the Rev. Sir H. Foulis, Bart., and erected in the Tudor style in 1846, from designs by Mr. Francis. It is intended to accommodate 230 patients, and a new east wing has recently been added, through the liberality of the accomplished songstress Madame Goldschmidt, better known by her maiden name of Jenny Lind. Nearly opposite, in the Fulham road, is the Cancer Hospital, erected at a cost of £7,000, from the designs of Messrs. Young. Its principal façade, 130 feet long, is of white brick, with bands of red brick and terra-cotta mouldings. Brompton cemetery was opened for interments in 1840, and occupies 40 acres. It contains a monument to Jackson, the pugilist, and the grave of J. C. Robertson, the promoter of mechanics' institutes. The Jews also have a burial-ground near where Queen Elizabeth's elm once stood.

BROMPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Church-Stoke, hund. of Chirbury, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles to the N.W. of Bishop's Castle.

BROMPTON, a par. in the wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles to the S.W. of Scarborough. It is situated near the river Derwent and the York and Scarborough section of the North-Eastern railway, and contains the tnshps. of Sawdon, Snainton, and Troutsdale. This place is said to have been a seat of the kings of Northumbria; and at Castle Hill, near the village, are still traces of an old fortress. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £103, in the patron. of Sir George Cayley, Bart. The church is of large size, and is dedicated to All Saints. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. The parochial charities produce £7 a year. High Hall, or Brompton House, has been the seat of the Cayley family, to whom the manor belongs, for above two centuries. John of Brompton, a monkish chronicler, is conjectured to have been a native of this place.

BROMPTON, a chplry. in the par. of Northallerton, and wap. of Allertonshire, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the N. of Northallerton. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway. Westward of the village is Standard Hill, where the famous battle of the Standard was fought between the Scots and English in 1138, and in which the former, under their king, David I., were defeated. The inhabitants of the village are chiefly employed in the linen manufacture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, worth £120, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Durham. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels here. There are some charities of trifling value.

BROMPTON PATRICK, a par. in the waps. of East and West Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the E. of Leyburn. Arrathorne, Newton-le-Willows, and Hunton are tnshps. of this par. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, of the val. of £100, in the gift of the Bishop of Chester. The church is dedicated to St. Patrick. Here is a small free school, endowed in 1707, by Samuel Atkinson, with an income of about £20. The other parochial charities produce £7 a year.

BROMPTON RALPH, a par. in the hund. of Williton and Freemanners, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the N. of Wiveliscombe. It is situated in a pleasant wooded district at the eastern extremity of Brendon Hill. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the val. of £347, in the gift of J. Blommart, Esq., and Miss Escott. The church, partly rebuilt about 1740, is dedicated to St. Mary. Near the village are vestiges of a Roman camp. The West Somerset hounds meet here.

BROMPTON REGIS, a par. in the hund. of Williton and Freemanners, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the N.E. of Dulverton. It lies at the south foot of Brendon Hill, on the banks of the river Exe, and contains the site of a Dominican priory, founded in the reign of Henry II., and valued at the Dissolution at about £99. Brompton was anciently a hundred and a market town. Good building stone is abundant in the neighbourhood. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the val. of £400, in the gift of the Master and Fellows of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains a carved screen. Cattle fairs are held in May and October, each lasting four days.

BROMPTON-UPON-SWALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Easby, wap. of East Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the E. of Richmond. Citadilla is a hmlt. of this tnshp.

BROMSBERROW, a par. in the hund. of Botloe, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles to the S.E. of Ledbury, and 11 miles to the N.W. of Gloucester. It lies on the border of Worcestershire, near the river Leden. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, of the val. of £339, in the patron. of Earl Beauchamp. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains several monuments and the tombs of the Yateses, who had their seat at Bromsberrow Place. The charitable endowments are worth about £5 a year.

BROMSGROVE, a par. and market town in the upper div. of the hund. of Halfshire, in the co. of Worcester, 11 miles to the N.E. of Worcester, and 116 miles from London by road, or 127 miles by the London and North-Western railway. It has a station on the Bristol and Birmingham section of the Midland railway, the station itself being situated in the adjoining parish of Stoke Prior. This place was a royal demesne for some time after the Norman Conquest, and was anciently called Bremesgrave. In the reign of Edward I. the town sent two members to parliament. Burcot, the Rock, and Sidemoor, are hmlts. of this par.—Bromsgrove is situated in a rich and beautiful valley at the southern foot of the Lickey hills, on the banks of the river Salwarp, which, with several small streams, has its source in the neighbourhood. Among these are the Rea, which runs through Birmingham, and the Arrow. The Lickey range, which is of considerable elevation, and commands extensive and diversified prospects, consists chiefly of quartzose sandstone. The great gravel-beds of Oxfordshire are believed to have been derived from these hills. One of the springs on the Lickey supplies two streams, one of which, joining the Rea, falls with the Trent into the North Sea, and the other, joining the Stour, falls with the Severn into the Irish Sea. On the hills are found the cranberry and the purple cinquefoil.—The town consists chiefly of one long street, with others branching off right and left. The High-street is spacious, containing many well-built houses and shops, interspersed with a few ancient wood-framed houses of divers colours, giving a picturesque appearance to the place. The town has been much improved since 1846, under an Act passed for that purpose, and is now well paved, lighted with gas, and supplied with abundance of water by means of pumps. Near the middle of the town is the townhall, erected in 1832, beneath which is a market-house, principally used for butter and poultry. The principal trade of the town is the manufacture of nails, needles, and buttons. In the neighbourhood are extensive beds of salt and a brine spring, the discovery of which led to the establishment of the great works in the adjoining parish of Stoke-Prior. The linen manufacture is no longer carried on at Bromsgrove, nor is the clothing trade mentioned by Leland; but there are coach factories for building railway carriages, and some malting establishments.—Bromsgrove is the seat of a Poor-law Union, the head of a County Court district, and one of the polling places for the eastern division of the county. The town contains a police station, a branch bank of the Stourbridge and Kidderminster Banking Company, and a savings-bank. The Union poorhouse, a large brick building, is about a mile to the north of the town. Petty sessions are held by the county magistrates every Tuesday in the townhall, and the county court meets once a month.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, of the yearly val. of £1,005, in the gift of the dean and chapter, to whom belong the rectorial tithes, compounded at £1,227 per annum, and about 40 acres of glebe land, let to the Baroness Windsor. They are also lords of the manor. The church, which stands on high ground, is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. It is very old, having been built in the reign of Henry I., and is partly in the Norman and partly in the perpendicular styles of architecture. It has a very fine tower and spire, rising to the height of 189 feet, and contains some good stained windows and monuments of the Talbots, Lytteltons, and others. It underwent an entire restoration in 1858, under the direction of the eminent architect, G. G. Scott, at the cost of £5,600. There are two district churches, endowed from the vicarage—one called Christ Church, at Catshill, the living of which is a cur. worth £90, in the gift of the vicar of the parish; the other, "the Lickey," likewise a perpet. cur.,* val. £80, also in the gift of the vicar. In the town are chapels belonging to the Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, and Roman Catholics. Here is a free grammar school founded by Edward VI., and subsequently further endowed by Sir Thomas Cookes, who also established, in connection with it, six scholarships and six fellowships in Worcester College, Oxford. There are a literary and scientific institution, a mechanics' institute, a school of design, National, British, and infant schools, and some endowed almshouses. The parochial charities amount altogether to about £350 a year.—At Dadford, a hmlt. of Bromsgrove, are some remains of a small priory, founded in the 12th century, on the site of which the vicar intends building a chapel. Three miles from the town, on the N. side of the Lickey hills, is Hawkesley House, which was garrisoned by the parliament during the Civil War, and besieged and taken by the king in May, 1645. Bromsgrove was on that occasion the head-quarters of the royalist troops. There is a mineral spring at Barnet Green. Tuesday is the market day for corn and other produce, and a toll-free market is held for cattle on the last Tuesday in the month. Fairs are held on the 24th June and the 1st October, and a statute fair for hiring servants on the Wednesday before the 29th September. The Birmingham and Worcester canal passes within 3 miles of the town.

BROMSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter, hund. of Ringslow, lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, near Broadstairs.

BROMWICH, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Aston, hund. of Hemlingford, in the co. of Warwick, 4 miles to the N.E. of Birmingham.

BROMWICH, WEST, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles to the N.W. of Birmingham. It a station on the Birmingham and Wolverhampton branch of the Great Western railway. The parish is situated in the centre of a district abounding in iron and coal, on the banks of the river Tame, a branch of the Trent. The growth of the town has been very rapid, the result of the numerous extensive works and factories established in the neighbourhood. It extends above 3 miles in length, and contains, besides the manufactories and the houses of the workpeople, many good and handsome residences. The various branches of the hardware manufacture form the chief business of the place. Among the articles manufactured are guns, gun-locks, swords, bayonets, fireirons, locks, chains, sadlers' ironmongery, nails, and ornamental ironwork. Here are also many smelting furnaces, foundries, slitting mills, glass-works, collieries, &c. The gas-works are on a scale of immense extent, and furnish a supply for nearly the whole of Birmingham, where one of the stations is, besides Wednesbury, Dudley, and other neighbouring towns. The pipes employed for the conveyance of the gas have an aggregate length of above 150 miles. The Birmingham and Wolverhampton canal crosses the parish. West Bromwich is the seat of a Poor-law Union and the head of a County Court district. Petty sessions are held weekly, and polling for the southern division of the county takes place here. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £530, in the gift of the Earl of Dartmouth. The church, an ancient edifice, partly rebuilt about 1785, is dedicated to All Saints. There is a parsonage house, the gift of the late Earl of Dartmouth. There are four other churches—Christ Church, St. James's, St. Peter's, and Trinity Church. The livings are curacies: that of Christ Church, worth £300, is in the gift of the Earl of Dartmouth; that of St. James's, £200, in the same patron.; that of Trinity Church, £200, in the gift of trustees; and that of St. Peter's in the patron. of the bishop. Christ Church was built about 1828, and is a large and handsome structure in the perpendicular style, with a good tower; St. Peter's was erected in 1860. The chapels belonging to the Dissenters are numerous, and include seven for Wesleyans, three each for Independents and Primitive Methodists, two for Baptists, and one for Roman Catholics. There are several literary and mechanics' institutions, National and other schools. The parochial charities are very considerable. A cemetery was formed in 1859, in which there are two small chapels. To the E. of the town is Sandwell Park, the seat of the Earl of Dartmouth. It is pleasantly situated in a valley, and the grounds are well planted. The house stands on the site of Sandwell Priory, a small Benedictine house, founded in the reign of Henry II. This parish was the birthplace of William Parsons, porter to James I., and noted for his gigantic size and strength.

BROMYARD, a par. and market town in the hund. of Broxash, in the co. of Hereford, 14 miles to the N.E. of Hereford, the same distance S.W. of Worcester, and 125 miles from London by road, or 134 miles by the Great Western and West Midland railways. It is situated in a beautiful country, on the banks of the river Frome, and contains the chplry. of Brockhampton, and the tnshps. of Linton, Norton, and Winslow. In the reign of Edward I. this town sent representatives to parliament, but the franchise was afterwards given up by the inhabitants. Charles I. was here with his court in September, 1645, when on his way to relieve Hereford, besieged by the parliament. There are hop-grounds and many orchards in this parish. The town is irregularly built, and many of the houses are very old and timber-framed. It is, however, gradually improving, and is now lighted with gas, introduced in 1856. There is a convenient market-place and a police station, the latter erected in 1844. Petty sessions are held once a week. Bromyard is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and contains the Union house. It is also the head of a County Court district, and a polling place for the county elections. There is a savings-bank and a dispensary. The trade of the town is chiefly in agricultural produce, a little being done in malting and tanning. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, worth £600, in the gift of the Bishop of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has been recently repaired and redecorated. It is a large ancient building with a Norman doorway on the south side, and contains an altar-tomb with the effigies of a knight (one of the Baskervilles), a monument to Phineas Jackson, vicar, who died in 1681, and a handsome painted east window, as well as three painted memorial windows. There are chapels belonging to the Independents and Primitive Methodists. The free grammar school, founded and endowed by Queen Elizabeth, was further endowed by Alderman John Perryns, of the Goldsmiths' Company, and in 1850 this company munificently augmented the original endowments, and appointed an efficient master. An almshouse for seven women was endowed by Phineas Jackson with property producing about £60 a year. There are some other charities, and National and British schools. A new line of railway has been marked out between Worcester and Bromyard. About 4 miles from the town is an old Roman encampment, situated on Walls Hill. The principal seats in the vicinity are Clayter Park and Buckenhall. Monday is the market day. Fairs are held on the Thursday before the 25th March, the 3rd May, the Thursday before St. James's Day, the 24th October, and the second Monday in December.

BRONCASTELLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel-darnfawr, hund. of Geneur Glynn, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 12 miles to the E. of Aberystwith. It is situated at the foot of Plinlimmon.

BRONCOED, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Mold, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, not far from Mold. It includes the hmlt. of Gwernymynnyd.

BRONGWYN, a par. in the hund. of Troedyraur, in the co. of Cardigan, 2 miles to the N.W. of Newcastle Emlyn. It is situated on the N. side of the Teifi, and is intersected by a small stream which falls into the river. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Penbryn, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Independents have a chapel here. The principal mansion is Abercery.

BRONIARTH, UPPER and LOWER, tnshps. in the par. of Gialsfield, hund. of Pool, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 4 miles to the N.W. of Welsh Pool.

BRONINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Hanmer, hund. of Maylor, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 10 miles to the S.E. of Wrexham.

BRONLLIS, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbister, hund. of Knighton, in the co. of Radnor, South Wales, 10 miles to the W. of Knighton. It is near the head of the river Ithon, a branch of the Wye.

BRONLLYS. See BRYNLLIS, Brecknockshire.

BRONYGARTH, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Martin, hund. of Oswestry, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles to the N. of Oswestry.

BRON-Y-WOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandyssil, hund. of Newtown, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 2 miles from Montgomery. It is near the river Severn.

BROOK, a par. in the lib. of West Medina, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Southampton, 7 miles to the S.W. of Newport. It is pleasantly situated on the sea-coast, at the foot of Brook Down, which rises about 500 feet above the level of the sea, and commands a fine view over the sea, the island, the coast of Hampshire, and sometimes as far as the Isle of Portland. On the down are several barrows and traces of an old camp. A coast-guard station is established here. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £250, in the gift of the Rev. T. Bowerman. The little church of St. Mary, picturesquely perched on the lower slopes of Alton-down, was completely destroyed by fire a few days before Christmas Day, 1862. Brook House is the principal residence.

BROOK, a hmlt. in the par. of Bramshaw, hund. of Redbridge, in the co. of Southampton, 6 miles to the S.W. of Romsey.

BROOK, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of King's Sombourn, in the co. of Southampton, 6 miles to the N. of Romsey.

BROOK, a par. in the hund. of Chart and Longbridge, extending also into the hund. of Wye, in the lathe of Scray, and co. of Kent, 4 miles to the E. of Ashford. It lies near the South-Eastern railway, on which Ashford is a station. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, worth £171, in the gift of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BROOKBOROUGH, a vil. in the par. of Aghavea, and bar. of Magherastephana, in the co. of Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 10 miles to the S.E. of Enniskillen. Petty sessions are held and a police force is stationed here. There is a Wesleyan chapel and a dispensary in the village. Fairs for cattle and provisions are held once a month.

BROOKE, a par. in the hund. of Clavering, in the co. of Norfolk, 7 miles to the S. of Norwich, and 7 N.E. of Flordon railway station. The abbots of St. Edmund's Bury anciently held this place, and obtained from Edward I. the privilege of holding a market and fair, but they have long been discontinued. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £216, in the gift of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Peter, and contains some fresco paintings, recently discovered. The registers date from the year 1558. A Baptist chapel was erected here in 1839; and there is an association for improving the condition of the agricultural population by means of evening lectures and schools. This village also claims the distinction of having originated, in 1853, the parochial harvest festivals, which have since been adopted in most of the agricultural districts. The chief seats are Brooke House, Brooke Lodge, and Brooke Hall; the latter a noble mansion in the Grecian style, with a fine sheet of water, was built in 1830 by the Rev. J. Holmes, who is lord of the manor and impropriator of the great tithes. The parochial charities consist chiefly of the produce of the town lands, and amount to about £180 per annum, which is mainly employed in lieu of church-rates. Brooke was the birthplace (1768) of the distinguished surgeon, Sir Astley Cooper.

BROOKE, a par. in the hund. of Oakham-soke, in the co. of Rutland, 3 miles to the S. of Oakham. It is situated on the small river Gwash, and was the site of a small Augustine priory, founded in the reign of Richard I. by Hugh de Ferrers. It was subordinate to the abbey of Kenilworth, and had a revenue at the Dissolution of about £44. Some slight remains of the building exist. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Oakham, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The charitable endowments, consisting of lands given for the benefit of the poor, are worth £17 a year.

BROOKEND, a hmlt. in the par. of Northill, hund. of Wixamtree, in the co. of Bedford, 3 miles to the N.W. of Biggleswade.

BROOKEND, a hmlt. in the par. of Shenley, and hund. of Cottesloe, in the co. of Buckingham, 3 miles to the W. of Fenny Stratford.

BROOKESBY, a par. in the eastern div. of the hund. of Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, 6 miles to the W. of Melton Mowbray. It is situated on the river Wreak, and is a station on the Melton, Oakham, Stamford, and Peterborough branch of the Midland railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £250, in the gift of Lady Listowel. The church is dedicated to St. Michael, and contains monuments of the Villiers family, who held the manor for several centuries, and whose seat was Brookesby Hall. Here was born, in 1592, George Villiers, favourite of James I., and created by him first Duke of Buckingham.

BROOK GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Hammersmith, hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, near Hammersmith. It is pleasantly situated on the Thames, and contains Episcopal and Roman Catholic chapels, and some almshouses. See HAMMERSMITH.

BROOKHAMPTON, a tythg. in the par. of Newington, hund. of Ewelme, in the co. of Oxford, 6 miles to the N.W. of Watlington.

BROOKHAMPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Holdgate, hund. of Munslow, in the co. of Salop, 7 miles to the S.W. of Much Wenlock.

BROOKHAMPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ombersley, hund. of Oswaldslow, in the co. of Worcester, near Ombersley.

BROOKHOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Laughton-en-le-Morthen, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S.W. of Tickhill.

BROOKISTONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Cheadle, and hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, not far from Cheadle.

BROOKLAND, a par. in the hund. of Aloesbridge, lathe of Shepway, in the co. of Kent, 4 miles to the W. of Romney. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, worth £93, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is in the early English style, and is dedicated to St. Augustine. There are some charities of small value.

BROOKLODGE, a vil. in the bar. of Barrymore, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.E. of Cork.

BROOK, NORTH and SOUTH, tythgs. in the par. of Mitcheldever, and hund. of the same name, in the co. of Southampton, 6 miles to the N. of Winchester.

BROOKROYD, a hmlt. in the par. of Batley, and wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the W. of Wakefield.

BROOK STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of South Weald, hund. of Chafford, in the co. of Essex, 1 mile to the S.W. of Brentwood. The Great Eastern railway runs by it. The hmlt. is situated on the small river Ingerburn, which falls into the Thames, and on the Roman road from London to Colchester. A hospital for lepers was founded here before 1292.

BROOM, a hmlt. in the par. of Southill, hund. of Wixamtree, in the co. of Bedford, 2 miles from Biggleswade. It is near the Great Northern railway.

BROOM, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Oswald, Durham, Chester ward, in the co. palatine of Durham, 2 miles to the W. of Durham.

BROOM, a tnshp. united with Rowton, in the pars. of Clungerford, Hopesay, and Stokesay, hund. of Purslow, in the co. of Salop, 7 miles to the S.E. of Bishop's Castle.

BROOM, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Seisdon, and till lately in the co. of Stafford, but lying detached, and under the recent Act of Parliament made part of the co. of Worcester, 5 miles to the S.W. of Kidderminster, its post town, and 4 miles from Stourbridge. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, of the val. of £320, in the gift of J. G. Bourne, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small brick building with a tower. In the interior is a handsome marble monument to Mrs. Hill, by Flaxman. There is a school founded by the trustees of the late Earl Dudley, and some small charities. Broom House is the principal residence. Earl Dudley is lord of the manor.

BROOM, a hmlt. in the par. of Bidford, hund. of Barlichway, in the co. of Warwick, 2 miles to the S. of Alcester.

BROOMBILL, or BROMBIL, a hmlt. in the par. of Margam, hund. of Newcastle, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 2 miles from Aberavon. It is chiefly inhabited by the miners.

BROOME, a par. in the hund. of Loddon, in the co. of Norfolk, 2 miles to the N. of Bungay, in Suffolk. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £286, in the gift of Sir W. F. Middleton, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The poor have the benefit of several charitable endowments, which produce about £70 per annum.

BROOME, a tnshp. in the par. of Cardington, hund. of Munslow, in the co. of Salop, 5 miles to the N.E. of Church Stretton.

BROOMFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, in the co. of Essex, 2 miles to the N. of Chelmsford. It lies on the banks of the river Chelmer, not far from the Great Eastern railway. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £224, in the gift of the Bishop of Rochester. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities are worth about £25, and consist of the income derived from the church lands.

BROOMFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 6 miles to the S.E. of Maidstone. It is in a hilly district, on the N. side of King's Wood, and contains some hop-grounds. The living is a perpet. cur. united to that of Leeds, a neighbouring parish, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret.

BROOMFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Andersfield, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles to the N. of Taunton. Bridgwater is its post town. It is situated under the Quantock Hills, and commands fine views over the country, the river Parret, and the Bristol Channel. The hills of South Wales are also visible. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, worth £78, in the gift of Colonel Hamilton. In the church are several family monuments, and in the churchyard a stone cross. There are charitable endowments for the poor, which produce £22 per annum. Broomfield House is one of the chief residences.

BROOMFLEET, a tnshp. in the par. of South Cave, wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles to the S.W. of Beverley. There are some small charities, and a chapel for Wesleyans.

BROOMHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Wrenbury, hund. of Nantwich, in the co. palatine of Chester, 3 miles to the S. of Nantwich.

BROOMHALL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Eccleshall-Bierlow, par. of Sheffield, and wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the S.W. of Sheffield.

BROOMHAUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Andrew Bywell, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 8 miles to the E. of Hexham. It lies near the Newcastle and Carlisle railway.

BROOMHILL, a par. partly in the lib. of Romney Marsh, lathe of Shepway, in the co. of Kent, and partly in the hund. of Goldspur, rape of Hastings, in the co. of Sussex, 3 miles to the N. of Rye. It is a member of New Romney cinque port. There is no church.

BROOMHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Weeting, hund. of Grimshoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the N. of Brandon. Here was once an Austin priory, and the "Walsingham way" for pilgrims passed near it.

BROOMHOLM. See BROMHOLME, Norfolk.

BROOMHOPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Birtley, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 3 miles to the E. of Bellingham. It is joined to the tnshp. of Buteland.

BROOMHOUSE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Abbeylands, and par. of Alnwick, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 1 mile from Alnwick.

BROOMIEKNOWE, a hmlt. in the par. of Heriot, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 10 miles to the S. of Dalkeith. It is under the Lammermuir Hills.

BROOMIELAW, NORTH and SOUTH, districts in the city of Glasgow, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland. They are situated on the banks of the Clyde, by the great basin of the harbour, near the stone bridge of seven arches erected by Telford.

BROOMLANDS, a hmlt. in the par. of Inchinnan, Upper ward, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 4 miles to the N. of Paisley. It is near the Clyde.

BROOMLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Peter Bywell, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 7 miles to the E. of Hexham.

BROOM PARK, a tnshp. in the par. of Edlingham, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 5 miles to the W. of Alnwick.

BROOMRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ford, ward of Glendale, in the co. of Northumberland, 6 miles to the N. of Wooler. Opinions are divided between the claims of this place and Brinkburn, to be the ancient Saxon Brunanburgh, the scene of Athelstan's great victory over the Scots and Danes in 938. In the neighbourhood is Haltwell Sweire, where, in 1558, the Scots, under the Earl of Bothwell, engaged a party of English, under Sir Henry Percy.

BROOMSTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of East Rudham, hund. of Gallow, in the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles to the W. of Fakenham.

BROOMY LODGE, an ext. par. district in the lower div. of the hund. of Fordingbridge, in the co. of Southampton, 2 miles to the N. of Ringwood.

BRORA, a vil. in the par. of Clyne, in the co. of Sutherland, Scotland, 11 miles to the N.E. of Dornoch. It is situated on the banks of the river Brora, which, flowing through the wilds of Strathbrora and Brora Loch, falls into Dornoch Frith. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in quarrying sandstone, which, at certain points along the coast, is overlaid by a seam of coal, with layers of pyritous shale. A fair is held in October.

BROSAEDTHYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Gwyddelwern, hund. of Edernion, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, 2 miles from Corwen.

BROSELEY, a par. and market town in the franchise or borough of Wenlock, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles to the E. of Much Wenlock, 13 miles to the S.E. of Shrewsbury, and 142 miles to the N.W. of London. The Severn Valley railway, which is now completed, passes through the lower part of the parish. It is situated on the W. bank of the river Severn, in a district abounding in iron and coal, and a few years since was a very flourishing place, chiefly owing to the extensive manufacture of iron; but of all the blast furnaces in operation then, not one exists now. The town is irregularly built, and extends westward from the river about 2 miles. It has one principal street, and is lighted with gas. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the numerous coal-mines, and in the manufacture of the superior glazed tobacco-pipes for which Broseley has long been celebrated. Brick and tile-making is also carried on to a considerable extent. The encaustic tile-works of Messrs. Maw are partly in this parish. There is a townhall, with a market-house and a small prison connected with it. The news-rooms and library are situated in High-street, and form part of this building. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. with that of Linley united, of £452, in the gift of Lord Forester. It is at present held by the Rev. B. H. Cobbold, M.A., late Archdeacon of Ningpo, China. The church, a stone structure in the perpendicular style, with a beautiful square tower, is dedicated to All Saints. It was rebuilt in 1845, at a cost of £9,000, being almost entirely defrayed by voluntary contributions. The district of Jackfield, consisting of that part of the parish of Broseley which lies on the right bank of the Severn, was formed into a separate ecclesiastical district in 1862; and a church is in course of erection to the memory of G. Pritchard, Esq., late high sheriff of Salop. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £50, in the gift of F. B. Harries, Esq. The Baptists, Wesleyans, Independents, and Primitive Methodists have chapels in the town. There are National and infant schools. The school-house is a handsome brick building in the Elizabethan style of architecture, erected in 1854 at a cost of £1,600. In 1711 a spring of petroleum was discovered near Broseley, which at one time yielded several barrels of oil daily. It almost entirely disappeared on the sinking of a coal-pit near the spot about 1755. The market is on Wednesday, and fairs are held on the last Tuesday in April and the 28th October.

BROSNA, a par. in the bar. of Trughanacmy, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 11 miles to the S.E. of Listowel. It is situated in a mountainous district, with large tracts of bog, on the banks of the small river Clydagh. The parish is very extensive, spreading over an area of 11,960 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe, of the val. of £159, in the gift of the bishop. There is no church.

BROSNA, a vil. in the par. of Shinrone, and bar. of Clonlisk, King's County, in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N.W. of Roscrea. It is seated at the foot of the Slievebloom Mountains, on the Little Brosna river, a feeder of the Shannon, into which it falls below Bannagher. There is a police station in the village.

BROTHERCROSS HUNDRED, one of the 33 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Norfolk, situated in the western parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the German Ocean, on the E. by the hund. of North Greenhoe, on the S. by the hund. of Gallow, and on the W. by the hund. of Smithdon. It contains the pars. of Burnham Deepdale, Burnham Norton, Burnham Overy, Burnham Thorpe, Burnham Sutton, Burnham Ulph, Burnham Westgate, North Creake, South Creake, and Waterden. It comprises an area of about 18,720 acres.

BROTHERICK. See BROTHERWICK, Northumberland.

BROTHERTOFT, a chplry. in the par. and wap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles to the N.W. of Boston. The Boston and Lincoln branch of the Great Northern railway passes near it. There are charitable endowments for the benefit of the poor, which produce about £40 per annum.

BROTHERTON, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Barkstone Ash, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.E. of Pontefract. It is situated on the banks of the river Aire, not far from the Midland railway, and contains the tnshps. of Brotherton, Byrome with Poole, and Sutton. Good limestone is abundant in the district. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £192, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of York. The church is dedicated to St. Edward the Confessor. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, and there are some charities of small value, including a bequest for a school. This place gave the surname De Brotherton to Thomas Plantagenet, son of Edward I., afterwards created Earl of Norfolk. He was born on the 1st June, 1300, his mother, Queen Margaret, being here at the time with a hunting party.

BROTHERWICK, or BROTHERICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Warkworth, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 6 miles to the S.E. of Alnwick. It is situated on the N. bank of the river Coquet.

BROTTON, a par. in the eastern div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the N.E. of Guisborough. It is situated on the seacoast, and includes the tnshps. of Kilton and Skiningrove. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Skelton, in the dioc. of York. The church stands on the summit of a lofty ridge commanding a good sea view.

BROUGH, a tnshp. joined with Shatton, in the par. of Hope, hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 3 miles to the E. of Castleton. It is watered by two brooks, called the Bradwell and the Noe, which here unite. Near their junction is Brough Castle, the site of a Roman station, where coins, busts, and other Roman antiquities have been found. A castle is said to have stood here belonging to the Peverils.

BROUGH, or BURGH-UNDER-STAINMORE, a par. and market town in East ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 8 miles to the S.E. of Appleby, and 261 N.W. of London. The South Durham and Lancashire Union railway, from Barnard Castle to Tebay, has a station at Barras-on-Stainmore, in this parish. Another line, the Eden Valley, runs from Kirkby-Stephen to Clifton, passing about 2 miles from Brough, and connects the Lancaster and Carlisle with the Stockton and Darlington railway. The par., which is 8 miles in length, by 5 in breadth, lies on the confines of Yorkshire, in a wild and hilly country on the river Eden, and contains the tnshps. of Sowerby and Hilbeck, and the chplry. of Stainmore. The town is supposed to stand on the site of the ancient Roman Verteræ, a station on the Watling Street. A castle was founded here at a very early period, and the town was of some importance before the Norman Conquest. The town was sacked and the castle nearly destroyed by William, King of Scotland, in 1174. After being restored, and again nearly demolished by an accidental fire, in 1521, the castle was again restored in 1661, by Anne Clifford, Countess of Pembroke. Some parts of the building still remain, but in a very dilapidated condition. The town consists chiefly of one long street, and is intersected by a small stream, a branch of the Eden. The two parts of the town are distinguished as Church Brough and Market Brough. There are iron and lead mines in the vicinity, and some quarries of limestone and freestone. Coals are also worked, but are of inferior quality. There is a flour-mill, formerly part of a cotton-mill. A good posting trade was carried on here before the introduction of railways. Brough is a polling place for the county, and petty sessions are held here the first Thursday in every month. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, of the val. of £492, in the patron. of the Provost and Fellows of Queen's College, Oxford, to whom this church was appropriated, in 1344, by Pope Clement VI., they having previously received a grant of the advowson from Edward III. The church, situated in Church Brough, is a very ancient structure, with a good tower built in 1513, and is dedicated to St. Michael. It contains some fine stained windows, much disfigured by careless repairs, and several monuments. The pulpit is carved out of a single stone. There is a church at Stainmore, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £119, in the gift of Sir R. Tufton, Bart. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels in the town. Here was formerly a free grammar school, which had part of the endowment of a hospital, founded in 1506 by John Brunskill. It is now incorporated with the National school, which receives a government grant of £7 per annum. Many Roman coins and other remains have been discovered here. On Stainmore is part of the Rere Cross, an ancient boundary mark. Thursday is the market day. Fairs are held on the second Thursday in every month from January to April, on the Thursday before Whitsuntide, and on the 30th September. That of September, called Brough Hill fair, is held on a common 2 miles from the town, and is noted as a large fair for cattle, hardware, apparel, and general merchandise. On the Eve of the Epiphany there was an annual procession here, called the "Carrying of the Holling or Holy Tree," a festival supposed to be peculiar to this place, but it has recently been discontinued.

BROUGH, or BROUGH DUNNET, a vil. in the co. of Caithness, Scotland, 4 miles to the N. of Castletown. It is on the coast not far from Dunnet Head, and has a small haven.

BROUGH, or BROUGH FERRY, a hmlt. in the par. of Elloughton, wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 10 miles to the W. of Hull. It is situated on the N. bank of the Humber, and is a station on the Hull, Selby, and Milford Junction railway. Here is a ferry across the river. This place was the site of the Roman station, Ad Petuariam.

BROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Skipsea, wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 9 miles to the E. of Great Driffield. It is a joint township with Dringhoe.

BROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Catterick, and wap. of East Hang, North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S.E. of Richmond. It was the site of a hospital, founded about the end of the 13th century. Brough Hall, built in the reign of Charles I., is the seat of the Lawsons.

BROUGHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitchurch, hund. of North Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles from Whitchurch.

BROUGHAM, a par. and tnshp. in West ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 2 miles to the S. of Penrith. It is situated on the border of Cumberland, on the banks of the rivers Eamont and Lowther, which here unite, and contains the hmlts. of Hornby, Moorhouses, and Woodside.—Brougham was the site of the Roman station, Brovacum. A town is said to have existed here in Saxon times, called Burgham, and after the Norman Conquest a castle was founded by Roger de Clifford, who is probably referred to in the inscription, "This made Roger," placed over one of the gateways. The castle was rebuilt after being burnt by the Scots, in 1412. James I. was entertained here in August, 1617, on his return from Scotland. During the Civil War the castle received much injury, but it was rebuilt in 1651 by Anne, Countess of Pembroke. The ruins stand on a wooded hill, about a mile from Brougham Hall, the magnificent seat of the great Lord Brougham, and consist chiefly of the massive keep, and a fine vaulted room, which is believed to have been the chapel. They are now the property of Sir Richard Tufton, Bart., who is lord of the manor of Oglebird and Whinfell Park, with free chase and warren belonging thereto.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £290, in the patron. of Sir R. Tufton, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Ninian, and is situated in a lonely dale, at a short distance from the village, on a curve of the river Eamont. In the floor of the chancel are three large slabs, inlaid with ornamental brasses and figures in devotional attitudes, belonging to the Burgham and Brougham families. The earliest bears the date 1570. The church was rebuilt in 1656 by the Countess of Pembroke, and is commonly called Nine-kirks. The countess also rebuilt the chapel dedicated to St. Wilfrid, which has lately been re-decorated with great magnificence by Lord Brougham; she also bequeathed £4 a year for the benefit of the poor.—About a mile from the old castle, and 1½ from Penrith, is Brougham Hall, the seat of Lord Brougham and Vaux, whose family is believed to have settled here before the Norman Conquest. It is a noble mansion, principally modern, in the castellated style, with embrasured parapets and turrets, and situated on a lofty hill commanding a fine view over the surrounding country. From the beauty of the prospect it has been called "the Windsor of the North." The interior is even more magnificent than the exterior appearance would lead one to suppose. The banqueting hall is a spacious apartment, 45 feet by 25, with an altitude of 20 feet, lit by six richly painted and stained-glass windows of German manufacture, bearing dates from 1492 to 1667. The floor is inlaid with tesselated Roman tiles, and the walls hung with ancient armour and implements of war, while the ceiling is of carved oak resting on spandrels, enriched with gold and brilliant colours. The library, drawing-rooms, and other apartments, are richly decorated and furnished in the old English style, and contain many objects of great interest to the admirers of art and lovers of the antique. The Norman passage and bedroom are especially attractive, and are said to have been much admired by the Prince of Wales, when he paid a visit to Lord Brougham in May, 1857.—Not far from the ruins of Brougham Castle, on the road from Appleby to Penrith, is the pillar, erected in 1650 by Anne, Countess of Pembroke, in memory of her last parting with her mother, the Countess Dowager of Cumberland, who died a few weeks afterwards at the castle. It is a low octagonal pillar, surmounted by an obelisk, the facings bearing coats of arms, a sun-dial, and a commemorative inscription. In the vicinity of Brougham are Clifton Moor, the scene of a skirmish in 1745 between the Duke of Cumberland and the Scots; Mayburgh's Mystic Round, with its Druidical stones; and Arthur's Round Table.—The par. comprises 6,040 acres, which are owned by Sir Richard Tufton, Bart., the lord of the manor of Oglebird and Whinfell Park; Lord Brougham, the mesne lord of Brougham Hall and the manor thereto belonging; and the Earl of Lonsdale.

BROUGH HALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Ronton, hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 5 miles to the W. of Stafford.

BROUGH HEAD. See Burgh Head, Scotland.

BROUGHSHANE, a vil. in the par. of Racavan, bar. of Lower Antrim, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles to the N.E. of Ballymena. It is seated on the Braid rivulet, a branch of the river Main. The parish church stands in the village, which has also a Presbyterian chapel, a National school, and a dispensary. A police force is stationed here. A weekly market is held on Tuesday, and fairs on the 17th June and the 3rd September.

BROUGH-SOWERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Brough, East ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 9 miles S.E. of Appleby.

BROUGHTON See Bierton, Buckinghamshire.

BROUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Newport, in the co. of Buckingham, 3 miles to the S.E. of Newport Pagnell, and 48 from London. It is situated on the border of Bedfordshire, on the E. side of the river Ouzel. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, worth £97, in the patron. of J. Praed, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The charitable endowments, including a bequest for education, amount to about £40 a year.

BROUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wrexham, and hund. of Bromfield, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, not far from Wrexham. In the neighbourhood are numerous collieries, lead-works, iron-works, and foundries, giving employment to many of the inhabitants.

BROUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawarden, hund. of Mold, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 4 miles to the W. of Chester. It is a station on the Mold branch of the Chester and Holyhead railway. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Hawarden, in the dioc. of Chester. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Near the village is Hawarden Park, the seat of Sir S. R. Glynne, Bart.

BROUGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Monknash, hund. of Ogmore, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 5 miles to the S.W. of Cowbridge.

BROUGHTON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Thorngate, Romsey div. of the co. of Southampton, 3 miles to the W. of Stockbridge, its post town. It lies near the Roman road from Winchester to Salisbury, and is thought by some to have been the site of the station Brigæ. The par. contains the tythg. of Frenchmoor, and the chplry. of Pittleworth. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. with the perpet. cur.* of Bossington attached, of £748, in the patron. of H. Lee, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are chapels belonging to the Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists, and a free school endowed in 1601 by Thomas Dowse, the income of which is about £70 per annum. There are some other charitable endowments, the annual value of which is about £40 a year. A pleasure fair is held in the village on the first Monday in June.

BROUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Hurstingstone, in the co. of Huntingdon, 5 miles to the N.E. of Huntingdon. It is watered by a small stream, a branch of the river Nen. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £283, in the patron. of the Rev. T. Johnston. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

BROUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. and borough of Manchester, hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 1 mile to the N. of Manchester. It is pleasantly situated on elevated ground, and includes the vil. of Kersall. There are many good houses and pleasant residences. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, in the patron. of trustees. Broughton Hall, an old seat of the Chetham and Stanley families, is the residence of Colonel Clowes.

BROUGHTON, a chplry. in the par. of Preston, hund.

of Amounderness, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles to the N. of Preston. It is a station on the Lancaster and Preston Junction railway. Dorton is a hmlt. of this parish. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £106, in the patron. of Hulme's Trustees. Here is an endowed free school with a revenue of £130 per annum, the produce of several ancient bequests, and some minor charities worth about £14 a year.

BROUGHTON, a par. in the eastern div. of the wap. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles to the N.W. of Glanford-Brigg. It lies on the W. bank of the river Ancholme, at the foot of the Heaths, and contains the hmlts. of Castlethorpe, Gokewell, and Manby. Broughton was the site of a small nunnery of the Cistercian order, founded in the 12th century, which flourished till the Dissolution. The ancient Ermine Street crossed this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £824, in the patron. of Joseph Dent, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains a monumental brass of a knight and his lady, of the year 1370. There is a small endowment for education.

BROUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Orlingbury, in the co. of Northampton, 3 miles to the S.W. of Kettering. Wellingborough is its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £394, in the gift of the Duke of Buccleuch. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew, and contains a monumental brass of Robert Bolton, the Puritan divine, who was once rector of this parish. The charitable endowments for the benefit of the poor are worth £13 a year. Broughton was the birthplace of Robert Bolton, and of William Bagshaw, the Nonconformist.

BROUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Bloxham, in the co. of Oxford, 3 miles to the S.W. of Banbury, its post town. It lies near the border of Northamptonshire, and contains the hmlt. of North Newington. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £539, in the patron. of the Rev. C. F. Wyatt, incumbent. The church, which is in the perpendicular style, is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains many monuments to the families of the Broughtons, Wykhams, and Twistletons. The poor have the benefit of a valuable endowment founded by Lady Saye and Sele, and producing £145 per annum. Broughton Castle, the seat of Lord Saye and Sele, is moated, and was anciently a fortress of great strength. It was founded as early as the reign of Edward I., but a large part of the present structure was erected in the 16th century. It has some good stained windows, with the arms and quarterings of its various owners.

BROUGHTON, a par. in the co. of Peebles, Scotland, 10 miles to the W. of Peebles. It is connected with the Caledonian railway by a branch line of 8 miles from Symington. The parish is situated in a hilly and picturesque country, on the banks of the Biggar Water, a feeder of the Tweed, and consists chiefly of pasture land. Broughton is separated from the co. of Lanark by Skirling, and is 3¼ miles long by 2¾ broad. The sole proprietor is Macqueen of Braxfield. The vil. of Broughton is 5 miles E. of Biggar. The living is in the presb. of Biggar, and in the patron. of Renny of Danevale; it is worth, with those of Glenholm and Kilbucho united to it, £231. In the parish are some remains of an old castle. An annual fair is held in the village on the 3rd October.

BROUGHTON, a par. in the Albrighton div. of the co. of Salop, 7 miles to the N. of Shrewsbury. It includes the tnshp. of Yorton. The Crewe and Shrewsbury branch of the London and North-Western railway crosses the parish, with a station at Yorton. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, worth £70, in the patron. of Sir R. Hill, Bart.

BROUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bishop's Castle, hund. of Purslow, in the co. of Salop, 1 mile from Bishop's Castle.

BROUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Claverley, hund. of Brimstree, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles to the E. of Bridgnorth.

BROUGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Mary Stoke, hund. of Taunton, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the S.E. of Taunton.

BROUGHTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Eccleshall, hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 5 miles to the N.W. of Eccleshall. It lies near the London and North-Western railway, which has a station at Standon, 4 miles to the W. of the village. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, worth £129, in the gift of Sir H. D. Broughton, Bart. The church is a small building with a tower. The chief seats are Broughton Hall, an ancient mansion in the Elizabethan style, Sugnall Hall, Gerard's Bromley, and Charnes.

BROUGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Whitchurch, hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, 5 miles to the S. of Stratford-upon-Avon. The Stratford branch of the West Midland railway passes near it.

BROUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Appleton-le-Street, wap. of Ryedale, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles from New Malton. It was the site of a hospital founded by Eustace Fitz-John, before the middle of the 12th century. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village.

BROUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Broughton-in-Aredale, wap. of Staincliff, in the West Riding of the co. of York.

BROUGHTON ASTLEY, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, in the co. of Leicester, 5 miles to the N. of Lutterworth, its post town, and 93¾ miles from London. It is a station on the Midland railway. The parish is situated on a small stream, a branch of the river Soar, and contains the tnshps. of Prime-Thorp and Sutton-in-the-Elms. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £674, in the patron. of H. Radford, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an old Gothic building, with a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £20 a year. Hosiery is the chief manufacture.

BROUGHTON BRANT, a par. in the wap. of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 7 miles to the E. of Newark, its post town. It is situated near the border of Nottinghamshire, on the banks of the river Brant, a branch of the Witham. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £560, in the patron. of Sir R. Sutton, Bart. The church, which is dedicated to St. Helen, is an ancient edifice, with a tower and lofty spire, and contains an old monument of James de Aubeney. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, and there are charitable endowments amounting to £17 a year. The rectory of Broughton was held by Bishop Warburton, who wrote here the "Divine Legation."

BROUGHTON, CHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, in the co. of Derby, 10 miles to the W. of Derby. It is situated on a branch of the river Dove, and contains the tnshp. of Sapperton. The North Staffordshire railway passes within a short distance. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lichfield, worth £228, in the patron. of J. Broadhurst, Esq. The church, which contains several stone stalls, is dedicated to St. Michael. Here is an endowed free school founded about 1745, which has an income of £30, and some other charities producing about £20 a year. Broughton is within the honour of Tutbury, in the duchy of Lancaster.

BROUGHTON, EAST, or BROUGHTON FIELD, a chplry. in the par. of Cartmel, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 2 miles to the N. of Cartmel. The Furness branch of the Lancaster and Carlisle railway passes through the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £67, in the gift of the Earl of Burlington. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The chief residences are Broughton Grove, Broughton Hall, and Broughton Lodge.

BROUGHTON GIFFORD, a par. in the hund. and union of Bradford, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles to the W. of Melksham, its post town (which is also a station on the Great Western railway), and 3 N.E. of Bradford. It is situated on the W. bank of the river Avon, and was a fortified station in the Roman time. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £355, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure of the time of Henry VII., built with the materials and on the site of a more ancient edifice. It has recently been entirely restored, and contains a monumental brass of the year 1620. The Baptists have a chapel in the village, and there is a National school, recently erected on the most approved plan: it has an endowment of £20 per annum; and the other charities for the benefit of the poor amount to about £12 per annum. Lord Broughton, who takes his title from this village, is lord of the manor. An elaborate memoir of this parish has been published in the "Wilts Archæological and Natural History Magazine," by the present rector, the Rev. John Wilkinson, M.A.

BROUGHTON, GREAT, a tnshp. in the par. of Bridekirk, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 4 miles to the W. of Cockermouth. It is situated on the N. bank of the river Derwent, near the Cockermouth branch of the Whitehaven Junction railway. The inhabitants are employed in the coal-works of the neighbourhood. Here are an endowed free school and an almshouse, founded about 1740 by Joseph Ashley, the revenue of which is about £30 a year.

BROUGHTON, GREAT and LITTLE, tnshps. in the par. of Kirby-in-Cleveland, lib. of Langbaurgh, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the S.E. of Stokesley. It is in a hilly country. Broughton Hall is a modern mansion, situated in pleasant wooded grounds. On the top of a hill overlooking the village, are the Wain Stones, a collection of stones of large dimension, one only in an exact position, probably the remains of a cromlech.

BROUGHTON-HACKETT, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Pershore, in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles to the E. of Worcester. Here are quarries of blue limestone, highly esteemed for building purposes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, worth £73, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard. The parochial charities are of trifling value.

BROUGHTON-IN-AREDALE, a par. in the eastern div. of the wap. of Staincliff and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the W. of Skipton. It is situated near the river Aire, and contains the hmlt. of Elslack. A Roman station or camp is said to have existed here, the supposed vestiges of which are found at Elslack. Some of the villagers are employed in the cotton manufacture. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £190, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Christ Church, Oxford. The church is dedicated to All Saints. It stands a mile from the village, and has a Norman doorway and cylindrical font. Attached to it is a chapel of the Tempest family, with many monuments. Broughton Hall, the seat of the Tempests, who hold the manor, was erected at the close of the 16th century. It contains many family portraits, among which are those of Stephen Tempest, author of "Religio Laici," and Francis Tempest, Abbot of Lambspring, a monastery in Westphalia.

BROUGHTON-IN-FURNESS. See BROUGHTON, West, Lancashire.

BROUGHTON, LITTLE, a tnshp. and district par. in the par. of Bridekirk, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, close to Great Broughton. The manufacture of tobacco-pipes and of coarse pottery is carried on in the village. Here has recently been erected a district church, called Christ Church. The living is a perpet. cur.,* val. £150, in the dioc. of Carlisle. There are chapels belonging to the Wesleyans, Quakers, and Baptists. Little Broughton was the birthplace (1714) of Abraham Fletcher, who distinguished himself as a mathematician and botanist.

BROUGHTON, NETHER, a par. in the hund. of Framland, in the co. of Leicester, 6 miles to the N.W. of Melton Mowbray. It is situated on the border of Nottinghamshire, at the southern extremity of the Vale of Belvoir. Some of the villagers are employed in the hosiery trade. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £397, in the gift of the Hon. P. P. Bouverie and the Rev. W. H. Sawyer, alternately. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a neat building, with a square embattled tower crowned with pinnacles. The Wesleyan chapel was built in 1829, and the National schools in 1845. There are charitable endowments for the poor worth about £17 a year. In the vicinity is Broughton Lodge. The par. has an area of 2,140 acres, and is within the honour of Tutbury, in the duchy of Lancaster.

BROUGHTON POGGS, or POGIS, a par. in the hund. of Bampton, in the co. of Oxford, 5 miles to the W. of Bampton. Lechlade is its post town. It lies on the confines of Gloucestershire. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £280, in the patron. of the Rev. W. Holmes. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The principal mansion is Broughton Hall, the seat of Sir W. C. H. Burnaby, Bart.

BROUGHTON SULNEY, or UPPER BROUGHTON, a par. in the south div. of the wap. of Bingham, in the co. of Nottingham, 9 miles to the N.E. of Loughborough. Melton Mowbray is its post town. It lies on the border of Leicestershire. The stocking manufacture is carried on by some of the inhabitants. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £388, in the patron. of Sir J. Radcliffe, Bart. The parochial charities are worth £10 a year. Broughton House, the property of the Duke of Buccleuch, contains some portraits by Vandyck, and some cartoons attributed to Raphael. There is a medicinal spring in the parish. Broughton is within the honour of Tutbury, in the duchy of Lancaster.

BROUGHTON, WEST, a hmlt. in the par. of Doveridge, hund. of Appletree, in the co. of Derby, 8 miles to the N.W. of Burton-on-Trent. It is seated near the river Dove.

BROUGHTON, WEST, or BROUGHTON-IN-FURNESS, a chplry. and market town, in the par. of Kirkby Ireleth, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 9 miles to the N. of Ulverston, and 280 miles from London. It is a station on the Furness and Coniston railway. The town lies in a mountainous country on the banks of the river Duddon. Iron and copper are abundant, and large quantities of slate are quarried and exported. Hoop-bending is an important branch of the local industry. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the neighbouring mines. The town stands on a hill-side facing the south, and contains some good houses built of stone and roofed with slate. Small vessels can approach within a mile of the town, the estuary being navigable to Duddon Bridge. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £108, in the patron. of J. Sawrey, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. There is a small grammar school endowed with £6 a year, and some other charities worth about £10. On a hill to the N. of the town is Broughton Tower, the seat of the Sawreys. Friday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 27th April and on the first Friday in October for the sale of cattle and for hiring farm servants, and on the 1st August for cattle.

BROUGHTY FERRY, a vil. and quoad sacra par. in the par. of Monifieth, and partly in that of Dundee, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 4 miles to the E. of Dundee. It is pleasantly seated on the N. shore of the Frith of Tay, and at West Ferry there is a station on the Dundee and Arbroath railway. Immediately opposite the village, on the S. shore of the Frith, is Tay Port, in Fifeshire, where steamers ply daily. The village contains some pretty residences, and is much frequented as a watering-place. Its name, Broughty, a corruption of Burgh Tay, signifies the "defence of the Tay," and was derived from an ancient castle which stood here. The castle has been lately repaired at an expense of £10,000, and now protects the river. The living, worth £275, with a manse, is in the presb. of Dundee, and in the gift of the communicants. There is also a Free church, an United Presbyterian church, and an Episcopal church.

BROW, a vil. in the par. of Ruthwell, in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 6 miles to the W. of Annan. It is seated on the coast of the Solway Frith, where the Lochar Water falls into it.

BROWN CANDOVER. See CANDOVER, BROWN, Hants.

BROWN-EDGE, a vil. in the par. of Norton-in-the-Moors, hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, not far from Burslem. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, worth £100, in the gift of the bishop.

BROWNFIELD, a vil. and quoad sacra par. in West par., city of Glasgow, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, near Glasgow. The living is in the presb. of Glasgow, and in the gift of trustees.

BROWN-HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Batley, wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the N.W. of Wakefield.

BROWN MOUNTAIN, an ext. par. district, in the bar. of Kells, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S.W. of Kilmaganny. It is joined with the par. of Tullahought.

BROWNSEA, an island in Poole harbour, in the par. of Studland, hund. of Rowbarrow, in the co. of Dorset, 3 miles from Studland, and about the same distance from Poole. It was anciently one of the possessions of the abbey of Cerne, and was given at the Dissolution to John Vere, Earl of Oxford. Sir Charles Chad, Bart., purchased the island of the Sturts in 1817. It is about 1½ mile long and above half a mile broad. At its eastern end stands Brownsea Castle, a strong fortress erected in 1577. It has walls 11 feet thick. Charles II., with the Duke of Monmouth, visited Brownsea in September, 1665. It was also visited by George IV. when Prince of Wales. The castle is quadrangular, and from the windows commands fine views both of land and sea.

BROWNSHALL, or BROWNSELL LANE, a hmlt. in the par. of Caundle-Bishop, hund. of Sherborne, in the co. of Dorset, 5 miles to the S.E. of Sherborne. It is a very ancient place, and has given name to a hund. in the Sturminster div. of the co.

BROWNSHALL HUNDRED, one of the 3 hunds. or subdivisions of the Sturminster div. of the co. of Dorset, bounded on the N. by Somersetshire, on the E. by the hunds. of Redlane and Sturminster-Newton-Castle, on the S. by parts of the hunds. of Pimperne and Sherborne, and on the W. by the hund. of Sherborne. It contains the pars. of Caundle Stourton, Stalbridge, and Stock Gayland.

BROWNSIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Glossop, hund. of High Peake, in the co. of Derby.

BROWNSMILLS, a vil. in the bar. of Kinsale, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, not far from Kinsale.

BROWNSOVER, a chplry. in the par. of Clifton, hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 1 mile to the N. of Rugby. It is on the confines of Leicestershire and Northamptonshire, near the river Avon and the Midland Counties railway. The Oxford canal passes by it, and a little to the eastward is the Roman way, Watling Street. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Clifton-upon-Dunsmore, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. Near the village are Brownsover House and Coton House.

BROWNSTONE, a vil. in the par. of Modbury, hund. of Ermington, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles to the N.E. of Modbury. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Modbury, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is a pretty Gothic edifice, erected in 1844.

BROWNSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Skreen, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S. of Slane. It is situated in a fertile district, which contains good limestone and potter's clay. The living is an impropriate rect. in the dioc. of Meath. The principal mansion is Brownstown House, the seat of Sir W. Somerville, Bart., to whom the parish belongs.

BROWN'S-WELLS, a hmlt. in the par. of Finchley, and hund. of Ossulstone, in the co. of Middlesex, 1 mile N.E. of the vil. of Finchley, and about half a mile W. of Colney Hatch railway station. It is situated on the Great North Road, about 7 miles N. of the General Post Office. A branch of the river Brent passes through the estate of Strawberry-Vale. The St. Pancras and Islington cemeteries are close by.

BROWSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Belton, hund. of Mutford, in the co. of Suffolk, 4 miles to the S. of Yarmouth. It is seated near the sea-coast and the river Waveney.

BROXA, a tnshp. in the par. of Hackness, lib. of Whitby Strand, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the N.W. of Scarborough. It is near a small stream, a branch of the river Derwent.

BROXASH HUNDRED, one of the 11 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Hereford, situated on the eastern side of the co., and bounded on the N.E. by Worcestershire, on the S.E. by the hund. of Radlow, and on the W. by the hunds. of Grimsworth and Wolphy. It comprises the pars. of Avenbury, Bodenham, Bredenbury, Bromyard, Collington, Little Cowarne, Much Cowarne, Felton, Bishop's Grendon, Grendon Warren, Marden, Ocle-Pitchard, Pencombe, Upper Sapey, Stanford-Bishop, Stoke-Lacey, Sutton St. Michael, Sutton St. Nicholas, Tedstone-Delamere, Tedstone-Wafer, Thornbury, Ullingswick, Wacton, Whitbourne, Withington, and Wolferlow, with parts of the pars. of Bockleton and Stoke Bliss, and the ext. par. lib. of Saltmarsh. The hund. contains an area of about 60,300 acres.

BROXBOURNE, a par. in the hund. and co. of Hertford, 6 miles to the S.W. of Hertford, and 16 miles to the N. of London. Hoddesdon is its post town. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The parish is situated in a pleasant country on the border of Essex, on the W. side of the river Lea, and formerly included the hmlt. of Hoddesdon, erected into a distinct parish in 1863. The manor formerly belonged to the knights of St. John. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £361, in the patron. of the Bishop of Rochester. The church, dedicated to St. Augustine, was restored in 1857. It is a spacious structure, partly of flint, in the perpendicular style of architecture, with a tower, spire, and a side chapel. It contains an ancient font with pillars, several brasses (one of the date 1473), and some fine old monuments to families who held the manor. In the town is a free school, founded in 1667 by Sir Richard Lucy, and endowed with £20 a year. An almshouse for 6 widows was founded and endowed by the Hon. Letitia Monson, in 1727, the revenue of which is £165 per annum. There are several other charities producing about £70 a year. Broxbourne Bury, the old manor-house, was honoured by a visit of James I. on his way from Scotland.

BROXBURN, a vil. in the par. of Uphall, in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 1 mile to the E. of Uphall, and 12 miles W. by S. of Edinburgh. It is seated on the Broxburn Burn, a branch of the Almond water, and is a station on the Bathgate branch of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway. The Union canal passes near the village. A cattle fair is held in September.

BROXFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Embleton, ward of Bambrough, in the co. of Northumberland, 2 miles to the N. of Alnwick.

BROXHOLME, a par. in the wap. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 6 miles to the N.W. of Lincoln. It is near the Great Northern railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. of £273, in the patron. of F. Robinson, Esq. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

BROXTED, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, in the co. of Essex, 5 miles to the N.W. of Dunmow. It is situated near the river Chelmer, not far from the Great Eastern railway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £150, in the gift of R. B. de Beauvoir, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BROXTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Malpas, hund. of Broxton, in the co. palatine of Chester, 4 miles to the N. of Malpas. This tnshp. has given name to the hund. It contains the hmlt. of Bolesworth, and Bolesworth Castle, a mansion of modern date, pleasantly situated, and commanding a good prospect. Broxton Hall, the ancient seat of the Dods, Tannatts, and Egertons, is now a farmhouse. The view from the terrace is very extensive and beautiful.

BROXTON HUNDRED, one of the 7 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. palatine of Chester, situated in the south parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of Wirrall, on the E. by the hunds. of Eddisbury and Nantwich, on the S. by the co. of Flint, and on the W. by the co. of Denbigh. It is separated into the Higher and Lower divs. The Higher contains the pars. of Coddington, Farndon, Harthill, Shocklach, and Tilston, with parts of Aldford, Bunbury, Handley, Malpas, and Threapwood. The Lower contains the pars. of Christleton, Eccleston, Guilden-Sutton, Pulford, Tattenhall, and Waverton, with parts of Aldford, Backford, Doddleston, Handley, St. Mary-on-the-Hill, St. Oswald, Plemonstall, and Tarvin. In the Norman survey, this hund. is called Dudestan. The entire hund. comprises an area of 77,470 acres.

BROXTOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Bilborough, wap. of Broxtow, in the co. of Nottingham, 3 miles to the N.W. of Nottingham. It is near the Nottingham and Mansfield branch of the Midland railway. This hamlet appears to have been once a distinct parish, and of sufficient importance to have given name to the hundred.

BROXTOW WAPENTAKE, one of the 6 waps. or subdivisions of the co. of Nottingham, situated in the N. parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the wap. of Bassetlaw, on the E. by the wap. of Thurgarton, on the S. by the wap. of Rushcliff, and on the W. by the co. of Derby. It is separated into two divs. The northern contains the pars. of Annesley, Arnold, Basford, Bulwell, Hunknall-Torkard, Kirkby-in-Ashfield, Linby, Mansfield, Mansfield-Woodhouse, Papplewick, Selston, Skegsby, Sutton-in-Ashfield, and Teversall, and the ext. par. districts of Felley and Fulwood. The southern div. contains the pars. of Attenborough, Beeston, Bilborough, Brancote, Cossall, Eastwood, Greasley, Lenton, Nuthall, Radford, Stapleford, Strelley, Trowell, and Wollaton. The entire hund. extends over an area of about 81,470 acres.

BROYNLLIS. See BRYNLLYS, Brecknockshire.

BRUCEHAVEN, a vil. in the par. of Dunfermline, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 3 miles to the S. of Dunfermline. It is seated on the N. coast of the Frith of Forth, and is a port subordinate to that of Bo'ness.

BRUCKEN HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Ecclesfield, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the N. of Sheffield.

BRUEN-STAPLEFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Tarvin, hund. of Eddisbury, in the co. palatine of Chester, 5 miles to the E. of Chester.

BRUERA. See BUERTON, Cheshire.

BRUERN VILLE, an ext. par. lib. in the hund. of Chadlington, in the co. of Oxford, 4 miles to the N. of Burford. It was the site of an abbey for monks of the Cistercian order, founded in 1147 by Nicholas Basset, and valued at the Dissolution at £124. The estate was given by James I. to Sir Antony Cope, who built a mansion, which was afterwards burnt down. It is now the property of the Sackvilles.

BRUFF, a par. and market town, in the bar. of Coshma, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the N. of Kilmallock, and 134 miles from Dublin. It is situated in a fertile district, watered by the river Dawn, or Morning Star, and is a town of considerable antiquity. It had two castles founded by the De Courcys, which belonged afterwards to the Desmonds. It has been on several occasions the scene of battles and riots. A great part of the parish consists of pasture land. Limestone is abundant, and is quarried in large quantities. The Earl of Limerick is proprietor of the district. In the town, which has one principal street, are a court-house, in which quarter and petty sessions are held, a bridewell, and a police station. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe, worth £69, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient structure in the early English style, with a tower and lofty spire. It contains a monument of the Hartstongues, to whom the town and surrounding district once belonged. There is a handsome Roman Catholic chapel, built in 1833, in the early English style. Among the seats in the vicinity are Rockbarton, that of Viscount Guillamore, Caher, Kilbally-Owen, and Milltown. Traces of the castle and of a friary still exist. Friday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 24th May, the 23rd July, the 18th October, and the 28th November.

BRUIS, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.W. of Tipperary. The soil is fertile and the surface hilly, rising at Slievenamack to the height of 1,200 feet. The living is a rect., united with that of Lattin, in the dioc. of Cashel, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore. The principal seat is Mount Bruis.

BRUISYARD, a par. in the hund. of Plomesgate, in the co. of Suffolk, 3 miles to the N.E. of Framlingham. It is pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Alde, 4 miles from the Saxmundham station on the Great Eastern railway. A chantry, originally founded at Campsey by Maud de Lancaster, Countess of Ulster, was translated in 1354 to this place. About twelve years later it was converted into a nunnery, which flourished till the Dissolution, and was valued at £56. The site was given, in 1538, to Nicholas Hare, and is now the property of the Earl of Stradbroke, lord of the manor. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, worth £60, in the gift of the Earl of Stradbroke. The church is dedicated to St. Peter, and contains two monumental brasses. Bruisyard Hall is near the village.

BRUMHILL. See BROMHILL, Norfolk.

BRUMSTEAD, a par. in the hund. of Happing, in the co. of Norfolk, 6 miles to the S.E. of North Walsham, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £170, in the patron. of the Earl of Abergavenny. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

BRUNDALL, a par. in the hund. of Blofield, in the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles to the E. of Norwich. It is situated on the banks of the river Yare, and is a station on the Great Eastern and Norfolk railway. The living is a rect. consolidated with that of Little Plumstead, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. Brundall House is one of the chief residences.

BRUNDISH, a par. in the hund. of Hoxne, in the co. of Suffolk, 3 miles to the N. of Framlingham, which is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Tannington, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, contains four monumental brasses, one of which is of a priest who died in 1360. The parochial charities are worth £6 a year.

BRUNDON. See BALLINGDON, Essex.

BRUNSLEY. See BRINSLEY, Nottinghamshire.

BRUNSLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Edgton, hund. of Purslow, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles to the S.E. of Bishop's Castle. It is situated near Tongley Hill, on which is an ancient British camp, called Bury Ditches. The hill commands an extensive prospect.

BRUNSTANE, a vil. in the par. of Penneycuick, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 2 miles from Penneycuick. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the neighbouring coal-works.

BRUNSTOCK, a tnshp. in the par. of Crosby-on-Eden, ward of Eskdale, in the co. of Cumberland, 4 miles to the N. of Carlisle.

BRUNTCLIFFE THORNE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Morley, and par. of Batley, in the wap. of Agbrig, West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the N. of Dewsbury.

BRUNTHWAITE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Silsden, par. of Kildwick, and wap. of Staincliff and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N. of Keighley.

BRUNTINGTHORPE, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, in the co. of Leicester, 5 miles to the N.E. of Lutterworth. The stocking manufacture is carried on in the village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £380, in the patron. of the Rev. T. Freeman. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BRUNTON, a vil. in the par. of Creich, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 4 miles to the N.W. of Cupar.

BRUNTON, a tythg. in the par. of Collingbourne Kingston, hund. of Kinwardstone, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles to the N. of Ludgershall.

BRUNTON, EAST and WEST, tnshps. in the par. of Gosforth, Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 4 miles to the N. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. The inhabitants are employed in the neighbouring collieries.

BRUNTON, HIGH and LOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Embleton, ward of Bambrough, in the co. of Northumberland, 8 miles to the N. of Alnwick. It is situated near the sea-coast.

BRUREE, a par. in the bars. of Upper Connello and Cosham, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles to the S.E. of Ballingarry. It is a station on the Cork and Limerick direct line, and about 4 miles from the Kilmallock station of the Great Southern and Western railway. The par. is situated in a fertile and beautiful country on the river Maigue, a branch of the Shannon, and contains the vils. of Bruree and Rockhill. Limestone is abundant, and is quarried in large quantities. The meetings of the Irish bards were anciently held at this place. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe, val. £226, in the gift of the Dean of Limerick. The church, erected in 1812, is in the early English style, with a tower and spire. It stands near the site of an old church. In the village are a Roman Catholic chapel, a dispensary, a post-office, two flour-mills, and a police station. Here are considerable remains of two fortresses, one founded by the De Lacys, and the other by the Knights Templars. In the parish are two National schools. The river Maigue is famous for trout and salmon. Among the seats in the vicinity are Bruree House, Glebe House, Bruree Lodge, Steyle Park, Cooleen, Rockhill, and Ballyteague. Fairs are held on the 6th February, 11th April, 9th May, the 25th June, the 14th September, and the 25th November.

BRUSHFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 4 miles to the N.W. of Bakewell.

BRUSHFORD, a par. in the hund. of North Tawton with Winkley, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the S. of Chulmleigh. The North Devon railway passes within a short distance. The river Taw runs through the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, worth £51, in the patron. of G. Luxton, Esq. The church contains a portrait of Queen Anne.

BRUSHFORD, a par. in the hund. of Williton and Freemanners, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles to the S. of Dulverton, its post town. It is on the confines of Devonshire, in a pleasant, hilly, and wooded district, on the banks of the river Barle, a branch of the Exe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the annual val. of £384, in the patron. of the Earl of Carnarvon. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

BRUTON, a par. and market town in the hund. of Bruton, in the co. of Somerset, 12 miles to the S.E. of Wells, and 126 miles to the S.W. of London. It is a station on the Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth section of the Great Western railway. The par. includes the chplries. of Redlynch and Wyke-Champflower, and the tythg. of Discove. This place is mentioned in the Norman Survey by the name of Brunetone. The manor was a royal demesne before the Conquest, and was also held by William the Conqueror. About the year 1005 a monastery was founded here by Algar, Earl of Cornwall, for monks of the Benedictine order, which was subsequently converted into a Dominican priory by William de Mohun. Shortly before the Dissolution it was raised to the rank of an abbey, and had a revenue of £481. The town is situated in a picturesque spot, on the banks of the river Brue, which is here crossed by a stone bridge. The streets are paved and lighted with gas. At the intersection of the principal street by two smaller ones, is the town-hall and market-house. There is also an elegant market-cross, hexagonal in form, supported on pillars, and adorned with sculpture. Petty sessions are held in the town. Various manufactures were formerly carried on here, but they are at present confined to silk and hosiery. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the val. of £168, in the gift of Sir H. H. Hoare, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is a large and handsome edifice in the perpendicular style of architecture, with a fine embattled tower at the west end, with pinnacles and niches, and another tower, of more ancient date, on the north side. It contains monuments to Prior Gilbert and Prior Sheares, William Godolphin and Captain Berkeley. Besides the parish church there are two district churches, one at Redlynch, and the other at Wyke-Champflower. The livings of both are perpet. curs., in the gift of Sir H. H. Hoare, Bart. There are chapels belonging to the Independents and Wesleyans; a free grammar school, founded and endowed in the reign of Edward VI., which has a revenue of about £300, and four exhibitions at the universities; and a hospital, or almshouse, for 14 men, 14 women, and 16 boys, founded about 1618 by Hugh Saxey, or Sexey, auditor to Queen Elizabeth and James I., the revenue of which is about £1,310 per annum. The buildings, which form a quadrangle, are in the Tudor style, and are adorned with a statue of the founder. The parsonage-house was built of the remains of the abbey. Bruton was the birthplace of Hugh Saxey, founder of the hospital, and of Richard and John Fitz-James, founders of the grammar school. Redlynch Park, in this parish, is the seat of the Earl of Ilchester. Saturday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 23rd April and the 17th September.

BRUTON HUNDRED, one of the 40 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Somerset, situated in the eastern parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hunds. of Wells-Forum and Frome, on the E. by the hund. of Norton Ferris, on the S.W. by the hund. of Catsash, and on the W. by the hund. of Whitestone. It contains the pars. of North Brewham, South Brewham, Bruton, Eastrip, Milton-Clevedon, Pitcombe, Upton Noble, and Yarlington. The hund. comprises an area of about 14,250 acres.

BRYAN-ASKHAM. See ASKHAM-BRYAN, Yorkshire.

BRYAN-MAUND, a tnshp. in the par. of Bodenham, hund. of Broxash, in the co. of Hereford, 7 miles to the N. of Hereford.

BRYANSFORD, a vil. in the par. of Kilcoo, and bar. of Upper Iveagh, in the co. of Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S. of Castlewellan. It is seated near the coast of Dundrum Bay, and contains the parish church of Kilcoo. Annual fairs are held here on Ascension Day and the 3rd June.

BRYANSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Pimperne, North Blandford div. of the co. of Dorset, 1 mile to the N.W. of Blandford. It is situated in a beautiful country, on the S.W. bank of the river Stour. The living is a rect. consolidated with that of Durweston, in the dioc. of Salisbury. The church is dedicated to St. Martin. Bryanstone House is the seat of Lord Portman. This mansion, built about 1780, stands in a fine park abounding in picturesque scenery, on the banks of the Stour, which flows at the foot of a wooded cliff, extending from the house to Blandford Bridge.

BRYANT'S-PUDDLE, a tythg. in the par. of Aff-Puddle, hund. of Hundredsbarrow, in the co. of Dorset, 7 miles to the N.W. of Wareham. It is situated on the river Piddle.

BRYDEKIRK, a vil. and quoad sacra par. in the pars. of Annan, Cummerbraes, and Hoddam, in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 3 miles to the N.W. of the town of Annan. The living is in the presb. of Annan, and in the gift of the subscribers and others.

BRYHER, a small island in the par. of St. Mary, Scilly Islands, in the co. of Cornwall.

BRYMBO, a tnshp. in the par. of Wrexham, hund. of Bromfield, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 3 miles to the N.W. of Wrexham. The coal-mines and iron-works of the vicinity give employment to the inhabitants. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, worth £90, in the gift of the vicar. The chief mansion is Brymbo Hall, which was erected by Inigo Jones.

BRYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangar, hund. of Edernion, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, 1 mile from Corwen. It is on the S. side of the river Dee.

BRYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanyblodwell, hund. of Oswestry, in the co. of Salop, 5 miles to the S.W. of Oswestry. It is near the Oswestry and Newtown railway.

BRYNBYCHAN, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Rhuddlan, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, not far from St. Asaph.

BRYNCAREDIG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanymys, hund. and borough of Ruthin, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 3 miles to the N. of Ruthin.

BRYNCROES, a par. in the hund. of Commitmaen, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 10 miles to the S.W. of Pwllheli. It lies near the extremity of the peninsula forming the N. boundary of Cardigan Bay, on the banks of the small river Sochan. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £107, in the gift of C. W. G. Wynne, Esq. There are charitable endowments for the poor, worth £18 a year.

BRYNCUME, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanelidan, hund. of Ruthin, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 5 miles to the S. of Ruthin. It is situated at the head of the Vale of Clwyd.

BRYN-EGLWYS, a par. in the hund. of Yale, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 7 miles to the S. of Ruthin. Eglwys is its post town. It lies in a mountainous district a little to the N. of the river Dee, and contains the tnshps. of Bodynwydag, Bryntangor, Fanybedwell, Gwrthrina, and Llan. There is a mineral spring in the parish, which imparts a sweet smell to the mosses growing round it. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, worth £90, in the gift of Sir W. W. Wynne, Bart. The Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists have chapels in the village. The parochial charities, consisting chiefly of the endowment of a free school, amount to £15 per annum.

BRYNELEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfair-Caereinion, hund. of Mathrafel, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, not far from Llanfair.

BRYNELLTYN, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Llanfyllin, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, not far from Llanfyllin.

BRYNFFAINGLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Abergele, hund. of Isdulas, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, not far from Abergele. It is situated on the sea-coast, near the Chester and Holyhead railway.

BRYNFFYNON, a vil. in the par. of Llanfair-is-Gaer, hund. of Is-Gorfai, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 2 miles to the N.E. of Carnarvon. It is seated on the Menai Straits, near the Bangor and Carnarvon branch railway.

BRYNFOED, a tnshp. in the par. of Holywell, hund. of Coleshill, in the co. of Flint, North Wales. It is on the S. bank of the Dee, close to the Chester and Holyhead railway.

BRYNGLAS, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfair-Caereinion, hund. of Mathrafel, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 1 mile from Llanfair.

BRYNGWAEDDAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangadfan, hund. of Mathrafel, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 6 miles to the N.W. of Llanfair.

BRYNGWYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Dymeirchion, hund. of Rhuddlan, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 3 miles to the E. of St. Asaph.

BRYNGWYN, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Ragland, in the co. of Monmouth, 6 miles to the W. of Monmouth. Ragland is its post town. It is not far from the Coleford, Monmouth, and Usk railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £200, in the gift of the Earl of Abergavenny. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There are charitable endowments for the benefit of the poor, amounting to about £10 a year.

BRYNGWYN, a par. in the hund. of Painscastle, in the co. of Radnor, South Wales, 5 miles to the N. of Hay. It lies near the head of the river Arrow. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, of the val. of £294, in the gift of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities amount to £9 a year.

BRYNGWYNE, a hmlt. joined with the tnshp. of Calliver, in the par. of Llanfihangel-Aberbythych, hund. of Iskennen, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 6 miles to the W. of Llandilo-fawr.

BRYNGWYN ISA and UCHA, tnshps. in the par. of Caerwys, hund. of Rhuddlan, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 6 miles to the S.E. of St. Asaph.

BRYNHAFOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangathen, hund. of Cathinog, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 2 miles from Llandilofawr.

BRYNHEDYDD, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Rhuddlan, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, not far from Rhuddlan.

BRYNING, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkham, hund. of Amounderness, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles to the S.W. of Kirkham. It is joined with the tnshp. of Kellamergh.

BRYNKINALT, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Chirk, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, not far from Chirk. It is situated on the river Dee, near the Chester and Shrewsbury railway, and contains the seat of Lord Dungannon. The mansion is in the Gothic style, and has been rebuilt on the site of the old one founded by the Trevor family.

BRYN-LLANFAIR. See LLANFAIR-IS-GAER, Carnarvonshire.

BRYNLLOWARCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Kerry, hund. and co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 2 miles from Newtown.

BRYNLLYS, or BROYNLLIS, a par. in the hund. of Talgarth, in the co. of Brecon, South Wales, 7 miles to the N.E. of Brecknock. It is situated to the S. of the river Wye. In this parish are the remains of a castle, which was founded soon after the Norman Conquest, and was held at one time by the Cliffords, and afterwards by the Bohuns. It was partly destroyed by fire in the 12th century. A round tower still remains. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £174, in the gift of W. D. Wilkins, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charities produce about £7 a year. Pont-y-wal is the chief residence.

BRYNMAUR, a vil. in Prisk parcel, in the par. of Llangattock, hund. of Crickhowell, in the co. of Brecon, South Wales, 1 mile from Crickhowell. It is seated on the banks of the river Usk and the Crickhowell canal, not far from the Beaufort iron-works.

BRYNPOLYN, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Asaph, hund. of Rhuddlan, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, not far from St. Asaph.

BRYNSHENKIN, a vil. in the par. of Llanidan, hund. of Menai, in the co. of Anglesea, North Wales, 3 miles from Carnarvon. It is seated on the Menai Straits and is near the spot where the Roman general Suetonius effected a landing.

BRYNTALCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandyssil, hund. of Newtown, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 2 miles from Montgomery. It is near the river Severn.

BRYNTANGOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Bryn-Eglwys, hund. of Yale, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 6 miles to the N.W. of Llangollen.

BRYNYCHEL. See BRYNCHEL, Montgomeryshire.

BRYN-Y-BEIRDD, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandilofawr, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, not far from Llandilofawr. It is seated near the river Towey.

BRYNYORUG, a vil. in the tnshp. of Gwyddelfryn-gwyddil and par. of Towyn, in the hund. of Estimaner, and co. of Merioneth, North Wales, not far from Towyn.

BRYNYWALL, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Rhuddlan, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, not far from Rhuddlan.

BUBBENHALL, a par. in the Kenilworth div. of the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 5 miles to the S. of Coventry. Kenilworth is its post town. It is on the banks of the river Avon. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, worth £56, in the gift of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Gile

The parochial charities, including a small bequest for education, amount to £8 a year.

BUBNELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 3 miles to the N.E. of Bakewell. It is situated on the river Derwent. Near the vil. is Bubnell Hall.

BUBNEY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. and par. of Whitchurch, hund. of North Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 1 mile from Whitchurch. The Ellesmere canal passes near it.

BUBWITH, a par. in the Holme Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the E. of Selby. It is situated on the banks of the river Derwent, and is a station on the Selby and Market Weighton branch of the North-Eastern railway. The par. contains the tnshps. of Breighton, Foggathorpe, Gribthorpe, Harlthorpe, Spaldington, and Willitoft. The Derwent is here crossed by a stone bridge of ten arches, which was erected about 1793. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, worth £102, in the patron. of the lord chancellor and the Dean and Chapter of York alternately. The church, which has an embattled tower, is dedicated to All Saints. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel in the village. The charitable endowments for the benefit of the poor amount to £21 per annum. Nicholas de Bubwith, Bishop of Bath and Wells, who built part of Wells Cathedral and lies interred there, was a native of this village. He attended the Council of Constance in 1415, and died in 1424.

BUCCLEUGH, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of St. Cuthbert, Edinburgh, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland. The living is in the presb. of Edinburgh, and in the patron. of St. Cuthbert's session.

BUCCLEUGH, EAST and WEST, a district, once forming a par., but now united to the par. of Ettrick, in the co. of Selkirk, Scotland, 13 miles S.W. of Selkirk. This place gives the title of duke to the Scott family.

BUCHAN DISTRICT, one of the 4 ancient divs. of the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, being the north-eastern part of the co., bounded on the N. and E. by the sea, on the S. by the river Ythan, and on the W. by the river Dovern. It corresponds with the modern districts of Deer and Ellon. The surface is mostly level and moorland, the highest ground being Mormond Hill, which is only 800 feet high. The district, which is about 20 miles in length and the same in breadth, contains the remains of several fortresses. It anciently was held by the Comyns, Stewarts, and Douglases. The modern earldom belongs to the family of Erskine, whose seats are Kirkhill and Amondell, in Linlithgowshire, and Dryburgh Abbey, in Berwickshire.

BUCHANAN, a par. in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, near Drymen. It comprises an extensive mountain district on the eastern shore of Loch Lomond, and is bounded on the S. by the river Endrick. The district is easily accessible by means of the steamers that ply on Loch Lomond. The surface rises at Ben Lomond to the height of 3,193 feet. Limestone abounds in the par. The living, worth £157, is in the presb. of Dumbarton, in the gift of the Duke of Montrose. On the margin of the loch is Buchanan House, the old seat of the Buchanans, now that of the Duke of Montrose. At the northern extremity of the parish is the fort of Inversnaid. A nunnery formerly existed on Inchcailloch, an island in Loch Lomond. The par. extends about 18 miles in length and 4 in breadth.

BUCHANTY, a vil. in the par. of Fowlis-Wester, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 10 miles to the W. of Perth. It is seated on the banks of the Almond Water, a feeder of the Tay.

BUCHANY, a vil. in the par. of Kilmadock, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, not far from Doune.

BUCKABANK, or BUCKHOWBANK, a tnshp. in the par. of Dalston, ward and co. of Cumberland, 5 miles to the S.W. of Carlisle. Dalston is a station on the Maryport and Carlisle railway. The tnshp. is situated on the river Caldew, and contains cotton factories, mills, an extensive forge, and an edge-tool manufactory. The Bishop of Carlisle is lord of the manor.

BUCKBY, LONG, a par. in the hund. of Guilsborough, in the co. of Northampton, 5 miles to the N.E. of Daventry, its post town. It is situated near the head of the river Nen, on the Grand Junction canal, and contains the hmlt. of Murcott. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, worth £150, in the patron. of the Bishop of Lichfield. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. There are in the village a chapel for Baptists, and a free school, endowed in 1783 by L. Freeman, the revenue of which is about £40. The annual value of the other charities is about £32.

BUCKDEN, a par. in the hund. of Toseland, in the co. of Huntingdon, 5 miles to the N. of St. Neot's. Huntingdon is its post town. It is on the W. side of the river Ouse, not far from Offord station on the Great Northern railway, and includes the hmlt. of Stirtloe. The manor was held in the reign of Henry I. by the abbot of Ely, who granted it to the bishops of Lincoln. The ancient palace of the bishops, a brick edifice partly surrounded by a moat, stands in the centre of the village. It is related of Bishop Barlow (1675) that he never visited Lincoln, but from his constant residence here acquired the title of Bishop of Buckden. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £254, in the patron. of the Bishop of Peterborough. The church, a handsome structure with a spire, is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains monuments to several of the bishops of Lincoln. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels in the village. The charitable endowments, consisting partly of bequests for education, produce about £170 per annum. There are several almshouses.

BUCKDEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Arncliffe, wap. of Staincliff and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 11 miles to the N.E. of Settle. It is situated in the valley of the Wharfe, and includes several hamlets.

BUCKENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Blofield, in the co. of Norfolk, 8 miles to the S.E. of Norwich. Acle is its post town. It is on the N. side of the river Yare, here crossed by a ferry, and is a station on the Great Eastern and Norfolk railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. with that of Hassingham, of £230, in the patron. of Sir W. B. Proctor, Bart. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient building, with an octagonal tower, and has recently undergone considerable improvements. The eastern window, of stained glass, represents St. Nicholas and the four Evangelists. The register is modern, commencing with the year 1760. Near the village is Buckenham House.

BUCKENHAM, NEW, a par. and market town in the hund. of Shropham, in the co. of Norfolk, 15 miles to the S.E. of Norwich, and 105 miles by railway from London viâ Colchester, or 133¾ viâ Cambridge and Norwich. It is near the Tivetshall station of the Eastern Union section of the Great Eastern railway. This place, in the 11th century, formed part of the domains of William de Albini, who erected a castle in the adjoining parish of Old Buckenham. Remains of the gatehouse and the keep still exist. The town gradually grew up around the fortress, and various privileges were conferred on the townsmen, which they still enjoy; among others are exemption from serving on juries beyond their parishes, and freedom from tolls at fairs and markets. The town is situated in a pleasant district, but is irregularly built, consisting of several small streets. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Norwich, worth £115, in the gift of the inhabitants. The church is a noble structure, dedicated to St. Martin. It is of ancient date, and was partly rebuilt in 1479. Round the basement of the tower and south side of the church is singularly beautiful panel-work—scarcely two compartments are of the same device. It contains several old monuments, and has, sculptured on the west front, the arms of the Knivetts and other families to whom the manor belonged. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel, and in the town is a National school, built in 1849 at the sole cost of the late Rev. F. S. Bevan; also almshouses for four persons, endowed by William Barber with an income of about £45 per annum. The latter were rebuilt in 1861, at the cost of £800, two-thirds of which sum was presented by Hammond and Joseph J. Turner, and their mother, Harriet Turner. There is a small endowment for the education of six boys, now paid to the fund of the National school. The minister of this parish claims the privilege, as lord of the manor of Buckenham Priory, to be cup-bearer at coronations. The market has been discontinued some years. Fairs are held for cattle on the last Thursday in May and the 22nd November.

BUCKENHAM, OLD, a par. in the hund. of Shropham, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the S.E. of Attleburgh, and 1½ N. by W. from New Buckenham. The Great Eastern railway passes near it, and has a station at Eccles Road, about 3 miles to the N.E. of the village, which is built in a romantic spot, surrounding a green of about 40 acres. It was once a place of some note, and was the site of a priory for canons of the Augustine order, founded about 1085 by William de Albini, surnamed the Stronghanded. The materials of the old castle were employed in the erection of the priory. It was valued at the Dissolution at £131, and was given to Sir Thomas Knivett. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £102, in the patron. of the inhabitants. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with thatched roof and octagon tower, containing six bells. It was once used as a barn. There is an endowed school for boys and girls, and an infant school. The charitable endowments for education and the relief of the poor amount to £111 per annum. The manor now belongs to Lord Petre, whose seat is Buckenham Hall. The right of serving as butler at the coronation belongs to the lord of this manor.

BUCKENHAM PARVA, or BUCKENHAM-NEAR-TOFTS, a par. in the hund. of Grimshoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 7 miles to the N. of Thetford, and 6 N.E. from Brandon railway station. It is situated on the river Wissey. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, in the gift of the Rev. T. Newman. The church, long since demolished, was dedicated to St. Andrew. The parish contains about 931 acres, and belongs solely to the Hon. Francis Baring, who is lord of the manor; his seat is Buckenham Hall.

BUCKENHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Woolhope, hund. of Greytree, in the co. of Hereford, 7 miles to the N. of Ross.

BUCKERELL, a par. in the hund. of Hemyock, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles to the W. of Honiton, its post town. It is situated near the river Otter and the Yeovil and Exeter section of the London and South-Western railway. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £120, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter. The church, which contains a screen and several monuments, is dedicated to St. Mary. The principal residence is Buckerell House.

BUCKFASTLEIGH, a par. and market town in the hund. of Stanborough, in the co. of Devon, 5 miles to the N.W. of Totnes. Ashburton is its post town. It is situated in a hilly and beautiful country on the river Dart, and was the site of an abbey, existing as early as the reign of Edward the Confessor, but refounded about 1137 by Ethelward de Pomeroi, for monks of the Cistercian order. It flourished till the Dissolution, and had a revenue of £466. The estate was given to Sir Thomas Dennis, and subsequently many houses were built in the village from the ruins of the abbey. Some slight remains exist about a mile from the village on the E. bank of the Dart. Marble and limestone are quarried in the parish, and in the vicinity are copper-works. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the woollen manufacture. There is a small ancient market-house. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £270, in the patron. of the Rev. M. Lowndes, incumbent. The church, which stands on a hill near the bridge over the Dart, is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. It has transepts and side chapels, and an ancient tower, from which there are fine views of the picturesque scenery of the neighbourhood. The Wesleyans and other Dissenters have chapels here. The charitable endowments for the poor produce about £60 per annum. Buckfastleigh Abbey is a modern mansion in the Tudor style of architecture, erected on the site of the ancient abbey. Friday is the market day. Cattle fairs are held in the village on the third Thursday in June and the second Thursday in September.

BUCKHAVEN, or BUCKHYNE, a vil. in the par. of Wemyss, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 2 miles to the S.W. of Leven, it is seated on the N. coast of the Frith of Forth, near the Leven branch of the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railway. The inhabitants, descended, as is said, from the crew of a Dutch vessel wrecked on the coast about the middle of the 16th century, are chiefly engaged in the fisheries. The cottages are scattered over the steep face of the hill. There is an United Presbyterian chapel in the village. A new pier and harbour have recently been made.

BUCKHOLMSIDE, a vil. in the par. of Melrose, and in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland, 1 mile from Galashiels. It is seated in a hilly country, on the Gala Water, a feeder of the Tweed.

BUCKHOLT FARM, an ext. par. lib. in the hund. of Thorngate, Romsey div. of the co. of Southampton, 5 miles to the S.W. of Stockbridge. It is intersected by the old Roman road from Salisbury to Winchester.

BUCKHORN WESTON, a par. in the hund. of Redlane, Sturminster div. of the co. of Dorset, 4 miles to the N. of Stalbridge. It is situated on the confines of Somersetshire, close to the Yeovil and Salisbury section of the London and South-Western railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, of the val. of £360, in the gift of Lady Stapleton. The church contains an ancient monument.

BUCKHURST, a hmlt. near the vil. of Chigwell, in the co. of Essex, 10¼ miles from Whitechapel church. It is situated on the borders of Epping and Hainault Forests, near the road to Ongar. In the neighbourhood are many villas, chiefly occupied by merchants. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a chapel of ease to Chigwell. The Independents have a chapel. There is a grammar school, and a free school founded by Archbishop Harsnett in 1629; in the former, the illustrious William Penn, the founder of Pennsylvania, is said to have been educated. In the forest was an ancient palace, supposed to have belonged to King Harold.

BUCKIE, a large fishing vil. and quoad sacra par. in the par. of Rathven, Enzie district, in the co. of Banff, Scotland, 5 miles to the W. of Cullen. It is seated in a moorland country, on the S. coast of the Moray Frith, and is a small port subordinate to Banff. The living, worth £80, is in the presb. of Fordyce, and in the patron. of the heads of families. There are also a Free church, an Episcopalian chapel, and a Roman Catholic chapel.

BUCKINGHAM, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. and co. of Buckingham, 16 miles to the N.W. of Aylesbury, and 57 miles from London by road, or 61 miles by railway. It is a station on the Banbury, Buckingham, and Bletchley branch of the London and North-Western railway. The parish is situated in a pleasant country, on the river Ouse, by which the town is surrounded on three sides, and includes the chplry. of Gawcott, the hmlts. of Bourton, Bufflers Holt, and Leaborough, the precinct of Prebend End, and the district of Bourtonhold.—Buckingham is a very old town, and is mentioned in Domesday Book as a borough. The surrounding district was ravaged by the Danes in the middle of the 10th century, and the town fell into their hands in the year 1010. It had been previously fortified by Edward the Elder. A castle was founded here by the Earls of Buckingham soon after the Norman Conquest. The town was of considerable importance as one of the staple towns for wool, in the reign of Edward III., but it soon began to decline. During the Civil War, Charles I. had his headquarters at Buckingham for a short time; it was subsequently occupied by Waller and Fairfax.—The town, which consists chiefly of one street of considerable length, is paved and lighted with gas. It has an abundant supply of water, and there are several baths. The Ouse is here crossed by three bridges, two of stone and one of brick. The two former are ancient, the latter was erected at the time of the construction of the railway which passes through the town, to replace a third stone bridge removed by the railway company. There is a townhall, erected about 1685, and a gaol for the borough, built by Lord Cobham in 1748. The latter is a handsome building, with square embattled towers, and a tablet bearing an inscription which records the restoration of the summer assizes to this town in 1758. In 1724 a great portion of the town was consumed by fire.—The business of the town is chiefly agricultural, though some of the inhabitants are engaged in the leather trade, and in making pillow lace, which manufacture has lately much declined. There are several flour-mills on the river. Limestone is quarried in the neighbourhood, and marble exists, but not of good quality. A vigorous endeavour is making to introduce the straw-plait manufacture into the neighbouring villages, which is likely to be successful, as a market for that article is held every Saturday at Aylesbury. There are several malting-houses in the neighbourhood, an extensive tannery, and an establishment for the sorting of wool.—There are many pleasant walks and drives in the vicinity of Buckingham, and especially the grand avenue of 2 miles, leading from the north-west of the town to the arched entrance of Stowe House, the seat of the Dukes of Buckingham, which is one of the chief objects of interest and attraction in this neighbourhood.—The elective franchise appears to have been first exercised by the inhabitants in the reign of Henry VIII., two members being returned to parliament in the year 1544. A charter of incorporation was granted by Queen Mary about ten years later, which was restored, after a short suspension, in 1684. Under the Reform Act it continues to return two representatives. The limits of the parliamentary borough comprise, in addition to the ancient borough with its hamlets, the parishes of Hillesdon, Maids Moreton, Padbury, Preston Bisset, Radclive, Thornborough, and Tingewick; so that the population of the parliamentary borough is 7,625, while that of the municipal is only 3,847. The government of the borough is vested in a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. The revenue of the corporation is about £820.—Buckingham is the county town, the seat of a Poor-law Union, the head of a County Court district, and one of the polling places for the county elections. It has a savings-bank, a mechanics' institute, and the Union poorhouse.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £465, in the patron. of the Bishop of Oxford. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is the most conspicuous and principal ornament of the town. It was built about 1780, and stands on an artificial mound, the site of the old castle. It has an embattled tower, with pinnacles, embrasures, and an elegant spire 150 feet high. The altar-piece is a copy of Raphael's picture of the Transfiguration, presented by the late Marquis of Buckingham, and the interior of the church is elegantly fitted up in the Grecian style, with columns and arched ceiling richly ornamented. The old parish church, erected over the burial-place, it is said, of St. Rumbald, stood near the same spot. Its spire fell about the end of the 17th century, and the tower in 1779. The Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, have each one chapel in the town. There is an endowed grammar school founded by Edward VI., which has an income of £10. The schoolhouse was the chapel of an ancient chantry founded by Matthew Stratton, Archdeacon of Buckingham, in the 13th century, and originally dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket. The Norman doorway and the old carved seats still remain. The school is now incorporated with an English school, under the management of the corporation. The green-coat school, founded by Gabriel Newton in 1760 for 26 boys, has an income of about £35 a year, and has been incorporated with the National school for boys and girls, founded in 1819. There are some almshouses, the endowments of which amount to about £27 per annum, and several other charities. The entire value of the charitable endowments of the parish is about £260 per annum.—In 1514, while staying at Buckingham, Catherine of Arragon received the tidings of the great defeat of the Scots at Flodden Field. A great fire occurred in 1724, which destroyed a large part of the town, with property worth £40,000. This was the birthplace of Bishop John of Buckingham, the Protestant martyr Cosins, and Dr. Mason Goode, translator of the Psalms.—The town is connected, by a branch canal 9 miles long, with the Grand Junction canal at Stony Stratford.—The branch was formed in 1801, and passes down the valley of the Ouse. Buckingham gives the title of duke to the Grenville family.—Saturday is the market day for meat and corn, and on Monday a large calf market is held in the Woolpack-yard. There are twelve fairs annually, chiefly for the sale of cattle, horses, and sheep, viz. on Old New Year's Day, the last Monday in January, the 7th March, the second Monday in April, the 6th May, Whit Thursday, the 10th July for wool, the 4th September, the 2nd October, the Saturday after Old Michaelmas Day (a statute fair), the 8th November for cheese, and the 13th December.

BUCKINGHAM HUNDRED, one of the 8 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Buckingham, situated in the north-western part of the co., and bounded on the N. by Northamptonshire, on the E. by the hund. of Cottesloe, on the S. by the hund. of Ashenden, and on the W. by Oxfordshire. It contains the pars. of Addington, Adstock, Akeley, Barton Hartshorn, Beachampton, Biddlesdon, Buckingham, Caversfield (Oxfordshire), Chetwode, Edgecott, Foxcott, Hillesdon, Leckhampstead, Lillingstone-Dayrell, Maids Moreton, Marsh Gibbon, Padbury, Preston Bisset, Radclive, Shalstone, Steeple Claydon, Stowe, Thornborough, Thornton, Tingewick, Turweston, Twyford, Water Stratford, Westbury, and part of Stratton Audley, and the ext. par. district of Luffield Abbey. The hund. extends over an area of about 50,960 acres.

BUCKINGHAMSHIRE, one of the midland counties of England, lying between 51° 26′ and 52° 12′ N. lat., and between 0° 3′ and 1° 10′ W. long. It is bounded on the N. by Northamptonshire, on the E. by Bedfordshire, Hertfordshire, and Middlesex; on the S. by the river Thames, which separates it from Berkshire; and on the W. by Oxfordshire. Its form is very irregular. It extends in length from N. to S. about 54 miles, and its greatest breadth, in a line from E. to W. through Aylesbury, is about 27 miles. It is in circuit about 215 miles, and comprises an area of 466,932 statute acres, including within its limits 34,680 inhabited houses, occupied by a population of 166,597, according to the census of 1861, against 163,723 in 1851, showing an increase of 2,874 in the decennial period.—This county is believed to have been part of the territory of the British tribe called the Catyeuchlani, and after the Roman conquest it was included in the province called Flavia Cæsariensis. During the dominion of the Saxons it formed part of the kingdom of Mercia, and was subsequently comprehended within the Dane-lagh. Its present name is but slightly modified from that under which it is mentioned in Domesday Book—Buccingahamscire. Few historical events are connected with this county previous to the civil war in the 17th century. In the barons' war in the reign of King John, Hanslope Castle, near Castlethorpe, the seat of the Manduits, was besieged and taken for the king by Fulk de Brent. In the reign of Charles I. the men of Buckinghamshire early espoused and energetically defended the popular cause. It was the ship-money levied on the estate of John Hampden, at Hampden, which became the occasion of the famous trial in the courts of law. At Brill a royal garrison long held its ground, notwithstanding several attacks of the parliamentary forces under Hampden. The garrison quitted Brill in April, 1643. The army under Essex was quartered soon after near Aylesbury and Thame. About the same time Wycombe was attacked by Prince Rupert. Buckingham became the head-quarters of the king in the following year. Boarstall House, on the confines of Oxfordshire, and Greenland House, near Henley, were also held for the king. The latter was given up to the parliament in 1644, and the former not till 1646. The skirmish in which Hampden received his mortal wound, took place in June, 1643, at Chalgrove Field, in Oxfordshire, a few miles from the borders of this county.—The principal natural features of Buckinghamshire are the chalk hills, a portion of the Chiltern range, and the Vale of Aylesbury. The Chiltern hills extend across the southern part of the county, from Bledlow and West Wycombe on the edge of Oxfordshire, in a north-easterly direction, by Risborough, Wendover, Ivinghoe, and Eddlesborough, into Bedfordshire. At some points they have an elevation of about 900 feet, but generally they are considerably lower. This district is believed to have been anciently a dense forest, but the larger part of it is now under cultivation. The Vale of Aylesbury, to the north-west, extends across the middle of the county, forming part of the basin of the Thame, which is separated by the Chiltern hills from that of the Thames. North of this fertile vale are some low hills of sandstone and limestone. The principal woodland districts are on the Chiltern hills and in the southern part of the county, Bernwood Forest on the edge of Oxfordshire, and Whaddon Chase between Buckingham and Fenny Stratford. Beech and oak are the principal timber. The abundance of the former has by some been conjectured to have given rise to the name of the county, buccen being the Saxon for "beech." There is much beautiful and varied scenery south of the Chiltern range. The most extensive prospects are obtained from points near Brill, Eddlesborough, and Penn, the latter embracing, it is said, portions of ten counties. The pictures of rural life which it affords have been graphically described by Milton in the "L'Allegro" and "Il Penseroso."—The rivers of Buckinghamshire are the Thames, with its tributaries the Thame and the Colne, and the rivers Ouse and Ouzel. The Thames touches the county a little to the north of Henley, forming its southern boundary for nearly 30 miles, and flowing in an easterly and southerly course past Great Marlow, Hedsor, Taplow (opposite to which is Maidenhead, in Berkshire), Eton, and Datchet. It is navigable the whole distance. The Colne separates Buckinghamshire from Middlesex, first touching the former a few miles to the north of Uxbridge, where it is joined by the Misbourn, a river which rises in the Chiltern hills, near Great Missenden, and runs in a south-easterly direction past Amersham. The Colne thence flows southward past Iver, Colnbrook, and Horton to the Thames, into which it falls at the south-eastern corner of the county, near Staines. This river is not navigable, and has several channels in some parts of its course; trout are found in it. The Thame, which has several sources, flows from the eastern side of the county and the borders of Hertfordshire, by a winding course through the Vale of Aylesbury, south-westward to the town of Thame. After forming the boundary of the county for a few miles, it enters Oxfordshire and joins the Thames at Dorchester. The length of its course through Buckinghamshire is nearly 30 miles. It becomes navigable when it reaches the edge of Oxfordshire. Eels are abundant in this river, which also contains pike, perch, roach, and other fish. The Ouse rises in Northamptonshire, and first touches this county at Turweston, near Brackley. After forming the boundary for a few miles, it flows eastward to Buckingham, thence north-east to Thornton, where it again separates the county from Northamptonshire, and below Stony Stratford crosses the county to Newport Pagnell. Its course thence is northerly to Olney and the borders of Bedfordshire, which county it enters below Cold Brayfield. That part of its course which is in Buckinghamshire is remarkably circuitous, and is about 45 miles in length, or nearly double the direct distance between the points where it first touches and quits the county. The Ouzel rises near Eddlesborough, in the Chiltern hills, and after a northerly course of about 30 miles, partly along the borders of this county and Bedfordshire, past Leighton Buzzard, Linslade (where it enters Buckinghamshire), Fenny Stratford, and Woolston, joins the Ouse at Newport Pagnell. This river is famed for its perch, pike, and bream. The Wick is a small stream which rises near West Wycombe, in the Chilterns, and flowing south-eastward past High Wycombe, falls into the Thames near Hedsor.—Buckinghamshire does not contain any minerals of importance. The climate is mild and healthy. In the Vale of Aylesbury, which is proverbial for its fertility, are some of the richest meadows and pasture lands in England. Its abundant produce of corn and cattle are celebrated in the saying, "Buckinghamshire bread and beef." Sandy soils are found north of the vale, next Bedfordshire, and clay and loam in the valley of the Ouse. Turnips and wheat are grown in the latter district. There is much good and highly-cultivated land between the Chilterns and the Thames, the soil of the level district next the latter and the Colne being a good loam above the London clay. Meadows and pasture land occupy about half the surface of the county. Dairy farms are very numerous, and the quantity of butter produced is enormous. The number of cows kept for the dairy is said to exceed 20,000, and the annual produce of butter is about 1,900 tons, or 500,000 lbs. It is chiefly sent to the London market, made up in rolls of two pounds in weight, and packed in baskets called "flats," of various capacity but of the uniform depth of 11 inches. Cream cheeses are made, but only in small quantities. Most of the dairy cows are of the Yorkshire or Hereford short-horn breeds. There are also some Welsh and Alderney cows. The stock of sheep is very large, and the principal breeds are the Dorsetshire, South Down, Gloucester, Leicester, and a cross breed between the two latter. The Dorset ewes are valued for their early lambs, the South Downs for mutton, and the other breeds for their wool. Hogs, chiefly of the Berkshire breed, are kept in large numbers on the dairy farms. This county is noted for a peculiar method of rearing and fattening ducks very early in the spring. There are some extensive cherry orchards.—Buckinghamshire is divided into the following eight hundreds:—Ashendon, Aylesbury, Buckingham, Burnham, Cottesloe, Desborough, Newport, and Stoke. At the time of the Norman survey it was divided into 18. Burnham, Desborough, and Stoke are the "Chiltern Hundreds," the steward of which was at first an officer appointed to put down robbers and wild beasts in the district. The duties and profits of the office are now merely nominal, and it is only heard of as a post under the crown accepted by a member of parliament when he wishes to vacate his seat. The county contains about 200 parishes, 14 of which are market towns, viz.:—Buckingham (nominally the county town), Aylesbury (now considered the real capital), Great Marlow, High Wycombe, Amersham, Newport Pagnell, Winslow, Beaconsfield, Chesham, Ivinghoe, Olney, Princes Risborough, Wendover, and Stony Stratford. The first four are parliamentary boroughs, returning two members each. The county returns three members to parliament. Aylesbury is the place of election, and Buckingham, Newport Pagnell, and Beaconsfield are polling places. Buckinghamshire is included in the Norfolk Circuit, and the assizes and quarter sessions are held at Aylesbury. The local government is vested in a lord-lieutenant, with about 60 deputies, a high sheriff, and a large body of magistrates, above 200 in number. There are seven Poor-law Unions in the county, the seats of which are Amersham, Aylesbury, Buckingham, Eton, Newport Pagnell, Winslow, and High Wycombe. The archdeac. of Buckingham, which is very nearly co-extensive with the county, is in the dioc. of Oxford, in the prov. of Canterbury. It was formerly part of the dioc. of Lincoln.—The chief manufactures carried on in Buckinghamshire are those of lace, straw-plait, and silk weaving. The lace trade, which in 1841 employed 4,440 persons, is of much less importance than it was formerly, and is now chiefly carried on in the neighbourhood of Olney and Hanslope. Several paper-mills have long been established on the small river Wick, and above 350 persons are at present employed in the manufacture. Wooden chair making also occupies about 500 hands. The chief productions of the county are limestone, lime, sand, forest marble; beech, oak, and other timber; wheat, barley, clover, tares, turnips, hay; horses, cows, oxen, sheep, pigs, calves, and lambs; early ducks, cream cheese, and butter, which are largely exported to the London market.—The antiquities of this county are not very numerous. Several Roman stations existed within its limits. The ancient roads, Watling Street, Icknield Street, and Akeman Street, intersected the county. Watling Street, now the grand Holyhead road, entered it near Brickhill, and passed in a north-westerly line by Fenny and Stony Stratford into Northamptonshire. Icknield Street ran from Dunstable along the Chiltern hills, by Wendover and Princes Risborough, south-westward into Oxfordshire. Akeman Street crossed the northern part of the county; but its course is uncertain. There are remains of ancient camps at Burnham, Medmenham, West Wycombe, and Eddlesborough. The latter is an extensive earthwork, within which is a large and lofty mound called Kemble Castle, or Castle Hill, the traditional seat of Cunobeline, a British chief. In the vicinity are the villages of Great Kemble and Little Kemble, the name of which was anciently Kynebel, or Cunobel. Other intrenchments exist at Danesfield, Cholsbury, Hawridge, and Hedgerley Dean.—There are no ruins of the baronial castles, seven in number, formerly existing in this county; but the sites of three of them are marked by traces of the earthworks surrounding them. These are at Lavendon, Castlethorpe, and Whitchurch. Twenty-one religious houses were founded in this county; but most of them have entirely perished. The most extensive ruins are those of Notley Abbey, near Thame. The buildings, consisting of the great hall and part of the cloisters, have long been converted into a farmhouse. Slight remains exist of Medmenham Abbey, Missenden Priory, and the nunneries of Ivinghoe and Burnham. At Ashridge was a college of the Society of Bonhommes, which was afterwards made a royal residence, and was occupied by Queen Elizabeth. One only of the ancient hospitals is still in existence, that at Newport Pagnell. Eton College, founded by Henry VI., is in this county. Stewkley church is very ancient, and a highly interesting and well-preserved specimen of Norman architecture. The same style is also exhibited in the churches at Hanslope, Wing, Wycombe, Stanton Bury, Upton, Water-Stratford, and a few others. Chetwode church, noted for its fine stained windows, and Hillesdon church, are good examples of the early English style. In the same style are the churches of Cold Brayfield and Lillingstone Dayrell. The county contains many fine examples of the decorated and perpendicular styles. Ancient mansions exist at Gayhurst and Liscombe: the former remains almost unaltered as it was built in the reign of Elizabeth; the latter has been modernised. At Boarstall is the gatehouse of an old castellated mansion.—The principal modern seats of the nobility and gentry, which are numerous in Buckinghamshire, are the following:—Stowe, the magnificent residence of the late Duke of Buckingham; Bulstrode, near Beaconsfield, the seat of the Duke of Portland; Wotton House, that of the Marquis of Chandos; Hampden House, of the Earl of Buckinghamshire; Penn House, of Earl Howe; Ashridge, of the Earl of Ellesmere; Dropmore, of Lady Grenville; Aston Clinton, of Lord Lake; Morton House, of Lord Godolphin; Ditton Park, of Lord Montague; Lillies, of Lord Nugent, &c.—The London and North-Western railway enters the county near Ivinghoe, and passes north-west by Bletchley and Wolverton, into Northamptonshire. There is a branch line to Aylesbury from Cheddington Junction. Another branch runs from Bletchley to Bedford; a third from Leighton to Dunstable; a fourth from Bletchley, through Winslow, Claydon, Bicester, &c., to Oxford; and a fifth from Winslow, on the latter line, to Buckingham and Brackley. The Great Western railway crosses the southern extremity of the county from West Drayton to Maidenhead, with branches from Slough to Windsor and Uxbridge, and from Maidenhead to Thame. The Buckinghamshire railway, not yet completed, will connect Aylesbury, through Winslow and Brackley, with the Oxford and Birmingham line at Banbury. The Grand Junction canal enters the county near Marsworth, passing northward along the valley of the Ousel, through Fenny Stratford, to Newport Pagnell, and thence westward along the valley of the Ouse to Stony Stratford, where it enters Northamptonshire. Branch canals are formed from Marsworth to Aylesbury and Wendover, and from Stony Stratford to Buckingham. The great road from London to Chester and Holyhead runs across Buckinghamshire from Brickhill to Stony Stratford, coinciding with the ancient Watling Street. Another road crosses farther north from near Woburn, through Newport Pagnell, to Barkley. The south corner of the county is crossed by the great road from London to Bath. The road to Oxford enters near Uxbridge, and passes north-west through Beaconsfield and High Wycombe, quitting the county near West Wycombe. Another road branches off from this at Redhill, running through Amersham and Wendover to Aylesbury. The principal roads from the latter place are, northward, through Winslow to Buckingham, and thence to Brackley; to Leighton Buzzard, Fenny Stratford, Newport Pagnell, and Olney; eastward to Tring and Berkhampstead; westward to Bicester; and south-west to Thame and Oxford.—This county gives the title of earl to the Hampden family.

BUCKISH MILLS, a hmlt. partly in the par. of Parkham and hund. of Shebbear, and partly in the par. of Woolfardisworthy and hund. of Witheridge, in the co. of Devon, 7 miles to the S.W. of Bideford. It is seated on the S. coast of Bideford Bay.

BUCKLAND, a par. in the hund. of Ganfield, in the co. of Berks, 4 miles to the N.E. of Farringdon. It is situated on the S. bank of the river Thames, and contains the hmlt. of Carswell. The manor was held by the De la Poles, dukes of Suffolk, from whom it passed, in 1545, to the Yateses, and in 1690 to the Throckmortons, who still hold it. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, worth £310, in the gift of the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a free school for boys and girls, founded in 1793, by Henry Southby, and further endowed by other persons, with an income of about £40 per annum. The other charities produce about £20 a year. The chief residence is Buckland House, the seat of Sir R. G. Throckmorton, Bart. It was erected in 1757, after designs by John Wood, of Bath.

BUCKLAND, a par. in the hund. of Aylesbury, in the co. of Buckingham, 4 miles to the E. of Aylesbury. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Stoke Mandeville, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a small ancient building, with a square tower. The Methodists have a large chapel, with Sunday-school attached. The parochial charities are of trifling value. The Aylesbury branch of the Grand Junction canal intersects the parish.

BUCKLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Thurleston, hund. of Stanborough, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles to the W. of Kingsbridge. It is seated on the coast of the English Channel.

BUCKLAND, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 6 miles to the S.E. of Evesham, in Worcestershire. Broadway is its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the Cotswold hills, at their northern extremity, and contains the hmlt. of Laverton. The manor was one of the possessions of the abbots of Gloucester, and was afterwards held by the Gresham family. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, worth £222, in the patron. of Sir Thomas Phillips, Bart. The church is in the perpendicular style, and has a fine stained window of the 15th century. This parish participates with Chipping Campden in the benefit of the free school, founded in 1707 by Henry F. Thynne, the income of which, from endowment, is about £130 per annum.

BUCKLAND, a par. in the hund. of Edwinstree, in the co. of Hertford, 2 miles to the N. of Buntingford. It includes the vil. of Chipping. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, worth £300, in the patron. of the Provost and Fellows of King's College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities are worth £3 a year. This parish was crossed by the old British road, Ermine Street.

BUCKLAND, a vil. in the par. of Therfield, hund. of Odsey, in the co. of Hertford, 2 miles to the S.W. of Royston. It is seated in a hilly district.

BUCKLAND, a par. in the hund. of Faversham, lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles to the N.W. of Faversham. It lies near the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £167, in the gift of Sir J. T. Tyrell, Bart. The church, long decayed, was dedicated to St. Nicholas.

BUCKLAND, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Reigate, in the co. of Surrey, 2 miles to the W. of Reigate, its post town. It is situated under Boxhill and Reigate Hill, on the N. edge of the Weald, near the London and South-Western railway. The river Mole, a branch of the Thames, runs a little to the S.W. of this place. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. of £337, in the gift of the Warden and Fellows of All Souls' College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There are charitable endowments for the benefit of the poor amounting to £29 per annum. Buckland House is one of the chief residences.

BUCKLAND, a par. in the hund. of Bewsborough, lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles to the N.W. of Dover, its post town. The London, Chatham, and Dover railway passes near it. The parish is situated in a hilly country on the river Dour, here crossed by a bridge, and was the site of a hospital for lepers, founded about 1140 by the monks of the Benedictine priory at Dover. There are no remains of the building, but ancient silver coins have been dug up near its site. In the village are a flour-mill and two paper-mills. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, worth £139, in the gift of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyans.

BUCKLAND-BREWER, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the S.W. of Bideford, its post town. It comprises the hmlts. of Bilsford, Galsworthy, and Tythacott. The addition to the name of this parish was taken from the Brewer family, by whom the manor was anciently held. The grant of a market, long since disused, was obtained for the inhabitants by the Abbot of Dunkeswell. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. with the perpet. curs. of Bulkworthy and East Putford annexed, £244, in the gift of the crown. The church, which has a fine Norman entrance, is dedicated to SS. Mary and Benedict. A small college was once connected with it. The parochial charities produce £4 a year. Annual fairs are held on Whit-Monday and the 2nd November.

BUCKLAND-DENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Kilmersdon, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles to the N. of Frome, its post town, which is a station on the Great Western railway. It is situated in a pleasant district, and was anciently a market town and a place of some importance. It was at one time the seat of a good woollen trade. The assizes were occasionally held here. In the neighbouring valleys teasel is grown, the cultivation of which, for use in the woollen manufacture, employs many of the villagers. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £163, in the gift of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. The charities are worth about £10 a year

BUCKLAND, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Braunton, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the N. of South Molton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. with that of Buckland-Filleigh, of £286, in the patron. of Earl Fortescue. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There is a chapel for Wesleyans in the village. The parochial charities, consisting of the produce of parish lands, amount to £22 per annum.

BUCKLAND, EGG. See EGG-BUCKLAND Devonshire.

BUCKLAND FEE, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of North Petherton, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the S. of Bridgwater. It is near the Bristol and Exeter railway.

BUCKLAND-FILLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, in the co. of Devon, 7 miles to the S. of Torrington. Hatherleigh is its post town. It lies near the river Torridge. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £218, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small ancient edifice, entirely covered with ivy. It has the mausoleum and several ancient monuments of the Fortescue family. There are some charities of trifling value. Buckland-Filleigh House, formerly the seat of the Filleighs, now of the Fortescues, is a handsome mansion of stone, situated on rising ground in a picturesque and well-wooded demesne.

BUCKLAND-IN-THE-MOOR, a par. in the hund. of Haytor, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles to the N.W. of Ashburton. It is situated in the forest quarter of Dartmoor, on the banks of the river Dart. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Ashburton, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church has a carved screen of wood. The produce of the parish lands, for the relief of the poor, is about £33 per annum. Buckland House is the principal residence.

BUCKLAND-MONACHORUM, a par. in the hund. of Roborough, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the S. of Tavistock. It is situated on the banks of the river Tavy, not far from the Horrabridge station, on the Tavistock branch of the South Devon railway. It was anciently a market town, and became noted as the site of an abbey for monks of the Cistercian order, founded about 1278 by Amicia de Rivers, Countess Dowager of Devonshire. This monastery, which was afterwards fortified, flourished till the Dissolution, when it had a revenue of £242. The first orchards in the county are said to have been planted by the monks of Buckland. In the reign of Elizabeth, the estate was purchased by Sir Francis Drake, in whose family it still remains. Some of the houses in the village are very ancient. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £430, in the patron. of the Rev. R. Hayne, D.D. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was built about the year 1400. It is in the form of a cross, and has a tower surmounted by eight-sided turrets and pinnacles. The church contains a fine monument, by Bacon, to Lord Heathfield, who defended Gibraltar, and several monuments to the Drake family. The charitable endowments, consisting partly of bequests for education, by Lady Modyford and Matthew Elford, and £500 for the benefit of the poor, by Sir Ralph Lopes, Bart., amount to about £43 a year. Buckland Abbey, an Elizabethan mansion, pleasantly situated in wooded grounds by the Tavy, is the seat of Sir T. T. F. Drake. In the mansion are preserved a portrait of the great naval hero, and several personal relics. Some remains of the ancient abbey still exist in the grounds. There are several pleasant seats in the neighbourhood.

BUCKLAND-NEWTON, or BUCKLAND ABBAS, a par. in the hund. of the same name, Cerne subdivision of the co. of Dorset, 10 miles to the N. of Dorchester, and 3 N.E. from Cerne, its post town. It includes the tythgs. of Brockhampton, Buckland-Newtown, Knowle, Duntish, Mintern Parva, and Plush. The village, which is a place of considerable importance, and had formerly a market, is situated at the head of the Vale of Blackmoor, and commands fine woodland scenery. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. with the cur. of Plush, £196, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Wells. The church, which is partly in the early English and partly in the perpendicular style, is dedicated to the Holy Rood, or, according to Hutchins, to St. Mary. It has an embattled tower, containing a peal of five bells, surmounted by a short lead-covered spire. In the tything of Plush a handsome church was erected in 1843, and dedicated to St. John the Baptist, in place of the old chapel of ease, which had fallen into decay. There is a small Dissenting chapel, and a handsome new school-house. The charitable endowments for the poor produce £30 per annum.

BUCKLAND-NEWTON HUNDRED, one of the 3 hunds. of the Cerne subdivision of the co. of Dorset, situated in the centre of the co., and surrounded by the hunds. of Sherborne, Pimperne, Whiteway, and the libs. of Piddlehinton, Alton Pancras, Piddletrenthide, and Fordington. It contains the pars. of Buckland-Newton, Mappowder, Pulham, and Wootton-Glanville, and has an area of about 12,500 acres.

BUCKLAND-RIPERS, a par. in the hund. of Culliford-Tree, Dorchester div. of the co. of Dorset, 3 miles to the N. of Weymouth. Melcomb Regis is its post town. The Great Western railway passes close by this place. Part of the hmlt. of Nottington is within the par. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, worth £176, in the patron. of Q. H. Stroud, Esq.

BUCKLAND ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Abdick and Bulstone, in the co. of Somerset, 6 miles to the W. of Ilminster. It is on the borders of Devonshire, and extends into the hunds. of Martock and South Petherton. On the W. side of the parish are Blackdown Hill, on which are the remains of an old camp, called Neroche Castle, and not far off the mounds of stones called Robin Hood's Butts. Some military relics have been found in the district. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £343, in the gift of F. L. Popham, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BUCKLAND-TOUT-SAINTS, a par. in the hund. of Coleridge, in the co. of Devon, 2 miles to the N.E. of Kingsbridge, its post town. It is situated near the South Devon railway. The living is a perpet. cur.* annexed to the vic. of Loddiswell, in the dioc. of Exeter.

BUCKLAND, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Braunton, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles to the N.W. of South Molton, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, of the val. of £194, in the gift of J. F. Basset, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Peter, and contains a fine screen, richly carved in arabesque. Buckland House is the chief residence.

BUCKLAND, WEST, a par. in the western div. of the hund. of Kingsbury, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles to the E. of Wellington, its post town. It lies near the confines of Devonshire, at the N. foot of Blackdown Hill. The Bristol and Exeter railway runs near it. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Wellington, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church, which is old, and partly in the Norman style, is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities are of small value.

BUCKLEBURY, a par. in the hund. of Reading, in the co. of Berks, 7 miles to the N.E. of Newbury. Reading is its post town. It is situated on a small stream, a feeder of the Thames, into which it falls at Pangbourne. The par. contains the hmlts. of Marlstone and Hawkridge. Bucklebury Common is an extensive tract of very elevated and pleasantly undulating ground, commanding fine prospects over the rich surrounding country. The view extends, in clear weather, to Windsor Castle. The village is seated in the valley N. of the common. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. of £453, in the patron. of W. H. H. Hartley, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is an ancient edifice in the Norman style, with a tower and spire, and contains an old font and a monument to Lady Frances Winchcombe. In the churchyard is a yew tree of immense size. There is a chapel belonging to the Independents, and a free school for boys and girls, founded and endowed by Winchcombe Hartley, which has an income of about £35 per annum. Bucklebury shares with Thatcham the benefits of Lady Winchcombe's endowed school at the latter place for educating and clothing 40 boys. There are some other charities of small amount. Bucklebury House, now the seat of the Hartleys, who hold the manor, was erected by John Winchcombe in the 16th century. He was the son of John Winchcombe, who became famous as Jack of Newbury in the reign of Henry VIII. The manor belonged to the Winchcombes, and passed from them by marriage to the Hartleys.

BUCKLERHEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Murroes, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 7 miles to the S. of Forfar.

BUCKLER'S HARD, a vil. in the par. and lib. of Beaulieu, in the co. of Southampton, 7 miles to the N.E. of Lymington. It is seated on the banks of the Beaulieu river. Here are several shipyards, in which most of the inhabitants are employed.

BUCKLESHAM, a par. in the hund. of Colneis, in the co. of Suffolk, 5 miles to the S.E. of Ipswich, its post town, and the same distance S. of Woodbridge, both of which are stations on the Great Eastern railway. It contains the hmlt. of Kembroke. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, of the annual val. of £569, in the gift of the Rev. E. Walford, incumbent. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a brick edifice with a small wooden tower, and was repaired in 1842. The register dates from the year 1678. There is a National school, which receives a government grant. There are three manors in this parish.

BUCKLEY, a chplry. in the par. of Hawarden, and hund. of Mold, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, not far from Hawarden.

BUCKLEY. See BULKELEY, Cheshire.

BUCKLOW HUNDRED, one of the 7 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. palatine of Chester, situated in the northern parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. and W. by the river Mersey, separating it from Lancashire, on the E. by the hund. of Macclesfield, on the S. by the hunds. of Northwich and Eddisbury. It contains the pars. of Ashton-upon-Mersey, Bowdon, Grappenhall, Knutsford, Lymm, Mobberley, Runcorn, and Warburton, with parts of Great Budworth, and Rostherne. The hund. extends over an area of about 107,700 acres.

BUCKLYVIE, or BUCHLYVIE, a vil. and quoad sacra par., partly in the par. of Kippen, in the co. of Perth, and partly in the par. of Drymen, in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, 10 miles to the W. of Stirling. It is seated in a hilly country on the S. side of the river Forth, and is a burgh of barony. Besides the chapel of ease, there are a Free church and an United Presbyterian church. Fairs are held here in February and March, on the 26th June, the last Tuesday in July, and the 18th November.

BUCKMILL, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Idle, and par. of Calverley, in the wap. of Morley, West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.E. of Bradford.

BUCK-MILLS, a chplry. in the par. of Woolfardisworthy, hund. of Witheridge, in the co. of Devon, near Bideford, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, and in the patron. of Mrs. Elwes. The church has only recently been built.

BUCKMINSTER, a par. and pleasant vil. in the hund. of Framland, in the co. of Leicester, 5 miles E. of the Saxby station, on the Syston and Peterborough railway, 7 E. of Corby station, on the Great Northern, and 10 E.N.E. of Melton Mowbray. This par. formerly included the tnshp. of Sewstern, which is now a distinct par., with its own church, erected in 1842, its parish officers and parish meetings, but the living is still held in conjunction with Buckminster. The united vics. are in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £166, in the patron. of the Earl of Dysart. Buckminster church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. It is an ancient building, exhibiting various styles of architecture, and has a massive tower surmounted by a lofty spire, which was struck by lightning in 1843, but has since been repaired. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school, built by the late Hon. F. Tollemache in 1841. The charitable endowments of the parish produce about £50 a year. Buckminster Park is the seat of the Earl of Dysart. It is a handsome pile in the Grecian style, erected by the late Sir W. Manners, in 1798. Bricks and tiles are made in the neighbourhood.

BUCKNALL, a par. in the southern div. of the wap. of Gartree, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles to the W. of Horncastle, its post town. It is watered by a small stream, a branch of the river Witham, which flows to the W. of the par. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £231, in the gift of Lord Monson. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The parochial charities, including an endowment for education, produce £10 a year.

BUCKNALL-CUM-BAGNALL, a parochial chplry., in the northern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, near Stoke-upon-Trent. Newcastle-under-Lyne is its post town. It is situated on the E. side of the Trent, and contains the tnshps. of Bagnall, Bucknall, Eaves, and Ubberley. Bucknall was separated from the par. of Stoke in 1807. The inhabitants are employed in the mines and manufactures of the district. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. with the cur. of Bagnall annexed, £200, in the patron. of the Rev. E. Powys, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a small bequest for education.

BUCKNELL, or BUCKNILL, a par. in the Stow div. of the hund. of Purslow, in the co. of Salop, but extending also into the hund. of Wigmore, in the co. of Hereford, 3 miles to the N.E. of Knighton, in Radnorshire, its post town. It is situated on the small river Ony, a branch of the Teme, and is a station on the Knighton section of the Central Wales railway, and includes the tnshps. of Buckton and Coxall. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, of the val. with the cur. of Buckton annexed, of £332, in the gift of the Master and Wardens of the Grocers' Company, London. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are charitable endowments worth £18 a year. This par. is in the honour of Tutbury, in the duchy of Lancaster.

BUCKNELL, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, in the co. of Oxford, 2 miles to the N.W. of Bicester, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, in the gift of the Warden and Fellows of New College, Oxford. The church, which exhibits the Norman and early English styles of architecture, is dedicated to St. Peter. It contains a monumental brass of the date 1638. The parochial charities produce about £10 a year. The chief residence is Bucknell House. Traces of an ancient village exist here, which was destroyed by the Danes early in the 10th century.

BUCKROSE WAPENTAKE, one of the 6 waps. or subdivisions of the East Riding of the co. of York, bounded on the N. by the wap. of Pickering Lythe, on the E. by the wap. of Dickering, on the S. by the wap. of Harthill, and on the W. by the North Riding. It contains the pars. of Acklam, Birdsall, Bugthorpe, Burythorpe, Cowlam, Fridaythorpe, North Grimston, Helperthorpe, Heslerton, Kirkby-Grindalyth, Kirkby-under-Dale, Langton, Norton, Rillington, Scrayingham, Settrington, Sherburn, Skirpenbeck, Sledmere, Thorpe-Bassett, Weaverthorpe, Westow, Wetwang, Wharram Percy, Wharram-le-Street, Wintringham, Yeddingham, and the ext. par. district of Kirkham. The wap. comprises about 106,100 acres.

BUCKS GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Rudgwick, hund. of West Easwrith, rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex.

BUCKSHAW, a hmlt. in the par. of Holwell, which was formerly a detached part of the hund. of Horethorne, in the co. of Somerset, but under the late Act of Parliament is now included in the co. of Dorset, 4 miles to the S.E. of Sherborne.

BUCKTON, a tnshp. in the parochial chplry. of Kyloe, district of Islandshire, in the co. of Northumberland, 3 miles to the N. of Belford. It is near the sea-coast and the Newcastle and Berwick railway.

BUCKTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bucknell, hund. of Wigmore, in the co. of Hereford, 6 miles to the E. of Knighton, in Radnorshire. It is near the river Teme.

BUCKTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bridlington, wap. of Dickering, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N. of Bridlington. It is situated near the sea-coast of Flamborough Head.

BUCKWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Leightonstone, in the co. of Huntingdon, 7 miles to the N.W. of Huntingdon, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. of £330, in the patron. of R. E. D. Shafto, Esq. The church is dedicated to All Saints. Near the village are Buckworth Grove and Buckworth Lodge.

BUDBROOKE, a par. in the Snitterfield div. of the hund. of Barlichway, in the co. of Warwick, 1 mile to the W. of Warwick, its post town. It includes the hmlts. of Hampton-on-the-Hill, Littleworth, and Lower Norton, and is crossed by the Oxford and Birmingham section of the Great Western railway, and the Warwick and Birmingham canal. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, of the val. of £476, in the patron. of W. E. Wood, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an unpretending building, with square tower and tiled roof, but contains some beautiful stained-glass windows and several monuments of the Dormer family. At the hmlt. of Hampton is a Roman Catholic chapel and schools. There is a free school, endowed in 1701 by J. Marston, with an income of £50 per annum. The other charitable endowments for the poor produce about £45 a year. The principal residence is Grove Park, the seat of Lord Dormer, who is lord of the manor.

BUDBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Edwinstowe, wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 2 miles to the N.W. of Ollerton.

BUDDINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Bignor, hund. of Bury, in the rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex, 4 miles to the S. of Petworth.

BUDDLE HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Selworthy, hund. of Carhampton, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the W. of Minehead. It is seated in a beautiful country, near the Bristol Channel.

BUDDLES, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter, hund. of Ringslow, and lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles from Ramsgate.

BUDDLESGATE HUNDRED, one of the 5 hunds. of the Winchester div. of the co. of Southampton, situated partly in the northern and partly in the southern parliamentary divs. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hunds. of Wherwell and Barton Stacey, on the E. by those of Mitcheldever and Fawley, on the S. by the hund. of Mansbridge, and on the W. by the hund. of King's Sombourn. It is separated into the upper and lower portions. The upper contains the pars. of Ashley, Crawley, Lainston, Littleton, Little Sombourn, Sparsholt, Stoke-Charity, Wecke, and Wonston, with parts of those of St. Faith, and King's Sombourn. The lower contains the pars. of Compton, Hursley, and Otterbourne. The entire hund. extends over about 35,000 acres.

BUDE, BUDEHAM, or BUDEHAVEN, a chplry. and small seaport in the par. and hund. of Stratton, in the co. of Cornwall, 2 miles to the W. of Stratton, its post town, and 15 miles from Launceston. It is seated on the shore of a small shallow bay of the same name, and is resorted to as a bathing-place. The harbour is subordinate to Padstow, and only admits vessels of small burthen. It is liable to be choked with sand, which accumulates here in immense quantities. The sand is collected by the inhabitants and sent inland for manure. The business of the place was greatly promoted by the construction of the Bude canal, which is 21 miles long, and connects the village with Launceston. This work was undertaken in 1819. A small coasting trade is carried on. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £50, in the patron. of Sir T. D. Acland, Bart. The well-known Bude light took its name from this village, in which its inventor, Mr. G. Gurney, resided.

BUDEAUX, ST., a par. in the hund. of Roborough, in the co. of Devon, but extending also into the hund. of East, in the co. of Cornwall, 4 miles to the N. of Plymouth, its post town. It is situated in a beautiful country, on the banks of the river Tamar, just below its confluence with the Tavy. The Tavistock branch of the South Devon railway passes a little to the eastward of this place. The village is nearly opposite to Saltash, where the Tamar is crossed by a ferry. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. with that of Knackersknowle annexed, £130, in the gift of the Vicar of St.

Andrew's, Plymouth. The church, which stands on a hill commanding a good view of the Tamar and the surrounding country, was founded by the Budocksheds, a family who long held the manor, and whose monuments, with several others, are in the church. Here is a free school for boys and girls, endowed in 1767 by Peter M. Docton, which has a revenue of about £90 per annum, for which 12 children of each sex are educated and clothed. A castle formerly stood here, the seat of the Budocksheds.

BUDLE, a tnshp. in the par. and ward of Bambrough, in the co. of Northumberland, 4 miles to the N.E. of Belford. It is seated on the coast of a bay of the same name, and has a small pier-harbour, subordinate to the port of Berwick. The coast is rocky, and exhibits, for about 20 miles southward, rapidly-alternating beds of trap, limestone, slate, and gritstone. The small river Warn falls into Budle Bay. Fine cockles are very abundant on the coast. There are several flour-mills. The principal residence is Budle House, formerly a seat of the Forsters of Bambrough.

BUDLEIGH, EAST, a par. in the hund. of East Budleigh, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the W. of Sidmouth. Exeter is its post town. It is pleasantly situated near the coast of the English Channel, a mile from the river Otter, and contains the vil. and watering-place of Budleigh Salterton, and the hmlts. of Great and Little Knowle, and Kersbrook. The ancient chapelry of Withycombe-Raleigh was separated from this parish on the death of the late vicar, in 1852, and is a parish by itself. East Budleigh was once a market town, and a place of sufficient importance to give name to the hundred. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £300, in the patron. of the trustees of Lord Rolle. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is a chapel belonging to the Independents in the village. Large and handsome National schools, with a master's house attached, have been lately built by the trustees of Drake's Charity, with an endowment of £55 a year. The charitable endowments amount to £109 8s. 1d. per annum. Hayes, an old mansion, now occupied as a farmhouse, is interesting as the birthplace (1552) of Sir Walter Raleigh. A fair is held on Easter Monday.

BUDLEIGH, EAST, HUNDRED, one of the 33 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Devon, situated in the southern parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hunds. of Cliston, Hemyock, and Ottery St. Mary, on the E. by the hunds. of Colyton and Axminster, on the S. by the English Channel, and on the W. by the hunds. of Wonford and Exminster. It contains the pars. of Aylesbeare, Bicton, East Budleigh, Clist St. George, Clist Honiton, Clist St. Mary, Colyton-Rawleigh, Farringdon, Gittisham, Harpford, Littleham, Lympstone, Otterton, Rockbear, Salcombe-Regis, Sidbury, Sidmouth, Venn Ottery, Withycombe-Rawleigh, and Woodbury, with the town of Exmouth. The hund. covers an area of about 50,300 acres.

BUDLEIGH SALTERTON, a vil. in the par. and hund. of East Budleigh, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles to the S.W. of Sidmouth, and 14 miles to the S.E. of Exeter. The nearest railway station is Exmouth. It is seated on the coast of the English Channel, at the mouth of the river Otter, in a pleasant valley, along both sides of which the houses are scattered. There is a good beach, the cliffs rising to the height of 250 feet at some points, and numerous visitors frequent the village in the summer. The stream is crossed by several pretty rustic bridges. The cur. is annexed to the vic. of East Budleigh, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The Wesleyans and Baptists have chapels here. In the village are a coastguard station, a mechanics' institute, and National schools.

BUDLEIGH, WEST, HUNDRED, one of the 33 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Devon, situated in the northern parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of Witheridge, on the E. by the hund. of Hayridge, and on the S. and W. by the hund. of Crediton. It comprises the pars. of Cheriton-Fitzpaine, Poughill, Shobrooke, Stockleigh-English, Stockleigh-Pomeroy, Upton-Hellions, and Washfield. It has an area of about 16,900 acres.

BUDOCK, a par. in the hund. of Kerrier, in the co. of Cornwall, near Falmouth, a suburb of which it includes. It is situated on the W. side of Falmouth Bay, on the English Channel, and contains Pendennis Castle, and the site of an ancient college, founded near the close of the 13th century. Granite is abundant here, and there is a copper mine. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of St. Gluvias, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church contains several old family monuments. There is a chapel for Wesleyan Methodists. The parochial charities, consisting chiefly of a bequest for education by F. Robyns in 1768, amount to £10 a year.

BUDWORTH, GREAT, a par., tnshp., and vil., chiefly in the hund. of Bucklow, but partly also in the hunds. of Eddisbury and Northwich, in the co. palatine of Chester, 3 miles N. of Northwich, and 18 miles to the N.E. of Chester. Northwich is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Weaver, and contains the chplries. of Antrobus, Barnton, Hartford, Little Leigh, Lostock-Gralam, Lower Peover, Northwich or Watermen's Church, Stretton, Tabley Chapel, Lower Whitley, Wilderspool or Stockton Heath, and Witton-cum-Twambrooks, besides numerous tnshps. The Bridgwater canal crosses the par., and near the vil. are two small lakes, called Budworth Mere and Pickmere. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the salt-works of the neighbourhood. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chester, of the annual val. of £626, in the patron. of Christ Church College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is in the Gothic style of architecture. It is an ancient building, with a fine embattled tower, and contains monuments of the Pooles, Warburtons, and Leycesters, and a peal of eight of the finest bells in Cheshire. In addition to the parish church, there are twelve district churches, situated in the chapelries above enumerated. The livings of all but Tabley Chapel are perpet. curs., varying in val. between £168 and £80. These churches will be noticed under the several chapelries in which they are situated. The charitable endowments of the parish, including the revenue of the free grammar school at Witton, amount to about £440 per annum, of which £25 belongs to the township of Great Budworth. The principal seats are Belmont House and Arley Hall, in the township of Great Budworth; and Marbury Hall, the seat of the Barrys. In the parish are several very old-fashioned houses, built of wood and plaster. R. E. E. Warburton, Esq., is lord of the manor of Great Budworth. This par. is of considerable extent, comprising an area of 35,920 acres, with a population over 18,000. The soil is clay, with sand.

BUDWORTH, LITTLE, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, in the co. palatine of Chester, 4 miles to the N.E. of Tarporley, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £85, in the gift of the bishop. The church, which anciently belonged to St. Mary's Nunnery, Chester, is dedicated to St. Peter. It was partly rebuilt in 1798, the expense of the work being provided for by a bequest of Ralph Kirkham. Almshouses for 20 persons were founded and endowed here by Lady Isabella Dodd, in 1720, the revenue of which is £130 per annum. There are other charitable endowments for the poor, producing about £60 a year.

BUERSILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Castleton, and par. of Rochdale, hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 2 miles from Rochdale. It is near the Rochdale canal.

BUERTON, BRUERA, or CHURTON HEATH, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Aldford, hund. of Broxton, in the co. palatine of Chester, 5 miles to the S.E. of Chester. The London and North-Western railway passes near it. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of St. Oswald, Chester, in the dioc. of Chester. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is old and of small size, and is called the Church on the Heath.

BUERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Audlem, hund. of Nantwich, in the co. palatine of Chester, 6 miles to the

S. of Nantwich. There are several bequests for the poor, worth £13 a year.

BUGBROOKE, a par. in the hund. of Nobottle Grove, in the co. of Northampton, 6 miles to the S.W. of Northampton. Weedon is its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Nen, over which is a suspension bridge, and is intersected by the Northampton and Peterborough branch of the London and North-Western railway, and the Grand Junction canal. Watling Street passes along the western edge of the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the annual val. of £741, in the gift of the Rev. Dr. Harrison. The church is an ancient building, in various styles, dedicated to St. Michael. It contains a fine screen and a sculptured octagonal font. There is a chapel for Baptists in the village. The parochial charities produce about £20 a year. This parish belongs to the Duchy of Lancaster.

BUGLAWTON, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Astbury, hund. of Northwich, in the co. palatine of Chester, near Congleton, its post town. It is situated on the river Dane, near the North Staffordshire railway. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the silk manufacture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, worth £150, in the patron. of the Rector of Astbury. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village. The water of a mineral spring here has been found useful in cases of scurvy.

BUGLEY, a hmlt. in the par. and lib. of Gillingham, in the co. of Dorset, 5 miles to the N.W. of Shaftesbury.

BUGSWORTH, a tnshp. with Chinley, in the par. of Glossop, hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 3 miles to the N.W. of Chapel-en-le-Frith.

BUGTHORPE, a par. in the wap. of Buckrose, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles to the N. of Pocklington, its post town. It is watered by a small stream, a branch of the river Derwent. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, worth £111, in the patron. of the Archbishop of York. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew.

BUILDWAS, a par. in the Wellington div. of the hund. of South Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 3¼ miles to the N. of Much Wenlock, 11 E. from Shrewsbury, and 7 S. from Wellington. The parish is intersected by the Severn Valley and Wenlock branch lines of railway, which meet at Buildwas Junction station, three-quarters of a mile from the church, on the opposite side of the Severn. The village is situated at the S. foot of the Wrekin, on the banks of the river Severn, which is here crossed by an elegant iron bridge of one arch, erected from a design by Thomas Telford in 1796. Its span is 130 feet. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, worth £25, in the gift of W. Moseley, Esq. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was built in 1720. It is a stone building, with a wooden turret. Near the church is the handsome school, erected in 1856, and presented to the parish by Walter Moseley, Esq., the lord of the manor. There are charitable benefactions for the poor amounting to £11 5s. a year. On the S. bank of the Severn, nearly opposite the bridge, are the ruins of the abbey for which this place was celebrated. It was founded by Roger de Clinton, Bishop of Chester, in 1135, for monks of the Cistercian order, and had a revenue at the Dissolution of £129. The site and endowments of the abbey were then given to Edward Grey, Lord Powis, who married Anne, daughter of Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk. The situation of the monastery was one of singular beauty: a tract of meadow land close to the river, and sheltered on three sides by gentle wooded hills. The ruins consist of the walls of the abbey church, which was a cruciform structure, chiefly in the Norman style, with a central tower. The nave, transept, and tower are nearly perfect. The chapter-house, also in a good state of preservation, has a groined roof. On the site of the cloisters is a farmhouse. The western end of the church is mantled with ivy. Buildwas Park, formerly the seat of the Actons, is now the residence of W. Moseley, Esq.

BUILTH, or LLANVAIR-YN-MUALLT, a par. and market town in the hund. of Builth, in the co. of Brecknock, South Wales, 14 miles to the N. of Brecknock, and 172 miles from London. It is situated on the W. bank of the river Wye, which here separates the counties of Radnor and Brecknock, and is crossed by a stone bridge of six arches, built in 1770. The Welsh name for this place is Llanvair-yn-Muallt. It was the site of a castle, erected probably by the Normans soon after the Conquest. The castle and lordship were held at one time by the family of De Braose, and subsequently by the crown. The last struggles of the Welsh with their English conquerors, and the death of the last Llewellyn, took place in the neighbourhood of Builth. The inhabitants of the town acquired the designation of bradwyr Buallt, or "traitors of Builth," in consequence of their refusing to receive Llewellyn, when flecing from his English pursuers. The Cwm Llewellyn, where the unhappy prince was slain, is about 3 miles from this place. The town has two principal streets, and is irregularly built. It has a market-house of recent erection. Builth is the seat of a Poor-law Union and the head of a County Court district, and contains the Union poorhouse. The town stands on a fertile spot, in the midst of very picturesque and romantic scenery. Near the town are some mineral springs. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £106, in the patron. of Thomas Thomas, Esq. The church, rebuilt in 1793, except the tower, is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains a monument to one of the Lloyds of Towey, who lived in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. There are chapels belonging to the Independents, Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists, and Baptists, and a free school for boys and girls, endowed in 1752 by Thomas Prichard, which has a revenue of about £60. The other charities are of trifling value. The town was nearly destroyed by fire in December, 1691. Some slight remains of the ancient castle exist on the banks of the river. Trout are abundant in the Wye. Monday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 27th June, the 2nd October, and the 6th December.

BUILTH HUNDRED, one of the 6 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Brecknock, South Wales, situated in the northern part of the co., and bounded on the N. and E. by Radnorshire, on the S. by the hunds. of Merthyr and Penkelly, and on the W. by the cos. of Carmarthen and Cardigan. It contains the pars. of Alltmawr, Builth, Llanafanfawr, Llanafanfechan, Llandewi-Abergwessin, Llanddewirewm, Llandulas, Llanfihangel-Abergwessin, Llanfihangelbrynpabuan, Llangammarch, Llanganten, Llangynog, Llanlleonvel, Llanwrthwl, Llanwrtyd, Llanynys, and Maes Mynis.

BUITTLE, a par. in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 4 miles to the S.E. of Castle Douglas, which is a station on the Portpatrick railway. The par. is situated on the coast of the Solway Frith, on the E. side of the Urr Water, and contains the vil. and port of Palnackie. The land is fertile, and the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture and fishing. Buittle Castle, on the W. side of the Urr, is an extensive ruin, formerly belonging to the Baliols, Cummings, and Douglases, and now to Murray of Broughton. A vitrified fort crowns one of the hills. Rock crystal and talc are found in the district, and iron ore is abundant. The living, val. £231, is in the presb. of Kirkcudbright, and in the gift of the crown.

BULBRIDGE, a tythg. in the par. of Wilton, hund. of Cawden, in the co. of Wilts, not far from Wilton. The living is a rect. united with that of Wilton, in the dioc. of Salisbury. There is no church.

BULBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Irnham, wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles to the E. of Corby, which is a station on the Great Northern railway.

BULCAMPS, a hmlt. in the par. of Blythburgh, hund. of Blything, in the co. of Suffolk, 3 miles to the S.E. of Halesworth. It is pleasantly seated on the river Blythe, not far from the East Suffolk section of the Great Eastern railway. This place was the scene of the battle in which Penda, King of Mercia, defeated and slew Anna King of East Anglia, and his son, in 654.

BULCOTE, a chplry. in the par. of Burton-Joyce, wap. of Thurgarton, in the co. of Nottingham, 6 miles to the N.E. of Nottingham. Burton-Joyce is a station on the Nottingham and Lincoln railway. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Burton-Joyce, in the dioc. of Lincoln.

BULFORD, a par. in the hund. of Amesbury, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles to the N. of Amesbury, its post town. It is situated on the river Avon, and contains some Druidical stones. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £75, in the gift of Dr. Southby. The church is dedicated to St. John. Here is a small school endowed by Richard Duke.

BULGADEN, formerly a par. in the bar. of Coshlea, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N.E. of Kilmallock. It is no longer a separate parish, but has been annexed to the parishes adjacent to it. An old mansion near the village, now decayed, was the seat of the Evanses, and since of Lord Carbery.

BULK, a tnshp. in the par. of Lancaster, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 2 miles to the N.E. of Lancaster. It lies near the Lancaster and Carlisle railway. Bulk House is the chief residence.

BULKELEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Malpas, hund. of Broxton, in the co. palatine of Chester, 5 miles to the N.E. of Malpas.

BULKINGTON, a par. in the Kirby div. of the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 4 miles to the S. of Nuneaton, its post town, and 6 from Coventry by road, or 14 by rail. It is a station on the Trent Valley branch of the London and North-Western railway. The par. includes the hmlts. of Barnacle, Bramcott, Marston-Jabbett, Ryton, Weston, and Wolvershill, and is crossed by the Coventry canal. Ribbon weaving is carried on here to a considerable extent. There are freestone quarries in the vicinity. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, of the val. of £253, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. James. It contains a font of Numidian marble, carved by Richard Hayward out of an ancient column brought from Rome, and several other monuments by the same sculptor. The Independents have a chapel here. There are several charities for the poor, amounting annually to about £70.

BULKINGTON, a tythg. in the par. of Keevil, and hund. of Melksham, in the co. of Wilts, 4 miles to the S.W. of Devizes. The Wesleyans have a chapel here.

BULKWORTHY, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, in the co. of Devon, 7 miles to the S.W. of Great Torrington. Bideford is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Torridge. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Buckland-Brower, in the dioc. of Exeter.

BULLAUN, a par. in the bar. of Loughrea, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles to the N. of Loughrea. The living is a vic., forming part of the union of Kilcolgan, in the dioc. of Killaloe, Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduagh.

BULLERS-BUCHAN, a vil. in the par. of Cruden, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 5 miles to the S. of Peterhead. It is seated on the coast, which is here very bold and rocky, with many natural caverns, constantly washed by the sea. The village takes its name, which signifies "boilers of Buchan," from a remarkable opening through the solid cliff of granite to the sea below. The chasm is 150 feet in depth, and about 50 feet wide. In a storm the scene presented is singularly wild and grand, from the waves dashing themselves against the rocky sides of the chasm. The villagers are chiefly fishermen. Near this place, on a rock, stands Slain's Castle, the seat of the Earl of Errol, now in ruins.

BULLERS GREEN, a tnshp. in the par. and borough of Morpeth, Morpeth ward, in the co. of Northumberland, close to Morpeth.

BULLEY, a par. in the duchy of Lancaster, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles to the W. of Gloucester. Newent is its post town. It is not far from the South Wales railway. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Churcham, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church is small and partly in the Norman style.

BULLFA, a vil. in Garth parcel, par. of Ystradgunlais, and hund. of Devynnock, in the co. of Brecon, South Wales, 10 miles to the N. of Neath.

BULLINGDON HUNDRED, one of the 14 hunds. of the co. of Oxford, situated near the middle of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of Ploughley, on the E. by Buckinghamshire, on the S. by the hunds. of Dorchester and Ewelme, and on the W. by the hund. of Wootton and the co. of Berks. It contains the pars. of Albury, Ambrosden, Baldon Marsh, Baldon Toot, St. Clement's, Cowley, Cuddesden, Elsfield, Forest Hill, Garsington, Headington, Holton, Horsepath, Iffley, Marston, Merton, Nuncham-Courtney, Piddington, Sandford, Shotover, Stanton St. John, Stow Wood, Waterperry, and Wood Eaton, with portions of Beckley and Great Milton. The hund. spreads over an area of about 46,630 acres.

BULLINGHAM, or BULLINGHOPE, UPPER and LOWER, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, in the co. of Hereford, 2 miles to the S. of Hereford, its post town. It is situated on the S. side of the river Wye, near the Hereford, Ross, and Gloucester, and the Newport section of the West Midland railways. Hops are cultivated in the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, worth £109, in the gift of the bishop. The parochial charities are of trifling value.

BULLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Upper Wherwell, Andover div. of the co. of Southampton, 6 miles to the S.E. of Andover. It is watered by a branch of the river Test, and is the site of a Roman camp, covering 10 acres of ground. The spot is called Tilbury Hill, and coins and other relics have been dug up there. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Wherwell, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. Bullington House is an old mansion.

BULLINGTON, a chplry. in the par. of Goltho, in the wap. of Wraggoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 8 miles to the N.E. of Lincoln. The Lincoln, Market Rasen, and Hull branch of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway passes within a short distance. A priory was founded here in the 12th century by Simon Fitzwilliam, which flourished till the Dissolution, when it was valued at £187.

BULLOCK, or BULLOG, a par. in the bar. of Rathdown, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles to the S.E. of Dublin. It is situated on the coast of Dublin Bay, near the Kingstown railway, and is inhabited chiefly by fishermen. It contains the site and some traces of an old castle. The par. comprises 3,286 acres.

BULLOCK'S HALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Warkworth, Morpeth ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 7 miles to the N. of Morpeth. It is not far from the Newcastle and Berwick railway.

BULLOCK-SMITHY, a vil. in the par. of Stockport, hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. palatine of Chester, 3 miles to the S.E. of Stockport. The cotton trade is the chief occupation of the inhabitants.

BULLSBRIDGE, in the par. of Cranford, and hund. of Elthorne, in the co. of Middlesex, is a goods station of the Great Western railway, half a mile N. of the junction of the railway, the river Cran, the Grand Junction canal, and the Paddington canal.

BULLSCROSS, a hmlt. in the par. of Enfield, hund. of Edmonton, in the co. of Middlesex, 2 miles from Waltham Abbey.

BULMER, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, in the co. of Essex, 2 miles to the W. of Sudbury, its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. with the consolidated vic. of Belchamp-Walter, £445, in the gift of S. M. Raymond, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew.

BULMER WAPENTAKE, one of the 11 waps. or subdivisions of the North Riding of the co. of York, situated in the southern part of the Riding, and bounded on the N. by the waps. of Birdforth and Ryedale, on the E. by the wap. of Buckrose, on the S. by the wap. of Ouse and Derwent and the ainsty of the city of York, and on the W. by the waps. of Claro and Hallikeld. It comprises the following pars.: - Alne, Bossall, Brandsby, Bulmer, Craike, Crambe, Dalby, Easingwold, Foston, Haxby, Gate-Helmsley, Upper Helmsley, Holtby, Huntington, Huttons-Ambo, Marton-in-the-Forest, Myton-upon-Swale, Newton-upon-Ouse, St. Olave Mary Gate (York), Osbaldwick, Overton, Sheriff-Hutton, Skelton, Stillington, Stockton-on-the-Forest, Strensall, Sutton-on-the-Forest, Terrington, Thormanby, Warthill, Whenby, and Wigginton, with parts of those of Barton-le-Street, Bradleerton, Hovingham, besides St. Cuthbert, St. Giles, St. Michael-le-Belfry, and St. Saviour, in the city of York. The wap. extends over an area of about 115,670 acres.

BULMER, a par. in the wap. of the same name, North Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the S.W. of New Malton, its post town. It is situated on the W. side of the river Derwent, not far from the North branch of the Midland railway, and contains the chplry. of Henderskelf and the tnshps. of Bulmer and Welburn. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £395, in the patron. of Earl Fitzwilliam. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Castle Howard, the noble seat of the Earl of Carlisle, is in this parish.

BULNESS. See Bowness, Westmoreland.

BULPHAN, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, in the co. of Essex, 6 miles to the S.E. of Brentwood. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £342, in the patron. of J. S. Hand, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BULVERHITHE, ST. MARY, a par. in the borough of Hastings, rape of Hastings, in the co. of Sussex, 2 miles to the W. of Hastings. It is situated close to the sea-coast, and is crossed by the Brighton and South Coast railway.

BULWELL, a par. in the northern div. of the wap. of Broxtow, in the co. of Nottingham, 4 miles to the N.W. of Nottingham, its post town. It is a station on the Nottingham and Mansfield branch of the Midland railway. The par. is intersected by a small stream, a feeder of the Trent, and contains the hmlt. of Hempshill. Cotton printing and bleaching, and the manufactures of lace and hosiery, are carried on here. There are also brick and lime kilns, malt-houses, limestone quarries, and corn-mills. Bulwell is situated within the bounds of the ancient Forest of Sherwood, and took its name from a spring called "Bull Well," still flowing. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £450, in the gift of the Rev. Charles Padley. The church, which stands on an elevated spot, is a new building with square embattled tower, and is dedicated to St. Mary. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Baptists have chapels in the town, and there is a grammar school, endowed with £18 per annum. The other parochial charities produce about £4 a year. In the manor of Bulwell the custom of Borough English prevails, by which lands descend to the youngest son.

BULWICK, a par. in the hund. of Corby, in the co. of Northampton, 6 miles to the N.W. of Oundle. Wansford is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £336, in the patron. of the Rev. T. Tryon. The church, which is partly in the decorated and partly in the perpendicular style, with a tower and spire of fine proportions and remarkable elegance, is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The charitable bequests for the poor amount to £35 per annum. Bulwick Hall is the principal mansion.

BUMBOHALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Ballynure, bar. of Upper Talbotstown, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N. of Baltinglass. It is seated on the river Slaney.

BUMLIN, a par. in the bar. and co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 12 miles to the N.E. of Roscommon. It is situated near the Slievebawn mountains, and contains much limestone and bog. It includes part of the town of Strokestown. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, Ardagh, and Elphin, of the annual val. with those of Kiltrustan and Lissonuffy united, of £481, in the patron. of the bishop.

BUMPSTEAD HELION, a par. in the hund. of Freshwell, in the co. of Essex, 2 miles to the S.W. of Haverhill, its post town. It lies near the borders of Suffolk and Cambridgeshire. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, worth £174, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. There are some charities of trifling value.

BUMPSTEAD STEEPLE, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, in the co. of Essex, 4 miles to the S. of Haverhill, its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, of the val. of £229, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities, including a small bequest for education by Ann Cole, amount to £15 a year.

BUNAWE, a vil. in the par. of Muckairn, in the co. of Argyll, Scotland, 15 miles to the N. of Inveraray. It is seated at the foot of Ben Cruachan, on the S. shore of Loch Etive, where the river Awe falls into it. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the iron-works of the Lorn Furnace Company, and the salmon fisheries. This spot was the scene of Bruce's victory over the MacDougalls in the year 1448. Here is a ferry across Loch Etive.

BUNBRASNA, a vil. in the par. of Leney, bar. of Corkaree, in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N. of Mullingar.

BUNBURY, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, but extending also into the higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, in the co. palatine of Chester, 6 miles to the N.W. of Nantwich, and 3¼ S.E. of Tarporley, its post town. It is intersected by the Chester and Crewe section of the North-Western railway, and the Chester and Nantwich canal. Beeston and Calveley, in this parish, are railway stations. The par is of great extent, containing the chplry. of Burwardsley (in Broxton hund.), and the tnshps. of Alpraham, Beeston, Bunbury, Calveley, Haughton, Peckforton, Ridley, Spurstow, Tilstone-Fearnall, Tiverton, and Wardle. It belonged anciently to Hugh Lupus, by whom it was granted to the Bunbury family. A college was founded here by Sir Hugh de Calveley about the year 1386, which had a revenue at the Dissolution of £48. There are no remains of the buildings, but the site is not far from the church. Sir Hugh was a famous soldier of the reigns of Edward III. and Richard II., and distinguished himself especially in the invasions of France under the former monarch. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, worth £117, in the gift of the Master and Wardens of the Haberdashers' Company. The church, formerly collegiate, is dedicated to St. Boniface. It is a handsome edifice, in the perpendicular style, with a tower surmounted by eight pinnacles. It has two elegant side chapels, called the Spurstowand Ridley chapels, the latter of which, built in 1527 by Sir R. Egerton, of Ridley, contains his tomb, adorned with curious sculpture and paintings. The church has also a fine altar-tomb to Sir Hugh Calveley, with his effigies in armour, and several monuments to the Beestons, one of whom, Sir George Beeston, was an admiral in command at the destruction of the Armada. He was then 80 years of age, and died in 1601. The church sustained considerable damage during the Civil War, being set on fire by a party of royalists, in June, 1643. In addition to the parish church there are two district churches at Burwardsley and Tilston, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. respectively, £50 and £90. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the town, and there are two endowed schools. The charitable endowments consist chiefly of the produce of bequests by Thomas Aldersey, in 1575, for various purposes, and by Thomas Gardener, in 1750, for a school. A noted wake is held on Bunbury Heath, on the Sunday before St. Boniface's Day.

BUNCRANA, a vil. in the par. of Lower Fahan, bar. of Innishowen, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 10 miles to the S.W. of Cardonagh, and 15 miles from Dublin. It is seated in a mountainous and romantic spot on the eastern shore of Lough Swilly, and was the site of a castle belonging to the O'Donnells and O'Doghertys, and subsequently to the crown. The village is much frequented as a watering-place. The inhabitants are employed in the linen manufacture and the fisheries. Copper, lead, and slate are found in the neighbourhood. The village contains the parish church, chapels for Presbyterians, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, an endowed free school, a court-house, a police-station, and a dispensary. Quarter and petty sessions are held here. Near the site of the old fortress stands Buncrana Castle, a modern seat, built in 1717 by the Vaughans.

BUNCTON, a chplry. in the par. of Ashington, hund. of West Grinsted, rape of Bramber, in the co. of Sussex, 3 miles to the N.W. of Steyning. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Ashington, in the dioc. of Chichester.

BUNDALOCH, a vil. adjoining Dornie, in the par. of Kintail, in the co. of Ross, Scotland, on the N.E. shore of Loch Long, 10 miles to the S. of Jeantown. It is seated near the shore of Loch Alsh.

BUNDARRA, or BUNDORRAGHA, a vil. in the bar. of Murrisk, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, about 15 miles to the S.W. of Westport. It is seated on a rivulet of the same name, which falls into Killery harbour.

BUNDLEY. See BONDLEIGH, Devonshire.

BUNDORAN, a vil. in the par. of Inishmacsaint, bar. of Tirhugh, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.W. of Ballyshannon. It is pleasantly seated on the S. coast of Donegal Bay, near Lough Melvin, and is visited as a watering-place.

BUNGAY, a market town in the hund. and union of Wangford, in the co. of Suffolk, 14 miles S.E. of Norwich, 40 to the N.E. of Ipswich, and 109 from London by road, or 113 by railway. It is a station on the Waveney Valley branch of the Great Eastern railway. Bungay, which comprises the two pars. of Holy Trinity and St. Mary, is situated in a pleasant country on the borders of Norfolk, on the banks of the river Waveney, which separates the two counties. The river is navigable from this place to Yarmouth, and is here crossed by a handsome bridge of modern erection. The river makes a bend, and surrounds the town on all sides except the S.E. Bungay had formerly a castle, built in Stephen's reign by one of the Bigods, earls of Norfolk. It stood on an eminence, and was considered, according to the ancient ballad by one of its lords, Hugh Bigod, impregnable:

> "Were I in my Castle of Bungay,
> Upon the river of Waveney,
> I would'ne care for the king of Cockney."

Some portions of its walls still exist. About the year 1160, a nunnery of the Benedictine order was founded here by Roger de Glanville and his lady, the Countess Gundreda, which flourished till the Dissolution, and was valued at £62. The ruins of the building are near St. Mary's Church. In 1689, almost the whole town was destroyed by an accidental fire. In consequence of this conflagration the houses, with the exception of one or two, are of modern date. The streets are paved and lighted with gas, and there is a good supply of water. In the middle of the town is the market place, with a market-house and cross, octangular in form, and surmounted with a dome and a figure of Justice. Another cross formerly stood near it, which was removed in 1810.—The business of the town is chiefly agricultural; a good trade in grain, malt, lime, coals, timber, &c., being carried on by means of the river. There are several iron-foundries, flour-mills, malt-houses, limekilns, a paper-mill, silk manufactory, and an extensive and well-known printing establishment. The theatre is no longer used as such, but is occupied as a corn exchange. The town contains assembly rooms, a dispensary, and a savings-bank. An extensive tract of common lies on the N. side of the town, and is encompassed by the river.—Bungay is within the jurisdiction of the Beccles county court; and petty sessions are held weekly at the King's Head inn.—The living of St. Mary is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Norwich, worth £115, in the patron. of the Duke of Norfolk, lord of the manor. The church, chiefly ancient, but partly rebuilt in 1696, is a large and handsome structure of flint and stone, with a fine tower. It contains several monuments. The register dates from the year 1588. The living of Holy Trinity is a vic. in the same dioc., val. £256, in the gift of the bishop. The church is small and very ancient, and has a round tower. The register dates from 1557. Here are chapels belonging to the Independents, Wesleyans, Roman Catholics, and Baptists, and a free grammar school, founded about the close of the 16th century, which has a revenue from endowment of about £60 per annum. It has four scholarships at Emmanuel College, Cambridge, to the Master and Fellows of which college the appointment of the master of the school belongs. There are also National and British schools. In the town are several almshouses, some of which were established and endowed by Mrs. Dwyer, in 1848. The town lands are under the management of trustees, and produce about £440 per annum. The other charities of the town amount to about £160 a year. Bungay had formerly a third church, dedicated to St. Thomas, and two chapels, but they were long ago destroyed.—Thursday is the market day. Fairs are held for horses and cattle on the 14th May and the 25th September. Races take place annually in the month of August. In the vicinity of the town are several mansions of noble proportions: Flixton Hall, which was nearly destroyed by fire in 1847, has been restored in the Elizabethan style; St. Mary's Hall, Hedenham Park, Broom Place, Earsham Hall, and Ditchingham Hall.

BUNGOWLA, a hmlt. in the island of Arranmore, bar. of Arran, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is opposite to the Branach Islands, at the entrance to the Bay of Galway.

BUNG-ROW, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Braxtead, and hund. of the same name, in the co. of Essex. It is situated 1 mile to the S.E. of the village of Braxtead.

BUNKLE, or BONKLE, a joint par. with Preston, in the co. of Berwick, Scotland. It is bounded on the S.W. and S. by the river Whitadder, at the foot of the Lammermuir Hills. The district is partly fertile and cultivated, and partly wooded. The soil of the higher grounds is poor, and at Bunkle Edge rises to the height of about 700 feet. Copper has been obtained on the farm of Hoardweel. The parish anciently belonged to a family of the same name. The living, worth £280, is in the presb. of Dunse, and in the patron. of Lord Douglas. The village was the birthplace, in 1735, of John Brown, founder of the Brunonian system of medicine.

BUNNANADDAN, a vil. in the bar. of Corran, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles to the E. of Tobercurry.

BUNNAWN, or BONANE, a par. in the bar. of Glenarought, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles to the S. of Kenmare. For ecclesiastical purposes it forms part of the par. of Kilcaskin, in the co. of Cork. The surface is mostly mountain and bog. The wild pass known as the "Priest's Leap," is in this parish. The Marquis of Lansdowne is the proprietor of the place.

BUNNY, a par. in the northern div. of the wap. of Rushcliffe, in the co. of Nottingham, 6 miles to the S. of Nottingham. Some of the villagers are engaged in the manufacture of hosiery. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. with that of Bradmore, of £425, in the gift of the Rev. J. R. W. Boyer. The church, which is partly in the perpendicular style, has a tower and crocketed spire, and is dedicated to St. Mary. It contains a singular monument to Sir Thomas Parkyns, an eccentric scholar and noted wrestler, author of a book called "The Inn-Play, or Cornish Hug Wrestler." There are many other monuments to the Parkyns family. In the village are a free school, and an almshouse for 4 widows, founded by Dame Anne Parkyns about 1700, the endowment of which amounts to about £60 per annum. The other charities, including a bequest by the same lady for apprenticing boys, produce about £35 a year. Bunny Park, which has some pleasant scenery, diversified with wood and water, has long been the seat of the Parkyns family. Sir T. B. Parkyns was raised to the peerage by the title of Lord Rancliffe in 1795.

BUNNYCONNELLAN, a vil. in the bar. of Gallen, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles to the E. of Ballina.

BUNOWN, or BUNNAHOWNA, a vil. in the bar. of Burrishoole, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles to the W. of Newport. It is seated on the N. coast of Clew Bay.

BUNRATTY, a par. in the bar. of Lower Bunratty, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles to the W. of Limerick. It is situated on the N. bank of the river Shannon, here widening to an estuary. Vessels of large burthen discharge their cargoes for Limerick in Bunratty Roads, where there is very good anchorage. This place is the site of a castle, founded about 1280 by the De Clares, some fine ruins of which still remain, and are converted into a police station. The district consists chiefly of pasture land. The living is a vic. united with that of Kilfinaghta, in the dioc. of Killaloe, Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacdugh. The principal residence is Bunratty Castle, the seat of T. Studdert, Esq., who is descended from the De Clares, and is the proprietor of the parish. There are several other seats. Fairs are held here on the 3rd February, the second Tuesday before Easter, the 3rd June, the 19th July, and the 20th October.

BUNRATTY BARONY, LOWER, one of the 11 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, situated in the south-eastern part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the bar. of Upper Bunratty, on the E. by the bar. of Tullagh, on the S. by the river Shannon, and on the W. by the river Fergus and the bar. of Islands. It contains the pars. of Bunratty, Clonloghan, Drumline, Feenagh, Kilconry, Kilfinaghta, Kilfintinan, Kilmaleery, Kilmurry, and Kilnasoolagh, with parts of those of Killeedy, St. Muchin's, and St. Patrick's Tomfinlough. It extends over an area of about 69,000 acres.

BUNRATTY BARONY, UPPER, one of the 11 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, situated in the middle of the co., and bounded on the N. by the co. of Galway, on the E. by the bar. of Tullagh, on the S. by the bar. of Lower Bunratty, and on the W. by the bar. of Inchiquin. It contains the pars. of Clooney-Doora, Inchicronan, Kilraghtis, Quin, and Templemaley, and has an area of about 53,800 acres.

BUNREE, a vil. in the bar. of Tireragh, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 15 miles to the S.W. of Dromore.

BUNTINGFORD, a chplry. in the pars. of Aspeden, Layston, Throcking, and Wyddiall, hund. of Edwinstree, in the co. of Hertford, 13 miles to the N. of Hertford, and about 33 miles from London. It is situated in a pleasant spot on the river Rib, and was formerly a market town. The business of the town is chiefly agricultural. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the leather trade. Buntingford is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and a polling place for the county elections. Petty sessions are held in the town. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Layston, in the dioc. of Rochester. The church, erected in 1626, is dedicated to St. Peter. There are chapels belonging to the Independents and the Society of Friends; a free grammar school founded about 1630, with a revenue from endowment of £50 per annum, and four scholarships at Christ's College, Cambridge; a girls' free school; National and British schools; almshouses for eight poor persons, founded and endowed by Seth Ward, Bishop of Salisbury; and a savings-bank. Buntingford was the birthplace (1618) of Bishop Ward, who also received his early education at the grammar school. Annual fairs are held here on the 29th June and 30th November.

BUNWELL, a par. in the hund. of Depwade, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the N.E. of New Buckenham. Some of the inhabitants are employed in making bombazin. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the annual val. of £644, in the patron. of Sir R. J. Buxton, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There are charitable endowments for the poor amounting to £30 a year.

BUOLICK, a par. in the bar. of Slievardagh, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 9 miles to the E. of Thurles, which is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. It is situated on the borders of Kilkenny, in a boggy district, near the Bog of Allen, and was the site of an ancient castle, a seat of the Butlers, of which some remains are still to be seen. Coal is found in the vicinity. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore. The church is in ruins. The principal seat is Littlefield.

BURARCHES HUNDRED. See BURLEIGH-ARCHES HUNDRED, Sussex.

BURASTON. See BORASTON, Shropshire.

BURBAGE, or BURBACH, a chplry. in the par. of Aston-Flamville, hund. of Sparkenhoe, in the co. of Leicester, 1 mile from Hinckley, and 6 E. of Nuneaton railway station. It is crossed by Watling Street, and contains the hmlt. of Sketchley. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the manufacture of hosiery, about 450 frames being in operation. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Aston-Flamville, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, is an old Gothic building, with a square tower surmounted by a spire. It was thoroughly repaired in 1843, at a cost of £2,000. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels, and there are National schools for boys and girls.

BURBAGE, a par. in the hund. of Kinwardstone, in the co. of Wilts, 6 miles to the S.E. of Marlborough, and 10 S.W. from Hungerford. The Kennet and Avon canal passes through a tunnel in this parish a quarter of a mile in length, under the old Roman road, and has on its margin several wharfs and brickworks. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £257, in the patron. of the bishop. The Marquis of Ailesbury is the lay rector. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has been entirely rebuilt, except the tower. There is a Wesleyan chapel. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £100 per annum, the bequest of Philip Pearce, Esq., of which £10 is for educational purposes, and £90 to be distributed to the poor. About half a mile west of the village of Burbage is the small hmlt. of Herapath, or Harepath, so named from the Roman military road which traversed this district, having on one side the bleak Plain of Salisbury, and on the other the Forest of Savernake. In the Norman times it belonged to the De Herapaths.

BURBEACH HUNDRED, one of the 11 hunds. or subdivisions of the rape of Bramber, in the co. of Sussex, situated in the western parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of Tipnoake, on the E. by the rape of Lewes, on the S. by the hund. of Fishersgate, and on the W. by the hund. of Steyning. It contains the pars. of Beeding and Ifield (the latter being in a detached part of the hund.), with part of Edburton, and has an area of about 8,630 acres.

BURCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Cawden Cadworth, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles to the W. of Wilton, and 5 from Salisbury. It is situated near the Great Western and London and South-Western railway, and contains the tythgs. of North and South Burcombe, and part of the hmlt. of Ditchampton. Carpet-making is carried on in the village, which is built on the site of a Roman settlement. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £52, in the gift of the Master of St. John's Hospital, Wilton. The church, dedicated to St. John, is very ancient, and bears traces in the early end of Saxon workmanship. It was completely restored in 1860, and a new aisle added on the north side. The register commences from the year 1682.

BURCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Wing, hund. of Cottesloe, in the co. of Buckingham, 3 miles to the S.W. of Leighton Buzzard. It is near the London and North-Western railway.

BURCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Dorchester, in the co. of Oxford, 4 miles to the E. of Abingdon. It is pleasantly seated on the banks of the Thames, near the Oxford branch of the Great Western railway. There are some charities of trifling value. Burcott House is one of the chief residences.

BURCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, hund. of Brimstree, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles to the N.E. of Bridgnorth. It is situated on a branch of the river Severn.

BURCOTT, a tythg. in the city of Wells, locally in the hund. of Wells-Forum, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile from Wells.

BURDEN'S HALL, a tythg. in the par. of South Newton, hund. of Branch and Dole, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles to the N. of Wilton.

BURDIEHOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Libberton, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles to the S. of Edinburgh. French Protestant refugees settled here after the revocation of the edict of Nantes, and are supposed to have named the place Bordeaux House. It is, however, said by some that this name was given by the attendants of Queen Mary. Here are extensive beds of limestone, which are largely burnt for lime, and are remarkably rich in fossil remains. The Megalichthys, a species of fossil fish, with remarkable teeth and scales, was discovered in the quarries here in 1833.

BURDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bishop-Wearmouth, ward of Easington, in the co. palatine of Durham, 4 miles to the S. of Sunderland. It lies near the sea-coast and the Durham and Sunderland branch railway.

BURDON, a hmlt. in the par. of High Hampton, hund. of Black Torrington, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the W. of Hatherleigh.

BURDON, GREAT, a tnshp. in the par. of Haughton-le-Skerne, ward of Darlington, in the co. palatine of Durham, 2 miles to the N.E. of Darlington. It is near the Darlington and Stockton branch railway.

BURE, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Christchurch, in the co. of Southampton, 2 miles to the E. of Christchurch. It is situated on the coast of Christchurch Bay.

BURES, MOUNT, a par. in the Colchester div. of the hund. of Lexden, in the co. of Essex, 8 miles to the N.E. of Colchester. It is situated on the S. bank of the river Stour, on the border of Suffolk, near the Sudbury branch of the Great Eastern railway. Near the village is a lofty artificial mound, covering above an acre of ground. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £400, in the patron. of the Rev. P. Brett, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. John.

BURES, ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, in the co. of Suffolk, but extending also into the hund. of Hinckford, in the co. of Essex, 5 miles to the S. of Sudbury. It is situated on the banks of the river Stour, over which there is a bridge, and is a station on the Sudbury branch of the Great Eastern railway. The coronation of Edmund, King of East Anglia, is said by some writers to have taken place here. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, worth £273, in the patron. of O. Hanbury, Esq. The church, which is situated in Suffolk, is dedicated to St. Mary. It is an ancient building, and contains several interesting old monuments, among which are an effigy of one of the Cornards, and a monument to Sir Richard Waldegrave, who died in 1400. The steeple was destroyed by a thunderstorm. The parochial charities produce about £10 a year.

BURFA, a joint tnshp. with Evenjobb and several others, in the par. of Old Radnor, hund. and co. of Radnor, South Wales. The hmlt. is situated on the river Borva.

BURFORD, a par. and market town in the hund. of Bampton, in the co. of Oxford, 18 miles to the W. of Oxford, and 73 miles from London by road. It is about 10 miles from the Charlbury station of the West Midland railway. The par. is situated on the banks of the river Windrush, a branch of the Thames, and contains the hmlts. of Upton and Signett. Burford is a town of great antiquity. Its Saxon name was Beorford, and it was the seat of a synod held in the year 682. A spot called Battle Edge, near the town, was the scene of a battle in which Ethelbald, King of Mercia, was vanquished by Cuthred, King of Wessex, and the banner of the former, which bore the device of a golden dragon, was taken. A festival was long held on Midsummer Eve to commemorate this conflict. A small priory was early founded in this parish. Burford is a nominal borough, having received a charter of incorporation from Henry II. Most of its privileges were revoked in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. In the town are many very old houses, ill-built, but possessing interest for the antiquarian. The principal business is in agricultural produce. A good trade in saddle-making was formerly carried on here. Petty sessions are held by the county magistrates. There are a parish library and a savings-bank. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the val. with the cur. of Fulbrook annexed, of £294, in the patron. of the bishop of the diocese. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. It is a large edifice in the form of a cross, exhibiting various styles of architecture, with a central tower and fine spire. The tower and western doorway are Norman, and the spire is of the perpendicular style. The south porch is much admired. In the church are two side chapels, a sculptured hexagonal font, a brass of the date 1437, and several old monuments. There are chapels belonging to the Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists; a free school founded and endowed by Simon Wisdom, in 1751, with a revenue of £85 per annum; and National and boys' schools. The free school is held in the townhall. The town contains several almshouses: one founded and endowed by the Earl and Countess of Warwick, in 1457, for eight widows, the endowment of which is £24 a year; another, for four widows, endowed by Simon Wisdom; and a third, for the same number of widows, by John Castle, in 1726. The poor have the benefit of various charities, the principal of which are the Church Estate and Pool's Estate. The celebrated Peter Haylin, author of "Microcosmos," was a native of this town, and received his education at the grammar school. Wilmot, Earl of Rochester, and Lord Liverpool were also educated here. Sir William Beechey, the painter, was born here in 1753. Burford Priory, a mansion in the Tudor style, built on the site of the old priory, is the seat of the Lenthalls. It was the residence of Lenthall, Speaker of the Long Parliament, who purchased it of Lord Falkland. It contains some valuable paintings, which formed part of the collection of Charles II. Among them are the famous picture, attributed to Holbein, of "Sir Thomas Moore and Family;" a portrait of Charles I. by Jansen, and those of Lord Falkland, and Henrietta Maria, Queen of Charles I., by Vandyck. Burford gives the title of earl to the Duke of St. Alban's. Saturday is the market day. Fairs for cattle and cheese are held on the last Saturday in April; for horses on the 5th July; and for horses, sheep, and cheese on the 25th September.

BURFORD, a par. in the hund. of Overs, in the co. of Salop, 1 mile to the W. of Tenbury, 5 miles from Wooferton railway station, and 8½ miles from Ludlow. It is situated on the confines of Worcestershire, on the banks of the river Teme, near the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway, and contains the tnshps. of Boraston, Burford, Greet, Nash, Stoke, Tilsop, Weston, Whatmore, and Whitton. It was formerly a market town under a grant obtained from Henry III. The parish is crossed by the Kington canal, and is partly laid out in hop-grounds. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, in three portions: the first, val. with the perpet. curs. of Boraston and Nash, £460; the second, val. with the perpet. cur. of Whitton, £286; and the third, val. £335, all in the patron. of Lord Northwick. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains a brass and several monuments to the Cornwalls, who long had their seat here. Besides the parish church there are two chapels of ease, viz., Boraston and Nash; also two schools, one at Burford and the other at Nash. The parochial charities are worth £10 a year. Burford House is the chief residence.

BURFORD. See BRITFORD, Wiltshire.

BURGAGE, or BURRIDGE, a district in the par. of Southwell, wap. of Thurgarton, in the co. of Nottingham, 11 miles to the N.E. of Nottingham.

BURGAGE, a par. in the bar. of Lower Talbotstown, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S.W. of Blessington. It is the estate of the Marquis of Downshire. The principal seats are Rushborough, belonging to the Earl of Miltown, and Russ-town.

BURGATE, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, in the co. of Suffolk, 4 miles to the N.W. of Eye, its post town. The Eastern Union railway passes near it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £560, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains a monumental brass of Sir William Burgate, who died in 1409.

BURGATE, MIDDLE, NORTH and SOUTH, tythgs. in the par. and hund. of Fordingbridge, in the co. of Southampton, 1 mile from Fordingbridge. Burgate House is the chief residence.

BURGEDIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Guilsfield, and hund. of Pool, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 2 miles to the N. of Welshpool.

BURGER STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of North Stoneham, hund. of Mainsbridge, in the co. of Southampton, 3 miles to the N. of Southampton.

BURGESBEG, or BURGESS, a par. in the bar. of Owney and Arra, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S.W. of Nenagh. The living is a rect. united with that of Castletownarra, in the dioc. of Killaloe, Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduagh. The church is decayed.

BURGH, a par. in the hund. of Carlford, in the co. of Suffolk, 4 miles to the N.W. of Woodbridge, its post town, which is also a station on the Great Eastern railway. Here were anciently a castle, of which some traces remain, and a preceptory of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £247, in the patron. of M. Barnes, Esq. The tithes have been commuted for an annual rent-charge of £356 10s. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is a small old building, and has been recently restored. The parochial charities amount to £11 a year, the produce of the town lands.

BURGHAM, a vil. and tythg. in the par. of Worplesdon, and hund. of Woking, in the co. of Southampton, 3 miles to the N W. of Guildford.

BURGHAPTON, a par. in the hund. of Clavering, in the co. of Norfolk, 8 miles to the S.E. of Norwich, its post town, and 3½ N.W. of Loddon. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. with that of Holverstone, of £573, in the patron. of the Earl of Abergavenny. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is neatly built, with a lofty tower and peal of six bells. The clock was presented by Lady Amelia Pelham, in 1838, and the register dates from the year 1556. Here was formerly another church, dedicated to St. Martin, but it fell into decay, and was taken down in 1834. The National school is supported by subscription. There are charitable endowments for the poor, amounting annually to about £115.

BURGH-BY-SANDS, a par. in the ward and co. of Cumberland, 5 miles to the N.W. of Carlisle, its post town. It is situated near the S. coast of the Solway Frith, and is a station on the Carlisle and Silloth Bay railway. The par., which is very extensive, comprising an area of 7,839 acres, is crossed by the ship canal from Carlisle to the Solway Frith, and contains the tnshps. of Boustead Hill, Burgh-by-Sands, Longburgh, and Moorhouse. This place was the site of the Roman Axelodunum, one of the stations on the line of the great wall of Severus. The vallum constructed by Adrian terminated here. Roman relics have been found, and remains of the ramparts still exist. Here was formerly a castle, which is said to have been taken by William, King of Scotland, in 1174, and the ruins of which existed till the reign of Henry VIII. During the border wars this place was the scene of several contests between the Scots and English; and in 1307 Edward I., on his last expedition against the Scots, died here. An obelisk was erected in commemoration of this event on Burgh Marsh, the site of the English camp, by Henry, Duke of Norfolk, in 1685. This monument was restored in 1803 by the Earl of Lonsdale. Burgh is the head of a barony which belonged to De Morville, one of the murderers of Thomas-à-Becket, and was given by him as an endowment to the abbey of Holme-Cultram. It was subsequently held by the Dacres and Howards. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, worth £120, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. Like that of Annan, on the opposite side of the Solway, it was strongly fortified as a place of defence, the walls of the tower being from 6 to 7 feet thick, and the basement story vaulted. The parochial charities, including a bequest for education, produce £10 a year.

BURGH CASTLE, a par. in the hund. of Mutford and Lothlingland, in the co. of Suffolk, 4 miles to the S.W. of Great Yarmouth, its post town. The village, which is one of the most romantic and ancient in the county, is situated on the E. side of the river Waveney, which here meets the Yare, and expands N. of the village into Breydon Water. The Great Eastern and Norfolk railway runs near the village. This place was the site of an extensive Roman station, called Garianonum, some ruins of which still exist. Coins, weapons, and other relics have been found. Here was also a small monastery, founded before the Conquest by an Irish monk, named Fursaeus. The manor was anciently held by the crown. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £400, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The tithes have been commuted. The church, which is a small ancient edifice, with thatched roof and an embattled tower, is dedicated to St. Peter, and has been recently restored. It is said to have been built of the materials of the Roman fortress, and the interior is fitted with a handsome pulpit and reading desk of carved oak. The schools were built by subscription in 1836. There is an allotment for the benefit of the poor, worth about £30 a year.

BURGHCLERE, a par. and vil. partly in the lower div. of the hund. of Evingar, and partly in the hund. of Kingsclere, Kingsclere div. of the co. of Southampton, 7 miles to the N. of Whitchurch, and 5 S. from Newbury, its post town and railway station. It is situated in a fine country near the borders of Berkshire, at the foot of a range of hills on which are several barrows and remains of ancient military works. The par. contains the hmlt. of Earlstone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the perpet. cur. of Newton annexed, £829, with a residence and 120 acres of glebe, in the patron. of the Earl of Carnarvon. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient fabric, of Norman architecture, now in ruins. The new church, erected in 1838, stands on an elevation, and is a handsome building with square tower in the Gothic style. The Earl of Carnarvon and the Rev. George Wallace, the rector, were the principal donors. There is a free school supported partly by an endowment of £10 a year, the gift of Elizabeth Cornwallis. The other parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. This place is close by Highclere Park, the fine seat of the Earl of Carnarvon, who is lord of the manor. To the W. of the village is a large Roman encampment, called Beacon Hill; and to the S. are the Seven Barrows.

BURGHFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Theale, in the co. of Berks, 4 miles to the S.W. of Reading, its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Kennet, near the Hungerford branch of the Great Western railway. The Kennet is crossed by a very old bridge. A stratum of sand with cockle shells was discovered some time since at Hose Hill, several yards below the surface. The par. contains a tract of common land. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the annual val. of £700, in the patron. of the Earl of Shrewsbury. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is an ancient building, and has a wooden monument to a crusader. There are charitable endowments for the poor, producing about £20 per annum.

BURGH-HEAD, or BROUGH-HEAD, a promontory and a vil. in the par. of Duffus, in the co. of Elgin, Scotland, 8 miles to the N.W. of Elgin. It is seated on the S. coast of the Moray Frith, on Burgh Bay, under the promontory, near the Inverness and Aberdeen Junction railway. It has a small but excellent harbour, subordinate to the port of Inverness, and a coastguard station. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the herring and salmon fisheries. The village is regularly built and is frequented as a watering-place. It contains a Free church and an United Presbyterian church. In the vicinity is a Roman bath or well of brackish water, and also the remains of an ancient fortification.

BURGHILL, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles to the N.W. of Hereford, its post town, and 1¾ W. from Moreton railway station. It is situated in a pleasant country, near the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway, and contains the tnshp. of Tillington. Hops are cultivated in the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £94, in the patron. of B. Biddulph, Esq. The rectorial tithes are commuted for £481 12*s.* 11*d.* The church is approached through a beautiful avenue of yew-trees, and is dedicated to St. Mary. It is an ancient stone edifice, with square tower and four pinnacles, in the Norman style of architecture. The interior is supported by ten fine stone pillars, and contains a curious metal font, which stands on a stone pedestal, carved with figures of the Twelve Apostles. There is also a richly carved oak screen, and a handsome marble altar tomb to the memory of the family of Sir John Milbourne, formerly of Tillington Court. The church was entirely repaired in 1824, at a cost of £2,000, and again in 1854. The parochial charities, including a bequest for a school, amount to £20 per annum. The school-house, a handsome stone building, was erected in 1850. On the top of Burghill are remains of a square encampment. The Portway, leading to the Roman station Kenchester, passes a little to the N. of this village. Burghill Court is the chief mansion.

BURGH-IN-THE-MARSH, a par. and market town in the Marsh div. of the wap. of Candleshoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 8 miles to the E. of Spilsby, and 124 miles from London by the Great Northern railway, on which it is a station. It is situated in a rich tract of pasture land, about 4 miles from the sea-coast, and was the site of a Roman fort. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the val. with that of Winthorpe united, of £121, in the gift of the bishop. The church, which is in the perpendicular style, with a good tower, is dedicated to St. Peter. It contains two side chapels and some good screen-work. It had formerly a chantry attached to it. There are chapels belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists and Baptists; a free school, endowed by Jane Palmer in 1726, the income of which is £60 per annum; and a day-school founded by the Wesleyans in 1856. The other charities produce about £70 a year. Near the village are two tumuli. The market is on Thursday, and fairs are held for the sale of cattle, &c., on the 13th May and the 2nd October. A large cattle market is held once a fortnight.

BURGH, LITTLE, a par. and hmlt. in the hund. of Holt, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles to the S.W. of Holt, its post town. It is now joined to the par. of Melton Constable.

BURGH MATTISHALL. See MATTISHALL BURGH, Norfolk.

BURGH, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Mitford, in the co. of Norfolk, 2 miles to the N.W. of Hingham. Watton is its post town. It is situated on the river Yare, not far from its source. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £249, in the patron. of B. Gurdon, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew.

BURGH, ST. MARGARET and ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of West Flegg, in the co. of Norfolk, 7 miles to the N.W. of Yarmouth. Acle is its post town. It is situated near the river Bure, and comprises the two consolidated pars. of St. Margaret and St. Mary. It was formerly a market town under a grant obtained from Henry III. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £424, in the gift of the Rev. W. Lucas, incumbent. The church dedicated to St. Margaret has been entirely repaired. The parish church of St. Mary is decayed, and has fallen, except a portion of the tower, which stands like a solitary beacon in the centre of a field. The ancient registers were accidentally burnt about 100 years ago. There is a chapel, built in 1841, and a charity school. The charitable endowments for the poor produce about £80 a year.

BURGH, ST. PETER, or WHEATACRE BURGH, a par. in the hund. of Clavering, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles to the W. of Lowestoft, and 12 S.W. from Yarmouth. Beccles is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Waveney, near the East Suffolk railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £330, in the patron. of the Rev. W. Boycatt. The tithes have been commuted for £374 per annum. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a peculiarly built edifice, with brick tower. The register dates from the year 1558. There are a Wesleyan chapel and Sunday-school, also a charity of £16 per annum, which is distributed in coals.

BURGH-UPON-BAINE, a par. in the eastern div. of the wap. of Wraggoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 6 miles to the W. of Louth, its post town, which is also a station on the Great Northern railway. The par. is situated on the Wolds, near the head of the river Baine, a branch of the Witham, and contains the hmlt. of Girsby. The South Wold hounds meet here. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £133, in the patron. of J. W. Fox, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Helen.

BURGH-WALLIS, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles to the N.W. of Doncaster, its post town. The Great Northern railway passes near it. Sutton and Haywood are hmlts. of this par. Here is Robin Hood's Well, near which the bishop is said to have been robbed by the outlaw. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, of the val. of £275, in the gift of M. Tasburgh, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Helen. The charities are of small value. Burgh-Wallis Hall, the seat of the Tasburghs, is a modern mansion erected on the site of an older one, the seat of the Anns.

BURHAM, a par. in the hund. of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 4 miles to the N.W. of Maidstone. Rochester is its post town. It is on the banks of the river Medway, at the foot of Burham Downs, near the North Kent branch of the South-Eastern railway. The par. contains some hop-grounds. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £191, in the patron. of C. Milner, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charitable endowments for the poor amount to about £25 per annum.

BURIAN, ST. See BURYAN, ST., Cornwall.

BURITON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Finch-Dean, Petersfield div. of the co. of Southampton, 2 miles to the S.W. of Petersfield, its post town, and 54 from London. It lies near the border of Sussex, at the foot of Butser Hill, and contains the hmlts. of Nurstead and Weston. Butser Hill rises to the height of 900 feet, and commands an extensive and beautiful prospect. Limestone is quarried in the par. The London and South-Western railway passes through it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the annual val. with the perpet. cur. of Petersfield annexed, of £1,194, in the patron. of the Bishop of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a plain, ancient edifice, with ivy-mantled tower. There is a chapel belonging to the Primitive Methodists, erected in 1848, and a National school, built in 1845. The historian Gibbon resided at Buriton manor-house, and his father is buried in the churchyard there. There is an endowment for the poor by Bishop Lanney, amounting to £16 a year.

BURKSTOWN, a vil. in the bar. of Shelbourne, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 9 miles to the S.E. of New Ross.

BURLAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Acton, and hund.

of Nantwich, in the co. palatine of Chester, 3 miles to the N.W. of Nantwich. It is not far from the Crewe and Shrewsbury branch of the London and North-Western railway, and is crossed by the Ellesmere canal.

BURLEIGH-ARCHES, or BURARCHES HUNDRED, one of the 19 hunds. or subdivisions of the rape of Pevensey, in the co. of Sussex, situated in the eastern parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded by the rape of Lewes on the N., S., and W., and by the hund. of Rushmonden on the E. It contains the par. of Lindfield, and has an area of about 5,350 acres.

BURLESCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Bampton, but extending also into the hund. of Halberton, in the co. of Devon, 5 miles to the S.W. of Wellington. Tiverton is its post town. It lies on the borders of Somersetshire, in a hilly district near Blackdown, and is intersected by the Grand Western canal. The Bristol and Exeter railway passes near this place. The parish contains the tythgs. of Appledore, Ashford, and Westleigh. Canonsleigh is so named as the site of a priory founded in the 12th century and afterwards converted into an abbey, which flourished till the Dissolution, and was valued at £203. There are extensive quarries of limestone, and a mineral spring of a like character to the Harrogate waters. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £255, in the patron. of E. A. Sandford, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is in the perpendicular style, and contains a carved screen and several ancient family monuments. Aysford Court, now a farmhouse, was the seat of the Ayafords, who held the manor, now belonging to E. A. Sandford, Esq.

BURLESTONE, a par. in the hund. of Piddletown, Dorchester div. of the co. of Dorset, 6 miles to the N.E. of Dorchester, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Piddle. The living is a rect. united with that of Athelampstone, in the dioc. of Salisbury.

BURLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Minchinhampton, hund. of Longtree, in the co. of Gloucester.

BURLEY, an ext. par. lib. in the par. and hund. of Ringwood, in the co. of Southampton, 5 miles to the E. of Ringwood, and 2 N.W. of Christchurch Road railway station. It contains the ville of Bistern Closes. A church is said to have existed here before the Conquest, and to have been destroyed when the New Forest was made. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a neat brick building in the modern Gothic style. The Dissenters have a chapel and school; there is also a school attached to the church. The lib. comprises, with the adjacent lib. of Burley Lodge, an area of 2,500 acres.

BURLEY, or BURLY-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the hund. of Alstoe, in the co. of Rutland, 2 miles to the N.E. of Oakham, its post town. It is situated in the fertile valley of Catmose, near the Syston and Peterborough branch of the Midland railway. The manor was anciently held by the Seagraves, De Lisles, and Spencers—to which last family belonged Henry Spencer, Bishop of Norwich, who acquired the title of the "fighting bishop," and defeated at this place a party of insurgents under one of the followers of Wat Tyler. The manor afterwards passed to the Harringtons, and was purchased of them by George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, the favourite of James I. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £350, in the patron. of G. Finch, Esq. The church stands in a pleasant spot, embosomed in trees, and is dedicated to the Holy Cross. The parochial charities are worth £10 a year. Burley House, the seat of the Earl of Winchilsea, is a magnificent structure of stone, of the Doric order of architecture, with a front nearly 200 feet in length. It stands on the site of the old mansion in which James I. and Charles I. were several times entertained with the court by the Duke of Buckingham. On one of these royal visits Ben Jonson's masque of "The Gypsies" was performed here. During the Civil War, Burley House was taken and garrisoned by the parliament, and the troops, fearing an attack by the royalists, set fire to it. Nothing escaped destruction except the fine range of stables, which were detached from the house and remain to this day. The park is about 6 miles in circuit, and is surrounded by a stone wall. It is richly wooded, and though flat contains much pleasing scenery. The house commands a wide and beautiful prospect. It contains many old and interesting family portraits and other paintings; among which are a "Dead Christ and Madonna," by Carlo Dolci; and frescoes on the staircase and in the saloon by Landscroon. There are also some good tapestry, and fine specimens of inlaid spar.

BURLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Culmington, hund. of Munslow, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles to the N. of Ludlow. It is near the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway.

BURLEY, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. and borough of Leeds, wap. of Skyrack, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N. of Leeds, its post town, and close to the Headingley station of the Leeds and Stockton section of the North-Eastern railway. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the gift of trustees.

BURLEY, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Otley, wap. of Skyrack, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the N.W. of Otley, its post town. It is seated on the banks of the river Wharfe, and contains several large cotton and worsted manufactories. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £89, in the patron. of the Vicar of Otley. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here.

BURLEY-DAM, a chplry. in the par. of Acton, hund. of Nantwich, in the co. palatine of Chester, 4 miles to the S. of Whitchurch. It is situated on the border of Shropshire, near the Crewe and Shrewsbury branch of the London and North-Western railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £100, in the patron. of Viscount Combermere.

BURLEY LODGE, an ext. par. lib. in the par. and hund. of Ringwood, in the co. of Southampton, 4 miles to the S.E. of the village of Ringwood.

BURLINGHAM ST. ANDREW, a par. in the hund. of Blofield, in the co. of Norfolk, 9 miles to the E. of Norwich. Acle is its post town. It is about 2 miles from the Brundall station of the Great Eastern railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with that of Burlingham St. Edmund united to it, £550, in the patron. of Mrs. Burroughes. Burlingham House is the principal mansion.

BURLINGHAM ST. EDMUND, a par. in the hund. of Blofield, in the co. of Norfolk, adjacent to Burlingham St. Andrew. The living is a rect. united with that of the latter par. The church is a very small old building with thatched roof and chancel.

BURLINGHAM ST. PETER, or SOUTH BURLINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Blofield, in the co. of Norfolk, close to Burlingham St. Andrew. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £145, in the patron. of H. N. Burroughes, Esq. The church stands a quarter of a mile from the adjoining parish church of St. Andrew, and contains a stone pulpit adorned with sculpture. The rect. was held in the reign of Queen Elizabeth by the antiquary Robert Talbot, author of the earliest commentary on the Itinerary of Antoninus. There are some charities of trifling value.

BURLINGJOBB, a tnshp. and hmlt. in the par. of Old Radnor, in the borough, hund., and co. of Radnor, South Wales, 2 miles to the S.E. of New Radnor. It is not far from Kington, the terminus of the branch railway from the Shrewsbury and Hereford line.

BURLINGTON. See BRIDLINGTON, Yorkshire.

BURLTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Loppington, hund. of Pimhill, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles to the S.W. of Wem, which is a station on the Crewe and Shrewsbury branch railway.

BURMARSH, a par. in the hund. of Worth, in the lib. of Romney Marsh, lathe of Shepway, in the co. of Kent, 4 miles to the S.W. of Hythe, its post town. It is situated on the sea-coast. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, of the val. of £220, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

BURMINGTON, a par. in the Brailes div. of the hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, 2 miles to the S.E. of Shipston-on-Stour, its post town. It lies on the banks of the river Stour. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £220, in the patron. of the Warden and Fellows of Merton College, Oxford, and is at present held conjointly with the vic. of Wolford. The church, rebuilt in 1693, is dedicated to St. Nicholas. A free school has recently been built by John Staunton, Esq., lord of the manor.

BURN, a tnshp. in the par. of Brayton, wap. of Barkstone Ash, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the S.W. of Selby. It is on the Selby canal, connecting the Aire and Calder navigation with the river Ouse.

BURNAGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Manchester, in the hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles to the S. of Manchester. It is situated near the London and North-Western railway, and contains some pleasant residences.

BURNASTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Etwall, hund. of Appletree, in the co. of Derby, 5 miles to the S.W. of Derby. The North Staffordshire and South Staffordshire railways pass near it.

BURNBANK, a small fishing vil., in the par. of Nigg, in the co. of Kincardine, Scotland, not far from Aberdeen.

BURNBRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Muiravonside, in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, 5 miles to the S.E. of Falkirk. It is on the river Avon, near the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway.

BURNBY, a par. in the Wilton Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the S.E. of Pocklington. Hayton is its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Derwent, and is a station on the Market Weighton branch of the North-Eastern railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £318, in the patron. of Lord Londesborough. The church is dedicated to St. Giles.

BURNCHURCH, or KILTRANEEN, a par. in the bar. of Shillelogher, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S. of Kilkenny. The par. is very extensive, comprising an area of 3,364 acres, and includes the vils. of Ballymack, Booly, and Knockham. Limestone is found here. The living is a vic., the head of a union comprising six other benefices, in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, of the annual val. of £1,334, in the alternate patron. of the crown and the bishop. Farmly, in this parish, was the residence of the noted Henry Flood, a member of the Irish House of Commons, who died here in December, 1791. There is an old castle, still nearly perfect, in the village.

BURNCOURT, a vil. in the par. of Shanrahan, and bar. of West Iffa and Offa, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the N.W. of Clogheen. Here are the remains of an old seat of the barons of Ikerron, which was captured by Cromwell.

BURNCROSS, a hmlt. in the par. of Ecclesfield, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N. of Sheffield.

BURNESIDE, or BYRNESHEAD, a chplry., vil., and railway station in the par., union, and ward of Kendal, in the co. of Westmoreland, 2 miles to the N.E. of Kendal, its post town. It is seated on the banks of the river Kent, here crossed by an ancient bridge of three arches, and is a station on the Windermere branch of the Lancaster and Carlisle railway. The chplry. comprises the tnshps. of Strickland Kettle and Strickland Roger. The manor is held by the Earl of Lonsdale. The paper manufacture is carried on here in several large mills. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £120, in the patron. of the landowners. The church was rebuilt in 1825. Here is a small free school, with an endowment worth about £22 a year. The parochial charities produce about £30 a year. Burneside Hall was the seat of the Braithwaite family, one of whom wrote the book called "Drunken Barnaby's Journal." Godmond Hall is an old mansion, formerly a fortified seat of the family of that name.

BURNESS. See BYRNESS, Northumberland.

BURNESS, a joint par. with Cross, in Sanda, one of the Orkney Islands, Scotland.

BURNESTON, a par. in the wap. of Hallikeld, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the S.E. of Bedale, its post town. It is crossed by the Bedale and Leyburn branch of the North-Eastern railway, and there are stations at Newton and Leeming Lane. The par. comprises the chplry. of Leeming-with-Exelby, and the tnshps. of Carthorp, Gatenby, Newton, and Theakstone. Leeming Lane, on the E. side of the par., is a branch of the ancient Iknield Street. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, of the annual val. of £546, in the patron. of the Duke of Cleveland. The church is dedicated to St. Lambert. There is also a district church at Leeming, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £120, in the patron. of the vicar. In the vil. are a chapel for Wesleyan Methodists, a free school, founded in 1852, and an almshouse for six aged persons, founded and endowed about 1688 by Matthew Robinson. The other charities produce about £20 a year.

BURNETT, a par. in the hund. of Keynsham, in the co. of Somerset, 6 miles to the W. of Bath. Pensford is its post town. It is situated on the river Chew, and is about 2 miles from Keynsham station, on the Great Western railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £125, in the patron. of the Rev. J. B. Doveton, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Michael, and contains a monumental brass of John Cutte (mayor of Bristol) and his lady, of the date 1575. The par. contains 608 acres.

BURNFOOT, a vil. in the par. of Upper Fahan, and bar. of Inishowen, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.W. of Londonderry. It is seated on the E. coast of Lough Swilly.

BURNHAM, a par. in the hund. of the same name, in the co. of Buckingham, 2 miles to the N.E. of Maidenhead, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Eton. It is situated on the E. side of the river Thames, near the Great Western railway, and contains the chplry. of Lower Boveney, and the libs. of Upper Boveney, Britwell, East Burnham, Cippenham Town and Wood. This par., which gave name to the hund., is a very ancient place, as attested by the moated site of a palace, said to have been a seat of the kings of Mercia, and also an occasional residence for the kings of England after the Conquest. Here was an abbey of the Augustine order, founded in the 12th century by Richard Earl of Cornwall, which was valued at the Dissolution at £91. Some remains of the buildings still exist at a farm about a mile from the village. Burnham was anciently a market town, but the privilege has long been disused. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, of the annual val. with the perpet. cur. of Boveney annexed, of £505, in the patron. of the Provost and Fellows of Eton College. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a spacious edifice partly in the early English style, and contains several monumental brasses to the families of Eyre, Evelyn, Aldriche, &c., and a handsome monument to Chief Justice Willes. There is a chapel for Dissenters, and a National school with a small endowment. The parochial charities produce about £150 a year. At this village was born Robert Aldrich, Bishop of Carlisle, who died in 1556. Burnham Grove is the seat of Sir W. Johnson, Bart. An annual fair is held on the 2nd October.

BURNHAM, a par. in the hund. of Dengie, in the co. of Essex, 10 miles to the S.E. of Maldon. It is situated in a marshy country, on the N. bank of the estuary of the Crouch, and contains the hmlt. of Ostend. It has a convenient quay, and is subordinate to the port of Maldon. Near this place are some valuable oyster-beds. The inhabitants are chiefly fishermen. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, of the annual val. of £558, in the patron. of Lady St. John Mildmay. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is situated on a hill 1 mile to the N. of the village, and serves as a sea-mark. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here.

BURNHAM, a tnshp. and hmlt. in the par. of Haxey, and wap. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the S. of Epworth.

BURNHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Thornton-Curtis, and wap. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles to the S.E. of Barton-on-Humber.

BURNHAM, a par. in the hund. of Bempstone, in the co. of Somerset, 8 miles to the S.W. of Axbridge. Bridgwater is its post town It is situated on the coast of Bridgwater Bay, near the mouth of the river Brue, and is connected with the Bristol and Exeter railway by a short branch line from Highbridge. The par., which is very extensive, comprising an area of 4,302 acres, includes the hmlt. of Edithmead, and the tythg. of Huish-juxta-Highbridge, with parts of the tythg. of Aston Morris, and of the hmlt. of Highbridge. It is mentioned in the will of Alfred the Great, who is said to have been wrecked on the Gore, a dangerous sandbank at the entrance of the river Parret. Here is a good sandy beach, and two lighthouses for guiding vessels over the bar at the mouth of the Parret. They stand about 500 yards apart, and have elevations of about 90 feet and 23 feet respectively. This village is frequented as a watering-place. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the annual val. of £559, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Wells. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. It is a large ancient edifice, with a lofty tower, and possesses a fine altar-piece of white marble, originally designed by Inigo Jones for the chapel in Whitehall, and presented to this parish by Dr. King, who once held the vicarage, and was afterwards Bishop of Rochester. There is also a district church at Highbridge, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £193, in the patron. of Mrs. Luttrell. There are several charitable bequests for the poor, which amount yearly to about £70.

BURNHAM-DEEPDALE, a par. in the hund. of Brothercross, in the co. of Norfolk, 2¼ miles N.W. of Burnham-Westgate, 4 miles to the W. of Wells-juxta-Mare, which is the terminus of the Dereham, Fakenham, and Wells branch of the Great Eastern railway. It is situated on the sea-coast, and contains extensive tracts of salt marsh, part of which have been drained and reclaimed. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £257, in the patron. of Blyth's Trustees. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and is an ancient structure of flint, in the Norman style of architecture, with a round tower at the west end; the interior contains an ancient Saxon font, with pillars and sculpture. There are chapels and a day-school, erected in 1844. Near the shore are vestiges of an old encampment, supposed to have been thrown up by the Saxons after their victory over the Picts and Scots at Stamford, in Lincolnshire. Here are extensive brick and tile works. The shoals, called the Burnham Flats, extend about 15 miles along this coast, and there are about 250 acres of marsh lately enclosed from the sea.

BURNHAM, EAST, or ALLARD'S, a lib. in the par. and hund. of Burnham, in the co. of Buckingham, 4 miles to the N. of Eton.

BURNHAM HUNDRED, one of the 8 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Buckingham, situated in the S.E. part of the co., and bounded on the N. by Hertfordshire, on the E. by that co. and the hund. of Stoke, on the S. by the river Thames, which separates it from Berkshire, and on the W. by the hunds. of Aylesbury and Desborough. It contains the pars. of Amersham, Beaconsfield, Burnham, Chalfont St. Giles, Chalfont St. Peter, Chenies, Chesham, Chesham Bois, Dorney, Farnham Royal, Hitcham, Penn, and Taplow. The hund. extends over an area of about 51,000 acres.

BURNHAM-NORTON, a par. in the hund. of Brothercross, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the W. of Wells-juxta-Mare railway station, and near Burnham-Westgate, its post town. It lies near the sea-coast, including the large and pleasant village of Overy Staith. A Carmelite priory was founded here about the middle of the 12th century, by Sir Ralph de Hemenhale or Hampnall, and Sir William de Calthorpe. Its value at the Dissolution was very small. The site was given to William Lord Cobham. The historian, Robert Bale, died prior of this house in the reign of Henry VII. The living is a rect. held with that of Burnham-Westgate, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret, and contains an ancient screen, but the figures have been obliterated. The register dates from the year 1559. There is a day and Sunday school held in a cottage. The Earl of Orford is lord of the manor and sole proprietor.

BURNHAM-OVERY, a par. and small seaport in the hund. of Brothercross, in the co. of Norfolk, 1 mile E. of Burnham-Westgate, its post town, and 5 miles W.S.W. of Wells-juxta-Mare railway station. It is situated near the coast, and has a small harbour, formed by a creek of the river Burn. The chief business of the place is in the corn trade and the fisheries. There are also a limestone quarry and extensive brick and lime kilns. The living is a vic. united with the rect. of Burnham-Sutton, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, an ancient building situated on an eminence, is dedicated to St. Clement, and has a square tower, surmounted by a turret, rising from between the nave and the chancel. It contains several family monuments, and an old painting of St. Christopher bearing our Saviour in his arms. The register dates from the year 1653. Near the church is an ancient cross. The children of this parish have access to the National schools of Burnham-Market. The parochial charities amount to £5 a year. Burnham Hall is the principal residence. The chief landowners are the Earls of Orford and Leicester, the latter being lord of the manor. Extensive meadows have been reclaimed from the sea by embankment.

BURNHAM-SUTTON and ULPH, joint pars. in the hund. of Brothercross, in the co. of Norfolk, close to the town of Burnham-Westgate, which is partly situated within these pars. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the annual val. with the vic. of Burnham-Sutton, of £700, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church of Sutton is dedicated to St. Albert, or Ethelbert, and is now an ivy-mantled ruin; but the church of Ulph, dedicated to All Saints, is in good repair, and accommodates the inhabitants of the united parishes. The register dates from 1653. The Wesleyans have a chapel here.

BURNHAM-THORPE, a par. in the hund. of Brothercross, in the co. of Norfolk, 1 mile to the S.E. of Burnham-Westgate, its post town, and 5 from Wells railway station. It was anciently a market town under a grant of Henry III., obtained by Sir William de Calthorpe, who held the manor. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the val. of £475, in the patron. of the Earl of Orford, who is chief landowner and lord of the manor. The church, which is in the perpendicular style of architecture, is dedicated to St. Peter, and contains a fine monumental brass of Sir W. Calthorpe, who died in 1420, and a monument to the father of Lord Nelson. It was entirely repaired and redecorated in the year 1842. In the village is a boys' free school, with an income from endowment of about £10 per annum. There are some other charities of small value. Burnham-Thorpe was the birthplace (29th September, 1758) of the great admiral Lord Nelson, whose father then held the rectory. From this place he took the title of Viscount Nelson of Burnham-Thorpe. There is an extensive brick and tile yard in this parish belonging to the Earl of Leicester.

BURNHAM-WESTGATE, or BURNHAM-MARKET, a par. in the hund. of Brothercross, in the co. of Norfolk, 6 miles to the W. of Wells-juxta-Mare, and 36 miles to the N.W. of Norwich, or 47 miles by the Wells and Fakenham branch of the Great Eastern railway. It is situated in a pleasant and fertile district, near the sea-coast, on the small river Burn, and was formerly a market town. It contains some good houses, and has a thriving trade, chiefly in corn, malt, and other agricultural produce. There are two iron foundries, besides extensive establishments for the manufacture of agricultural implements, and several corn, wind, and steam-mills. It is within the district of Walsingham county court, and only 2 miles S.W. from the harbour and extensive sands of Burnham-Overy. Petty sessions are held here once a month. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the annual val. with medieties of Burnham-Norton and Burnham-Ulph, of £768, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Christ's College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is built of flint and freestone, with an embattled tower at the west end, and contains several monuments; amongst others the cypher of the Virgin, and figures representing the events from the Salutation of the Virgin Mary to the Crucifixion. The interior is much encumbered by the high pews, which are appropriated by the wealthy inhabitants, leaving scarcely any place for the labouring population, which is very numerous. The register dates from the year 1538. The church of Burnham-Ulph, which is dedicated to All Saints, stands in the town. Here was formerly a third church, dedicated to St. Margaret, of which there are no remains. There are chapels belonging to the Independents and Primitive Methodists. The parochial charities amount to £5 a year, the produce of a bequest for education by John Wilmot. The rectory is a handsome Elizabethan building, erected by the Rev. Dr. William Bates, who was presented to the living in 1849. The National schools are spacious and well arranged, with infant school, and residences for the teachers. There is a subscription library, and depôts for the Christian Knowledge and National societies. About 1 mile to the E. of the town is Holkham Park, the noble seat of the Earl of Leicester. Pleasure fairs are held on Easter Monday and Tuesday, and on the first two days of August.

BURNHAVEN, a fishing vil. in the par. of Peterhead, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, near the mouth of the burn of Invernettie.

BURNHEAD, a vil. in the par. of Penpont, in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 1¼ mile W. of Thornhill. Here is an United Presbyterian church.

BURNHOUSE, a vil. in the par. of Beith, in the co. of Ayr, Scotland, 11 miles to the N.W. of Kilmarnock. It is not far from the Glasgow and South-Western railway.

BURNISTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Scalby, wap. of Pickering Lythe, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.W. of Scarborough.

BURNLEY, a chplry. and market town in the par. of Whalley, hund. of Blackburn, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 28 miles to the N. of Manchester, and 217 miles to the N.N.W. of London, by the London and North-Western and the Lancashire and Yorkshire railways, with the latter of which it is connected by a branch line of 9 miles from Todmorden. There are three railway stations in the town. It is situated in a pleasant, fertile, and wooded valley, on the banks of the river Burn, a branch of the Calder, into which it runs about a mile below the town. It is an ancient town, and is thought to have been the site of a Roman station, numerous Roman relics having been found in the vicinity. A spot named Saxifield, near the town, is noted by tradition as the scene of a battle about the end of the 6th century. Burnley is an important seat of manufacturing industry, and has made rapid progress in population and prosperity during the present century. The cotton manufacture has become the staple business of the place, which was formerly the woollen and worsted manufacture. There are many large mills, some print-works, several flour-mills, besides iron and brass foundries, engine manufactories, several breweries, rope-walks, and tanneries. Coal is obtained in abundance in the neighbourhood, and there are quarries of good freestone and slate. The greater part of the town is of modern date; the houses are mostly built of stone, and the streets are paved and lighted with gas. The water supply is abundant. The Leeds and Liverpool canal passes by the town, winding nearly round it, and greatly promotes its trade by opening easy communication with both the North and Irish Seas. Burnley is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and the head of a County Court district. It is also a polling-place for the north division of the county. Petty sessions are held weekly in the court-house, the chief public building. In the town are the Union poorhouse and a savings-bank. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, of the annual val. of £1,400, in the patron. of R. T. Parker, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has been recently repaired. It is a large and very ancient edifice of stone, exhibiting the early English and several later styles of architecture, but much altered by enlargement and repairs at various times. In a side chapel are monuments of the Townley family, of Townley Hall, near Burnley, among which is one to Charles Townley, the accomplished scholar and antiquary, who formed the valuable collection of marbles bearing his name, now in the British Museum. He died in 1805. Two new churches have been erected, dedicated to St. James and St. Paul respectively; the latter is situated at Lane Bridge. The livings of both are curs., each worth £150, in the patron. of the crown and the bishop of the dioc. alternately. A spacious Roman Catholic chapel was erected in 1849. There are two chapels belonging to the Independents, four each to the Baptists and Wesleyans, and two to the Primitive Methodists. The free grammar school, founded about 1650, has an income, from various endowments, of £150 a year, and an interest in thirteen scholarships at Brasenose College, Oxford. Dr. Whitaker, Master of St. John's, Cambridge, and author of a history of the parish of Whalley, was educated at this school. There are several charitable endowments for the relief of the poor, the principal of which is that founded in the year 1800 by Elizabeth Peel. The various charities are worth about £220 per annum. The town has literary and mechanics' institutes, a reading-room, National, British, and other schools. Markets are held on Monday and Saturday, the latter in the new market-place. There is a cattle market every other Monday. The fairs are on the 6th March, Easter Eve, the 9th and 13th May, the 10th July, and the 11th October.

BURNMOUTH, a vil. in the par. of Ayton, in the co. of Berwick, Scotland, 5 miles to the N. of Berwick. It is seated on the coast, and is a station on the North British railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fishery. They were once noted for smuggling.

BURNOP, a tnshp., joined with Hamsteels, in the par. of Lanchester, Chester ward, in the co. palatine of Durham, 6 miles to the N.W. of Durham. It is situated in a hilly country on the river Browney, a branch of the Wear. The Wesleyans have a meeting-house in the village.

BURNS, a vil. in the par. of Markinch, Kirkcaldy district of the co. of Fife, Scotland, 2 miles to the W. of Leven.

BURNSALL, a par. in the eastern div. of the wap. of Staincliff and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles to the N.E. of Skipton, its post town. It is situated in the romantic valley of the Wharfe, and comprises no less than 31,331 acres. It contains the chplries. of Coniston-with-Kilnsay and Rylstone, and ten tnshps. It is said to have been formerly part of the par. of Linton. There is a bridge over the Wharfe. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ripon, with the perpet. curs. of Coniston and Rilston annexed. It is in two portions, of which the first, val. £315, is in the patron. of the trustees of the late Rev. J. Graham, and the second, val. £276, in the patron of the Earl of Craven. The church, dedicated to St. Wilfred, was repaired by Sir William Craven in 1612, and contains a pulpit and desk for each portionist. Here is a grammar school, founded by Sir William, and endowed by him and other persons. The founder was born at Appletreewick, and became Lord Mayor of London in 1611. Burnsall bridge and three others in the neighbourhood were rebuilt by him.

BURNTISLAND, a par., royal and parliamentary burgh and seaport, in the Kirkcaldy district of the co. of Fife, Scotland, 8 miles to the N. of Edinburgh, and about 20 miles to the S.W. of Cupar, or 24 miles by railway. It is situated on the N. shore of the Frith of Forth, and is a station on the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railway, which crosses the Frith by a floating bridge. It is an old town, and was formerly one of the possessions of the abbey of Dunfermline. It was raised into a royal burgh in 1568. The trade of the port was very considerable in the 17th century, and 12 ports were subordinate to it. In 1601, a General Assembly was held here, at which the Covenant was accepted by James VI. The town was afterwards fortified, and was twice besieged and taken, first by Cromwell, and subsequently by the Earl of Mar. The district is hilly, except next the sea, rising at Dunearn Hill, northward, to the height of nearly 700 feet above the level of the sea. Limestone and freestone are abundant, the former containing numerous fossils. The harbour, formed by a pier, is at the western extremity of the town, and is one of the best and safest havens in the Frith. There is a regular steam ferry to Granton, on the S. coast of the Frith. The town has two principal streets, which are parallel, and run E. and W. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries, the coasting trade, shipbuilding, and the neighbouring distilleries. There are an excellent dry-dock, a market-place, a townhouse, a gaol, and baths. The government of the burgh is vested in a provost, 2 bailies, and 10 councillors. It is contributory with two other towns to Kirkcaldy in returning one member to the imperial parliament. The revenue of the burgh is about £1,020. The living, val. £186, is in the presb. of Kirkcaldy, and in the gift of the crown. Besides the parish church, erected about 1590, there are in the town places of worship belonging to the Free Church, the United Presbyterians, and the Episcopalians. There are burgh and parish schools. Some remains of the old fortifications still exist. Dunearn and the neighbouring hills exhibit basaltic columns and other distinct evidences of volcanic action. At the W. end of the town is Rossend Castle, situated on a hill, and built by the Duries in the 15th century. A lighthouse was erected on the eastern pier in 1845, which has a fixed light, visible about 8 miles off. A fair is held on the 10th July. The par. extends about 2½ miles in length and the same in breadth, and is bounded on the S. by the Frith of Forth, and on the other sides by the pars. of Kinghorn and Aberdour. The town, at the census of 1861, contained 381 houses, and had a population of 3,146 persons, of whom 642 were children at school.

BURNTWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Michael, Lichfield, hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles to the W. of Lichfield. The South Staffordshire railway passes near it. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £78, in the gift of the Vicar of St. Mary's parish. Races take place here in the month of October.

BURNT YATES, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Clint, and par. of Ripley, wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile from Ripley.

BURPHAM, a par. in the hund. of Poling, rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex, 2 miles to the N.E. of Arundel, which is a station on the London, Brighton, and South Coast railway. It is pleasantly situated on the E. side of the river Arun. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £145, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, which is chiefly Norman, is dedicated to St. Mary.

BURRA, or BURRAY, a quoad sacra par. joined to Quarff, in the par. of Bressay, Shetland Islands, Scotland, comprising the islands of East Burra, West Burra, Halvera, or Haveray, and Papa.

BURRADON. See BORROWDON, Northumberland.

BURRADON, or BRIERDEAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Earsdon, Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 8 miles to the N.E. of Newcastle. It is situated near the coast and the Newcastle and Berwick railway. The neighbouring coal-works and quarries give employment to the workpeople.

BURRALS, a tnshp. in the par. of Appleby St. Lawrence, East ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 1 mile from Appleby. The walls of Appleby are said to have crossed this tnshp., and to have given rise to its name, which is supposed to be a corruption of "borough walls."

BURRELL-CUM-COWLING, a united tnshp. in the par. of Bedale, and wap. of East Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, near Bedale.

BURRELTON, a vil. in the par. of Cargill, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 7 miles to the N.E. of Perth. It is in a hilly district near the river Tay and the Scottish Midland Junction railway. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in July and November.

BURREN, a vil. in the par. of Abbey, and bar. of Burren, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 22 miles to the N. of Ennis, and about 130 miles from Dublin. It is seated on the coast of Galway Bay, on a small harbour, and carries on a thriving coasting trade. The oysters obtained near this place are of excellent quality.

BURREN BARONY, one of the 11 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, situated in the northern part of the co., and bounded on the N. and W. by Galway Bay, on the E. by the co. of Galway and the bar. of Inchiquin, and on the S. by the bar. of Corcomroe. It contains the pars. of Abbey, Carran, Drumcreehy, Gleninagh, Kilcorney, Killeany, Killonaghan, Kilmoon, Nonghaval, Oughtmanagh, and Rathborney. It extends over an area of about 74,36[illegible] acres.

BURRINGHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Bottesford and wap. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 8 miles to the W. of Brigg. It is situated on the river Trent, over which is a ferry to Althorp. The nearest railway station is Keadby, on the South Yorkshire line. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village. Brick-making is carried on to a considerable extent.

BURRINGTON, a par. in the hund. of North Tawton with Winkley, in the co. of Devon, 8 miles to the S.W. of South Molton. Chulmleigh is its post town. It lies near the river Taw and the North Devon railway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, worth £276, in the gift of the Rev. J. Buckingham, incumbent. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. There are some charitable bequests for the poor, producing about £3 a year.

BURRINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Wigmore, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles to the S.W. of Ludlow. Lein[illegible] wardine, in the co. of Salop, is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Teme, at a short distance from the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £146, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. George.

BURRINGTON, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Brent-with-Wrington, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles from the N.E. of Axbridge. Wrington is its post town. It is situated at the foot of the Mendip Hills, and contains the hmlt. of Langford. In the side of the hills is a rock ravine, called Burrington Combe, the rocks in some places being 250 feet high. Two remarkable caverns exist here, each of which, when discovered, contained a large number of human skeletons. Higher up the Combe is another extensive cavern, the windings of which have not been traced. The scenery of the neighbourhood is romantic. Limestone is obtained here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £14[illegible] in the gift of the inhabitants. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, contains a stained-glass window with the arms of the Capels of Langford Court, and some beautiful screen-work. The charitable endowments of the par. amount to £18 per annum.

BURRISCARRA, a par. in the bar. of Carra, in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 10 miles to the S. of Castlebar. It is situated in a fertile country on the eastern side of Lough Carra, and was the site of a Carmelite monastery, founded at a very early period and of which some ruins remain. The living is a rectory in the dioc. of Tuam, Killala, and Achonry, val. with those of Ballyhane and Ballyovey united, £346. The principal seats are Moore Hall, Tower Hill, and Castlecarra. There is a good mineral spring in the vicinity.

BURRISHOOLE, a par. in the bar. of Burrishoole in the co. of Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, co taining the vil. of Newport, which is 10 miles to the W. of Castlebar. It is situated in a mountainous and boggy country, on the N. coast of Clew Bay, and includes several small islands, some of which are inhabited, and two loughs, Lough Feagh and Lough Furnace. The Burrishoole river, the outlet of the lakes, has a good salmon fishery. This par. was the site of a Dominican monastery, founded about 1486 by Richard de Bourke, of which there are some ruins. A castle also was erected here, which was the seat of the O'Malleys. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, Killala, and Achonry, val. £328, in the patron. of the bishop of the dioc. Besides the parish church, there are chapels belonging to the Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, and Wesleyan Methodists. There are both national and parochial schools. Newport House is the seat of Sir R. O'Donnell, Bart. The other residences are Melcomb, Burrishoole, Treenlong and Roigh. In the parish are remains of furnaces connected with the iron-works formerly carried on here.

BURRISHOOLE BARONY, one of the 9 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Mayo, in the prov. of Connaught, Ireland, situated in the western part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the Atlantic Ocean and the bar. of Erris, on the E. by the bars. of Trawley and Carra, and on the S. and W. by Clew Bay and the ocean. It contains the pars. of Achill, Burrishoole, Kilmaclasser, and Kilmeena, with parts of those of Aghagower, Ballintober, and Islandeady. The bar. extends over an area of about 147,000 acres.

BURROUGH, or BURROUGH-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, in the co. of Leicester, 5 miles to the S. of Melton Mowbray, its post town. The vil. is situated near Burrough Hill, one of the loftiest eminences in Leicestershire. The prospect from the hill is of considerable extent, and on the summit are traces of an ancient camp, which covered an area of about 18 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the val. of £433, in the patron. of the Rev. G. Barnaby. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains a round font with sculpture, a piscina, and an old monument.

BURROUGH GREEN, or BURGH, a par. in the hund. of Radfield, in the co. of Cambridge, 6 miles to the S. of Newmarket, its post town, and 2¼ from the Dullington station on the Cambridge and Newcastle railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £705, in the patron. of Charles Porcher, Esq. The church, an ancient stone building with a tower, is dedicated to St. Augustine. It contains several ancient monuments, and the register dates from 1570. There is an endowed school and a free school for infants. The manor belonged to Queen Editha, consort of Edward the Confessor, and the site of her palace is supposed to be indicated by a moat. At the time of the Norman survey a deer park existed here.

BURROW, or BURROW BRIDGE, a tythg. in the par. of Kingsbury Episcopi, hund. of Kingsbury, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles to the N.W. of South Petherton. It is seated on the banks of the river Parret. A church has been erected here. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £95, in the gift of the bishop.

BURROW-ASH, or BORROWASH, a hmlt. in the par. of Ockbrook, hund. of Morleston and Litchurch, in the co. of Derby, 5 miles to the E. of Derby. It is situated near the N. bank of the river Derwent, and is a station on the Midland railway. The Roman road from Derventio, or Little Chester, to Verometum, passed by this place. The manufacture of hosiery is carried on here. Burrow-Ash is within the honour of Tutbury, in the duchy of Lancaster.

BURROWS NORTHAM. See NORTHAM, Devonshire.

BURROW-WITH-BURROW, a tnshp. in the par. of Tunstall, hund. of Lonsdale, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 2 miles to the S.E. of Kirkby Lonsdale South of the Sands. It is situated on the river Lune, where the Leck brook falls into it. Numerous Roman remains, consisting of pavements, altars, coins, &c., have been discovered. The tnshp. is near the north-eastern extremity of Lancashire, where it adjoins the counties of York and Westmoreland.

BURRY, a par. in the bar. of Upper Kells, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S.W. of Kells. It is situated in a fertile district, and contains the vil. of Springville. Limestone and greenstone are quarried here. The living is a rect., united to that of Kells, in the dioc. of Meath. The principal seat is Balrath, situated in a large and wooded park, well stocked with deer.

BURSCOUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Ormskirk, hund. of West Derby, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles to the N.E. of Ormskirk. It gives name to two stations, Burscough Bridge and Burscough Junction, on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The Leeds and Liverpool canal passes near the town. Burscough was the site of an Augustine priory, founded in the reign of Richard I. by Robert Fitz-Henry, lord of Latham, which had a revenue at the Dissolution of £129. For a long time previous to the Reformation this priory was the burial-place of the Stanley family. Nothing remains of the buildings except a small portion of the conventual church. There is a new church at Burscough Bridge, the living of which is a perpet. cur., in the gift of the Vicar of Ormskirk. In the vicinity is Latham House, the seat of Lord Skelmersdale, rendered famous in history by the heroic defence made by the Countess of Derby against the parliamentary forces, who besieged it for three months during the Civil War. The inhabitants of the village are chiefly employed in the cotton manufacture.

BURSLEDON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Mainsbridge, Southampton div. of the co. of Southampton, 4 miles to the S.E. of Southampton. It lies on the estuary of the river Hamble, which is here crossed by a bridge. The depth of the estuary makes this a commodious place for shipbuilding, which is carried on to some extent. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £110, annexed to the vic. of Hound, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard. There are charitable endowments worth £5 a year.

BURSLEM, a par. and market town in the northern div. of the hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles to the N.E. of Newcastle-under-Lyme, 17 miles to the N. of Stafford, and 148 miles from London by the London and North-Western and North Staffordshire railways, on the latter of which it is a station. This place was constituted a separate par. in 1807, having previously been a chplry. in the par. of Stoke-upon-Trent. It is situated on the Grand Trunk canal, connecting the Trent and the Mersey, and contains the vils. of Longport, a suburb of Burslem, Abbey Hulton, Corbridge, Dale Hall, Rushton Grange, and Sneyd. These were united into one district in 1850, under the Public Health Act, and now form part of the parliamentary borough of Stoke-upon-Trent.—Burslem is mentioned in Domesday Book by the name of Barcardeslim. It is in the district called the Potteries, and has been noted from an early period for the manufacture of earthenware. The district is marked by the presence of extensive beds of clay of various kinds, beneath which coal is found. Burslem had become the chief of the pottery towns in the 17th century, but the rapid and extensive development of its manufacture dates from about the middle of the following century, chiefly owing to the genius and enterprise of Josiah Wedgwood, who was born here in 1730. He invented and obtained patents for several new kinds of earthenware and porcelain, among which were the Queen's ware, a terra-cotta, white porcelain, biscuit, &c. He projected and executed a road, 10 miles long, through the Potteries, and in 1766 cut the first sod of the Trent and Mersey canal, which he had also projected, and by means of which the clays and flints of Devonshire and Dorsetshire became easily procurable by the Staffordshire manufacturers. Great improvements have been since made in the art of pottery, and the population and trade of the town have increased to an extraordinary degree. The number of manufactories is now about forty. There are also extensive coal-mines and iron-works. Burslem bears the title of "Mother of the Potteries," and produces in the greatest perfection, parian, porcelain, white and black ware, lustre, granite, and all kinds of china and earthenware. There are besides colour-mills, glass manufactories, steam-boiler foundries, smelting furnaces, tile-kilns, rope-walks; coopers, curriers, and various other trades, more or less connected with the iron and pottery trades.—The town is pleasantly situated on rising ground, and consists almost entirely of the pottery works and the residences of the manufacturers, their workpeople, and the general tradesmen. The streets are now well paved and lighted with gas. In the centre of the town is the market-place, with a handsome townhall, built of stone, and a covered market erected in 1836; this latter building is extremely elegant, having a handsome Doric portico. The inhabitants are supplied with water by the Staffordshire Potteries Waterworks Company, the reservoir of which is near the town. The market is managed by trustees; the police, lighting, and local affairs of the town are entrusted to a body of commissioners. There are a board of health, a mechanics' institute, and barracks.—Wolstanton and Burslem constitute a Poor-law Union of themselves. Petty sessions are held in the town, and polling for the north div. of the co. takes place here.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £525, in the gift of the Rev. Dr. Armstrong, the incumbent. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a brick building, with a very ancient tower of stone. A spacious new church, dedicated to St. Paul, was founded in 1828, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £150, in the patron. of the Rector of Burslem. Christ Church, Corbridge, is a small brick building, erected in 1843; the living is a perpet. cur.,* val. £100, also in the patron. of the rector. There is besides a handsome stone church, with tower and spire, erected at Sneyd in 1852, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £150, in the gift of the crown and bishop alternately. There are four chapels belonging to the Wesleyans, two to the Primitive Methodists, and one each to the Roman Catholics, Baptists, Independents, New Connexion and Association Methodists. A free school was founded and endowed in 1748 by John Bourne, with which the National school, established in 1817, has been incorporated. There are some other charities worth about £30 per annum.—Monday and Saturday are the market days. Fairs were formerly held on the Saturdays before Shrove Sunday, Easter Day, Whit Sunday, and Midsummer Day, and on the day after Christmas Day; but they have lately much declined.

BURSTALL, a par. in the hund. of Samford, in the co. of Suffolk, 4 miles to the W. of Ipswich. Hadleigh is its post town. It is pleasantly situated on a small stream, a branch of the river Orwell. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Bramford, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BURSTALL GARTH, a manor in the par. of Skeffling, wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the S.E. of Patrington. It is at the mouth of the river Humber.

BURSTEAD, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, in the co. of Essex, 10 miles to the S. of Chelmsford. It includes the chplry., post and market town of Billericay. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £188, in the patron. of the Rev. Edward Evans. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. In addition to the parish church there is a district church at Billericay, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £120, in the patron. of the bishop of the dioc. There is a free school for the parish, founded at Billericay in 1654, by the Rev. J. Bailey, which has an endowment of £60 per annum. There are other charitable endowments producing about £40 a year. Near the village are remains of an old encampment, now called Blunt's Walls.

BURSTEAD, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, in the co. of Essex, 2 miles to the S. of Billericay, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £356, in the patron. of the bishop of the dioc. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charitable bequests for the benefit of the poor amount to about £40 per annum.

BURSTOCK, a par. in the hund. of Whitchurch-Canonicorum, in the Bridport div. of the co. of Dorset, 1 mile to the N.W. of Beaminster, its post town. It lies near the border of Somersetshire. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £155, in the patron. of J. Bragge, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities are worth £14 a year.

BURSTON, a par. in the hund. of Diss, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the N. of Diss, its post town, and 97 from London. It is a station on the Eastern Union railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £418, in the gift of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is built of flint, and has a round tower, surmounted by an octagonal turret of later erection. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. There are charitable endowments amounting to £5 a year. This par. contains several manors—that of Winfarthing, belonging to the Earl of Albemarle; Hayden Hall, to the trustees of the late Charles Layton; and Brockaist and Milden halls, to the trustees of Meadow Taylor.

BURSTON, a joint tnshp. and chplry. with Aston, in the par. of Stone, hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles to the S.E. of Stone, its post town. It is near the river Trent and the North Staffordshire railway.

BURSTOW, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Reigate, in the co. of Surrey, 8 miles to the S.E. of Reigate. Crawley is its post town. It lies near the border of Sussex, and the London and Brighton railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £511, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. John Flamstead, the astronomer, once held the rect. of this par. The charities are of small value. Near the vil. is Burstow Lodge, or Smallfield Place, built in the reign of James I., and afterwards the seat of the Bysshe family, one of whom, Sir Edward Bysshe, was Garter King-of-Arms to Cromwell. This old seat is now a farmhouse.

BURSTWICK, a par. in the southern div. of the wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles to the E. of Hull, its post town. It is a station on the Hull and Holderness railway. The par. includes the tnshp. of Ryhill with Camerton. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £280, in the patron. of Sir T. A. C. Constable. The church is chiefly in the perpendicular style, and is dedicated to All Saints.

BURSWICK. See BURWICK, Orkney Islands.

BURT, or BERT, a par. in the bar. of Innishowen, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S. of Buncrana. The par., which is extensive, comprising an area of 10,673 acres, lies on the south-eastern shore of Lough Swilly, opposite Inch Island. Burt Hill, in the vicinity, rises to the height of 800 feet, and is the site of an old castle founded by Sir Cahir O'Doherty, of which some ruins remain. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Derry and Raphoe, val. £68, in the gift of the Dean of Derry. Burt House is one of the chief residences.

BURTERSETT, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Hawes, par. of Aysgarth, in the wap. of Hang, North Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile from Hawes.

BURTHOLME, a tnshp. in the par. of Lanercost, ward of Eskdale, in the co. of Cumberland, 3 miles to the N.E. of Brampton. It is seated on the banks of the river Irthing.

BURTLE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Edington, and par. of Moorlinch, hund. of Whitley, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles to the E. of Bridgwater.

BURTOFT, a hmlt. in the par. of Wigtoft, wap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the S.E. of Swineshead.

BURTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Tarvin, hund. of Eddisbury, in the co. palatine of Chester, 4 miles to the W. of Tarporley.

BURTON, a par. in the higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, in the co. palatine of Chester, 9 miles to the N.W. of Chester, its post town. It is situated on the N.E. side of the estuary of the river Dee, and contains the tnshps. of Puddington and Burton. The Birkenhead railway passes about 3 miles to the N.E. of the vil. Burton was formerly a market town, under a grant obtained by Bishop Langton about the end of the 13th century. A hospital was at an earlier date founded at Denwall, and endowed by Alexander de Savensby, Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry. The estate and endowments were given by Henry VII. to the Hospital of St. John the Baptist, at Lichfield. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, worth £54, in the patron. of W. W. Congreve, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. Here is a free school, founded and endowed by Bishop Wilson in 1724, the income of which is about £35 per annum. Burton was the birthplace (1663) of Bishop Wilson. Burton Hall is the principal seat.

BURTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Charminster, hund. of George, in the co. of Dorset, 1 mile to the N. of Dorchester.

BURTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Gresford, hund. of Bromfield, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 5 miles to the N. of Wrexham. The Shrewsbury and Chester railway passes near it.

BURTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Marnhull, hund. of Sturminster-Newton-Castle, in the co. of Dorset, 3 miles to the E. of Stalbridge. Marble is quarried here.

BURTON, a tythg. in the par. of Winfrith Newburgh, hund. of Winfrith, in the co. of Dorset, 6 miles to the W. of Wareham.

BURTON, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Christchurch, in the co. of Southampton, 1 mile to the N. of Christchurch.

BURTON. See BARTON, Isle of Wight, Hampshire.

BURTON, a vil. in the par. of Penmark, hund. of Dinas Powis, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 6 miles to the S.E. of Cowbridge. It is near the coast of the Bristol Channel.

BURTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bambrough, Bamborough ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 5 miles to the E. of Belford.

BURTON, a par. in the hund. of Roose, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 3 miles to the N. of Pembroke. Haverford West is its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the N. bank of Milford Haven, and contains the vil. of Houghton. Within the par. are the remains of Benton Castle, which stand in a striking situation by the haven, and command a beautiful prospect. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, worth £202, in the patron. of the Earl of Cawdor. There are chapels belonging to the Wesleyans and Baptists. The charitable endowments amount to £8 a year. Near the vil. is the ferry across the haven.

BURTON. See BOURTON, Shropshire.

BURTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Stogursey, hund. of Cannington, in the co. of Somerset, 6 miles to the N.W. of Bridgwater. It is seated near the coast of the Bristol Channel.

BURTON, or BODEXTON, a par. in the hund. of Rotherbridge, rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex, 3 miles to the S. of Petworth, its post town. It is situated on the river Rother, here crossed by a bridge, and near the Mid-Sussex branch of the London, Brighton, and South Coast railway. The living is a rect. consolidated with that of Coates, in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £113, in the patron. of George Wyndham, Esq. Burton Park is the principal seat, and has a Roman Catholic chapel attached. Some bones of elephants were dug up at this place about 1740. The par. contains 809 acres, with only two houses.

BURTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Warcop, East ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 2 miles E. of Warcop, where is a station on the Eden Valley railway, and 4 miles to the S.E. of Appleby. It is a place of great antiquity, as proved by the old entrenchments near the hall, and the remains of a Romano-British camp. After the Norman Conquest it became the property of the Heltons, in whose possession it continued till 1720, when it passed, by marriage of the heiress of that ancient family, to Thomas Wybergh, of Clifton, whose descendant is the present lord of the manor and proprietor of the soil. It is seated at the Foot of Rutman Fell, and contains only six houses and some lead-works at Kirsty Bank, in which the inhabitants are chiefly employed. Christopher Bainbridge, Archbishop of York, and a cardinal in the reign of Henry VIII., was a native of this village. He was murdered in Italy in 1511. The old hall is now occupied as a farmhouse, and has over the staircase the bust and coat of arms of the notorious freebooter John Armstrong.

BURTON, a par. joined with Hornsea, in the wap. of Holderness, East Riding of the co. of York.

BURTON. See BRETTON MONK, Yorkshire.

BURTON, or WEST BURTON, a tnshp. united with Walden, in the par. of Aysgarth, wap. of West Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S.E. of Askrigg. It is situated in a picturesque country, on a branch of the river Ure, noted for its abundance of salmon. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyans, and charitable endowments for the poor amounting to £9 a year.

BURTON-AGNES, a par. in the wap. of Dickering, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the S.W. of Bridlington. Hull is its post town. It is a station on the Scarborough, Bridlington, and Hull branch of the North-Eastern railway. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Burton-Agnes, Gransmoor, Haisthorpe, and Thornholm-on-the-Wolds. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. with the perpet. cur. of Harpham annexed, £897, in the gift of the Hon. and Very Rev. A. Duncombe. The church is dedicated to St. Martin. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to about £60 a year, and consist chiefly of the produce of a bequest by Richard Green in 1563, one-third of which is applied to the support of a free school. The schoolhouse is an ancient building adjoining the church. There is an endowed almshouse for four widows. Burton House, a mansion erected by Inigo Jones, is the seat of the Boynton family.

BURTON, BISHOP. See BISHOP-BURTON, Yorkshire.

BURTON, BLACK. See BURTON-IN-LONSDALE, Yorkshire.

BURTON-BRADSTOCK, a par. in the lib. of Frampton, Bridport div. of the co. of Dorset, 2 miles to the S.E. of Bridport, within the parliamentary franchise of which it is included. It is situated on the coast of the English Channel, at the mouth of the small river Bridy, or Bride. Lofty cliffs, rich in fossils, extend along the beach. In the parish are flax-mills, giving employment to some of the inhabitants. In 1864 the village was nearly destroyed by fire. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val., with the perpet. cur. of Shipton-George, £336, in the patron. of Lord Rivers, who is lord of the manor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities are of small value. A little to the S.E. of the village are the remains of an ancient castle.

BURTON-BY-LINCOLN, a par. in the wap. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the N. of Lincoln, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £419, in the patron. of Lord Monson. The church is dedicated to St. Vincent. There are charitable endowments for the poor, amounting to about £40 per annum. Burton House, situated in a well wooded park, is the seat of Lord Monson, who holds the manor.

BURTON, CHERRY, a par. in the Hunsley Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.W. of Beverley, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, of the annual val. of £887, in the patron. of the Rev. H. Ramsden. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The charitable endowments are of trifling amount. Cherry-Burton Hall, an old mansion with an embattled front, was probably erected in the reign of James I.

BURTON-COGGLES, a par. in the wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the

W. of Corby, which is a station on the Great Northern railway. Colsterworth is its post town. A branch of the river Glen runs through the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, worth £664, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Thomas à Becket. There is an endowed free school, founded by John Speight in 1734, the income of which is about £25 per annum. The other parochial charities produce £10 a year.

BURTON-CONSTABLE, a chplry. in the par. of Pingall, wap. of West Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the E. of Leyburn. Studdow is a hmlt. of this chplry.

BURTON-CONSTABLE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of West Newton, par. of Aldbrough, in the wap. of Holderness, East Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the N. of Hedon. In this hmlt. is a spacious ancient mansion, the seat of Sir T. A. C. Constable, Bart., standing in a small but pleasant park, with fine prospects, and containing a lake which is crossed by a bridge of five arches. The hall has a large picture gallery and a library, with many valuable MSS. relating to the history and topography of the district. The west front extends about 190, and the east 133 feet in length.

BURTON-DASSETT, a par. in the Burton-Dassett div. of the hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, 4 miles to the E. of Kington. Rugby is its post town. Little Dassett, Knightcott, and Northend are hmlts. of this par., which was formerly a market town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £167, in the patron. of Lord Willoughby de Broke and R. W. Blencowe, Esq. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The charitable endowments of the par. produce about £70 per annum.

BURTON-EXTRA, a tnshp. in the par. of Burton-upon-Trent, hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, adjoining the town of Burton.

BURTON-FLEMING, or NORTH BURTON, a par. in the wap. of Dickering, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the N.W. of Bridlington, its post town. It is intersected by a stream called the Gipsy Race. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £84, in the patron. of Admiral Mitford. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village.

BURTON-GATE, a par. in the wap. of Well, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 6 miles to the S. of Gainsborough, its post town. It lies on the borders of Nottinghamshire, on the E. bank of the river Trent, not far from the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £88, in the patron. of W. Hutton, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Helen. Burton Hall is the principal residence.

BURTON-GRANGE, a vil. in the tnshp. of Monk-Bretton, and par. of Royston, wap. of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile to the N.E. of Barnsley. It was the site of a monastery, founded about 1186 by Fitz-Swain.

BURTON-HASTINGS, a par. in the Kirby div. of the hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 4 miles to the S.E. of Nuneaton, its post town. It is situated on the borders of Leicestershire, close to the Trent Valley branch of the London and North-Western railway, which has a station at Bulkington, 1 mile to the N.E. of the village. The Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal passes near the village, and the parish is crossed by the Roman way, Watling Street. It acquired the suffix of Hastings from William Lord Hastings, who held the manor in the reign of Edward IV., and from whom it passed, by marriage, to the Cotton family, the ancestors of Sir Thomas Cotton, the founder of the Cottonian Library in the British Museum. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, worth £87, in the patron. of W. Bucknill, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Botolph. There are charitable bequests for the poor producing about £28 per annum.

BURTON, HIGH, a vil. in the par. of Kirk-Burton, wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles S.E. of Huddersfield.

BURTON-HILL, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Malmesbury, in the co. of Wilts, adjoining Malmesbury.

BURTON-IN-KENDAL, a market town and par. partly in the wards of Lonsdale and Kendal, in the co. of Westmoreland, but chiefly in the hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 1 miles to the N. of Lancaster, and 251 miles to the N.W. of London. It gives name, with Holme, to a station on the Lancaster and Carlisle railway, from which it is distant about 1 mile. The par. is situated in the valley of the river Ken, and is crossed by the Kendal and Lancaster canal, which opens a communication with the west coast, through the Mersey and the Dee, and with the east through the Humber. The par. comprises the market town of Burton-in-Kendal, the chplries. of Holme and Preston-Patrick, the tnshp. of Dalton, and the hmlt. of Claythorpe. This place is of considerable antiquity and is mentioned in the Norman survey by the name of Burton (Boro'-town). Farlton Knot and Haverbrack Fell are lofty eminences within this parish. There is a tract of peat, but of less extent than formerly, part having been brought under cultivation. The pursuits of the inhabitants are chiefly agricultural, a few only being employed in flax dressing. Many of the houses are old, but the town is well built. There is a large market-place, with a stone cross in the centre, surrounded by spacious shops. Petty sessions are held and polling for the county election takes place in the town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, worth £199, in the patron. of the trustees of the Rev. C. Simeon. The church, an ancient edifice with a square tower, is dedicated to St. James. It has two side chapels, the burial places of the Dalton and Preston families. The church was restored a few years ago. The churchyard contains a monument to William Cockin, author of a book called the "Rural Sabbath." There are also two district churches, one at Holme and the other at Preston-Patrick; both livings are perpet. curs.,* val. respectively £120 and £67. The town of Burton contains a chapel for Independents; a grammar school, with an income from endowment of about £50 a year; National and infant schools, and a parish library. The charitable endowments of the parish produce about £170 per annum. The market, chiefly for corn, is held on Tuesday, but is of much less importance than formerly. A cattle fair is held on Easter Monday; which is also a statute fair. Captain Atkinson is lord of the manor, and holds his court on Whit Monday.

BURTON-IN-LONSDALE, or BLACK BURTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Thornton-in-Lonsdale, wap. of Staincliff and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the S.E. of Kirkby Lonsdale. It is seated on the confines of Lancashire, on the banks of the river Greta. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, in the gift of the Vicar of Thornton.

BURTON-JOYCE, a par. in the southern div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, in the co. of Nottingham, 5 miles to the N.E. of Nottingham, its post town. It is situated in a pleasant country, on the banks of the river Trent, and is a station on the Midland (east branch) railway. The par. includes the hmlt. of Bulcote. The manufacture of hosiery is carried on in the village, about 100 frames being employed. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, worth £145, in the patron. of the Earl of Chesterfield. The church is dedicated to St. Helen. It is a large ancient edifice, with a tower and spire, and contains several monuments of ancient families, to whom the manor belonged. The principal are a figure of a knight erect upon a lion, and two altar tombs with Saxon inscriptions. The former is supposed to represent one of the Joax family; the latter are the tombs of the Stapletons. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel in the village. The parochial charities are of very trifling value.

BURTON, KIRK, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, miles to the S.E. of Huddersfield, its post town. The Huddersfield branch of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway crosses the par., with stations at Shepley and Stocksmoor, in Thurstonland, two of its tnshps. The par., which touches the confines of Cheshire, is very extensive, comprising an area of 15,990 acres. It includes the chplries. of Hepworth, Holmfirth, Newmill, Shepley, and Thurstonland, with the tnshps. of Cartworth, Cumberworth-Half, Foulston, Shelley, and Wooldale, in the last of which is the populous vil. of Holmfirth. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in manufactures. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £301, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, which was founded in the reign of Edward III., is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. Besides the parish church, there are four district churches named after their respective chplries. The livings of all are perpet. curs.,* in the gift of the Vicar of Kirk Burton. There are in the village chapels belonging to the Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists; and a free school, founded in 1714.

BURTON-LATIMER, a par. in the hund. of Huxloe, in the co. of Northampton, 4 miles to the S.E. of Kettering, its post town. It gives name with Isham to a station on the Midland (south-east branch) railway. Some of the inhabitants are employed in a silk factory. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the annual val. of £1,000, in the patron. of D. B. Bevan, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charitable endowments consist chiefly of the revenue of a free school, and amount to about £185 per annum. Burton Hall is the chief residence.

BURTON-LAZARS, a par. in the hund. of Framland, in the co. of Leicester, 2 miles to the S.E. of Melton Mowbray, its post town, which is also a station on the Syston and Peterborough branch of the Midland railway. This parish takes the addition to its name from a leper's hospital founded here chiefly by Roger de Mowbray, in the reign of Stephen. It is said to have been the chief lazar-house in England, and was subordinate to the hospital of St. Lazarus, at Jerusalem. It had a revenue at the Dissolution of £265. This spot was selected as a site for the hospital on account of a mineral spring, the waters of which were highly esteemed in cases of leprosy. The hospital was dedicated to SS. Mary and Lazarus. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Melton Mowbray, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. James.

BURTON-LEONARD, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Claro, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N. of Knaresborough, its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £140, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of York. The church is dedicated to St. Helen. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists.

BURTON, LONG. See LONGBURTON, Dorsetshire.

BURTON, NORTH. See BURTON-FLEMING, Yorkshire.

BURTON-ON-THE-WOLDS, a tnshp. in the par. of Prestwold, hund. of East Goscote, in the co. of Leicester, 4 miles to the E. of Loughborough. There is a chapel for Wesleyans. The charitable endowments amount to about £17 a year, and are chiefly the bequests of Miles Newton and John Kirk. The chief residence is Burton Hall.

BURTON-OVERY, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, in the co. of Leicester, 7½ miles to the S.E. of Leicester, its post town, and 9 miles N.W. of Market Harborough. The par. contains a mineral spring. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £497, in the patron. of Captain W. Thorp, R.N. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is in the perpendicular and decorated styles, and has recently been repaired. At the east end are two large Gothic windows, and the chancel is separated from the nave by a richly-carved screen. In front of the rectory, which stands on rising ground near the church, is a noble oak tree, planted at the Restoration, by the Rev. Mr. Burdet, from an acorn of the Royal Boscobel Oak. The Independents have a chapel, and there is a Sunday-school. There are charitable bequests for the poor, worth about £24 per annum.

BURTON-PEDWARDINE, a par. in the wap. of Aswardhurn, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles to the S.E. of Sleaford, its post town. The Boston, Sleaford, and Grantham branch of the Great Northern railway passes within a short distance of the village. This place received the addition to its name from the family of the Pedwardines, who once held the manor, which had previously belonged to Alan de Craon, one of the followers of William the Conqueror. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, worth £339, in the patron. of H. Handley, Esq. The church, which has a very ancient tower, is dedicated to St. Andrew, and contains a monumental brass of the year 1631. The parochial charities amount to £4 a year.

BURTON-PIDSEA, a par. in the middle div. of the wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 12 miles to the E. of Hull, its post town. It is situated, as its name indicates, not far from the sea-coast, and on rising ground, commanding a fine view. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, worth £42, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of York. The church is in the perpendicular style, and is dedicated to SS. Peter and Mary.

BURTON-PYNSENT, a tythg. in the par. of Curry-Rivell, but extending into those of Drayton and Fivehead, hund. of Abdick and Bulstone, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles to the S.W. of Langport. On the summit of a wooded hill, commanding a very extensive view, stands the large irregularly-built mansion which was once the seat of the Earl of Chatham, and where the early years of Lady Hester Stanhope were spent. There are several good portraits in the apartments. On an elevated spot near the house is a column, 140 feet high, erected to the memory of Sir William Pynsent.

BURTON-SALMON, a tnshp. in the par. of Monk Frystone, wap. of Barkstone Ash, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N.E. of Pontefract. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway.

BURTON-UPON-STATHER, a par. in the northern div. of the wap. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 12 miles to the N.W. of Glanford Brigg, its post town. It is situated on the eastern bank of the river Trent, on a staith or creek near its mouth, and contains the hmlts. of Normanby and Thealby, and part of the hmlt. of Coleby. This place was formerly a market town, and of larger extent than it is at present. There are several flour-mills on the river, and the corn trade forms the principal business of the village. The living is a vic. with the rect. of Flixborough consolidated, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. Fairs are held here on the first Monday in May, and the first Monday after Martinmas.

BURTON-UPON-TRENT, a par. and market town, chiefly in the northern div. of the hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, but partly also in the hund. of Repton and Gresley, in the co. of Derby, 24 miles to the E. of Stafford, and 123 miles from London by the London and North-Western and Midland (west branch) railways. It is a station on the Midland railway, which is here joined by the North Staffordshire line. The parish is situated on the banks of the river Trent, in a pleasant and fertile country, sheltered on the N. and E. by gently sloping hills, from the summits of which there are extensive prospects over the rich valleys of the Trent and Dove, with the noble forest of Needwood and the ruins of Tutbury Castle in the distance. It extends over an area of 7,730 acres, comprising, besides the market town of Burton-upon-Trent, the tnshps. of Branstone, Burton Extra, Horninglow, Stretton, Stapenhill, and Winshill, the two last named being in Derbyshire.—Burton is a place of very great antiquity. Its Saxon name was Byrtune—and it was the site of one of the most important and wealthiest abbeys in the country. The abbey was founded in 1004, by Wulfric, one of the earls of Mercia, for monks of the Benedictine order. It was a mitred abbey, and some of the abbots sat in parliament. Various and valuable privileges were conferred on it by several kings, and its revenue amounted at the Dissolution to about £357. The church was then made collegiate, and the lands and endowments of the abbey were given to Sir William Paget, an ancestor of the Marquis of Anglesea, to whom the manor now belongs. The lord of the manor exercises the privileges granted to the abbots. The Trent, which here divides into two channels, is crossed by a fine old bridge nearly a third of a mile in length, built of stone, with thirty-six arches. Its foundation is believed to have been coeval with that of the abbey. It was repaired in the reign of Henry II., and a chapel was erected at the west end by Edward II., in commemoration, it is said, of his victory over the Earl of Lancaster, who attempted to hold the passage of the river against the king. During the civil war in the reign of Charles I., Burton was several times taken and retaken by the royalists and parliamentarians; and the old church and the manor-house were much damaged.—The town has two principal streets, one of which runs parallel with the river, and is crossed at right angles by the other. The streets are paved and lighted with gas, the houses mostly well built, and the town abundantly supplied with water. There is a handsome townhall with assembly rooms, erected by the Marquis of Anglesea. In the 16th century this place was noted for its alabaster works. It is now chiefly celebrated for its ale, which is named after the town, and is brewed in enormous quantities in several extensive breweries, especially those of Messrs. Bass and Co. and Messrs. Allsopp. It was not till about 1700 that the first brewery was established here, and it is only within the last fifteen years that the town has assumed its present aspect of one vast brewery. Besides several minor establishments, Messrs. Allsopp have just erected a colossal brewery adjoining the railway station, which is constructed to convert no less than 130,000 quarters of malt annually into ale; and Messrs. Bass and Co. have facilities for brewing 4,000 barrels a day, for which they pay to the excise near £150,000 a year in malt and hop duty. The latter firm has also extensive malting establishments and a steam cooperage recently constructed. There are also cotton-mills and iron-works. The conveyance of goods is facilitated by the Grand Trunk canal, which meets the Trent near the town.—The government of the town is administered, under a recent Act of Parliament, by commissioners elected by the different wards. Henry VIII. conferred on the townsmen the privilege of exemption from serving in the office of sheriff or on juries. Burton is the seat of a Poor-law Union, the head of a County Court district, and a polling-place for the north division of the county of Stafford. The Union poor-house is in the township of Horninglow.—The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £192, in the patron. of the Marquis of Anglesea, who is lay impropriator. The church, a modern edifice in the Italian style, with a tower, is dedicated to SS. Mary and Modwen, and was erected in 1720, on the site of the ancient church, which was taken down on account of the injury it had sustained in the Civil War. St. Modwen, the patron saint of the abbey, was an abbess expelled from one of the Irish monasteries in the 9th century. She came to England, and is said to have performed a skilful or miraculous cure on Alfred the Great, and thereby earned the privilege of an asylum from Ethelwolf, his father. Two new district churches have been erected in the town: one in 1823, dedicated to the Holy Trinity; the other in 1843, called Christ Church. The former is situated in Horninglow-street, and is considered a good example of the florid Gothic style: the latter is in the form of a cross, and in the early English style. The livings are both perpet. curs.,* the former in the patron. of the Marquis of Anglesea; the latter, val. £150, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Burton. There are chapels belonging to the Baptists, Independents, Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists. There is a free grammar school, founded by William Beane, Abbot of Burton, in 1520, the revenue of which, from endowment, is about £460 per annum, and was readjusted by order of Chancery in 1859. Another free school, for 30 boys, was established and endowed in 1728 by Richard Allsopp, and has an income from the original and subsequent endowments of about £30 a year. There are also National and British schools; almshouses for six poor women, founded by Ellen Parker in 1634, with a revenue of £55 per annum; and others for five poor women, founded by Elizabeth Pawlett in 1591, with a revenue of about £90. There are several other charities. The annual value of the charitable endowments of the parish is above £1,100. The town possesses a subscription library and reading-room, a dispensary, and a savings-bank.—Of the abbey nothing remains but some arches of the cloisters near the church, part of the gateway, and the manor-house, or abbot's apartments, which is, however, much altered. Besides these ruins and the venerable bridge, Burton has several other objects of interest for their antiquity. The principal are the old house of the prebendary, the ancient seat of the Every family, and, near the town, the water-mill erected before the Norman Conquest, and mentioned in Domesday Book. Isaac Hawkins Browne, a poetical writer, who obtained some note in the 18th century, was born at Burton in 1706.—Thursday is the market day. Fairs, chiefly for the sale of cattle and cheese, are held on the 5th February, the 5th April, Holy Thursday, the 16th July, and the 29th October. The last is a noted horse fair, and continues about a week.

BURTON-UPON-URE, a tnshp. in the par. of Masham, wap. of East Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile to the N. of Masham. A castle anciently existed here, which was the seat of the Earls of Albemarle, who held the lordship of Holderness. Its site is now called Aldborough.

BURTON, WEST, a par. in the North Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 3 miles to the S.W. of Gainsborough, its post town. It lies on the border of Lincolnshire, on the W. side of the river Trent, not far from the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £65, in the patron. of John Barrow, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Helen. The parochial charities are of small amount.

BURTON, WEST, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Bury, rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex, 4 miles to the N. of Arundel. It is near the river Arun.

BURTONWOOD, a chplry. in the par. of Warrington, hund. of West Derby, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles to the N.W. of Warrington, its post town. The Liverpool and Manchester railway passes near it. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, worth £96, in the gift of the Rector of Warrington. There is an endowed school with an income of £12 a year.

BURWARDSLEY, a chplry. in the par. of Bunbury, hund. of Broxton, in the co. palatine of Chester, 5 miles to the S.W. of Tarporley. Tattenhall is its post town. The Crewe and Chester branch of the London and North-Western railway runs a little northward of this place. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £50, in the patron. of trustees. The church, erected about 1735, is dedicated to St. John. There are charitable endowments producing about £10 per annum.

BURWARTON, a par. in the hund. of Stottesden, in the co. of Salop, 10 miles to the N.E. of Ludlow Bridgnorth is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £128, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Churton, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St Lawrence. The principal residence is Burwarton Hall, the seat of Viscount Boyne.

BURWASCOT. See Burscot, Berkshire.

BURWASH, a par. in the hund. of Hawkesborough, extending also into the hunds. of Henhurst and Shoyswell, rape of Hastings, in the co. of Sussex, 7 miles to the N.W. of Battle. Hurst Green is the post town. It is situated in a hilly district on the river Rother, near the Hastings branch of the South-Eastern railway. The par. contains some 200 acres of hop-grounds. A chalybeate spring was discovered a few years back, and an attempt was made to render Burwash a fashionable watering-place, but without success. Petty sessions, though still called Burwash Petty Sessions, were transferred to Hurst Green some twenty years ago. The living is a rect. and vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, of the annual val. of £699, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Gould, incumbent. The church, which is partly in the early English style, is dedicated to St. Bartholomew, and was thoroughly restored in 1856. The Calvinists, Independents, and Wesleyans have chapels here. The charitable endowments amount to £40 per annum, the greater part of which is the income of the National schools, which are attended by 250 boys and girls. The poet Hurdis resided in the village, and was frequently visited by Cowper, who composed here some of his minor poems. The Earl of Ashburnham is lord of the manor, and the Earl of Chichester has manorial rights.

BURWELL, a par. in the Wold div. of the hund. of Louth-Eske, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles to the S. of Louth, its post town. It is situated on the Wolds, near the Boston and Grimsby section of the Great Northern railway. An alien priory of the Benedictine order was early founded at this place by John de Hay, subordinate to the abbey of St. Mary, near Bourdeaux.. It was given at the Reformation to Charles Duke of Suffolk. Slight remains of the buildings still exist. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. with the perpet. cur. of Walmsgate, £51, in the patron. of H. Lister, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. Burwell Park, well-wooded and stocked with deer, is the seat of H. Lister, Esq. Sarah, the celebrated Duchess of Marlborough, long the favourite and confidant of Queen Anne, was born at Burwell in 1660.

BURWELL, a par. in the hund. of Staploe, in the co. of Cambridge, 5 miles to the N.W. of Newmarket, its post town. It is situated in a fenny country, crossed by a navigable cut from the river Cam, and contains part of the hmlt. of Reach, which was once a market town. The soil is very fertile. The village consists of one long irregular street, and the houses are built of stone quarried in the neighbourhood. In the parish are the vestiges of a very ancient moated fortress, said to have been founded before the Norman Conquest. Geoffrey de Mandeville besieged it in the reign of Stephen, and fell before the walls. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £335, in the patron. of the University of Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It was erected about 1460, and is a very beautiful example of the decorated English style. It was restored in 1861, and its repair is provided for by an endowment. The tower is crowned with pinnacles; the church has an elaborately carved oaken roof, and contains two monumental brasses of the early part of the 16th century, and several family tombs. Another church formerly stood in this parish, which was dedicated to St. Andrew; it has long been demolished, but a new church, to be called St. Andrew's Mission Church, is now being erected, as well as a teacher's residence. Here are chapels belonging to the Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyans. In the year 1860 a new endowed boys' school was erected to the west of the church, by the proceeds of a charity, and on the east of the church is a girls' school and residence, built in 1859 by voluntary contributions. The parochial charities consist of the church and town estate, the produce of which is about £160 per annum, and an allotment of fen for the poor, comprising nearly 200 acres, but this last has been swallowed up in legal expenses. In 1727, by an accidental fire which broke out in a barn here during an exhibition, 78 persons lost their lives. A horse fair is held at Reach on Rogation Monday. The crown is lord of the manor, and owns the greater part of the property.

BURWICK, a vil. in the island of South Ronaldshay, Orkney Islands, Scotland. It is about 7 miles to the N. of Huna, on the coast of Caithness, with which there is communication by ferry.

BURY, a par. in the hund. of Hurstingstone, in the co. of Huntingdon, 1 mile to the S. of Ramsey. It is situated on a branch of the river Nen, over which is an ancient stone bridge of two arches, said to have been erected by one of the abbots of Ramsey, to which monastery the manor then belonged. A barrow in the neighbourhood has probably given name to the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £167, in the patron. of Lady O. B. Sparrow. The church, which stands on a hill near the village, is dedicated to the Holy Cross. It is a large structure with an eastern transept, partly in the Norman and partly in the early English style of architecture, and contains a carved wooden screen.

BURY, a hmlt. in the par. of Brompton Regis, hund. of Williton and Freemanners, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles to the E. of Dulverton. There is a Roman entrenched camp near this village, which is called Bury Castle.

BURY, a par., market town, and parliamentary borough, partly in the hund. of Salford, and partly in the higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 9 miles to the N. of Manchester, and 198 miles from London, by the London and North-Western (viâ Trent Valley), and the Lancashire and Yorkshire railways, on the latter of which it is a station. It is situated in a fertile but partly hilly district, on the banks of the rivers Irwell and Roche, which meet a little below the town. The par. extends over an area of 24,320 acres, and comprises the tnshps. of Bury Coupe with Lench, Newhall-Hey, Hall-Carr, Elton, Heap, Henheads, Heywood, Musbury, Higher Tottington, Lower Tottington, and Walmersley-cum-Shuttleworth. —Bury is a very ancient place, and was anciently the site of one of the twelve baronial castles of Lancashire, the last remains of which were destroyed during the civil war of the 17th century. It stood by the Irwell, the course of which has since changed. The site of the fortress is still called Castle Croft.—Bury is an important and flourishing manufacturing town. Its original staple was the woollen manufacture, which was first established here in the reign of Edward III., and had attained such importance in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, that an aulnager (or measurer) was stationed here to stamp the cloth produced. This manufacture is still carried on in several large establishments, employing a great number of hands. But the present staple of the town is the cotton manufacture in all its branches. To the ingenuity of the Kays, of this place, several valuable inventions and improvements in the manufacture are owing, especially the picking-peg, or flying shuttle, the drop box, and the card engine. The establishment of the great print-works of Sir Robert Peel, father of the late statesman, gave a great impulse to the trade of the town and neighbourhood. Besides numerous large cotton-mills, there are also extensive print-works, bleach-grounds, several iron foundries, fulling-mills, hat and other factories. The district abounds in coal; and good stone for building purposes is quarried in the hills.—The town has increased in extent, and been considerably improved during the present century. A large proportion of the houses are modern and well built; the streets are mostly paved and lighted with gas, and the drainage has been improved. There is a good water supply. A townhall has been erected by the Earl of Derby, which contains assembly rooms, a police-office, and court-rooms. It is a handsome structure of stone, in the Italian style. Close to it is the athenæum, a handsome new building, comprising a large hall, a museum, reading and other rooms.—The local government, formerly entrusted to three constables, appointed yearly by the lord of the manor, is now vested in the county magistrates and a body of commissioners, appointed under a Local Improvement Act. Bury was constituted a parliamentary borough by the Reform Act, and returns one member to parliament. The borough limits include the tnshp. of Bury, and part of the tnshp. of Elton, extending over an area of 3,360 acres. It comprises 7,241 houses, inhabited by a population of 37,564, against 31,262 in 1851, showing an increase of 6,302 in the decennial period. Petty sessions are held regularly twice a week in the town. Bury is the seat of a Poor-law Union, the head of a County Court district, and one of the polling places for the south division of the county. The town contains a dispensary, founded in 1829, and a savings-bank, established in 1822. The Union poorhouse is in the neighbouring tnshp. of Birtle.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, of the annual val. of £1,937, in the patron. of the Earl of Derby. The church, which was rebuilt with the exception of the tower in 1776, is dedicated to St. Mary. A new tower and spire were erected about 1845. A chapel of ease, dedicated to St. John, was built in 1770,—the living is a perpet. cur., worth £170, in the patron. of the Rector of Bury. A new church, dedicated to St. Paul, was erected about 1848, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* in the patron. of trustees. There are eleven other district churches in the parish, situated respectively at Edenfield, Elton, Holcombe, Heywood, Heap St. James, Musbury, Ramsbottom, Shuttleworth, Tottington, Walmersley, and Waterfoot. The livings of all are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £345 to £110. There is in the town a Roman Catholic chapel, an elegant Gothic structure, erected about 1840. There are three chapels belonging to the Independents, and one each to the Unitarians, Wesleyans, Association, New Connexion, and Primitive Methodists. A free grammar school was founded and endowed by Roger Kay in 1726, the revenue of which is now about £500 per annum. Two exhibitions at the universities are attached to it. The school is under the management of trustees. The National school was established in 1815, and is partly supported by the endowment of a previously existing free school for 80 boys and 30 girls, founded in 1748 by the Hon. and Rev. John Stanley; most of the children are clothed out of the funds of the charity. There are in the town various other schools.—There is a branch canal, formed about 1790, connecting Bury with the Manchester and Bolton canal.—North of the town is Chamber Hall, the property of the Peels, and the residence of the first Sir Robert Peel. The late statesman was born at this mansion, or in a cottage close by it, in 1788.—Thursday was the day fixed by the original grant for holding the market, which is now held on Saturday. Annual fairs are held on the 8th March, the 3rd May, and the 18th September.

BURY, a par. in the hund. of the same name, rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex, 4 miles to the N. of Arundel. Petworth is its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Arun, and includes the tythg. of West Burton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £110, in the patron. of trustees. There are charitable endowments for the poor amounting to £40 per annum.

BURYANSE, or BURIAN, ST., a par. in the hund. of Penwith, in the co. of Cornwall, 5 miles to the S.W. of Penzance, which is the terminus of the West Cornwall railway. It is situated in a hilly and wild district, within 4 miles of the Land's End, and contains the vil. of Bolleit. The village of St. Burian is of great antiquity, and was the site of a collegiate church, founded and endowed soon after the commencement of the 10th century by King Athelstan, in honour of St. Burian. It had the privilege of sanctuary, and was afterwards made a deanery. No remains of the collegiate buildings exist. Granite is the prevailing rock in the district. Numerous remains of primitive stone circles exist in the neighbourhood, among which are the Merry Maidens, two stones called the Pipers, and the Boscawen-un, being a circle of 19 stones surrounding a central one. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, of the annual val. with St. Levan and Sennen, which together constitute the Deanery of St. Burian, of £1,004, in the patron. of the Prince of Wales, as Duke of Cornwall. The church is built of granite, and stands on a hill about 470 feet above the level of the sea, forming a conspicuous sea-mark. There is a national school.

BURY BLUNSDON, a tythg. in the par. of Highworth, in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles to the W. of Highworth.

BURY HUNDRED, one of the 6 hunds. or subdivisions of the rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex, situated in the western parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. and W. by the hund. of Rotherbridge; on the E. by the hund. of West Easwrith, and on the S. by the hund. of Avisford. It contains the pars. of Bignor, Bury, Coates, Cold Waltham, Fittleworth, Hardham, Houghton, and Wisborough Green, with part of the par. of Alford. The hund., part of which lies detached in West Easwrith hund., comprises an area of about 18,000 acres.

BURY LANE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Culcheth, or Newchurch, and par. of Winwick, hund. of West Derby, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles to the S. of Leigh. It gives name to a station on the Liverpool and Manchester railway. The living is a perpet cur. annexed to the rect. of Newchurch Kenyon, in the dioc. of Chester.

BURY ST. EDMUND'S, a market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, and county town of Suffolk, 14 miles to the E. of Newmarket, 26 miles to the N.E. of Ipswich, 43 miles S.W. of Norwich, and 71 miles by road from London, or 94½ miles by railway viâ Ipswich, and 86½ viâ Cambridge. It is a station on the Great Eastern and Eastern Union railway.—Bury, the principal town in West Suffolk, is situated in an open and highly-cultivated country, on the banks of the river Larke, a branch of the Ouse, and is a place of very high antiquity. It is not ascertained by whom or at what time it was founded, but from the number of Roman antiquities found, and from the quantity of Roman bricks and tiles employed in the building of the abbey church, it is considered to have been an important place under the dominion of the Romans, probably the station Villa Faustini. It was subsequently named by the Saxons Beodrics-worthe, i.e. "house of Beodric," to whom the manor belonged in the early part of the 9th century. It was a royal burgh at that period, and was bequeathed by Beodric to Edmund, who succeeded Offa as King of East Anglia. Here Edmund was crowned in 856. During an irruption of the Danes, in 870, he was captured and barbarously slain. The device of the corporate seal commemorates a miraculous circumstance attending his death. The remains of the martyr and king, after being interred at Hoxne, where miracles were reported to have been wrought by them, were removed and deposited at this town in 903, which thenceforth bore the name of St. Edmund's Bury. A church was erected to his memory, which was made collegiate by King Athelstan about the year 925, who also incorporated the six secular priests, who had founded a monastery, at the same time. The town and monastery having suffered greatly from the Danes under Swegn, were rebuilt by Canute, about 1020. The secular priests were expelled, and monks of the Benedictine order were then established in their place. Bishop Aylwin took part in the foundation of the new abbey, which was richly endowed, and subsequently attained a degree of magnificence and privilege unrivalled by any monastery in Great Britain, with the exception of the abbey of Glastonbury. The abbot was mitred and sat in parliament. He had jurisdiction over all causes within the liberty of Bury, which comprised seven hundreds and part of an eighth. He had the power of inflicting capital punishment, and the privilege of coining. The number of monks, chaplains, and servants in the abbey exceeded 200, and the revenue of the establishment, according to the estimate made at the Dissolution, was £2,337, which was probably below the real value. Thirty-three abbots in succession ruled the monastery during a period of 519 years from the time of its restoration by Canute, till the 4th of November, 1539, when this magnificent establishment was broken up, and the site and endowments surrendered to Henry VIII. The abbey was visited by Henry I. on his return from France, and in 1214 King John held a conference with the barons here. Parliaments were held at Bury by Henry III. in 1272, by Edward I. in 1296, and by Henry VI. in 1446. The shrine of St. Edmund was visited by Henry VII. and his Queen Elizabeth. In 1327 a violent attack was made on the abbey by the people of the town and the surrounding villages, the aldermen and burgesses taking the lead, and many o the parochial clergy sanctioning and abetting it. After the destruction of a large part of the buildings and the pillage of their rich and valuable contents, the riot was quelled by the soldiery, many of the rioters were captured and imprisoned, and 19 were sentenced to death. Bury was the rendezvous of the forces of the Duke of Northumberland, when the Lady Jane Grey was proclaimed queen. The site and estates of the abbey were chiefly given by Henry VIII. to the Eyre family, but part of them were granted to Sir Nicholas Bacon. They have passed through many hands in succession, and now belong to the Marquis of Bristol.—The town of Bury St. Edmund's is pleasantly situated on the W. bank of the river Larke. Destructive fires having occurred in 1608 and 1644, the houses are mostly of modern date, well and uniformly built. The streets are spacious and regular, well paved and lighted with gas, and the water supply is abundant. The surrounding district is dry and healthy, and contains much agreeable scenery.—The spinning of woollen yarn was formerly carried on here, and the old Wool Hall still remains, though no longer used as such. The principal business of the place is the corn trade and pursuits connected with agriculture, Bury being a grand market for agricultural produce of all kinds.—The public buildings are :—the shirehall, a modern edifice in which the assizes are held, built on the site of the old church of St. Margaret; the guildhall, a handsome building with an ancient porch, in which the borough courts are held, and county business transacted: it contains some curious old portraits, including one of Admiral Hervey, by Sir Joshua Reynolds, and the left wing is appropriated to the West Suffolk library; the county gaol, an extensive building on Southgate Green, with accommodation for 140 prisoners, built about 1805 at a cost of £30,000, and surrounded by a lofty wall; the bridewell, an ancient edifice in the Norman style, with round windows, formerly occupied as a synagogue, but now used as the police-station; the athenæum, a spacious edifice, erected about 1853, containing a noble hall, library of 5,000 volumes, reading-room, museum, &c.,—the ground-floor, comprising the news-room and billiard-room, is occupied by the Gentlemen's Club; the Suffolk Hospital, a plain but commodious structure, recently enlarged by adding to the wings; the theatre, erected in 1819; a concert-room, which was originally the theatre; handsome subcription-rooms, mechanics' institute, library, &c. The Botanic Garden, established in 1820, is a great acquisition to the town, and is entered by that magnificent ruin, the Abbey Gate, which has been judiciously repaired.—Bury is a borough by prescription, but a charter of incorporation was granted by James I., about 1606, the provisions of which were afterwards extended. The elective franchise was exercised on one occasion by the burgesses in the reign of Edward I., but not subsequently until the 4th of James I., since which time the borough has regularly sent two representatives to parliament. Under the Municipal Corporations Act it is divided into three wards, and is governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors. The limits of the municipal and parliamentary borough are co-extensive, and comprise, according to the census of 1861, 2,847 houses, inhabited by a population of 13,316 against 13,900 in 1851, thus showing a falling off in the decennial period of 584. It has a revenue of about £2,670. Quarter sessions for the borough and the spring assizes are held at Bury, which is also the head of a County Court district, a polling place, the election town for the western division of Suffolk, and the headquarters of the West Suffolk Militia.—The borough comprises the two pars. of St. Mary and St. James. The living of St. Mary's is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, in the patron. of trustees. The church, which was erected about 1430, is a large and beautiful structure of freestone, in the perpendicular style, with a low tower of more ancient date. It has a fine porch on the north side, and an exquisitely carved roof of genuine Suffolk oak, but which is erroneously said to have been brought from Normandy. In the chancel is a monument to Mary, daughter of Henry VII., queen to Louis XII. of France, and afterwards married to Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk. She died in 1533, and was interred in the Abbey church. Here are also a monument to John Reeves, last Abbot of Bury, who died in 1540, and two fine altar-tombs, one to Sir William Carew, who died in 1501, and the other to Sir Robert Drury, privy councillor to Henry VIII. This fine church has been tastefully restored, at the cost of £7,000, under the direction of the late architect Cottingham. The living of St. James's is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, in the patron. of H. Wilson, Esq. The church is a spacious and handsome building of freestone, also in the perpendicular style, erected partly by Abbot Sampson, and completed in the reign and partly at the expense of King Edward VI. It was thoroughly repaired in 1820, when a new gallery was added. It contains a monument to Chief Baron Reynolds, who died in 1736, and has 2,000 sittings, of which 250 are free. The two churches stand in one very spacious and pleasant churchyard, adorned with lime-tree avenues, from which there is a good view of the town. There are several buildings besides the churches in this churchyard, among which are the venerable church gate, Clopton's Hospital, the old residence of Lydgate, the poet, &c. Besides the parish churches there are two district churches. That of St. John is an elegant structure, built by subscription in 1841; it contains 850 sittings, of which half are free. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £113, in the patron. of the bishop. The other, only just finished, is dedicated to St. Peter. Towards its construction the munificent sum of £3,000 was sent by an unknown benefactor. There are two chapels belonging to the Independents, two to the Baptists, and one each to the Wesleyans, Unitarians, Roman Catholics, and the Society of Friends. The Roman Catholic chapel is a building of considerable pretensions, dedicated to St. Edmund, and erected in 1837 from designs by C. Day.—Bury has a free grammar school, founded by Edward VI., which has attained a high standing, and at which several men of eminence have received their education; as Archbishop Sancroft, Lord Keeper North, Richard Cumberland (the dramatist), Sir Samuel Romilly, and Dr. Blomfield, late Bishop of London. Several exhibitions at the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge are connected with the school, and its revenue from endowment is above £1,500 per annum. The charitable endowments of the town are valuable, amounting to nearly £4,000 per annum. Of these the principal is the Guildhall Feoffment, a fund belonging to the corporation, and applicable to various purposes. Several free schools, on a large scale, for boys and girls have been founded and are partly supported out of this fund, the annual produce of which exceeds £2,000. There are also National, industrial, and infant schools. Clopton's Asylum, for six widowers and six widows, has a revenue from endowment of about £700 per annum. The Suffolk General Hospital was founded in 1825. The building was originally built for an ordnance depôt. Bury contains nearly a hundred almshouses, established and endowed by various persons, which are managed by trustees.—Of the magnificent abbey, which was twelve years in building, and was of great extent, the remains are few. The church was 505 feet in length, 212 feet broad through the transepts, and had a west front of 240 feet. It had twelve chapels attached to it. The abbey walls enclosed, besides this church and the monastery, three other churches, the palace of the abbot, the chapter-house, cloisters, offices, &c. The walls were embattled, and the entrance was by four grand gates. The western or abbey gate is still standing, and in good preservation. It is about 60 feet high, and is an interesting specimen of the decorated Gothic style. It was built in 1327, after the great riot already mentioned. Close to St. James's church is the church gate, a massive quadrangular structure 80 feet in height, and a very fine example of Saxon architecture. It was restored and strengthened by Cottingham. Numerous churches, hospitals, and charitable institutions existed in the town, of only a few of which any portions remain. Among these are the hospitals of St Saviour, St. Thomas, St. Edmund, St. Nicholas, St. Stephen, St. John, and the chapel of St Petronilla. In St. Saviour's Hospital the parliament of Henry VI. was held, and the "good" Duke of Gloucester was believed to have been murdered. Several arches of the abbey bridge, called Eastgate Bridge, may still be seen. Four colossal antique heads, cut out of blocks of freestone, were discovered amongst some old foundations, and are supposed to represent heathen divinities. In the reign of Queen Mary twelve martyrs suffered death at the stake in this town for their religious faith. The plague broke out here in 1636. A few years afterwards forty persons were hung at Bury on the charge of witchcraft, and in 1664 Sir Matthew Hale here sentenced two others to death on the same charge. —Bury is the birthplace of many distinguished men, among whom may be named Lord Chancellor Aungerville, Bishop Gardiner, Sir Nicholas Bacon, Battely, the antiquarian, Capel Lofft, the friend of the young poets Kirk White and Robert Bloomfield, Repton, the landscape gardener, Bishop Tomline, and Dr. Bloomfield, the late Bishop of London. Lydgate, the poet, was connected with the abbey.—Two newspapers, called the Bury and Norwich Post and Bury Free Press, are published in the town. The Keppels, Earls of Albemarle, take the title of viscount from this place.—Wednesday and Saturday are market days, the former for corn, the latter for provisions. A pleasure fair is held on Easter Tuesday, and a great fair, lasting three weeks, opens on the 10th October; fairs for cattle, horses, &c., are held on the 2nd October and the 1st December.

BURY-STREET, a ward and hmlt. in the par., union, and hund. of Edmonton, in the co. of Middlesex, 1 mile distant from the vils. of Winchmore Hill, Southgate, and Enfield Chase respectively, and 8 miles N. of London. It is situated near the New River.

BURYTHORPE, a par. in the wap. of Buckrose, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S. of Malton, its post town. It lies near the York and Scarborough branch of the North-Eastern railway, and includes the hmlt. of Thornthorpe. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £270, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village.

BUSBY, a vil. partly in the par. of East Kilbride, Middle ward, in the co. of Lanark, and partly in the par. of Mearns, in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 4 miles to the N. of Eaglesham. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in manufactures. Here is an United Presbyterian church.

BUSBY, GREAT and LITTLE, tnshps. in the par. of Stokesley, in the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the S. of Stokesley, which is a station on the North Yorkshire and Cleveland branch of the North-Eastern railway.

BUSCOT, or BURWASCOT, a par. in the hund. of Shrivenham, in the co. of Berks, 2 miles to the S.E. of Lechlade, in Gloucestershire, its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Thames, which is crossed at Buscot Wick by St. John's Bridge. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £457, in the patron. of Pryse Pryse, Esq. The church, a small ancient building, is dedicated to St. Mary, and has several monuments of the Lovedens, whose seat is Buscot Park. The mansion was built in 1783 by Edward Loveden, Esq., one of the chief promoters of the Thames and Severn canal, which terminates at Lechlade. The parochial charities produce about £35 a year. The village is a meet for the Old Berks hounds.

BUSHBURY, a par. partly in the eastern div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, and partly in the northern div. of the hund. of Seisdon, in the co. of Stafford, 3 miles to the N. of Wolverhampton, its post town. It is a station on the London and North-Western railway. The par. contains the tnshp. of Essington and the hmlt. of Moseley, and is crossed by the Stafford and Worcester canal. Coal is abundant in Essington, and many of the inhabitants are employed in working the mines. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £159, in the patron. of — Phillips, Esq., and others. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is ancient, and formerly belonged to the priory of St. Thomas, near Stafford. It contains a monument to Hugh Bushbury, who erected the chancel. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £35 per annum. At Moseley Hall Charles II. took shelter for several days, after his defeat at the battle of Worcester. It was at that time the seat of Thomas Whitgreave, whose tomb is in Bushbury church.

BUSHBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Thurnby, hund. of Gartree, in the co. of Leicester, 4 miles to the E. of Leicester.

BUSH-END, a hmlt. in the par. of Takeley, hund. of Uttlesford, in the co. of Essex, 1 mile S. of the vil. of Takeley, and 4 W. of Dunmow.

BUSHEY, a par. in the hund. of Dacorum, in the co. of Hertford, 1 mile to the S.E. of Watford, its post town, and 16 miles to the N.W. of London by rail, or 13¼ by road. It is a station on the London and North-Western railway, and is situated in a detached part of the hund., surrounded by the hund. of Cashio. This place is mentioned in the Norman survey by the name of Bissei, and the manor was granted after the Conquest to Geoffrey de Magnaville. Bushey was once a market town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, of the annual val. of £765, in the patron. of the Rector and Fellows of Exeter College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. James. A new church, dedicated to St. Peter, has been erected at Bushey Heath. It is a chapel of ease to the parish church, and the curacy, val. £100, is in the gift of the Rector of Bushey. The Independents have a chapel; and there are National and British schools. There is a bequest of £5 a year, left by Mrs. Elizabeth Fuller, of Watford, to be expended in bread, which is distributed to the poor on the tomb of the giver every Sunday morning. There are several pleasant seats of the gentry in the neighbourhood, among which are Bushey Manor House, Bushey Grove, Merry Hill, and Bushey Grange. From Bushey Heath, which rises to a considerable height, there is a magnificent prospect over the valley of the Thames, embracing St. Alban's, Westminster Abbey, Hampton Court, and Windsor, with the Thames winding through the most beautiful parts of Middlesex and Surrey.

BUSH-HILL, a small hmlt. in the par., union, and hund. of Edmonton, in the co. of Middlesex, about half a mile from the vils. of Winchmore Hill, Southgate, and Lower Edmonton, and 8 miles N. of London.

BUSHLEY, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Pershore, in the co. of Worcester, 5 miles to the S. of Upton, and 2 miles to the N. of Tewkesbury, in Gloucestershire, its post town. It lies on the W. bank of the river Severn, not far from the Bristol and Birmingham railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £58, in the patron. of J. E. Dowdeswell, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There is a small free school, and endowments for the poor producing about £12 a year. Pull Court, pleasantly seated by the Severn, is the seat of the Dowdeswells. It was formerly a possession of the abbey of Tewkesbury.

BUSHMILLS, a small market town in the pars. of Billy and Dunluce, bar. of Cary, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 8 miles to the N.E. of Coleraine, which is a station on the Belfast and Northern Counties and Londonderry and Coleraine railway, and 150 miles to the N. of Dublin. It is pleasantly seated on the sea-coast, near the Giant's Causeway, at the mouth of the Bush rivulet, which has given name to the village. It is much frequented by visitors to the Giant's Causeway, and has greatly improved of late years. There are in the village two extensive distilleries, a manufactory of farming implements, flour and flax-mills, and a factory for spinning situate about 4 miles from the town. A great part of the younger female population are profitably employed in embroidery and the worked muslin trade. The parish church of Dunluce stands in this village, where are also chapels for Presbyterians and Wesleyans.

A police force is stationed here, and petty sessions are held once a fortnight. There is a handsome courthouse, erected by the late Sir F. W. Macnaghten, Bart., and two hotels for the accommodation of the numerous tourists who come to enjoy the bold and beautiful scenery of the coast, including the Giant's Causeway, with Dunluce and Dunseverick castles. A free school is established under the governors of Smith's Foundation, and there is a handsome schoolhouse for boys and girls, built by the late Sir F. W. Macnaghten, whose seat was Bushmills House, now the residence of Mrs. Anderson. His son, Sir E. W. Macnaghten, Bart., the present proprietor of the place, resides at the new mansion, called Dundarane. Tuesday is the market day, and fairs are held on the 28th March and June, the 24th August, 21st October, and the 12th December.

BUSHWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Stratford, hund. of Barlichway, in the co. of Warwick, not far from Stratford-on-Avon.

BUSHYHILL, a vil. in the par. of Cambuslang, Middle ward, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 6 miles to the S.E. of Glasgow. It is seated in a hilly district, near the river Clyde, and the Clydesdale branch of the Caledonian railway, on which Cambuslang is a station.

BUSLINGTHORPE, a par. in the wap. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles to the S.W. of Market Raisen, its post town. The Market Raisen and Lincoln branch of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway passes through it. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £244, in the patron. of the Governors of the Charterhouse, London. The church is very ancient, and contains a monumental brass of Sir Richard Buslingthorpe, who died in 1310.

BUSLINGTHORPE, a vil. in the par. and borough of Leeds, wap. of Skyrack, in the West Riding of the co. of York, not far from Leeds. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of five trustees.

BUSSAGE, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Bisley, in the co. of Gloucester, 4 miles to the E. of Stroud, which is a station on the Great Western railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £30, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

BUSSEX, a hmlt. in the par. of Weston Zoyland, hund. of Whitley, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the S.E. of Bridgwater. It is near the river Parret, on the Bristol and Exeter railway.

BUSTABECK BOUND, a tnshp. in the par. of Castle-Sowerby, Leath ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 3 miles to the S.E. of Hesket Newmarket.

BUSTON, HIGH and LOW, tnshps. in the par. of Warkworth, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 5 miles to the S.E. of Alnwick. They are situated on the sea-coast, not far from the mouth of the river Coquet. The Newcastle and Berwick railway passes by them.

BUTCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Hartcliffe, in the co. of Somerset, 10 miles to the S. of Bristol. Wrington is its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £248, in the patron. of the Rev. R. P. Hassell. The church is ancient, and is dedicated to St. Michael.

BUTE, an island forming part of Buteshire, Scotland, situated in the Frith of Clyde, between the coasts of Argyleshire and Ayrshire. Although it gives name to the county, it is considerably smaller than the Isle of Arran, being in length from N. to S. 16 miles, and in breadth from 3 to 4 miles. In circuit it is about 40 miles. It is only separated from Argyleshire by a very narrow and winding channel, called the Kyles of Bute, the scenery along which is very picturesque. The breadth of the Frith, separating the island from Ayrshire, is about 6 miles. The Northmen held possession of Bute and the neighbouring islands for centuries before they were finally annexed to the kingdom of Scotland. The island was for a time in the power of the English monarch, Edward II., and subsequently fell into the hands of Bruce. The inhabitants were sometimes named Brandini by ancient authors. Some of the Scottish kings occasionally resided in the island, among whom were Robert III. and James III. It was on this island that the Earl of Argyle landed in 1685, when acting in concert with the Duke of Monmouth against the Stuarts, whose favourite seat, Rothesay Castle, was then burnt by the insurgents. The coast is irregular and rocky, with many small bays, and the whole island is hilly. The most elevated ground is in the northern part of the island, which is very rugged and barren. Kames Hill, the loftiest in the island, rises to the height of about 830 feet above the level of the sea. Some fertile and cultivated tracts occur in the southern parts. There is another lofty hill, named Suidhe Chatain, about 500 feet high. Primary rocks, traversed by veins of trap and quartz, are found in the N., and sandstone, limestone, and trap in the S. The island also contains some superficial deposits of coraline, sand, and shells, proving that the low-lying valleys of the centre of the island have at a recent period been overflowed by the sea. There are several small lakes and streams, the former containing perch, trout, and pike, and the latter salmon. The climate is genial, and Rothesay is much frequented as a watering-place. The Marquis of Bute is proprietor of most of the island, and under his auspices great improvements have been made in agriculture. There is a considerable tract of woodland. The remains of ancient castles, forts, and other works, attributed to the Northmen, are numerous. The existing castles are those of Rothesay and Kames, which belonged to the Bannatynes; Kilmorie, the seat of the Jamiesons; and Spence's Castle. Dungyle, a vitrified fort on a lofty rock in the south of the island, is supposed to be a Danish work. In the same district is a curious round structure, called the Devil's Cauldron; and near it are the ruins of an ancient chapel, dedicated to St. Blaine. Rothesay is a royal burgh, and anciently gave the title of duke to the prince royal of Scotland. The Prince of Wales now takes the title of Duke of Rothesay. The island of Bute comprises an area of about 30,000 acres.

BUTELAND, a tnshp. in the parochial chplry. of Birtley, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 4 miles to the S.E. of Bellingham. It is a joint tnshp. with Broomhope.

BUTESHIRE, a co. in the S.W. part of Scotland, consisting of the islands of Arran and Bute, with the smaller ones of Great Cumbray, Little Cumbray, Inch Marnock, Lamlash, and Pladda. It is situated in the Frith of Clyde, between the cos. of Argyle, on the N. and W., and Ayr on the E., and is estimated to comprise an area of 257 square miles. But a small part of the surface is under cultivation, although much has been done to improve the methods of farming and the condition of the farmers, and to drain the lands, by the principal proprietors, the Marquis of Bute and the Duke of Hamilton. Land is commonly let on lease for 19 years. The climate is damp, but temperate and healthy. The herring fisheries employ between 2,000 and 3,000 persons, and about 550 boats. The cotton manufacture is carried on to some extent at Rothesay, which is the county town. It returns one member to the imperial parliament for the county and the royal burgh of Rothesay, which is the place of election. Before the passing of the Reform Bill in 1832, this county returned one member alternately with the county of Caithness. Buteshire contains six pars., five of which are in the synod of Argyle, and one in the synod of Glasgow and Ayr. There are places of worship belonging to the Establishment, Free Church, United Presbyterian Church, Reformed Presbyterian Church, Scottish Episcopal Church, Congregational Union, and the Roman Catholic Church. Sheriff courts are held weekly at Rothesay. Quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday of March, May, and August, and on the last Tuesday of October. Population in 1851, 16,608; in 1861, 16,188. The principal seats in the county are Mount Stewart, that of the Marquis of Bute, situated on the S. coast of Bute; Kames, of the Hamiltons; Braes, of the M'Kinleys; Millport, and Ascog. [See ARRAN, BUTE, ROTHSAY, CUMBRAY, &c.

BUTLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Whitley, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles to the S.E. of Glastonbury, its post town, which is also a station on the Somerset Central railway. The par. includes the hmlt. of Butleigh-Wootton. Blue lias is abundant in the neighbourhood. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. with the perpet. cur. of Baltonsborough annexed, £380, in the patron. of the Hon. R. N. Grenville. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard, and contains a monument to the Hood family, who hold the manor of Wootton. Butleigh House is the principal residence.

BUTLEIGH-WOOTTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Butleigh, hund. of Whitley, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the N.E. of Somerton. Here is the seat of the Hon. A. Hood, lord of the manor.

BUTLERSBRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Castleterra, bar. of Upper Loughtee, in the co. of Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles to the N.E. of Cavan. It is seated on the banks of the river Annalee. Fairs are held monthly throughout the year.

BUTLERS-MARSTON, a par. in the hund. of Kington, in the co. of Warwick, 1 mile to the S.W. of Kington. It is watered by a small stream, a branch of the river Avon. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £88, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Christ Church College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. The Warwick hounds meet at this village.

BUTLERSTOWN. See KILRONAN, Waterford.

BUTLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. palatine of Chester, 3 miles to the N. of Macclesfield. Prestbury is a station on the Macclesfield branch of the London and North-Western railway. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the silk manufacture. The Wesleyans have a chapel and a large school in the village. Butley Hall is the chief residence. Roman antiquities have been discovered in the neighbourhood. Thomas Newton, author of a history of the Saracens, was born at Butley.

BUTLEY, a par. in the hund. of Loes, in the co. of Suffolk, 6 miles to the E. of Woodbridge, its post town, which is also a station on the East Suffolk railway. A projected branch from Woodbridge to Oxford will pass near Butley. The par. is situated on the W. bank of the Butley river, or creek, a branch of the Alde, and was the site of a priory of the Dominican order, founded about 1171 by the great lawyer and Lord Chief Justice of England, Ranulph de Glanville. This monastery, subsequently rebuilt by William de Auberville, a descendant of the founder, was richly endowed, and had a revenue at the Dissolution of £319. There are some remains of the buildings, which covered about 12 acres of ground. The gatehouse is almost perfect, and a part is occupied as a residence. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with that of Capel St. Andrew annexed, £135, in the patron. of the trustees of P. J. Thellusson, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. John Baptist. There are some charities of trifling value.

BUTSASH, a hmlt. in the par. of Fawley, lib. of Dibden, in the co. of Southampton, 6 miles to the S. of Southampton. It is seated near the Southampton Water.

BUTSFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Lanchester, ward of Chester, in the co. palatine of Durham, 11 miles to the W. of Durham. Remains of Roman aqueducts connected with the station Glannibanta (Lanchester), on Watling Street, may be traced in the neighbourhood. Till within a few years the land in this district was unenclosed and uncultivated.

BUTTER BUMP, a hmlt. in the par. of Willoughby, wap. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles to the S. of Alford. It is near the Boston and Grimsby section of the Great Northern railway, on which Willoughby is a station.

BUTTER CRAMBE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bossall, wap. of Bulmer, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 9 miles to the N. of York. It is situated in a pleasant country, on the banks of the navigable river Derwent, here crossed by a stone bridge, and near the York and Scarborough railway. On the summit of a neighbouring eminence is Aldby Park, the site of the Roman station Derventio, and afterwards of a fortified seat of the Saxon earls of Northumberland. Many Roman relics have been found in the vicinity. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Bossall, in the dioc. of York.

BUTTERDEAN, a vil. in the par. of Oldhamstocks, in the co. of Berwick, Scotland, 10 miles to the S.E. of Dunbar. It is seated among the Lammermuir Hills.

BUTTERGASK, a vil. in the par. of Dumblane, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 2 miles to the N. of Dumblane. It is seated on the river Allan, a branch of the Forth.

BUTTERLAW, a tnshp. in the par. of Newburn, Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 5 miles to the W. of Newcastle-on-Tyne.

BUTTERLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Cliston, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles to the S. of Tiverton. The Tiverton branch of the Bristol and Exeter railway passes near it. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £170, in the patron. of the lord chancellor.

BUTTERLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Pentrich, hund. of Morleston and Litchurch, in the co. of Derby, 2 miles to the S. of Alfreton. This place is the site of very extensive iron-works, which were founded in 1792. The district abounds in coal, iron, and limestone. Conveyance of coal, ore, &c., is provided for by various railways and the Cromford canal, the latter being carried under the works through a tunnel, nearly 1¼ mile in length. In the vicinity is Butterley Hall.

BUTTERLEY, a joint par. with Edvin-Ralph, in the hund. of Wolphy, in the co. of Hereford, 2 miles to the N. of Bromyard.

BUTTERMERE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Brigham, and ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 9 miles to the S.W. of Keswick, and 10 S.E. of Cockermouth. The district is mountainous, and abounds in romantic and magnificent scenery. The hamlet is picturesquely seated in a deep valley, encompassed by lofty mountains, which reflect themselves on the surface of the lakes below. To the S.E. of the village is the lake from which it takes its name, along the margin of which are the peaks called High Crag, High-Style, and Red Pike. The lake is a mile and a quarter long and about half a mile broad, and is connected by a short stream with Crummock Water, N.W. of the village. This lake is 3 miles long, and lies between the lofty hills named Grasmoor and Melbreak. Both lakes contain trout and char. About 2 miles from the village is the fine waterfall called Scale Force, said to be unrivalled in the lake district. It has a perpendicular fall of nearly 200 feet, precipitating itself into a deep chasm between rocks of syenite, adorned with trees rooted in their crevices. There are extensive quarries of blue slate in the neighbourhood. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £56, in the patron. of the Earl of Lonsdale. The church, a singularly small building, with a bell-turret, was erected in 1841, by the Rev. V. Thomas, at a cost of £300, on the site of the old chapel.

BUTTERMERE, a par. in the hund. of Kinwardstone, in the co. of Wilts, 5 miles to the S. of Hungerford, its post town. It lies on the confines of Berkshire and Hampshire. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £229, in the patron. of the Bishop of Winchester. The church is dedicated to St. James.

BUTTERSHAW, a chplry. in the par. of Bradford, wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, not far from Bradford. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £200, in the patron. of Charles Hardy, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. John.

BUTTERTHWAITE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. and par of Ecclesfield, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N. of Sheffield. It is near the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway.

BUTTERTON, a chplry. and vil. in the par. of Mayfield, hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 8 miles to the E. of Leek, its post town, and 11 N.W. of Mayfield. The village is situated on a steep declivity, commanding extensive prospects. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £95, in the gift of the vicar. The church, a small stone structure with a tower, is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. There is a Wesleyan chapel and a small free school, established and endowed in 1754 by William Mellor, the annual income of which is about £17. The other charitable endowments of the parish amount to £20 per annum. Butterton is in the honour of Tutbury, in the duchy of Lancaster, and by a recent Act is incorporated with the tnshp. of Alstonfield, and the pars. of Grindon and Wetton, for the maintenance of its poor.

BUTTERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Trentham, hund. of Pirehill, in the co. of Stafford, 2 miles to the S. of Newcastle-under-Lyme. The North Staffordshire railway, on which Trentham is a station, passes near this place. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, in the gift of Sir W. and Lady Pilkington. Butterton Hall is the seat of the Pilkingtons.

BUTTERWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Sedgefield, ward of Stockton, in the co. palatine of Durham, 8 miles to the N. of Stockton. It is situated near the river Skerne, a branch of the Tees.

BUTTERWICK, a par. in the wap. of Skirbeck, parts of Holland, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles to the E. of Boston, its post town, which is a station on the Great Northern railway. The parish is situated near the seacoast. The living is a vic. united with that of Frieston, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. Here is an endowed National school, founded by A. Pinchbeck in 1665, with a revenue of about £300 per annum. There are also charitable endowments for the poor, amounting to £160 a year.

BUTTERWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Bampton, West ward, in the co. of Westmoreland, 1 mile N.W. of Bampton, and 8 miles to the S. of Penrith. It is situated in a pleasant valley, surrounded by lofty and rugged mountains, near the confluence of the river Lowther with Hawes Water Beck, a stream that flows from the beautiful lake of that name.

BUTTERWICK, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Foxholes, wap. of Dickering, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 10 miles to the N. of Great Driffield, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, worth £47, in the patron. of the Rector of Foxholes.

BUTTERWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Barton-le-Street, wap. of Ryedale, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N.W. of New Malton. It lies near the Thirsk, Malton, and Driffield branch of the North-Eastern railway, on which Barton is a station. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Barton-le-Street, in the dioc. of York.

BUTTERWICK, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Messingham, but partly also in the par. of Bottesford, in the wap. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 8 miles to the W. of Brigg. It is situated on the E. bank of the river Trent.

BUTTERWICK, WEST, a joint tnshp. with Kelfield, in the par. of Owston, wap. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the N.E. of Epworth. It is on the W. bank of the river Trent, opposite East Butterwick. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £117, in the patron. of the Vicar of Owston. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village.

BUTTERWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Rochdale, hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles to the E. of Rochdale. It is on the border of Yorkshire. The inhabitants are employed in the great cotton and woollen manufactories of the neighbourhood. At Milnrow, now a chapelry, is an endowed free school, founded in 1720 by Alexander Butterworth, the revenue of which is about £90 per annum. There are other charitable endowments, producing yearly above £30. In this tnshp. is Clegg Hall, an old seat of the Asshetons, built in the reign of James I. It is the scene of a traditional story given by Mr. Roby in his "Traditions of Lancashire."

BUTTEVANT, or BOTHON, a par. in the bar. of Orrery, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 28 miles to the N.W. of Cork, and 137 miles to the S.W. of Dublin, by the Great Southern and Western railway, on which it is a station. It is situated in a fertile and cultivated country on the banks of the river Awbeg, and was formerly a market town. Its name is said to be a corruption of the phrase Boutez en avant (equivalent to "Forwards!"), a war-cry of its ancient lords, the De Barrys, earls of Barrymore. The grant of a market was obtained in the reign of Henry III. A priory of the Franciscan order was founded, or perhaps refounded, here about the end of the 13th century, by one of the De Barrys. A nunnery also existed here at an early period. The manor belonged to the De Barrys, who had a castle in the parish. The town, consisting chiefly of one street, is on the W. bank of the Awbeg, and has a market and court-house, extensive barracks, police station, and large flour-mill. Petty sessions are held once a fortnight. The living is a union of two vics. and two perpet. curs., of the gross val. of £129. It is in the dioc. of Cloyne, and in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which stands by the river, on the site of an earlier one, is a handsome building in the perpendicular style, with a tower and beautiful spire. It was erected in 1826. A handsome new Roman Catholic chapel has been built. It is a stone structure in the form of a cross, in the perpendicular style, with a central embattled tower. There are also a fever hospital, a dispensary, and two schools—one for boys, the other for girls. In the town are the ruins of an old fortress, called Lombard's Castle, and on the banks of the river, the "Gentle Mulla" of Spenser's poem, are the fine remains of the priory, with many monuments to the Barrys, Fitzgeralds, and other families. The bones of those who fell at the battle of Knocknanoiss, in 1647, are piled up in great heaps in the crypt of the priory. In the vicinity is Kilcolman Castle, where Spenser lived, and wrote the "Faerie Queene." Buttevant gave the title of viscount to the earls of Barrymore. The manor is now held by Lord Doneraile. Buttevant Castle, formerly part of the fortifications of the town, is situated on a rock by the Awbeg, and is the property of the Lloyd family. There are several pleasant seats of the gentry. Fairs for the sale of cattle are held on the 27th March, and the 14th October.

BUTT GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Clavering, in the co. of Essex, 1½ mile N.W of the vil. of Clavering, and 3 S.W. of Newport railway station.

BUTTINGHILL HUNDRED, one of the 12 hunds. or subdivisions of the rape of Lewes, in the co. of Sussex, situated in the eastern parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the co. of Surrey, on the E. by the rape of Pevensey and the hund. of Street, on the S. by the hund. of Poynings, and on the W. by the rape of Bramber. It contains the pars. of Ardingley, Balcombe, Bolney, Clayton, Crawley, Cuckfield, West Hoathly, Hurstperpoint, Keymer, Slaugham, Twineham, and Worth. The hund. extends over an area of about 58,200 acres.

BUTTINGTON, or TAL-Y-BONT, a par. in the borough and hund. of Pool, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 2 miles to the N.E. of Welshpool. It is situated in a fertile and partially hilly district on the borders of Shropshire, on the E. bank of the river Severn, over which is a very ancient wooden bridge, and contains the tnshps. of Cletterwood, Hope, and Trewern. This place was called by the Saxons Butdigingtun, or Buttingdun, and was the scene, about the end of the 9th century, of a great defeat of the Danes, who had encamped here, by the Saxons. The Breidden hills extend into this parish, and on Craig Vreddin, one of their principal peaks, stands the pillar erected in honour of Admiral Lord Rodney in 1781. The prospect from this hill is extensive and richly diversified. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £107, in the gift of the Vicar of Welshpool. The church, which is in the early English style, is dedicated to All Saints. Offa's Dyke crosses part of this parish, and traces of ancient camps are found on the neighbouring hills.

BUTTOLPH'S, or BOTOLPH'S, a par. in the hund. of Steyning, rape of Bramber, in the co. of Sussex, 1 mile to the S. of Steyning. It is pleasantly situated on the W. bank of the navigable river Adur, not far from the London, Brighton, and South Coast railway. The living is a rect., united with that of Bramber, in the dioc. of Chichester.

BUTTON-HILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ecclesall-Bierlow, par. and borough of Sheffield, in the wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the S.W. of Sheffield.

BUTTSBURY, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, in the co. of Essex, 7 miles to the S. of Chelmsford. Ingatestone is its post town. It is watered by a small stream, a branch of the river Chelmer. The Great Eastern railway passes close by this village. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Ingatestone, in the dioc. of Rochester. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are some charities of small amount.

BUXHALL, a par. in the hund. of Stow, in the co. of Suffolk, 3 miles to the W. of Stowmarket, its post town, which is a station on the Great Eastern railway. A small branch of the river Gipping or Orwell runs through the parish. The corn trade forms the chief business of the place. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, of the annual val. of £578, in the patron. of the Rev. C. Hill, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

BUXLOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Knodishall, hund. of Blything, in the co. of Suffolk, 2 miles to the S.E. of Saxmundham. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Knodishall, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church was dedicated to St. Peter, and has long been in ruins.

BUXTED, a par. in the hund. of Loxfield-Dorset, rape of Pevensey, in the co. of Sussex, 2 miles to the N. of Uckfield, its post town. It is situated in a pleasant district, containing some hop-grounds, on a branch of the river Ouse. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £403, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is small but very ancient. It is in the early English style, and contains a sculptured tomb, inscribed 1308, and several monumental brasses, one of which is that of a priest who died in 1370. At Hadlow Down is a district church, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £126, in the alternate patron. of the Rector of Buxted and the Vicar of Mayfield. Here is a small free school endowed by Anthony Sanders in 1718, for six children of each sex. This parish has also a share in the benefits of the free school established and endowed at Rotherfield by Sir Henry Fermor. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to about £140 per annum. William Wotton, the philologist, author of several learned works, held the rectory of Buxted, and died here in February, 1726. This living was also held by the father and grandfather of Dr. Clarke, the celebrated traveller, who died in 1822. Buxted Place is the seat of the Earl of Liverpool, who has greatly improved and enlarged it. In 1844, he received here a visit from her Majesty Queen Victoria. A cattle and sheep fair is held on the 31st July.

BUXTON, a celebrated watering-place, chplry., and market town, in the par. of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 38 miles to the N.W. of Derby, and 160 miles from London by road. An extension of the Midland railway from Rowsley has just been completed, which gives the town the advantage of uninterrupted railway communication both from the south and the north. The High Peak railway, for coals and goods, passes within 1½ mile, and there are coaches during the summer months to all parts.—Buxton is situated in a deep dell, in the midst of a hilly and moorland district, near the head of the small river Wye, a feeder of the Derwent, which flows through a deep ravine nearly parallel with the high road leading to Bakewell. It is 1,020 feet above the sea level, although in a valley, which forms as it were the N.W. margin of the mountain limestone formation, abounding in fossils and geological specimens. It is noted for its mineral waters and the romantic scenery of its environs. From some remains of walls, existing till 1709, and from the discovery of Roman coins, it appears that the Romans were acquainted with these springs, and had baths here. Two of their great roads crossed each other near this place. Buxton was much resorted to as a watering-place before the Reformation, and had a shrine of St. Anne connected with the baths, at which many devout offerings were made. The baths were closed for a short time after the dissolution of monasteries by Henry VIII., but were soon re-opened and frequented as before. Buxton was several times visited by Mary Queen of Scots, while in the custody of the Earl of Shrewsbury. The old hall in which she lodged, built by the earl, is still standing, and is now converted into an hotel. There is also a fine column of stalagmite in the great cavern named Poole's Hole, which is called by her name, and extends for nearly three-quarters of a mile in length, the walls being hung with grotesque and beautiful stalactites.—The baths have lost none of their old renown, as is shown by the number of visitors, who average from 1,500 to 2,000 at one time during the season, which extends from May to October. The numerous baths are supplied from St. Anne's Well, a spring enclosed in an elegant Grecian building near the Crescent. This spring rises into a marble basin, and yields 60 gallons a minute. The water is saline and sulphureous, being charged with nitrogen gas and calcareous matter, and has a temperature of 82° Fahrenheit, which never varies at any season of the year. This spring is considered one of the wonders of the Peak, for by means of a double pump both hot and cold water are obtained within a few inches of each other. The waters are especially of service in cases of gout and rheumatism, diseases of the skin, and nervous disorders. There are numerous baths in the town, and one free for the use of the sick poor, who receive liberal assistance from the Devonshire Hospital. This noble institution has been converted to its present use from the buildings formerly known as the "great stables," which were presented to the charity by the munificence of the late Duke of Devonshire. It is supported by subscriptions and voluntary contributions, and offers to each of its patients board and lodging, baths and medical advice for three weeks, constituting the usual period for a course of bathing. Attached to the hospital is a resident chaplain. Near the town is a chalybeate spring, now enclosed in a neat building erected by the Duke of Devonshire.—Buxton consists of an upper and lower town; the former being the old, and the latter the new part of the town. The character of the buildings in the modern is far superior to that of those in the old town, and new streets and houses are springing up in all directions. The main street and market-place are wide and well paved, and in the centre are the ruins of an ancient stone cross. The principal range of buildings, however, is the fine Crescent, erected about 1780 by the Duke of Devonshire, from designs by Carr, of York. It is built of stone, and has a front, including the two wings, of nearly 320 feet in length. The architecture is partly of the Doric order. This stately pile includes three large hotels, a ball-room, library, baths, lodging-houses, &c. Behind the Crescent are the spacious stables, now converted into a hospital, and in front are shrubberies and pleasant walks laid out on a hill. Near the Crescent is the Square, with pleasant promenades and an arcade 280 yards long.—The chief trade of the town is the manufacture of various articles from the beautiful spar and other minerals found in the Peak. The prevailing rock in the district is the mountain limestone, which is quarried to a great extent, and many labourers are employed as lime-burners, residing in dwellings cut in the rocks. In the market-place are the water-works, which were constructed about 1840 by the Duke of Devonshire.—The neighbourhood of Buxton abounds in romantic scenery; steep rocks, wild chasms, wooded hills, with various and wide prospects. The cutting for the new line of railway is a very wonderful work, both on account of its tunnels and the height at which it has to be carried across roads and valleys at several points. Among the favourite places of resort are Ashwood Dale, in which is the rock called the Lover's Leap; Shirbrook Dale, a fissure in the rock with a small cascade; Diamond Hill, so called from the crystals of quartz, or Buxton diamonds, found there; Chee Tor, a huge limestone rock, rising about 350 feet high, from the bed of the Wye, which washes its base; Axedge, 3 miles to the S.W. of Buxton, rising to the height of about 1,800 feet above the level of the sea, and commanding a prospect of very great extent, embracing the mountains of North Wales to the westward, and Lincoln Cathedral eastward; from the sides of this rock issue four rivers in opposite directions—the Dove and the Wye, which ultimately fall into the Humber, and the Dane and the Goyte, which join the Mersey.—The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, and in the patron. of the Duke of Devonshire. The church, a spacious edifice of the Tuscan order of architecture, was erected by the duke in 1812. It is situated in Fairfield, on the N. side of the Wye, and is dedicated to St. John the Evangelist. The old church of St. Ann is situated in the higher town, and is only used for evening service. There are chapels for Independents, Wesleyans, and Unitarians, and an endowed free school, which was formerly held in the church of St. Ann. Both churches are under one incumbency, of the val. of about £90 a year, partly from land and partly from money in the funds. The Gisborne Charity amounts to £7 5*s.* per annum.—There is a racecourse near the town, but the races are discontinued. Two weekly newspapers are published during the season, called the Buxton Herald and the Buxton Advertiser. Buxton is one of the polling places for the county elections. It is within the honour of Tutbury, in the duchy of Lancaster. The market is held on Saturday, and fairs on the 3rd February, the 1st April, the 2nd May, the 8th September, and the 28th October. The last two are cattle fairs.

BUXTON, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Erpingham, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles S.E. of Aylsham, and 8 miles to the N. of Norwich, its post town. The projected railway from Norwich to Cromer will pass near this village, which is seated on the banks of the river Bure. Various Roman antiquities have been dug up in this parish. The living is a vic.* united with the rects. of Oxnead and Skeyton, in the dioc. of Norwich, collectively of the val. of £646, in the patron. of Sir H. Stracey, Bart. The tithes of Buxton have been commuted for £358 15*s.* 6*d.*; and there is a newly-built vicarage-house. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient building lately restored, with square tower. The register commences in the year 1663, and the chalice bears date 1567. There are chapels belonging to the Baptists and Wesleyans. The charitable endowments, consisting partly of the revenue of some almshouses founded by Sir John Picto, produce about £170 per annum. There is a school-house, erected in 1833 by the trustees of the charity left by the late John Wright; also a National school. Buxton water corn-mill stands upon the Bure, at the E. end of the village, near to which are two artificial fish-ponds. The par. has an area of 1,274 acres, chiefly the property of Sir Henry Stracey, Bart., who is lord of the manor.

BUXTON. See BUCKTON, Herefordshire.

BWLCH-COEDEG, a hmlt. in the par. of Mallwyd, hund. of Talybont, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, 1 mile to the E. of Dinas Mowddwy.

BWLCH-TREWYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Cwmyoy, hund. of Ewyas-Lacy, in the co. of Hereford, 5 miles to the N. of Abergavenny. It is seated on the river Monnow, a branch of the Wye.

BWLCH-Y-CERNAN, a hmlt. in the hund. of Rhayader, in the co. of Radnor, South Wales, 6 miles to the N. of Rhayader.

BWLCH-Y-CLATT, a hmlt. in the hund. of Llanidloes, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 3 miles to the N.W. of Llanidloes. It is at the foot of Plinlimmon, near one of the sources of the river Severn.

BWLCH-Y-FRIDD, a hmlt. in the hund. of Newtown, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 3 miles to the N.W. of Newtown.

BWLCH-Y-GYFNYNG, a hmlt. in the hund. of Estimaner, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, 6 miles to the N.E. of Towyn.

BYALL FEN, an ext. par. district, in the hund. and Isle of Ely, in the co. of Cambridge, 7 miles to the N.W. of Ely.

BYCHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitford, hund. of Coleshill, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 2 miles from Holywell.

BYCKNACRE, a hmlt. partly in the par. of Danbury, and partly in that of Woodham Ferris, in the hund. of Dengie, co. of Essex.

BYERS GREEN, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Andrew Auckland, ward of Darlington, in the co. palatine of Durham, 4 miles to the N. of Bishop Auckland. It is a station on the West Hartlepool harbour railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, in the patron. of the bishop.

BYFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Chipping Warden, in the co. of Northampton, 7 miles to the S.W. of Daventry, its post town. It lies near the border of Warwickshire. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, of the annual val. of £917, and in the patron. of the President and Fellows of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to the Holy Cross. The parochial charities, which include some small bequests for education, amount to about £80 per annum.

BYFLEET, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Godley, in the co. of Surrey, 4 miles to the S. of Chertsey. Cobham is its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Wey, near the London and South-Western railway, and is crossed by the Wey and Arun Junction canal. The manor of Byfleet was given to Piers Gaveston, the favourite of Edward II. The Black Prince is said to have erected the old mansion called Byfleet Park, which is now a farmhouse. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £295, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains a monumental brass of a priest who died in 1480. There is a chapel belonging to the Baptists. The parochial charities produce about £24 a year. The rect. of Byfleet was held by the noted Stephen Duck, who, beginning life as a farm labourer, became a poet, was appointed by Queen Caroline one of the yeomen of the guard, obtained the living of this parish, and was named Keeper of the Queen's Library at Richmond Gardens. He died at Byfleet in 1756.

BYFORD, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, in the co. of Hereford, 6 miles to the W. of Hereford, its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Wye, here crossed by a ferry. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, worth £195, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. There are some charitable bequests producing £5 a year.

BYGRAVE, a par. in the hund. of Odsey, in the co. of Hertford, 2 miles to the N.E. of Baldock, its post town, which is a station on the Hitchin and Cambridge branch of the Great Eastern railway. The ancient Icknield Street passes near this village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £377, in the patron. of the Marquis of Salisbury.

BYKER, a tnshp. in the par. of All Saints, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 2 miles from Newcastle. It is situated on the N. bank of the Tyne, and is included within the borough. It contains several manufactories of glass, pottery, &c. The inhabitants are also employed in working the coal-mines and the stone-quarries of the vicinity. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £130, in the patron. of the crown and the bishop. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists.

BYLAND ABBEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Coxwold, wap. of Birdforth, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N. of Easingwold. It is near the Thirsk, Malton, and Driffield branch of the North-Eastern railway, on which Coxwold is a station. This tnshp. is the site of an abbey founded by Roger de Mowbray, in the year 1177, for monks of the Cistercian order, which flourished till the Dissolution, when it had a revenue of £295. The ruins of the abbey church stand in a secluded spot at the foot of a hill. They consist of the west front, with its three fine doorways, lancet and circular windows, the south transept, and parts of the aisles. It was a noble structure, of large dimensions, in the early English style of architecture, and, according to tradition, was the burial-place of the founder, whose remains were said to be contained in a stone coffin dug up among the ruins in 1818.

BYLAND, OLD, a par. in the wap. of Birdforth, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N.W. of Helmsley, its post town. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £55, in the patron. of G. Wombwell, Esq.

BYLAUGH, a par. in the hund. of Eynsford, in the co. of Norfolk, 5 miles to the N.E. of East Dereham, its post town. It is watered by the river Wensum. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £75, in the patron. of C. Lombe, Esq. The church, an ancient building, is dedicated to St. Mary, and was entirely repaired by Sir John Lombe, Bart., in 1810. It contains several old family monuments. There has lately been erected, in accordance with the will of the late Sir John Lombe, Bart., a handsome mansion, from the designs of Messrs. Banks and Barry.

BYLEY-CUM-YATEHOUSE, a tnshp. in the par. of Middlewich, hund. of Northwich, in the co. palatine of Chester, 1 mile from Middlewich. The Trent and Mersey canal passes near it. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £40, in the patron. of the Vicar of Middlewich.

BYNWESTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Worthen, hund. of Chirbury, in the co. of Salop, 7 miles to the N.E. of Montgomery.

BYRNESS, BURNESS, or BERENESS, a chplry. in the par. of Elsdon, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 12 miles to the N. of Bellingham. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £75, in the patron. of the Rector of Elsdon. The church was rebuilt in 1793.

BYROME, a tnshp. united with Poole, in the par. of Brotherton, wap. of Barkstone Ash, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the N.E. of Pontefract. It is situated on the banks of the river Aire, not far from the Great Northern railway. The chief residence is Byrome Hall, the seat of Sir J. W. Ramsden, Bart.

BYSHOTTLES, a hmlt. in the par. of Brancepeth, ward of Darlington, in the co. palatine of Durham, 3 miles to the S.W. of Durham. It is a joint tnshp. with Brandon and Langley, and was formerly a very insignificant place, but has lately much increased in population, owing to the extensive collieries, and the large paper-mill at Langley. There is a National school at Brandon, in which Divine service is performed on Sundays.

BYSICH, a parcel of the par. of Llanbedr, in the hund. of Crickhowell, and co. of Brecon, South Wales, 2 miles to the N.E. of Crickhowell.

BYSTOCK, a hmlt. in the par. of Colyton-Rawleigh, hund. of East Budleigh, in the co. of Devon, 2 miles to the W. of Sidmouth. It is seated on the sea-coast. Bystock House is the principal residence.

BYTH, NEW, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of King Edward, Turriff district, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 8 miles to the N.E. of Turriff. The living is in the presb. of Turriff, and in the patron. of the Society for the Diffusion of Christian Knowledge, and of the congregation. Byth House is the seat of B. C. Urquhart, Esq. Annual fairs are held here in April, May, June, October, and November.

BYTHAM, CASTLE, a par. in the wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles to the S. of Corby. Stamford is its post town. It is situated on the river Glen, near the Great Northern railway, and comprises the hmlt. of Counthorpe and the chplry. of Holywell with Aunby. It was the site of a castle, which was given after the Norman Conquest to Odo, Earl of Albemarle, and which, after being destroyed by Edward III., was rebuilt and long held by the baronial family of the Colvilles. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. James. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village. There is an endowed free school, with an annual income of £40, and some other charities worth about £5 a year.

BYTHAM, PARVA, a par. in the wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 1 mile to the E. of Castle Bytham. It is situated on the river Glen, and is a station on the Great Northern railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Medardus. The parochial charities consist of the church estate, producing about £16 per annum.

BYTHORN, a par. in the hund. of Leightonstone, in the co. of Huntingdon, 6 miles to the N. of Kimbolton. Thrapstone is its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Brington, in the dioc. of Ely. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The charitable endowments amount to £16 per annum.

BYTON, a par. in the hund. of Wigmore, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles to the E. of Presteign, in Radnorshire, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £105, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are charitable endowments for the poor, producing £9 a year.

BYWELL, ST. ANDREW, a par. in the eastern div. of Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 11 miles to the W. of Newcastle, its post town. It is pleasantly situated in a wooded district, on the bank of the river Tyne, and is crossed by the Newcastle and Carlisle railway, on which Stocksfield, one of its tnshps., is a station. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Bearl, Broomhaugh, Riding, Stocksfield Hall, and Styford. Bywell was the head of an ancient barony, which was held soon after the Conquest by Guy de Balliol, and subsequently by the Nevilles, by whom it was forfeited in 1571. It then passed into the possession of the Fenwicks. Remains of the castle and a chapel still exist near the river. The village of Bywell is partly in this parish and partly in that of St. Peter. The manufacture of saddlers' ironmongery was once carried on here to considerable extent. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £169, in the patron. of W. B. Beaumont, Esq. The church, which has a lofty tower, is dedicated to St. Andrew. The church of St. Peter stands near it. The Tyne is here crossed by a handsome new bridge, erected at a cost of £15,000. Bywell Hall, the seat of Wentworth B. Beaumont, Esq., M.P., is an elegant mansion, built by the Fenwicks, and stands in a pleasant spot near the river. There is a waterfall near the village, and a corn-mill.

BYWELL, ST. PETER, a par. in the eastern div. of Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 1 mile to the N.W. of St. Andrew Bywell. It is situated on the banks of the Tyne, and comprises an area of 17,784 acres, including the tnshps. of East Acomb, Apperley, Broomley, Bywell St. Peter, Espershields, with Millshields, Hagg, Fotherley, Healey, Newlands, Newton, Newton Hall, and Stelling, with the chplry. of Whittonstall, and part of the tnshp. of St. Andrew Bywell. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £119, in the patron of the Dean and Chapter of Durham. There is also a district church at Whittonstall, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £45, in the patron. of the trustees of Lord Crewe. The Wesleyans, Quakers, and Baptists have chapels in the village. The parochial charities are worth £6 a year.

BYWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Petworth, hund. of Rotherbridge, rape of Arundel, in the co. of Sussex, 1 mile to the E. of Petworth.

C

CABAS, or CABUS, a tnshp. in the par. of Garstang, hund. of Amounderness, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles to the N. of Garstang, which is a station on the Manchester and Carlisle section of the London and North-Western railway. The railway and the Lancaster canal pass by this place.

CABILLO, a vil. in Garth parcel of the par. of Ystradgynlais, hund. of Devynnock, in the co. of Brecon, South Wales, 8 miles to the N. of Neath.

CABINTEELY, a vil. in the pars. of Tully and Killiney, bar. of Rathdown, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S. of Kingstown. It is seated near the coast of Killiney Bay. A police-force is stationed here. At Glen-Druid, in the vicinity, is a cromlech, consisting of one massive stone supported by six upright ones. Cabinteely House is a pleasant seat, in well-planted grounds, with a beautiful prospect. There are several other gentlemen's seats.

CABOURN, a par. in the wap. of Bradley Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the E. of Caistor, its post town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £150, in the patron. of the Earl of Yarborough. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas.

CABRACH, a par. partly in the co. of Aberdeen, and partly in the co. of Banff, Scotland. It is situated on the banks of the rivers Doveran and Blackwater, and contains abundance of limestone and slate. The surface is mountainous, and chiefly pasture-land. On the S.W. of the parish is the mountain called the Buck of the Cabrach, which has an elevation of about 2,380 feet. The living, worth £158, is in the presb. of Alford, and in the gift of the Duke of Richmond. There is an United Presbyterian church, and four private schools. Fairs for cattle are held in July and October.

CABRAGHKEEL, a hmlt. in the bar. of Tieragh, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.W. of Easky. It is seated near the coast of Killala Bay.

CADAMSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Carbury, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 12 miles to the N. of Robertstown. The living is a vic. forming part of the union of Castle-Carbury, in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare. The principal seat is Balyna House, the residence of the Right Hon. R. M. O'Ferrall.

CADBURY, a par. in the hund. of Hayridge, in the co. of Devon, 6 miles to the S.W. of Tiverton, its post town. The Bristol and Exeter railway passes within a short distance. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £163, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There are some charities of small amount. Roman coins have been discovered here, and on the top of a neighbouring lofty hill are the remains of an ancient entrenchment called Cadbury Castle.

CADBURY, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Catsash, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles to the W. of Wincanton, Castle Carey is its post town. It is situated in a picturesque and fertile country, near the Yeovil and Weymouth section of the Great Western railway, and contains the hmlts. of Galhampton and Woolston. Soon after the Conquest the manor formed part of the barony of Newmarch, and afterwards came to the Botreaux family, and through them to the Hungerfords, Courtneys, and Hastings. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, of the annual val. of £700, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The church, which was rebuilt by Elizabeth Lady Botreaux in the year 1427, is dedicated to St. Michael. It stands on a hill, and is a large and handsome edifice, with an embattled tower. It contains a monument with effigies of Sir Francis Hastings, who died in 1596, and his lady. License was obtained in the reign of Henry V. to make the church collegiate, but this injunction was not executed. Near the church is the old manorhouse, a large mansion built in 1581.

CADBURY, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Catsash, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile to the S. of North Cadbury. Wincanton is its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, in the patron. of J. Bennett, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket. Near this village, on a ridge of hills, is the extensive ancient camp called Camalet, or Cadbury Castle, which was partly hewn out of the solid rock (blue lias), and defended by four trenches. Within the area is another entrenchment, called King Arthur's Palace, which has but one entrance, and is surrounded by six or seven trenches. The centre camp, the form of which is irregular and determined by the shape of the hill, covers an area of 30 acres. Its origin is unknown, but from the Roman relics discovered here it appears certain that it was at one time occupied by the Romans, if not first formed by them.

CADDER, or CALDER, a par. in the lower ward of the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It is situated on the banks of the river Kelvin, and contains the vils. of Cadder, Auchenairn, Auchinloch, Chryston, Muirhead, Mollenburn, and Bishop bridge. The latter is a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway, which crosses the parish. The Forth and Clyde canal also passes through Cadder. The district is mostly under cultivation, and contains some coal-beds, ironstone, limestone, freestone, and extensive beds of fire-clay. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the mines and quarries. The living, val. £280, is in the presb. of Glasgow, and in the patron. of the heritors and the Kirk session. Remains of the Roman wall built by Antoninus exist near the church. It was in a house at Robroystone, in this parish, that, according to tradition, Sir William Wallace was betrayed by Sir John Monteith in 1303. No traces of the house are now to be seen. Cadder House is the principal seat. The parish is about 13 miles in length and between 3 and 4 miles in breadth.

CADDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Dacorum, in the co. of Hertford, but extending into the hund. of Flitt, in the co. of Bedford, 2 miles to the W. of Luton, its post town. The Dunstable branch of the Great Northern railway passes near it. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £319, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, London. The church, which stands in Bedfordshire, is dedicated to All Saints, and contains two monumental brasses. There is a district church at Market Street, the living of which is a cur., worth £227, in the gift of D. G. Ady, Esq. Market Street, on the Hertfordshire side of the parish, was the site of a Benedictine priory, called Markgate Cell, founded by Geoffrey, Abbot of St. Alban's, about the middle of the 12th century, and which was valued at the Dissolution at £115. The charitable endowments of the parish, consisting chiefly of the revenue of the grammar school, amount to about £150 per annum.

CADEBY, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, in the co. of Leicester, 1 mile to the S.E. of Market Bosworth. It contains part of the tnshp. of Osbaston. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £223, in the patron. of the Rev. Sir Alexander Dixie, Bart. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The charitable endowments produce £21 per annum. Bosworth House is the seat of the Dixies. The Atherstone hounds meet at Cadeby.

CADEBY, or CATEBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Sprotbrough, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to S.W. of Doncaster. It lies near the South Yorkshire railway, and contains limestone and freestone.

CADER, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaidr, hund. of Isaled, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 3 miles to the S. of Denbigh. It lies near the mountain Cader Gwladus, from which there is a fine prospect.

CADER IDRIS, one of the principal mountains in Wales, situated in the co. of Merioneth, to the S. of Dolgelly, from which the summit is distant about 5 miles. The ridge, which is about 10 miles long from

N.E. to S.W., consists chiefly of basalt, with trap-rock, felspar, &c. It is of a very rugged and precipitous character. The summit is bare of vegetation and divides into three peaks, the loftiest of which is called Pen-y-Cader, and has an elevation of about 2,900 feet above the level of the sea. The others are called Mynydd Moel, or the "bald mountain," and Craig-y-Cae. On the S. side of the mountain, in a lovely spot, is a small lake called Tal-y-Llyn, and on the same side, half way up, is another lake or tarn, called Llyn-y-Cae, shadowed by steep and lofty rocks. The northern base of the mountain touches the sea and the beautiful estuary of Barmouth. The view from the summit is of great extent, and in some respects rivals that from Snowdon. In clear weather it embraces the whole coast of Cardigan Bay to the S.; and Bala Lake to the N.E.; the Snowdon mountains to the N., and Plinlimmon to the S. The beautiful Vale of Dolgelly immediately below, and the estuary of Barmouth, forming a charming relief and set-off to the wild grandeur of the environing mountains. One of the finest views of the Cader Idris is had in approaching it from Machynlleth, along a fine wooded valley, watered by a branch of the river Dovey. The name of this mountain signifies "Chair of Idris:" Idris being a fabulous personage, variously represented as a giant, poet, or prince.

CADISHEAD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Barton-on-Irwell, and par. of Eccles, hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles to the W. of Manchester.

CADLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Fawley, lib. of Dibden, in the co. of Southampton, 5 miles to the W. of Fareham. It is seated on the western side of Southampton Water. Cadland Park is the seat of Lady M. Drummond.

CADLEIGH, or CADELEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Hayridge, in the co. of Devon, 4 miles to the S.W. of Tiverton, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £198, in the patron. of Mrs. Moore. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. There are charitable endowments for the poor which produce £16 per annum.

CADLEY, an ext. par. district with North and South Savernake in the hund. of Kinwardstone, in the co. of Wilts. It is in Savernake Forest, an extensive tract between Marlborough and Ludgershall.

CADNAM, a tythg. in the par. of Minstead, hund. of Redbridge, in the co. of Southampton, 4 miles to the N. of Lyndhurst. The Wesleyans have a chapel here.

CADNEY, a par. in the southern div. of the wap. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles to the S. of Brigg, its post town, which is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The par. extends over an area of 4,860 acres, and contains the tnshp. of Housham, and the ext. par. district of Newstead. It was the site of a small priory of the Cistercian order, founded in the first half of the 13th century, part of which still remains and is converted into a farmhouse. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £230, in the patron. of Lord Yarborough. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and contains a screen and an ancient font.

CADOXTON, or LLANGATWG, a par. in the hund. of Neath, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, close to Neath, its post town. The South Wales and Vale of Neath railways pass through a large portion of the parish, and there is also a line in course of construction from Neath to Brecon, through Crynant. The par., which extends over an area of 32,060 acres, is situated in a picturesque and beautiful country on the banks of the river Neath. It contains the hmlts. of Blaenhonddau, Coed-Frank, Dyffryn-Clydach, Upper Dylais, Lower Dylais, Upper Neath, Middle Neath, Lower Neath, and Ynis-y-mond. The hmlts. of Coed-Frank and Dyffryn-Clydach form the district of Skewen. There is another district, formed under Sir Robert Peel's Act, called Aberpergwm District, composed of the hmlt. of Neath Higher and part of Neath Middle. The parish is rich in mineral wealth, containing numerous mines of coal and iron, besides copper, zinc, and tin works, which employ a large number of the inhabitants. The Neath and Tennants canals pass through the parish. A small part of Cadoxton is included within the limits of the borough of Neath. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £340, in the patron. of Richard H. Miers, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Cadog, and contains among its mural monuments a curious pedigree of the Williams family. It commences with Jestyn ap Gwrgan, who lived in the time of William Rufus, and is engraved on copper tablets. There are also two district churches, one at Aberpergwm, and the other at Skewen, and a chapel of ease called Crynant, besides a handsome new memorial church, built by N. E. Vaughan, Esq. The church of Skewen was built by the present vicar, who has been most zealous in promoting the welfare of his parish, having erected four schools at his own cost, and purchased a very handsome Baptist Chapel, which has been licensed for the performance of Divine service. The Roman way, called the Sarn Helen, passes near the village of Dylais. Here are many seats of the gentry, the principal of which are Dyffryn, the residence of H. Gwyn, Esq., who purchased the property of the Williamses, rebuilt the house, and now resides there. Cadoxton Lodge, Rheola, and Aberpergwm. In the vicinity are the fine ruins of Cadoxton Abbey, belonging to the Cistercian monks.

CADOXTON-JUXTA-BARRY, a par. in the hund. of Dinas-Powis, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 7 miles to the S.W. of Cardiff, its post town. It is situated on the coast of the Bristol Channel, and was the site of a castle, some remains of which are still seen. Limestone is quarried here for burning. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £100, in the patron. of R. F. Jenner, Esq., and others. The church is dedicated to St. Cadog. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Calvinistic Methodists have chapels in the village.

CADWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Tathwell, hund. of Louth Eske, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles to the S. of Louth. It is near the Great Northern railway.

CADWELL, a tythg. in the par. of Brightwell-Baldwin, hund. of Ewelme, in the co. of Oxford, 3 miles to the W. of Watlington.

CAE-GORLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangelynin, hund. of Isaf, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 2 miles to the S. of Conway. It is near the coast and the Chester and Holyhead railway.

CAE-GURWAIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangynwyd, hund. of Llangafelach, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 9 miles to the N. of Neath. It is seated in a rugged district on the border of Carmarthenshire, on the small river Twrch.

CAELWYNGRYDD, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanllechid, hund. of Uchaf, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 3 miles to the S.E. of Bangor. It is near the river Ogwen.

CAENBY, a par. in the eastern div. of the wap. of Aslacoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 7 miles to the W. of Market Rasen, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £304, in the patron. of Sir C. M. L. Monk, Bart., lord of the manor. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. Caenby Hall is the chief residence.

CAENYNION, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Oswestry, in the co. of Salop.

CAEREINION-FECHAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Mallwydd, hund. of Mathrafel, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 2 miles to the S. of Dinas-Mowddwy. It is on the banks of the river Dovey.

CAER-FALLWCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Northop, hund. of Coleshill, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 3 miles to the S. of Flint. It is situated near the mountain Moel-y-Gaer, which is 1,050 feet in height, and on which are remains of an old camp. Lead is obtained in the neighbourhood, and is said to have been worked by the Romans.

CAERFEDWYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandyrnog, hund. of Ruthin, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales, miles to the E. of Denbigh.

CAERGELIOG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandderfel, hund. of Penllyn, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, 3 miles to the E. of Bala.

CAERGWRLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hope, or Estyn, hund. of Maylor, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 11 miles to the S. of Flint, and 186 miles from London. It is situated on the W. of the river Alen, a branch of the Dee, not far from the Chester and Shrewsbury railway. The vil. of Hope, a mile off, is a station on the Mold branch of the Chester and Holyhead railway. It has been conjectured that this place was an outpost of the Roman station at Chester, which was the headquarters of the 20th legion. Traces of Roman roads have been observed, and Roman relics found in the neighbourhood; and the name of the tnshp. is easily derived from Caer gawr Lleon, signifying "camp of the great legion." On a steep and rugged rock are some remains of a British fortress, which was called Hope Castle, and connected with which is a tradition of a visit of Queen Eleanor after it had been captured by Edward I. Caer Estyn, near this village, is another British fort. Wat's Dyke crosses the parish of Hope. Caergwrle is a borough incorporated by a charter of the Black Prince, and is governed by a mayor and two bailiffs. It is contributory with six other towns to the borough of Flint in returning one member to parliament. Limestone is quarried for burning at Caergwrle Hill. Cattle fairs are held here on Shrove Tuesday, the 10th May, the 12th August, and the 27th October.

CAERHÊN, or CAERRHUN, a par. in the hund. of Isaf, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 4 miles to the S. of Conway. Llanrwst is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Conway, and extends over an area of 13,402 acres. It was the site of the Roman station Conovium, the foundations of which are still traceable. Many interesting Roman remains have been found, among which is a brick inscribed "Leg. XX." In 1801 a villa was discovered, and in 1824 a pottery with good specimens of highly ornamented ware. Traces of copper and manganese have been found in this parish. The living is a rect. united with that of Llanbedr, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and stands in a pretty spot near Caerrhun Hall. There are several chapels for Dissenters in the parish. The charitable endowments are worth £5 a year. Caerrhun Hall is the chief residence.

CAERLANRIG, a district 16 miles long and 6 broad, formerly in the par. of Cavers, but now in the recently erected par. of Teviothead, in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland.

CAERLAVEROCK, or CARLAVEROCK, a par. in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 6 miles to the S.E. of Dumfries. It is situated in a fertile district on the coast of the Solway Frith, between the river Nith and Lochar Water, and contains the small ports of Glencapel and Kelton, and the vils. of Bankend and Quay. It is chiefly interesting as the site of a castle, the massive and picturesque ruins of which stand on a level spot on the E. side of the Nith. It was besieged and taken by Edward I., in 1300, and after many subsequent sieges and captures, was finally taken and dismantled by Cromwell. In 1357 it was the scene of a terrible tragedy, which has furnished the subject of one of the ballads published in the "Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border." This castle was the seat of the family of the Maxwells of Nithsdale, who are still proprietors of the district. There are remains of an ancient chapel dedicated to St. Columba, and of a castle. The living, worth £177, is in the presb. of Dumfries, and in the gift of the Marquis of Queensberry. There are several free schools, and some charitable endowments founded by Dr. Hutton, a native of the parish, and first physician to William III. and Queen Anne. He died in 1712. The annual produce of the charities is nearly £200. The par. extends about 6 miles in length and between 1 and 2 miles in breadth.

CAERLEON, a market town in the par. of Llangattock, lower div. of the hund. of Usk, in the co. of Monmouth, 21 miles to the S. of Monmouth, and 148 miles from London. It is 3 miles from Newport, which is a station on the South Wales railway. — Caerleon is situated on the N. bank of the river Usk, which here receives the Afon Lwyd, and is crossed by a stone bridge of three arches of modern date, built near the site of an ancient one of wood. This place, the name of which is British, and signifies "camp," or "city of the legion," is of very great antiquity, and possesses no ordinary interest by reason both of its legendary and historical associations. It was one of the most important cities of Roman Britain, and the metropolis of that division called Britannia Secunda. At different periods of the Roman dominion it was variously named Isca Legionis Secundæ (the second legion being at one time stationed here), Isca Colonia, and Isca Silurum. It contained a great number of public buildings — baths, temples, amphitheatre, &c. — and was strongly fortified. Several great roads connected the city with other important towns. The British way Akeman Street ran from hence to Bath; the Via Julia Maritima to Neath and St. David's; and the Via Julia Montana to Abergavenny and Monmouth. Caerleon became famous as a seat of learning and for its religious houses. It has a high place in the Arthurian legends as the metropolis of Wales, under the "flower of kings," and as the burial-place of that national hero. It was long the seat of an archbishopric, which was founded, it is said, soon after the introduction of Christianity into the island, and was removed by St. David to Menevia, from that time called St. David's. Its last archbishop was Dubricius, who distinguished himself as an opponent of the doctrine of Pelagius. A castle existed here at an early period, which was probably of Norman origin, and became the seat of the princes of Wales, lords or kings of Gwent. In 1171 this castle and the town were taken by Henry II., who deposed Iorwerth ap Owain, then lord of Gwent. The latter retook it after two years, and it remained in the power of the Welsh until their final subjugation by Edward I.—Caerleon is now a town of small importance. The houses are chiefly old and irregularly built. There are two main streets, and till lately an old market-house, supported on four ancient Roman pillars, which are now placed in the crypt of the new museum. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the iron and tin-plate works. Many cinders, the refuse of ancient smelting-furnaces, are scattered in the neighbourhood.—The parish church of Llangattock, dedicated to St. Cadoc, stands in the town, and greatly needs a thorough restoration. It is partly in the early English and partly in the perpendicular style. There are chapels belonging to the Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists; a free school, founded by Charles Williams in 1724, for 50 children of both sexes, who are clothed as well as educated, the income from endowment amounting to about £800 per annum; National and infant schools, and almshouses for widows, which last are about being sold for the benefit of the pensioners, as they are in ruins, and have no repair fund belonging to them. The charitable endowments of the town produce altogether about £830 a year. Petty sessions are held in the town. There is a museum of antiquities.—Portions of the walls of the Roman city, which stood a little to the S.W. of the present town, still mark its site, now mostly covered with orchards or corn-fields. The walls are 12 feet thick. The amphitheatre generally called King Arthur's Round Table is plainly traceable, including an area of 222 feet by 192 feet. Many interesting Roman relics have been discovered, consisting of altars, pavements, columns, tiles with the inscription "Leg. II. Aug.," remains of baths and aqueducts, and coins of various emperors from Augustus to Valentinian. Some inconsiderable ruins of the castle and monastery still exist. St. Aaron and St. Julian, natives of Caerleon, are said to have suffered martyrdom here in the reign of Domitian. Near the town is St. Julian's, the seat of Lord Herbert of Cherbury. A market is held on the first Monday in every month. Fairs are held on the 1st May and the 5th September.

CAERPHILLY, a market town in the par. of Eglw-ysilan, hund. of Caerphilly, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 8 miles to the N. of Cardiff, and 160 miles from London. It is situated in a broad flat valley, between the rivers Rhymney and Taf, sheltered by mountains on the N. and S., and is a station on the Rhymney railway. A new line is now making, giving access to Newport by a junction with the Machen railway. The inhabitants are employed in agriculture, and in the manufacture of coarse and fine woollens. Coal is found and worked for exportation, a new pit having been recently opened. Caerphilly was formerly a borough. Petty sessions are now held in the town by the county magistrates. The living is a consolidated chplry. including the hmlt. of Van, from the par. of Bedwas, in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £200, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, a small edifice in the perpendicular style, is dedicated to St. Martin. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Calvinistic Methodists have chapels here, and there is a free school for girls endowed by Ann Aldworth, of Bristol. The trustees of this charity are now establishing two new schools in Eglwysilan, and one in Bedwas, on account of an increase of income. Caerphilly derives its chief interest and importance from the ruins of its stately and magnificent castle, which was probably built in the 13th century on the site of a smaller and more ancient one; the origin and early history of the latter being unknown. The castle was in the possession of Gilbert de Clare about 1280, and afterwards passed to the Mortimers, lords of Glamorgan. In the reign of Edward II. it was seized by Hugh Despenser, and long held by him against Roger Mortimer, who besieged it. It was ultimately taken by the royal forces, and remained thenceforth in the possession of the lords of Glamorgan. The venerable ruins are unrivalled in extent and magnificence by any others in Wales. They consist of the outer walls, with buttresses and towers; the great gateway to the inner ward; the great hall, 70 feet long and 30 feet wide, with four lofty and richly decorated windows; a round tower, called the armoury; a leaning tower, much damaged, and probably thrown out of the perpendicular by the last siege; and a fine corridor. In the vicinity are remains of two old camps, and many coins have been found. Several old mansions are near the town. Energlyn, formerly the seat of the Goodrichs; Ruperrah, that of the Morgans; Cefn Mabley, and others. The market is held on Thursday, and fairs on the 5th April, Trinity Thursday, the 19th July, the 25th August, the 9th October, and the 16th November.

CAERPHILLY HUNDRED, one of the ten hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, situated in the eastern part of the co., and bounded on the E. by Monmouthshire, on the S. by the hund. of Kibbor, and on the W. by the hund. of Miskin. It contains the pars. of Eglwys-Ilan, Gelligaer, Llanfabon, and Merthyr-Tydfil, with parts of Bedwas, Machen, and Michaelstone-y-Vedw.

CAERRA. See CAIRA, Glamorganshire.

CAERSEDDFAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Darowen, hund. of Machynlleth, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 6 miles to the E. of Machynlleth. It is in a mountainous district, and contains some lead mines.

CAERSWS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanwnog, hund. of Llanidloes, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 6 miles to the W. of Newtown. It is seated on the river Severn, which is here crossed by a bridge of three arches of modern erection. Caersws is believed to be the site of a Roman station on the road to Chester, called the Sarn Swa. Near the village are remains of two ancient encampments, and Roman bricks with inscriptions have been found. The Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists, and the Baptists, have chapels here.

CAERTON-ULTRA-PONTEM, a hmlt. in the par. of Christchurch, hund. of Caldicott, in the co. of Monmouth, near Caerleon. It is seated on the S. bank of the river Usk, at Caerleon Bridge.

CAERWENT, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Caldicott, in the co. of Monmouth, 5 miles to the S.W. of Chepstow, its post town. It is not far from the South Wales railway and the river Severn, and contains the hmlt. of Crick. Caerwent is a very ancient place, and was the site of the Roman station called Venta Silurum, on the Via Julia. Parts of the walls still remain. They are from 9 to 12 feet thick, and enclose an area of 505 by 390 yards. Besides numerous coins, and parts of columns and statues, some large and beautiful tesselated pavements have been discovered here. Near the village are the ruins of Caldicott Castle, a moated seat of the Bohuns, earls of Hereford. The living is a vic.* with the perpet. cur. of Llanvair-Discoed annexed, in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £258, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Stephen. The Baptists have a chapel here.

CAERWYS, a par. in the hund. of Rhuddlan, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 5 miles to the E. of St. Asaph. Holywell is its post town. It was anciently a place of some importance, and received from Henry III. a charter of incorporation, and the grant of a market and fairs. From the Roman remains found in the vicinity it is supposed to have been a Roman station. The town was, however, chiefly celebrated for the Eisteddvodau, assemblies in which the most distinguished of the bards and minstrels competed, in poetry and music, for prizes. One of the most celebrated of these congresses was that held in May, 1568, under a commission from Queen Elizabeth. A small silver harp was the usual prize assigned to the best harper. Another important Eisteddvod was held here in 1798, at which prizes were awarded to Robert Dhu o' Nantglyn, and T. Edwards o'r Nant, for poems; to Robert Foulkes, as best vocalist; and to W. Jones, as chief harper. Caerwys is now a small village, and has little trade. Woollen cloth is manufactured on a small scale. Limestone, lead, and iron ores exist in the neighbourhood, but are not worked. The borough is nominally governed by two bailiffs, appointed at the court-leet of the manor, now held by Lord Mostyn, and contributes with Flint and seven other boroughs to return one member to the imperial parliament. There are remains of the old townhall and the gaol. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph val. £425, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There are chapels belonging to the Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists and a National school. The parochial charities are worth £3 a year. The living was held by John Lloyd the antiquary, a friend of Pennant. The market has long been disused. Fairs for cattle, horses, sheep &c., are held here on the first Tuesday after the 13th January, the 5th March, the last Monday in April Trinity Thursday, the first Tuesday after the 7th July the 29th August, the 5th November, and the second Tuesday in December. These are the largest and most important fairs in Flintshire.

CAHER, or CAHIR, a par. in the bar. of Iveragh, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, about 3 miles to the S.W. of Tralee. It is situated on the coast near Dowlas Head, opposite the island of Valencia, and includes the market town of Cahersiveen and the island of Beg Innis. A large part of the parish, which extends over an area of 19,100 acres, is mountain and bog. Good slate is found in the mountains. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the fishery. The living is a rect. united with those of Glenbegh and Killinane, in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe, of the annual val. of £597, in the patron. of the crown. There are several gentlemen's seats, among which are Baheas, Hillgrove and Cashen. The latter is the old seat of the O'Connells and the birthplace of the late Daniel O'Connell, who owned a large part of the district.

CAHER, or CAHIR, a par. and small market town in the bars. of Iffa and Offa, East and West, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 10 miles to the W. of Clonmel, and 110 miles from Dublin. It is situated in a pleasant and picturesque country, near the eastern extremity of the Galtee mountains, on the bank of the river Suir, and is a station on the Waterford and Limerick railway. It is a place of considerable antiquity, and was the site of a castle, founded in the 12th centur and of a priory of the Augustine order, founded in the 13th. The lordship was held by the Butlers, earls of Glengall. The linen manufacture was carried on here for a time, and after its decline the manufacture of various kinds of straw-plait was introduced, and has been successfully carried on. Many persons are employed in the large corn-mills near the town. Extensive cavalry barracks are established about a mile from Caher. There are a market-house, a bridewell, a police station, a dispensary, and a fever hospital. The river is crossed by an ancient bridge. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, worth £398, in the patron. of the crown. The church, rebuilt in 1817, from designs by Nash, is a large and handsome edifice in the perpendicular style, with a good tower and spire. There are also chapels for Roman Catholics and Quakers. There is an endowed free school and a National school. Cahir House, formerly the seat of the Earl of Glengall, is now in the possession of Robert Malcomson, Esq. It stands near the town; and the park, a picturesque and wooded demesne, extends along the banks of the Suir for above 2 miles. Other seats are Cahir Lodge, the residence of the Countess of Glengall, Cahir Abbey, Garnavella, and Killemley. The interesting remains of the castle are on a small island in the river. Caher gives the titles of viscount and baron to the earls of Glengall. The market, chiefly for corn, is on Friday. Fairs are held on the 8th February, the 12th April, the 26th and 27th May, the 20th July, the 18th and 19th September, the 20th October, and the 7th December.

CAHER, two hmlts. in the bar. of Burren, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles to the S.W. of Burren. They are distinguished as Upper and Lower.

CAHERAGH, a par. in the western div. of the bar. of Carbery West, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles to the S.E. of Bantry. It lies near the coast, in a district of moorland and bog, on the banks of the river Ilen, and was the site of a castle, the seat of the M'Carthys, of which some ruins remain. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne, worth £564, in the gift of the bishop. The par. extends over an area of 23,526 acres.

CAHERAKILLEEN, a vil. in the bar. of Leitrim, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.E. of Loughrea.

CAHERAVALLY, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S. of Limerick. The living is a rect. united with that of St. Patrick's, in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe. The church is decayed. The principal mansion is Roxborough, the seat of the Hon. J. P. Vereker.

CAHERBANNAGH, a vil. in the bar. of Burren, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S.W. of Burren.

CAHERBULLIGAN, a vil. in the bar. of Dunkellin, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 8 miles to the E. of Galway.

CAHERCONLISH, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles to the S.E. of Limerick. It is crossed by the Waterford and Limerick railway. The district is fertile, and the town was anciently a place of importance, being a borough and fortified. A field near it, called College Field, is said to have been the site of an ancient college. A police force is established here. The living is a vic. united with those of Luddonbeg and Carrigparson, in the dioc. of Cashel, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore, val. £385, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in the early English style, with a tower and spire. There is a handsome parish school-house. The chief residence is Caherconlish House, the seat of the Wilson family. Traces of several old fortresses exist in the vicinity. Fairs are held on the 16th May, the 20th August, the 17th October, and the 5th December.

CAHERCORNEY, a par. in the bar. of Small County, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 9 miles to the S. of Limerick. It is situated near the banks of the river Comogue, a branch of the Maigue, and on Lough Gur. The living is a vic. with that of Kilkellane united, in the dioc. of Cashel, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore, val. £85, in the gift of the Earl of Kenmare. The church is old, and contains a monument to the Crokers, who had a splendid mansion at Raleighstown in this parish. There are remains of a very ancient structure of stone, probably a fort, on a hill near Raleighstown. The old seat of the Crokers is dilapidated. Cahir is the seat of the Hon. S. O'Grady.

CAHERDUGGAN, a par. in the bar. of Fermoy, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.W. of Doneraile. It is situated in a fertile country, on the S. bank of the river Awbeg, and was the site of a castle, the seat of the Roches. Limestone is abundant here, and is quarried extensively. The living is a perpet. cur. united with that of Buttevant, in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne. There are several seats of the gentry, among which are Clogheen, Hazlewood, Elmvale, &c. In the parish are several old Danish forts or raths. A horse fair is held at Cahirmee on the 12th July.

CAHERELLY, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 9 miles to the S. of Limerick. It lies on the N. side of the river Comogue, a branch of the Maigue, and is a place of great antiquity. Good limestone is found here. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cashel, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore, val. £67, in the patron. of the bishop. In the parish are remains of an abbey and of two castles. A third castle formerly stood here, but is demolished. The chief residences are Cahir Castle and Cahir Cottage. Fairs are held on the 14th May, the 26th August, the 6th November, and the 21st December.

CAHERGAL, a hmlt. in the par. and bar. of Ross, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 8 miles to the N. of Oughterard. It is near the shore of Lough Corrib.

CAHERKEEN, a vil. in the par of Kilcathernie, bar. of Bear, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the N.W. of Castletown-Bearhaven. It is seated near Coulagh Bay.

CAHERLAG, a par. in the bar. of Barrymore, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the E. of Cork. It is situated in a fertile district on the river Glanmire, a branch of the river Lee, and is crossed by the Cork and Youghal railway, on which Dunkettle is a station. The par. contains the vil. of New Glanmire, and much fine pasture-land. The living is a rect. united with that of Rathcooney, in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne. There are numerous residences of the gentry, and some "Druidical" stones.

CAHERLANE, a hmlt. in the par. of Abbeyfeale, bar. of Glenquin, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the S. of Abbeyfeale. It is seated on the confines of Kerry, on the banks of the river Feale.

CAHERLOUGHLIN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Burren, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles to the S.W. of Burren.

CAHERMACUN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Burren, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.W. of Burren.

CAHERMORE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilnamanagh, bar. of Bear, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S.W. of Castletown-Bearhaven. It is on the coast of Bantry Bay.

CAHERNARRY, a par. partly in the co. of the city of Limerick, and partly in the bar. of Clanwilliam, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S.E. of Limerick. It lies in a fertile country, near the Waterford and Limerick railway, and contains the vil. of Ballyneety. Limestone of excellent quality is quarried in the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe, val. £91, in the gift of the Dean of Limerick. The chief residences are Cahernarry, Ballyneguard, and Ballyneety House.

CAHERNATINNA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Burren, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles to the N.E. of Kilfenora.

CAHERSIVEEN, or CAHERCIVEEN, a small market town in the par. of Caher, bar. of Iveragh, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 32 miles to the S.W. of Tralee, and 227 miles from Dublin. It is situated near the Iveragh mountains and Valencia Harbour, and is chiefly of recent growth. The chief business of the town is the coasting trade in corn, salt, timber, &c. Many persons are employed in the fishery. There is a small quay. Petty sessions are held and a police force is stationed here. The parish church and a Roman Catholic chapel are in the town, which has a bridewell, a fever hospital, a news-room, and a National school. Cahersiveen is the head of a Poor-law Union, and contains the Union poorhouse. Saturday is the market day, and fairs are held on the 5th January, the 8th February, the 22nd March, the 10th May, the 12th June, the 12th July, the 8th August, the 1st September, the 22nd October, the 13th November and December.

CAHIR, a vil. in the bar. of Upper Bunratty, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles to the N.E. of Clare.

CAINHAM, a par. in the hund. of Stottesdon, in the co. of Salop, 3 miles to the E. of Ludlow. It is situated near the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway, and contains the tnshp. of Bennett's End. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £338, in the patron. of C. K. Mainwaring, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is another church dedicated to St. Paul, and situated in the village of Knowbury, the living of which is a cur., worth £100, in the gift of the Bishop of Worcester. The chief residence is Cainham Court, the seat of Captain B. Calcot.

CAIN'S-CROSS, a hmlt. in the pars. of Stroud, Stonehouse, and Randwick, hunds. of Bisley and Whitstone, in the co. of Gloucester, 2 miles to the W. of Stroud. It is near the Great Western railway. Petty sessions are held, and there is a savings-bank in the village. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, in the patron. of T. C. Croome, Esq. The church, situated at Ebley, in the par. of Stonehouse, is dedicated to St. Matthew.

CAIRA, CAERRA, or CAIRAU, a par. in the hund. of Kibbor, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 3 miles to the W. of Cardiff. It lies near the South Wales railway, and was the site of a Roman station on the Via Julia, covering about 12 acres. Part of the camp still remains. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, worth £60, in the gift of the bishop of the dioc. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and stands within the area of the old camp.

CAIRN. See CAIRNRYAN, Wigtonshire.

CAIRNBEDDIE, a vil. in the par. of St. Martin's, in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 4 miles to the N. of Perth. It is near the Scottish North-Eastern railway.

CAIRNBULG, a headland and a fishing vil. in the par. of Rathen, Buchan district, in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 1 mile to the S.E. of Fraserburgh. It is seated on the sea-coast, near Cairnbulg Castle, an old seat of the Frasers, the estate now belonging to a branch of the Gordon family. The village of Cairnbulg adjoins that of Inverallochie.

CAIRNDOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Lochgoilhead, in the co. of Argyle, Scotland, 10 miles from Inverary, and 36 from Dumbarton. It is on the E. shore of Loch Fyne, near the head of the loch.

CAIRNEY, or CAIRNIE, a par. partly in the co. of Banff, and partly in the Strathbogie district of the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. It is situated in a hilly district between the river Doveran on the E., and the Isla on the N., and comprises the united pars. of Rathven, Botary, and part of Drumdelgy. The living, val. £210, is in the presb. of Strathbogie, and in the patron. of the Duke of Richmond. Here is also a Free church. The par. is about 7 miles long and 3 miles broad.

CAIRNEYHILL, a vil. in the par. of Carnock, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 3 miles to the W. of Dunfermline. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the linen manufacture. Here is an United Presbyterian church.

CAIRNGORM, one of the loftiest mountains of the Grampian range, situated on the borders of Inverness-shire and Banffshire, Scotland, about 55 miles to the W. of Aberdeen. It is at the southern extremity of Glen Avon, on the N. side of Ben Mac Dhu, and rises to the height of 4,050 feet above the level of the sea. The river Avon takes its rise in Loch Avon, more than half way up the mountain. The rock crystals, brown and yellow, for which Cairngorm is noted, have considerably declined in value, by reason of the importation of large numbers of similar stones from South America. The name Cairngorm signifies "blue mountain." The sides and base are well-wooded with fir-trees, and the summit is covered with snow during a great part of the year.

CAIRNHILL, a vil. in the co. of Ayr, Scotland, not far from Galston.

CAIRNRYAN, a vil. in the par. of Inch, in the co. of Wigton, Scotland, 5 miles to the N. of Stranraer. It is seated on the E. shore of Loch Ryan. The harbour is good, and vessels of any size can find shelter in the bay. Here is a chapel of ease and a Free church.

CAISTER-NEXT-YARMOUTH, a par. in the eastern div. of the hund. of Flegg, in the co. of Norfolk, 2 miles to the N. of Yarmouth. It is situated on the sea-coast, and is believed to be the site of a Roman camp opposite Garianonum, or Burgh Castle, in Suffolk. Roman coins have frequently been found. Here was also a mediæval mansion or castle, erected about the middle of the 15th century by Sir John Fastolf, a native of Caister, and a distinguished soldier in the French wars, to whose family the manor belonged. Before his death, in 1459, he is said to have founded a chantry or college in connection with a chapel in the Hall. The ruins of the castle, which was twice besieged, consist of part of the walls, a lofty round tower, and part of the gatehouse. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £942, in the patron. of the Rev. G. W. Steward, incumbent. The church, which is dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an old building with a lofty square tower. The registers date from the year 1563. Before 1608 Caister formed two parishes, which were then consolidated. Part of the tower is all that now remains of St. Edmund's. There are also a chapel of ease, and chapels belonging to the Wesleyans, Reformed Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists. The National and infant schools are constructed for 200 children. There are charitable endowments for the poor amounting to about £95 per annum.

CAISTOR, or CASTOR, a par. and market town, in the southern div. of the wap. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 23 miles to the N.N.E. of Lincoln, and 153 miles from London by road, or 159 miles by the Great Northern, and Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railways. Caistor is 3 miles from the Moortown station on the latter line. This par. is situated on the Wolds, and comprises the hmlts. of Audleby, Fonaby, and Hundon. Holton-le-Moor and Clixby are separate parishes, though annexed to the vicarage; they formed part of the prebend of Caistor, and the first-named is included in the wap. of Walshcroft. Caistor is a town of very ancient origin. It is believed to have been a Roman station, and many Roman antiquities have been found in the neighbourhood. Its British name was Caer Egarry, and its Saxon Thang Caestre. It was the site of a castle founded at a very early period, and the scene of a battle in 827, in which the King of Mercia was defeated by Egbert. The town stands on the side of a hill overlooking a wide extent of country, and is well supplied with water from several springs, which unite their streams and flow into the Ancholme. The streets are now lighted with gas, and the canal which joins the Ancholme and the Humber approaches within 3 miles of the town. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of chairs of elm and ash. There is a mechanics' institute with a good library, founded in 1850. Caistor is the seat of a Poor-law Union, the head of a County Court district, and a polling place for the northern division of the county. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln of the val. with the perpet. curs. of Holton-le-

Moor and Clixby annexed, of £215, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has been recently restored, under the direction of Mr. Butterfield. It stands on Castle Hill, the site of an old fortress, of the materials of which it was partly built. It is chiefly in the early English style, with a fine tower in the Norman style, and contains several ancient monuments, including a brass of the year 1460. There are chapels belonging to the Wesleyan, Free, and Primitive Methodists; a free grammar school, founded in 1630 by Francis Rawlinson, which has an income from endowment of about £300 per annum, and one exhibition at Jesus College, Cambridge; and a new parochial school, called the Dixon Testimonial School, founded in 1859. The other charities are of trifling value. There is a savings-bank in the town. Caistor church was formerly the scene of a curious ceremony on Palm Sunday, constituting the tenure by which an estate at Broughton was held. The holder, or his agent, had to crack a whip thrice in the porch, and then to hold it over the vicar's head during the reading of the second lesson; affixed to the stock was a purse containing some pieces of silver. Saturday is the market day. Large and important fairs are held on the Fridays and Saturdays before Palm Sunday and Whit Sunday, and on Old Michaelmas Day.

CAISTOR, or CASTOR, ST. EDMUND'S, a par. in the hund. of Henstead, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles to the S. of Norwich, and 2 from Swainthorpe railway station. It is situated on the small river Tees, or Tase, a branch of the Yare, near the Eastern Union railway. It is a place of very great antiquity, having been a chief city among the ancient Britons, and the site of the important Roman station Venta Icenorum. Its antiquity and early greatness are asserted in an old rhyme, which also affirms that the city of Norwich was built of its ruins. The Roman camp contained an area of 30 acres. Traces of the walls and part of a tower still remain. Numerous roads ran from Caistor to other important towns and stations, among which were London, Colchester, Bury, Brancaster, &c. Many Roman coins, chiefly of the Emperor Constantine, have been dug up within and near the camp. In 1844 a pure gold coin, bearing a fine impression of Nero, was picked up in a turnip field, and ten years previously a bronze figure of a satyr, and another resembling a foot, were found near the same spot. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with the perpet. cur. of Markshall annexed, £447, in the patron. of Mrs. H. Dashwood, of Caistor Hall, who is also lady of the manor. The church, which appears to have been built of the materials of the Roman rampart, stands within the area of the camp. The register dates from the year 1565. The charitable endowments produce about £40 a year.

CAISTRON, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothbury, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 4 miles to the W. of Rothbury. It is in a moorland district on the river Coquet.

CAITHNESS, a maritime co. of Scotland, situated at the north-eastern extremity of Great Britain, and bounded on the N. and E. by the North Sea, and on the S. and W. by Sutherlandshire. It is of irregular form, and extends in length from Duncansby Head in the N. to the Ord of Caithness in the S., about 40 miles; and in breadth from E. to W., at the widest part, about 30 miles. It is in circuit about 150 miles, including a coast-line of above 100 miles, and comprises an area which is variously estimated at 600 or 700 square miles. The county lies between 58° 5′ and 58° 40′ N. lat., and between 3° 0′ and 3° 53′ W. long.—In the earliest ages this district appears to have been occupied by the tribes called Logi, Cornabii, and Catini, which were probably Celtic; and it has been suggested that the present name, Caithness, may contain a relic of the name of the last-mentioned tribe. The county was part of the Roman division of Britain called Vespasiana, or Caledonia. At an early period the original inhabitants were attacked and subdued by the northern pirates; and the Scandinavian Jarls of Orkney, in the 10th century, reduced Caithness and Sutherland under their dominion. In the 14th century this county had become the seat of an extensive and important trade with the countries on the shores of the Baltic. A striking illustration of this is furnished in the fact that the weights and measures used in Caithness were at that period made the standards for all Scotland. Many ruined forts and names of places attest the presence and dominion of the Danes and Norwegians. The Keiths, Sutherlands, and Sinclairs became powerful families here in the middle ages, and the latter family is now represented by the Earl of Caithness.—The general aspect of Caithness is dreary and uninteresting. A range of hills separates it from Sutherlandshire, but the surface of the county is mostly flat. To the S. are the Morven or Morbhein mountains, and another range running parallel with them to the Ord of Caithness and the sea. The former range contains the Maiden Paps, and its highest summits rise above 2,000 feet. In the valley between these ranges of hills runs Langwell Water. Granite prevails near the Ord, and limestone in the northern range. The Old Red sandstone underlies the greater part of the county, which is almost entirely moorland, with scattered low hills. Spittle Hill, near the centre of the county, is the highest of these. There are about 30 lakes of small size and without the charm of beauty, and some rivers, none of which are navigable. Forss Water and Thurso Water, rising in the hills on the W. and S.W., run northward to the sea. The latter has a course of about 30 miles. Wick Water runs eastward from Loch Watten to Wick Bay; and Dunbeath, Berridale, and Langwell waters run in the same direction to the sea. Trout, salmon, and eels are found in the principal streams and lakes. The coast-line of Caithness is mostly rocky, with numerous bays, headlands, and caves. The N. coast terminates in two bold promontories—that to the W. called Dunnet Head, and that to the E. Duncansby Head, called by Ptolemy Berubium. Off the coast, in the Pentland Frith, is the island of Stroma, and near it the Swalchie whirlpool and the so-called "Merry Men of Mey," which are breakers caused, like the vortex, by the strong currents of the Frith. Off Duncansby Head are the Stacks, two detached rocks of freestone, swarming with sea-birds. Near this headland is the traditional site of John o'Groat's House, but of the house itself not a vestige is to be seen. From Houna Inn is the ferry to Stroma and the Orkneys. There are remains of numerous castles along the coast. A harbour was constructed at Wick in 1831, at a cost of £40,000, and its defect of being exposed to easterly winds is now being remedied. There are also convenient harbours at Thurso and Sandside Bay, besides several smaller ones. Dunnet Head, on which there is a lighthouse, is the most northerly point of Scotland and Great Britain. Granite, slate, flagstones, limestone, sandstone, and freestone are quarried at various places, and copper and lead ore have been obtained.—The climate is damp and cold, and the soil mostly a heavy clay or marl. Little wheat is grown, the chief crops being oats, beans, turnips, &c. Great advance has been made in the methods of cultivation, and in the condition of the farmers, under the auspices of Sir John Sinclair, who possessed 100,000 acres, being near a sixth of the county. Before his time there were no roads through the estate. He introduced Cheviot sheep farming, established fisheries, banks, &c., and improved the country to such an extent that the estate of Langwell, which he purchased for £8,000, has sold for £40,000. Many of the small farmers are also fishermen. Besides the native cattle and sheep, there are many of the Argyle and Cheviot breeds, and Leicester sheep. Farming, fishing, and stone-quarrying form the main occupations of the people. The herring fishery is the most important, employing about 700 boats (besides a large number from other districts), and about 12,000 persons. Salmon, cod, ling, and lobsters are also taken. The county contains large beds of peat, which is cut in the summer for fuel.—Caithness comprises ten parishes, and forms a presbytery in the synod of Sutherland and Caithness. Wick is the county town and the only royal and parliamentary borough. Thurso is a burgh of barony and a market town. These are the only towns in the county. There are several villages, chiefly fishing stations. Some of the inhabitants still speak Gaelic. Caithness returns one member to the imperial parliament, and Wick unites with Cromarty, Dornoch, Dingwall Tain, and Kirkwall in returning one. Until the passing of the Reform Bill in 1832, this county returned a representative to parliament alternately with Buteshire. The sheriff court for the county and the commissary court are held at Wick every Thursday during the session. Quarter sessions are held at Wick and Thurso, and small debt courts at Wick, Thurso, and Lybster. Population in 1851, 38,709; in 1861, 41,216. No important manufactures are carried on in the county.—The antiquities consist of the remains of castles, which are numerous along the coasts. One of the most remarkable ruins is Braal Castle, supposed to have been an episcopal residence, or a seat of the earls of Caithness. It is near Halkirk, on Thurso Water. There are stone circles at Bower and Steinster Loch. The rude structures called Picts' Houses are found in various places.—Barrogill Castle, on the coast of the Pentland Frith, is an old seat of the Sinclairs, earls of Caithness. The other principal seats are Watten, the residence of Sir R. A. Anstruther, Bart.; Thurso Castle, of Sir G. Sinclair, Bart.; Barrock, of Sir J. Sinclair, Bart.; Ackergill, of Sir G. Dunbar, Bart.; Castle Hill, of G. Traill, Esq., M.P., besides Hempriggs, Toftengall, Langwell, &c. The chief roads run from Wick along the coast, northward to Houna Ferry, and thence to Thurso; and southward to Lybster, Berridale Castle, Helmsdale, &c. There are also roads direct from Wick to Thurso and Castletown. Steamboats ply regularly between Wick and the Forth twice a week, and between Thurso and the Forth weekly through the summer.

CAKEMORE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hales Owen, formerly in the hund. of Brimstree, in the co. of Salop, but now in the hund. of Halfshire, in the co. of Worcester, not far from Hales Owen.

CALARY, a par. in the bars. of Newcastle, Rathdown, and Ballinacor, in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles to the W. of Newtown-Mount-Kennedy. It lies in a mountainous district, near the source of the river Liffey. There is a large tract of bog, and the surface rises at Douce Mountain to the height of 2,384 feet. Calary, which extends over an area of 19,584 acres, was made a separate parish in 1831. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, val. £33, in the patron. of the incumbents of the four contiguous parishes. The church, erected in 1834, is in the perpendicular style, with an embattled and pinnacled tower. There is much striking scenery, and fine prospects are obtained from several points in the neighbourhood. The chief residences are Luggela and Tithower.

CALBECK-HALTCLIFF, a tnshp. in the par. of Caldbeck, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 3 miles to the S. of Hesket-Newmarket.

CALBOURNE, a par. in the lib. of West Medina, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Southampton, 5 miles to the S.W. of Newport. It includes the chplry. and borough of Newtown, situated on the N. coast. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the cur. of Newtown, £464, in the patron. of the bishop of the dioc. The church, which is in the early English style, is dedicated to All Saints, and contains an old monument, with a brass of a knight who died in 1480. Near the village is Westover House, formerly the seat of the Holmes family. The bishops of Winchester, who formerly held the manor of Calbourne, had a seat at Swainston, 2 miles to the N.E., from which there is a good view over the western part of the island, the Solent, and the coast of Hampshire.

CALCEBY, a par. in the Marsh div. of the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles to the W. of Alford, which is a station on the Great Northern railway. The living is a vic. united with the rect. of South Ormsby, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew.

CALCETHORPE, a par. in the Wold div. of the hund. of Louth-Eske, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 6 miles to the W. of Louth, which is a station on the Great Northern railway. The living is a sinecure rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, and in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Faith, is decayed.

CALCEWORTH HUNDRED, one of the 18 subdivisions of the parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, situated in the northern parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N.W. by the hund. of Louth-Eske, on the E. by the German Ocean, on the S. by the wap. of Candleshoe, and on the W. by the hund. of Hill. It is in two divs. The Marsh div. contains the pars. of Aby, Anderby, Belleau, Calceby, Little Cawthorpe, Cumberworth, Gayton-le-Marsh, Hogsthorpe, Huttoft, Legbourne, Maplethorpe St. Mary, Maplethorpe St. Peter, Mumby, South Reston, Sutton-in-the-Marsh, Swaby, Theddlethorpe All Saints, Theddlethorpe St. Helen, South Thoresby, Tothill, and Trusthorpe, with the ext. par. lib. of Haugh. This div. comprises about 33,000 acres. The Wold div. contains the pars. of Alford, Beesby-in-the-Marsh, Bilsby, Claxby, Farlsthorpe, Hannah, Maltby-le-Marsh, Markby, Rigsby, Saleby, Strubby, Ulceby, Well, Willoughby, and Withern. This div. extends over an area of about 25,600 acres.

CALCOT, a tnshp. in the par. of Holywell, hund. of Coleshill, in the co. of Flint, North Wales, 2 miles to the S.W. of Holywell. It is near the river Dee and the Chester and Holyhead railway.

CALCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Chad, in the borough of Shrewsbury, co. of Salop, 3 miles to the N.W. of Shrewsbury. It is near the Shrewsbury and Chester railway, and is a joint tnshp. with Bicton.

CALCUTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Lower Heyford, hund. of Ploughley, in the co. of Oxford, 5 miles to the W. of Bicester. It is near the Oxford and Birmingham section of the Great Western railway.

CALCUTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Grandborough, hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 5 miles to the N.E. of Southam.

CALDBECK, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 6 miles S. of Curthwaite, and 8 miles to the S.E. of Wigton, which are both stations on the Carlisle and Maryport railway. The parish, which is 14 miles from Carlisle, is situated in a wild and mountainous country, on the river Caldew, and contains the tnshps., or graves, of High Caldbeck, Low Caldbeck, Caldbeck-Haltcliff, and Mosedale, and the small market town of Hesket-Newmarket. It was the site of a hospital for travellers, founded soon after the Conquest by Ranulph d'Engaine, chief forester of Inglewood. The manor was anciently held by the Lucys, Percys, and Whartons. Only a small part of the parish is under tillage, the rest consisting chiefly of moors and sheepwalks. High Pike is the loftiest hill, rising to the height of about 2,000 feet. Coal, limestone, lead, copper, and other minerals are found and worked here; and some of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of woollens and ginghams. Paper making, dyeing, and fulling are also carried on to a small extent. There are a manufactory for blankets and a small brewery. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £540, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is at Low Caldbeck, is dedicated to St. Kentigern. It is a very ancient structure, having been founded in 1112, but its original aspect is effaced by modern alterations. The rectory house is a fine building with a hall 16 feet wide by 32 feet long; it is supposed to be the old hall of the ancient hospital of Caldbeck. The rector is lord of the manor of Kirkland. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyans, and a meeting house of the Society of Friends, one of the oldest in the country. George Fox, the founder of the society, once lived at Woodhall in this parish. The parochial charities amount to £8 a year. Near the village the river Caldew runs through a fine glen, called the Hawk, passing under a natural arch of rock, and fl forming a double cascade by the hollows called the Fairies' Kirk and Fairies' Kettle. It afterwards takes an underground course for about 4 miles. The parish is of very great extent, comprising an area of 24,280 acres, of which not more than a third part is enclosed. Lord Leconfield is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

CALDBRIDGE, or CALDBERGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Coverham, wap. of West Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the S.W. of Middleham, It includes the hmlt. of Little, or East Scrafton.

CALDECOT, or COCKET, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Greenhoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles to the N.E. of Stoke Ferry, its post town. The living is a sinecure rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £6, in the patron. of Sir H. R. P. Bedingfield, Bart., who is sole proprietor of the parish. The church, long in ruins, was dedicated to St. Mary. There is no village.

CALDECOTE, a par. in the hund. of Longstow, in the co. of Cambridge, 4 miles to the E. of Caxton, and 8 W. of Cambridge, its post town. It is watered by a branch of the river Cam. The living is a vic. united with the rect. of Toft, in the dioc. of Ely, of the joint val. of £287, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Christ's College, Cambridge; the impropriate tithes having been given by Picot de Cambridge to the monks of Barnwell. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The register dates from 1728, previous to which year the church was a chapel to Bourn. There are charitable endowments worth £4 a year.

CALDECOTE, a par. in the hund. of Norman Cross, in the co. of Huntingdon, 7 miles to the S. of Peterborough. Stilton is its post town. The Great Northern railway passes near it. The manor was anciently held by the Hallidays, followers of the Earl of Huntingdon. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £156, in the patron. of William Wells, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. The parochial charities consist of a small bequest for a school, and the Poor's Estate, the latter worth £6 a year.

CALDECOTE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Towcester, in the co. of Northampton, 2 miles from Towcester.

CALDECOTE, a par. in the Atherstone div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, in the co. of Warwick, 2 miles to the N. of Nuneaton, its post town. It is situated on the border of Leicestershire, near the Trent Valley line of the London and North-Western railway, on which Nuneaton is a station. The par. is crossed by the Coventry canal. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £155, in the patron. of Kirkby Fenton, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to SS. Theobald and Chad, was completely restored about five years ago; it contains several monuments of the Purefoy family, and one of Nathan Wright, Lord Keeper. The charitable bequest, amounting to about £9 a year, was left by George Abbot, for the support of a school for poor children and for providing books. Caldecote House, a fine old mansion, formerly the seat of the Purefoys, was attacked during the Civil War by Prince Rupert and Prince Maurice, but was bravely and successfully defended by George Abbot (a son of Archbishop Abbot, who had married the heiress of the house of Purefoy), with only eight retainers and the ladies of his family, against the royalist forces. A tablet to his memory is still preserved in the chancel of the church, enumerating "his eminent parts, graces, and virtues," and recording the valorous defence of Caldecote House.

CALDECOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Shocklach, hund. of Broxton, in the co. palatine of Chester, 5 miles to the N.W. of Malpas. It lies near the river Dee, and contains about 430 acres.

CALDECOTT, a par. in the hund. of Odsey, in the co. of Hertford, 3 miles to the N. of Baldock, which is its post town, and a station on the Hitchin and Cambridge branch of the Great Eastern railway. The par., which contains only 318 acres, lies on the border of Bedfordshire. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £75, in the patron. of C. C. Hale, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. Icknield Street passed a little to the S. of this place, and in 1724 some Roman urns were found here.

CALDECOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Chelveston, hund. of Higham-Ferrers, in the co. of Northampton, 2 miles from Higham-Ferrers.

CALDECOTT, a par. in the hund. of Wrangdike, in the co. of Rutland, 4 miles to the S. of Uppingham, its post town. It is situated on the confines of Northamptonshire, on the banks of the rivers Welland and Eye. The living is a vic. united with the rect. of Liddington, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. John.

CALDER, or CALDER-BRIDGE, a vil. and chplry. in the par. of Beckermet St. Bridget's, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 4 miles to the N.W. of Ravenglass, and 9¾ from Whitehaven. Egremont is its post town. It is pleasantly situated near the sea-coast, on the banks of the river Calder, 1½ mile from the Whitehaven and Furness Junction railway, which has a station at Sellafield. The Calder flows along a beautiful and wooded valley to the sea, and is at this place crossed by a bridge. In a secluded spot on its banks are the picturesque ruins of an abbey founded about 1134 by Ranulph de Meschines. It was for monks of the Cistercian order, and was dedicated to the Virgin. At the Dissolution it was valued at £64, and given to Dr. Thomas Leigh. The remains of the buildings, which were in the Norman style, consist of part of the tower of the church, supported on clustered columns of excellent workmanship, about 24 feet in height, with capitals ornamented by a roll, whence spring the beautiful pointed arches which formed the cupola or lantern; five arches of the nave similarly supported; and portions of the western entrance. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, and in the patron. of Captain Irwin. The church, dedicated to St. Bridget, is a cruciform stone building, in the early English style of architecture. It has an embattled tower with pinnacles, and was erected in 1842 at the sole expense of Captain Thomas Irwin. Near the abbey ruins is a modern mansion called Calder Abbey, the seat of Captain Thomas Irwin, who is chief landowner. Vestiges of a Roman camp exist in the neighbourhood. Ponsonby Hall is near Calder Bridge. General Wyndham is lord of the manor.

CALDER. See CADDER, Lanarkshire.

CALDER, a river of Yorkshire, rising near Burnley, in Lancashire, and running in an easterly direction through Todmorden Valley, by Dewsbury and Wakefield, to Castleford, where it falls into the Aire. It receives several small tributaries in its course. This river is one of considerable importance, as forming part of a great system of inland water communication, having numerous canals connected with it. Among these are the Rochdale, Barnsley, and Ramsden canals, and the Calder and Hebble navigation. Near Leeds, the Leeds and Liverpool canal joins the Aire.

CALDER-BANK, a vil. in the par. of Old Monkland, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles to the E. of Glasgow. It is seated on the banks of the North Calder, a branch of the Clyde, near the Caledonian railway, which is here carried over the valley by a long viaduct, at the height of about 120 feet. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the coal-mines and iron-works.

CALDER-BRAES, a vil. in the par. of Old Monkland, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles E. of Glasgow. It adjoins the vil. of Calderbank.

CALDERBROOK, a joint tnshp. with Blatchinworth in the par. of Rochdale, hund. of Salford, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 4 miles to the N.E. of Rochdale.

CALDERCRUIX, a hmlt. in the northern div. of the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It is a station on the Edinburgh, Bathgate, and Airdrie railway.

CALDER, EAST, a par. united with Kirknewton, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 1 mile E.N.E. of Mid Calder, and 11 miles S.W. of Edinburgh. Here is an United Presbyterian church, and E. of the vil. is a large limestone quarry.

CALDER, MID, a par., containing a vil. of its own name, also the vil. of Bellsquarry, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 12 miles to the S.W. of Edinburgh. The vil. is 2 miles from the Calder station of the Caledonian railway. The par. lies in a fertile and pleasant district on the banks of the Almond Water, under Calder Wood, which is of considerable extent. Linhouse Water runs through the par. Coal and lead are found, and there are beds of limestone of immense thickness. This parish, with West Calder, was formerly the estate of the earls of Fife. The living, worth £158, is in the presb. of Linlithgow, in the patron. of Lord Torphichen. The church, which is very old, and apparently unfinished, is an elegant Gothic structure. There is a chapel belonging to the United Presbyterians. Calder House, pleasantly situated near the Almond Water, is the seat of Lord Torphichen. The gallery of this house contains a good portrait of Knox, and one of Queen Mary. Greenbank in this parish was the birthplace (1565) of John Spottiswoode, Archbishop of St. Andrew's, the church historian, whose father was at that time minister here. Two annual fairs are held in the village in March and October.

CALDER, WEST, a par. in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, containing a vil. of the same name, 16 miles to the S.W. of Edinburgh. It lies in a hilly country on the S. side of the Breich Water, a branch of the Almond Water. Limestone is quarried extensively, and there is abundance of coal and ironstone. The living, worth £158, is in the presb. of Linlithgow, in the patron. of John Drysdale, Esq. There is a Free Church preaching station and an United Presbyterian church. Castle Craig is the site of a Roman camp, and Roman antiquities have been found there. There are also remains of an ancient fort. The par. is about 10 miles in length and 5 in breadth.

CALDEWGATE, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Mary, locally in the ward of Cumberland, in the co. of Cumberland, but forming part of the city of Carlisle.

CALDICOTT, a par in the upper div. of the hund. of Caldicott, in the co. of Monmouth, 5 miles to the S.W. of Chepstow, its post town. It is situated in a fertile district on the N. bank of the river Severn, near the South Wales railway, and is crossed by the Pill, a small stream which falls into the Severn. The whole level tract extending westward from this place to the mouth of the Usk is called Caldicott Level, and was first reclaimed, drained, and cultivated by the monks of Goldcliff. It was formerly called the Moors, and was frequently inundated. In this parish are the ruins of a castle, said to have been founded by the Bohuns, earls of Hereford, and long held by them as High Constables of England. The walls with towers at the angles, the principal gatehouse flanked by square towers, and part of the great hall, still remain. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £260, in the patron. of M. H. Noel, Esq. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village, and there are charitable endowments, partly for education, worth £17 a year.

CALDICOTT HUNDRED, one of the 6 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Monmouth, situated in the south-eastern part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hunds. of Usk and Ragland; on the E. by Gloucestershire; on the S. by the Bristol Channel, and on the W. by the hund. of Wentlooge. It is in two divs. The upper div. contains the pars. of Caerwent, Caldicott, Chepstow, Itton, Llanvair Discoed, Matherne, Mounton, Newchurch, Penterry, St. Pierre, Portscuett, and Shire-Newton, with part of St. Arvan's, and the ext. par. district of Howick. This div. extends over an area of 23,850 acres. The lower div. contains the pars. of Bishton, St. Bride's Netherwent, Christchurch, Goldcliff, Itton, Llangstone, Llanmartin, Llanvaches, Llanvihangel, Llanwern, Magor, Nash, Penhow, Roggiett, Undy, Wilcrick, and Witston. This div. comprises an area of about 28,700 acres.

CALDICOTT, UPPER and LOWER, a hmlt. in the par. of Northill, hund. of Wixamtree, in the co. of Bedford, 1 mile to the N.W. of Biggleswade. It is near the Great Northern railway.

CALDRAGH, UPPER and LOWER, hmlts. in the par. of Clongesh, in the bar. and co. of Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, not far from Newtown-Forbes.

CALDWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Stanwick St. John, wap. of West Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles to the N. of Richmond. It was formerly an important town on one of the Roman military ways. There is a small endowed school.

CALDWELL, a chplry. in the par. of Rothley, in the co. of Leicester, near Melton-Mowbray, its post town.

CALDY, or CALDEY, a tnshp. in the par. of West Kirby, hund. of Wirral, in the co. palatine of Chester, 7 miles to the N. of Great Neston. It is situated near the mouth of the river Dee..

CALDY ISLAND, an ext. par. district to the borough of Tenby, hund. of Narberth, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 3 miles to the S. of Tenby. It lies off the W. coast of Carmarthen Bay, and was the site of a priory, founded by Robert de Tours in the first half of the 12th century, as a cell to the abbey of St. Dogmell's. The tower of the conventual church and other portions of the buildings still remain. A lighthouse was erected on the island in 1829, with a fixed light at an elevation of 210 feet above the level of the sea, and visible at a distance of nearly 20 miles. Its Welsh name is Faye Pyr.

CALEDON, a small market town in the par. of Aghaloo, bar. of Dungannon, in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 8 miles to the S.E. of Aughnacloy, and 86 miles from Dublin. It is seated on the banks of the river Blackwater, near the Ulster and Portadown, Dungannon and Omagh Junction railway, to a station on which, jointly with Tynan and Middleton, it gives name. The Ulster canal passes near Caledon. It was formerly called Kennard, and was the site of a castle belonging to one of the O'Nials. The town, which belongs to the Earl of Caledon, is a well-built and thriving place. The houses are mostly of stone, and the town contains parochial, National, and other schools, a dispensary, a police station, and militia barracks. There are large corn-mills near the town, employing many persons. The parish church of Aghaloo, which stands in the town, is a handsome edifice in the perpendicular style, with a tower and spire; there are also chapels belonging to the Roman Catholics and Wesleyan Methodists. Petty sessions are held in the town. No remains are left of the old castle. Caledon Hill, the seat of the Earl of Caledon, who takes his title from the town, stands in a large and beautiful park, on the banks of the Blackwater. There are several other pleasant seats, among which are Tynan Abbey, Glasslough, Crilley, &c. Saturday is the market day. Fairs are held on the second Saturday of each month.

CALEDONIA, the ancient name for the northern part of Scotland, subsequently comprising the country lying to the N. of the Wall of Antonine, and in more recent times applied to the whole of Scotland. It formed that division of Britain called by the Romans Vespasiana and was inhabited by variously named tribes of Picts, Gaels, or Britons, all belonging essentially to the same race. The name Caledonia is conjectured, by some writers, to be derived from the root, Cal or Col, signifying "a wood;" and to refer to the extensive hilly and wooded districts included in the region so designated.

CALEDONIAN CANAL, the name given to the great chain of lochs and canals extending across Scotland in a north-easterly and south-westerly direction, from the Moray Frith, along Glenmore, to Loch Eil, and connecting the North Sea with the Atlantic Ocean. The work was commenced in 1803, under the direction of Thomas Telford, the distinguished engineer by whom the district had previously been surveyed. Its completion occupied twenty years, and the whole line was opened in 1824. Of the entire length, which is nearly 60 miles, the cuts extend about 23 miles, the passage through the remaining 37 being by the naturous lakes. There are 28 locks in the whole line, 14 on each side of Loch Oich, which is the highest point, and 94 feet above the level of the eastern sea. The canal is 110 feet wide at the surface and 17 deep. It was projected to save the circuitous and dangerous navigation by the Orkneys and Cape Wrath, and large sums were expended on the works. The cost to the state, between 1803 and 1830, was £987,000, which had increased by 1849 to nearly a million and a quarter sterling. The revenue derived from canal dues is about £4,000 a year. The number of vessels passing through the canal has been increased by the use of steam-tugs, and many steamers conveying tourists and pleasure-seekers use this line of communication. About 30 years before the work was commenced, James Watt had been employed in a survey of the district, and entertained a favourable opinion of the project.

CALEHILL HUNDRED, one of the 16 hunds. or subdivisions of the lathe of Scray, in the co. of Kent, situated in the eastern parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the lathe of Aylesford and the hund. of Faversham, on the E. by the hund. of Felborough, on the S.E. by the hund. of Chart and Longbridge, on the S. by the hunds. of Barclay and Blackborne, and on the W. by the lathe of Aylesford. It contains the pars. of Charing, Little Chart, Egerton, Pluckley, Smarden, and Westwell, and extends over an area of about 21,980 acres.

CALF OF MAN, a small island at the southern extremity of the Isle of Man, 6 miles to the S.W. of Castletown. It forms part of the sheading of Rushen, and is about 4 miles in circuit. The coast is rocky and elevated, at some points rising more than 400 feet above the sea. The island abounds in rabbits and solan geese, the pursuit and capture of which is the occupation of the islanders. Two lighthouses were erected here in 1818, with revolving lights, visible the one at 23, the other at 25 miles' distance.

CALHANCE, a hmlt. in the par. of Killybegs, and bar. of Bannagh, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, not far from Killybegs.

CALHARNISH, CALLERNISH, or CARLOWAY, a district in the par. of Uig, island of Lewis, in the Hebrides, or Western Islands. It is on the western coast, and is the site of a Danish fort and a remarkable Druidical circle. A central stone, 13 feet high, is surrounded by a circle of 12 stones, each 7 feet high. On the N. side is a double row of stones, forming an approach to the circle, from the other three sides of which single rows radiate.

CALKE, or CAULK, a par. in the hund. of Repton and Gresley, in the co. of Derby, 4 miles to the N. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch station on the Burton and Leicester branch of the Midland railway. Derby is its post town. The par. lies on the edge of Leicestershire, and was the site of a priory of the Augustine order, founded before 1161, and endowed by Ranulph Earl of Chester, and his wife Maud. It was subsequently made a cell to the priory of Repton. Lead is found in the parish. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £34, in the patron. of Sir John Harpur Crewe, Bart. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a handsome Gothic structure with embattled tower, and elegant Gothic windows of cast-iron, erected by Sir George Crewe, Bart., in 1826, on the site of the former structure. In the interior is a marble monument, with the busts of Sir John and Lady Harpur. Calke Abbey, the seat of Sir John Harpur Crewe, was erected at the beginning of the 18th century. It is a noble mansion, surrounded by a park of 500 acres, well-stocked with deer. Harpur's Hospital, at the neighbouring village of Ticknall, is open to the inhabitants of Calke.

CALKERTON, a tythg. in the par. of Rodmarton, hund. of Longtree, in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles to the N.E. of Tetbury.

CALLALY, or CALLALEY, a tnshp. united with Yethington, in the par. of Whittingham, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland, 6 miles to the N. of Rothbury. Castle Hill, or Callaley Crag, is the site of a Roman encampment. A castle formerly stood here, some portions of which are included in the present mansion, Callaley Hall.

CALLAN, a par. and market town, in the bar. of Callan, in the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 9 miles to the S.W. of Kilkenny, and 82 miles from Dublin. It is on the borders of Tipperary, in a cultivated district on the Owenree, or King's River, a branch of the Nore. The town is very old, and was anciently walled, being a place of some importance. It was the site of several castles belonging to the O'Gloherneys, O'Callans, Butlers, and Comerfords. It is a borough by prescription, and returned two members to the Irish parliament from the reign of Queen Elizabeth till the Union, when it was disfranchised. The town was formerly governed by a corporation, composed of a sovereign, burgesses, and freemen, but is now under the Towns' Commission Act. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There is a large corn-mill. Callan is the seat of a Poor-law Union and a chief police station. Limestone is abundant in the neighbourhood, and is quarried and burnt for farming purposes. The town chiefly belongs to Viscount Clifden, and gives the title of viscount to the Fieldings, earls of Denbigh. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, of the annual val. with five other rects. and vics. united, of £1,845 gross, or £1,200 net, in the patron. of the Marquis of Ormond. The church was formerly part of a monastery of the Augustine order, founded in the 15th century by James Earl of Ormond. It has a monument to the Comerfords, and some very old sculptured tombstones. A friary was founded here in 1810, for monks of the Augustine order. The chapel is a stone structure in the early English style, with a groined roof, and an altarpiece copied from a work of Domenichino. It stands by the river, opposite the ruins of the old abbey. There are parochial and National schools, a loan fund, a dispensary, and the Union poorhouse. The chief residence is West Court, formerly the seat of Viscount Callan, now of H. C. Gregory, Esq. Tuesday and Saturday are the market days, but the pig market is discontinued. Fairs are held on the 4th May, the 13th June, the 10th July, the 21st August, the 10th October, the 4th November, and the 14th December.

CALLAN BARONY, one of the 11 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, situated in the western part of the co., and bounded by the bars. of Shillelogher and Kells on the N., E., and S., and by the bar. of Kells and the co. of Tipperary on the W. It comprises the par. of Callan, with part of Killaloe, and has an area of about 5,650 acres.

CALLAUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Much Wenlock, borough of Wenlock, in the co. of Salop, 2 miles from Much Wenlock.

CALLENDER, or CALLANDER, a par. and market town, in the Monteith district of the co. of Perth, Scotland, 15 miles to the N.W. of Stirling. It is situated on the edge of the Highlands, at the head of the river Teith, and contains the vil. of Kilmahog. The Dunblane, Doune, and Callander railway, a branch of the Scottish Central, has a station in the town. The scenery of the neighbourhood is singularly beautiful and varied. The Teith, rising in lochs Lubnaig and Vennachar, flows through a charming valley, and is crossed at Callander by a bridge of three arches. The mountain Ben Ledi, about 3,000 feet high, rises near the village. Within a mile is the Pass of Leny, commanding fine prospects. Loch Katrine is within the parish. The lands along the valley are fertile and cultivated; the higher grounds are chiefly sheep-walks. Slate, limestone, and some lead, are found. The river and lakes contain abundance of salmon and pike. The living, which is in the presb. of Dunblane, and in the gift of the crown, varies with Fear's prices, but is worth about £200. The church, which forms one side of a small square, is a handsome edifice. There is a chapel of ease at the Trosachs, and a Free church at Callender; there is also an Episcopal chapel. In the vicinity of the village are many seats of the gentry. Bruce, the African traveller, had a hunting-seat at Ardchullery, in this parish. Thursday is the market day. Fairs for cattle are held on the 21st March and the 16th May. The par. is 24 miles in length and from 6 to 12 miles broad. From the village there is daily communication with Stirling by rail, and ample facilities for visiting the Trosachs and other localities in the neighbourhood.

CALLERTON, BLACK. See BLACK CALLERTON, Northumberland.

CALLERTON, HIGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Ponteland, Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 7 miles to the N.W. of Newcastle.

CALLERTON, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Ponteland, Castle ward, in the co. of Northumberland, close to High Callerton.

CALLIAGHISTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Rathcoole, bar. of Newcastle, in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 10 miles to the S.W. of Dublin.

CALLINGTON, or KELLINGTON, a par. and market town, in the middle div. of the hund. of East, in the co. of Cornwall, 11 miles to the S. of Launceston, 9 miles from the Saltash and Liskeard stations on the Cornwall railway, and 213 miles from London. It is situated under Kit Hill, on Hengeston Down, which is 1,067 feet above the sea, and commands a magnificent prospect. Granite, greywacke, and trap are the prevailing rocks, and there are mines of tin, copper, lead, and manganese in the neighbourhood. The town, which consists chiefly of one broad street, is lighted with gas, and of late years has been much improved, containing some good shops and private houses. A few persons are employed in the woollen manufacture, which was once carried on extensively. There is a convenient courthouse, bank, market-place, and an excellent hotel with assembly-room. Petty sessions are held, and polling for the county elections takes place in the town. Callington was formerly a borough, having obtained the elective franchise in the reign of Elizabeth (1585), from which time it continued to send two representatives to parliament until disfranchised under the Reform Act in 1832. A portreeve is still annually appointed at the court-leet of the lord of the manor, Lord Ashburton, who retains in his possession, as a badge of authority, the ancient silver mace, inscribed with the armorial bearings of the Assheton family, and the date 1583. The magistrates hold petty sessions on the first Thursday in every month. There is a literary institution, with reading-room, and lectures are delivered weekly during the season. The living is a rect. united to the mother church of Southill, in the dioc. of Exeter. There are glebes in both parishes, and the tithes have been commuted at £750; Lord Ashburton is pat. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, has been tastefully restored under the direction of J. P. St. Aubyn, Esq., and was reopened for Divine service on May 12th, 1859. It is a large edifice, almost wholly rebuilt by Nicholas de Assheton, one of the justices of the Court of King's Bench, who died in 1465, and was interred here. The church contains monuments to the founder and to Lord Willoughby de Broke, to whom the manor belonged, and who died in 1502. There are in the town chapels for Wesleyans, Independents, and other Dissenters, and a free school for boys, founded by Lord Clinton. In the churchyard is part of an ancient cross, sculptured with the Crucifixion, St. Mary with the Holy Child in her arms, and monks praying. About 1 mile to the S. of the town is an ancient oratory and baptising well, called Dupath Chapel, of the 15th century. King Arthur is related to have had his palace here, and to have kept his court at Callington under the name of "Killywich." There is a large National school for boys and girls. Markets for corn and provisions are held on Wednesday, and one much frequented by dealers, called Regraters, from Plymouth and Devonport. A large cattle market is held on the first Wednesday in every month, and there are four annual fairs, viz. on the second Thursday in March, first Thursday in May, first Thursday after October 19th, and the second Thursday in November.

CALLIS COURT, and CALLIS GRANGE, a hmlt. and tnshp. in the par. of St. Peter, Isle of Thanet, hund. of Ringslow, lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, 2 miles to the N. of Ramsgate.

CALLIVER, a tnshp. united with the hmlts. of Berrach and Bryngwyne, in the par. of Llanfihangel-Aberbythych, hund. of Iskennen, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 2 miles to the W. of Llandeilofawr. It is near the river Towy.

CALLOES. See KELLAWAYS, Wilts.

CALLOW, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Wirksworth, in the co. of Derby, 2 miles to the S.W. of Wirksworth. Near the village is Callow Hall.

CALLOW, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles to the S. of Hereford. It is near the Newport section of the West Midland railway, being 2½ miles E. of the Tram Inn station. The living is a perpet. cur. united to the vic. of Dewsall, val. £80, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a square parapeted tower, and was rebuilt in 1830. On a hill are remains of two Roman camps. The par. contains 621 acres, principally belonging to the governors of Guy's Hospital, who are lords of the manor.

CALLOWHILL, a chplry. in the par. of Knockninny, in the co. of Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S.W. of Lisnaskea. Fairs are held in March, August, and December.

CALLWEN, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Glyntawe, par. and hund. of Devynnock, in the co. of Brecknock, South Wales, 7 miles to the W. of Brecknock.

CALMSDEN, a tythg. in the par. of North Cerney, hund. of Rapsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 5 miles to the N. of Cirencester.

CALNADULACH, a vil. in the Muckairn district of the par. of Ardchattan, in the co. of Argyle, Scotland, not far from Lorn. It is on the S. shore of Loch Etive.

CALNE, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Calne, in the co. of Wilts, 30 miles to the N.W. of Salisbury, and 87 miles W. from London by road, or 99 miles by the Great Western railway, which has a station at Chippenham, 6 miles from Calne. The parish is crossed by a small stream called the Marlan, a branch of the Avon, and contains the tythgs. of Beversbrook, Blackland, Calstone, Eastmead-Street, Quemerford, Stock, Stockley, Studley, Whetham, and Whitley. The town has water communication with London and Bristol, by means of a branch of the Wiltshire and Berkshire canal, and a branch railway to join the Great Western line at Chippenham is designed.—Calne is a very ancient town, and is conjectured to have been connected, in its origin, with a Roman station in the vicinity. It was the site of a palace or castle of the kings of Wessex, of which there are no remains; some local names, however, indicate its existence. A grand synod, over which the famous Archbishop Dunstan presided, was held at Calne in 977, for the settlement of a dispute between the monks and the clergy. The controversy was closed by an irresistible argument: the floor of the room giving way, some of the clergy being killed, and Dunstan and his monks escaping by miracle. In the Norman survey this town is named Calne, and is spoken of as a royal demesne.—The town is pleasantly situated in a valley, the ground rising eastward towards the chalk downs. It consists chiefly of one long street, with a few smaller ones branching from it. It is paved and lighted with gas; the houses, mostly of stone, presenting a pleasant aspect. There is a convenient townhall with market-house.—The woollen cloth manufacture, formerly an important part of the trade of Calne, is no longer carried on. Some of the factories are converted into flour-mills. There are also flax-mills and paper-mills.—Calne is a borough by prescription, and returned members to parliament in the reign of Edward I. From the reign of Richard II the borough was regularly represented by two members to the passing of the Reform Act in 1832. Under that Act it returns one member. The limits of the parliamentary borough include the parish and old borough, with parts of Blackland and Calstone-Wellington; containing together a population of 5,151, according to the census of 1861, against 5,195 in 1851, showing a decrease of 44 in the decennial period. The local government is vested under the Reform Act in a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the style of the "guild, stewards, and burgesses of the borough of Calne." Calne is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and the head of a County Court district. There are a Local Board of Health, established by Act of Parliament, 15 and 16 Vict., cap. 42; two branch banks, and a savings-bank. The Union poorhouse is at Northfield; it is a handsome structure in the Italian style.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £769, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is a large and handsome structure partly in the early English style, but exhibiting also the Norman and other styles, with a fine embattled and pinnacled tower on the N. side. The latter was erected by Inigo Jones. In the church are several monuments, including one to a gipsy king. The register dates from the year 1529. There is a chapel of ease, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, the cur. of which is annexed to the vic. Christ Church is a new district church, founded about 1840, at Derryhill, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,*worth £130, in the gift of the vicar of the parish. The Society of Friends, Baptists, and Wesleyan Methodists have chapels in the town. There is a free school, founded and endowed by John Bentley in 1660, in connection with which are two exhibitions at Queen's College, Oxford, founded in 1730 by Sir Francis Bridgman. The income of the school is about £50 per annum. A training school for domestic servants is established, and there are also National and infant schools, and a children's hospital. The parochial charities amount altogether to about £160 a year. A literary institute has been founded in the town, and a friendly society, under the patronage of the Marquis of Lansdowne.—Bowood, adjoining this parish, contains the fine seat of the Marquis of Lansdowne, who holds the manor of Calne, anciently belonging to the Cantilupes and the Zouches. Cherhill, with the gigantic figure of a horse, cut about 1780 on the side of a chalk hill, is 3 miles from Calne. In the neighbourhood many interesting fossils are found.—Tuesday is the market day, and fairs for the sale of cattle and sheep are held on the 6th May and the 29th September.

CALNE HUNDRED, one of the 29 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Wilts, situated in the north parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of Kingsbury, on the E. by the hund. of Selkley, on the S. by the hunds. of Swanborough and Potterne, and on the W. by the hund. of Chippenham. It contains the pars. of Berwick-Bassett, Blackland, Calne, Calstone-Wellington, Cherhill, Compton-Bassett, Heddington, and Yatesbury. The hund. comprises an area of about 21,540 acres.

CALOORT, a hmlt. in the par. of Clonca, bar. of Innishowen, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles to the N.W. of Malin. It is on the seacoast, near Malin Head.

CALOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Chesterfield, hund. of Scarsdale, co. of Derby, 2 miles E. of Chesterfield, which is a station on the Midland railway. The inhabitants are employed in the neighbouring coal-works.

CALRY, a par. in the bar. of Carbury, in the co. of Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, not far from Sligo. It lies in a fertile district, near Lough Gill, on the banks of the river Garvogue, and contains part of the town of Sligo, and the vils. of Ballytivnan and Newtown Anderson. It formed part of the old district called by the Irish Calruidhe. Limestone is quarried in the par. The living is a vic. united with that of St. John's, Sligo. There are several pleasant residences of the gentry.

CALSHOT CASTLE, an ext. par. district, in the lib. of Dibden, Southampton div. of the co. of Hants, 6 miles to the S. of Southampton. The castle, which stands on a point of land running out into Southampton Water, was built by Henry VIII. There are a lighthouse and a coastguard station.

CALSTOCK, a par. in the middle div. of the hund. of East, in the co. of Cornwall, 5 miles to the E. of Callington. Tavistock is its post town. It is pleasantly situated on the borders of Devonshire, on the banks of the navigable river Tamar, across which is a ferry, and is crossed by the Tavistock canal. Granite is the prevailing rock in the neighbourhood, and there are mines of copper, tin, lead, and manganese. The Tamar contains abundance of salmon trout. Calstock is a port subordinate to the port of Plymouth. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £510, in the patron. of the Prince of Wales. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. It is built of granite, with a lofty pinnacled tower, and contains a chapel of the Edgecumbe family, and several old monuments. The Baptists have a chapel in the town. The rect. was held by Launcelot Blackburn, afterwards Archbishop of York, by whom the parsonage was built in 1720. There is a mineral spring near the church. In this parish is Cothele, or Cotehele, a curious and interesting old mansion, the seat of the Earl of Mount Edgecumbe. It stands on a slope near the Tamar, and was in part built about the time of Henry VII. The structure is quadrangular, with a gatehouse on the S. side, and a lofty massive tower at one of the angles of the N. front. It contains a hall with a lofty arched roof of timber, and a chapel with a fine turret and an ancient font. The house is stored with curiously carved furniture, old armour and weapons, and various antiquities. Charles II. once visited it, and the bed is shown in which he slept; in August, 1788, it was visited by George III. and Queen Charlotte, with several of the royal children. Other seats in the neighbourhood are Harewood and Sandhill.

CALSTONE, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Calne, in the co. of Wilts.

CALSTONE-WELLINGTON, or CALSTONE-WILLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Calne, in the co. of Wilts, 3 miles to the S.E. of Calne, its post town. The manor was anciently held by the Cantilupes, Zouches, and Willingtons. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £192, in the patron. of the Marquis of Lansdowne. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

CALTEGFA, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfwrog, hund. of Ruthin, in the co. of Denbigh, North Wales.

CALTHORPE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Neithrop, par. and hund. of Banbury, in the co. of Oxford. The principal residence is Calthorpe Hall, originally part of an ancient hospital.

CALTHORPE, a par. in the southern div. of the hund. of Erpingham, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the N. of Aylsham, its post town, and 7 S. of Cromer. It is situated on the banks of the river Bure. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £143, in the patron. of Sir W. Foster, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The register dates from the year 1544. The Earl of Orford is lord of the manor, and impropriator of the rectory. The charitable endowments consist of the produce of the town lands, amounting to £23 a year, given by unknown donors for the payment of the war tax in former times.

CALTHWAITE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hesket-in-the-Forest, Leath ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 7 miles to the N. of Penrith. It is seated on the W. bank of the river Petterill, here crossed by a bridge, and is a station on the Lancaster and Carlisle railway.

CALTON, a district par. formed out of the pars. of Blore, Croxden, Mayfield, and Waterfall, hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 8 miles to the N.E. of Cheadle. Leek is its post town. It is near the river Dove. The living is a don. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £86, in the patron. of the Vicar of Mayfield. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and is situated within the parish of Mayfield.

CALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Malham, wap. of Staincliff and Ewcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles to the N.W. of Skipton. It is on the E. bank of the Aire, near the north-western branch of the Midland railway. There is a small endowed school in the village. Lambert, the parliamentary general in the Civil War, was born at Calton in 1619.

CALTON, MID, a quoad sacra par. in Barony par., in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, in the eastern suburbs of Glasgow. The living is in the presb. of Glasgow, and in the gift of the crown.

CALTRA, a vil. in the par. of Killoselan, bar. of Tiaquin, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, near Castle-Blakeney. Fairs are held on the 14th May, the 16th July, the 21st September, and the 14th December.

CALTRAGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Cam, bar. of Athlone, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 10 miles to the N.W. of Athlone.

CALTRAGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Clare, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, not far from Headford, and the eastern shore of Lough Corrib.

CALTRAGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ratheline, in the co. of Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to the S. of Lanesborough. It is on the eastern shore of Lough Ree.

CALVELEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Bunbury, hund. of Eddisbury, in the co. palatine of Chester, 13 miles to the S.E. of Chester. It is a station on the Crewe and Chester branch of the London and North-Western railway. The Chester canal passes near the township. Calveley was the seat and the estate of the famous Sir Hugh Calveley, who distinguished himself in the French wars of Edward III. and Richard II. Calveley Hall is now the property of the Davenports of Capesthorne.

CALVER, a hmlt. in the par. of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, in the co. of Derby, 4 miles to the N. of Bakewell. It is on the banks of the river Derwent. Limestone is quarried and burnt here, and some of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton trade.

CALVERHALL, CORRA, a chplry. in the par. of Prees, hund. of North Bradford, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles to the S.E. of Whitchurch, 6 N. of Market Drayton, and 160 N.W. of London. It is near the Crewe and Shrewsbury branch of the London and North-Western railway, on which Prees is a station. It includes the hmlts. of Millenheath and Willaston. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £65, in the patron. of J. W. Dod, Esq., M.P. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a Gothic edifice, recently erected by J. W. Dod, Esq., who is chief landowner, and resides at a noble mansion called Cloverly. Viscount Hill is lord of the manor.

CALVERLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Tiverton, in the co. of Devon, 2 miles to the N.W. of Tiverton, its post town, which is a station on the Bristol and Exeter railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £161, in the patron. of G. W. Owen, Esq. There are some charities of trifling value. The principal residence is Calverleigh Hall.

CALVERLEY, a par. in the wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N.W. of Leeds, its post town. It is situated near the river Aire and the Liverpool canal, and is a station on the Leeds, Bradford, and Skipton branch of the Midland railway. The par., which extends over an area of about 9,000 acres, includes the populous districts of Farsley, Idle, and Pudsey, and the tnshp. of Bolton, comprising together a population of near 30,000. The inhabitants are employed in the woollen and worsted manufactures, which are carried on extensively in this part of the country. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £230, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Wilfrid, and contains monuments of the Calverley family and others. There are charitable endowments for the poor, amounting to £54 per annum. At Apperley Bridge, a vil. partly in the tnshp. of Calverley, is a large school, founded in 1812 for the sons of Wesleyan ministers. Calverley Hall, an old mansion of the time of Henry VI., was the scene, in 1604, of a double murder by Walter Calverley, which was the subject of the old play called the "Yorkshire Tragedy." The chplries. of Farsley, Idle, and Pudsey now form district pars. with their separate ecclesiastical establishments and schools.

CALVERLEY-WITH-FARSLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Calverley, wap. of Morley, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N.E. of Bradford. It is situated in Airedale, near the Midland railway, and contains the vil. of Calverley Moor and the hmlts. of Bagley, Rodley, Woodhall Hill, and Wolmersley Row. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Calverley. The church is dedicated to St. John the Evangelist.

CALVERT HOUSE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Muker, par. of Grinton, in the wap. of Gilling, North Riding of the co. of York, near Muker.

CALVERTON, a par. in the hund. of Newport, in the co. of Buckingham, 1 mile to the S. of Stony-Stratford, its post town. It lies on the border of Northamptonshire, on the banks of the river Ouse, near the Buckinghamshire canal, and not far from the London and North-Western railway. The inhabitants are employed in the lace manufacture and in lime burning. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £346, in the patron. of the Earl of Egmont. The church is dedicated to All Saints. It was erected in 1818 by Lord Arden, and stands near the site of a Roman camp. The parochial charities amount to £17 a year.

CALVERTON, a par., tnshp., and vil. in the southern div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, in the co. of Nottingham, 7 miles to the N. of Nottingham, its post town. The manufacture of hosiery is carried on extensively here, and some of the workpeople are employed in the stone-quarries. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £127. The church is dedicated to St. Wilfrid. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Baptists have chapels, and there is a free school endowed with £42 a year. The charities for the poor produce about the same amount. The stocking-frame was invented about the end of the 16th century by the Rev. William Lee, a native of Calverton, and for a time curate of this parish. There are at present about 400 frames at work in this village alone. Calverton Hall is the seat of Lady Sherbrooke.

CALWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellastone, hund. of Totmonslow, in the co. of Stafford, 7 miles to the N. of Uttoxeter. It is situated on the confines of Derbyshire, on the banks of the river Dove. This tnshp. was the site of a priory of the Dominican order, founded before 1148, and given by Henry VIII. to the monks of Merton, in Surrey. Calwick Abbey is the seat of C. Granville, Esq., and contains a good collection of paintings, including some family portraits by Sir Thomas Lawrence.

CAM, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Berkeley, in the co. of Gloucester, 1 mile to the N. of Dursley, its post town. It is situated on the small river Cam, a feeder of the Severn, and is a station on the Dursley branch of the Bristol and Birmingham railway. This district, which lies low and is liable to inundations, contains much rich pasture land, and is noted for its cheese. The woollen manufactories give employment to some of the inhabitants. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. with the perpet. cur. of Lower Cam, £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. George. Here are free schools for boys and girls, founded by Frances Hopton in 1730, the income of which is about £160 per annum, and a National school. The other charitable endowments are worth about £60 a year.

CAM, a par. in the bar. of Athlone, in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 9 miles to the N.W. of Athlone. It lies in a fertile and cultivated district on the W. side of Lough Ree, and contains the hmlts. of Curraghboy and Caltragh, the former of which was a seat of the Dillons. Limestone is found in the parish. The living is a vic. united with that of Kiltoom, in the dioc. of Kilmore, Ardagh, and Elphin.

CAMAGH-BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Fore, in the co. of Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles to the N.W. of Castle Pollard.

CAMAGHTAGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Clonca, bar.

of Innishowen, in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, near Malin.

CAMAROSS, a hmlt. in the bar. of West Shelmaliere, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N.W. of Taghmon.

CAMBERFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Tamworth, hund. of Hemlingford, in the co. of Warwick, 2 miles to the N. of Tamworth. The Midland West Branch railway, on which Tamworth is a station, passes by this place.

CAMBERWELL, a par. in the eastern div. of the hund. of Brixton, in the co. of Surrey, 3 miles to the S. of St. Paul's, London. The original par. of Camberwell extended over an area of about 4,342 acres, including within its limits the pleasant suburban districts of Dulwich, Herne Hill, and Peckham, with a considerable extent of open country.—This place is mentioned in Domesday Book as Cambrewell, and a church appears to have existed here before that survey was made. The Grand Surrey canal, which joins the Thames opposite Shadwell, terminates near Camberwell-road; and the South-Eastern railway touches the southern extremity of the parish. As one of the most pleasant suburbs of the metropolis, Camberwell contains many seats of the gentry and residences of wealthy merchants and citizens. The streets are lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are supplied with water by the South London company. The par. constitutes a Poor-law Union by itself. Camberwell is one of the polling places for the eastern div. of the co.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, of the val. with the perpet. cur. of Forest Hill, of £1,820, lately in the patron. of the Rev. J. Williams. The church is dedicated to St. Giles. It is a spacious and handsome edifice in the form of a cross, in the perpendicular style of architecture, with a tower and lofty spire, and was erected about 1844 from designs by Scott and Moffatt. It stands on the site of the old church, which contained several interesting monuments and brasses, but was burnt down in 1841. There are nine other churches of modern date. The living of St. George's is a cur., val. £500, in the patron. of Sir W. B. Smyth, Bart. The church, built about 1824, stands near the canal, and is of the Doric order of architecture, with a portico of six columns at the west front. The cur. of Camden church is of the annual val. of £900, and that of Emmanuel church of £300, both in the gift of trustees. Christ Church, situated in the Old Kent-road; St. Mary Magdalene, Peckham; and St. Paul's, Herne Hill, are also perpet. curs., the first two of the val. of £300 each, in the patron. of trustees; and the last, val. £500, in the gift of W. Stone, Esq. In addition to these churches, which have their several districts, schools, and ecclesiastical establishments as distinct parishes, there are three other places of worship belonging to the Established Church, viz. Peckham Proprietary chapel, East Dulwich chapel, and Dulwich College chapel. This last forms part of the munificent endowment called "God's Gift College, in Dulwich," which was endowed by E. Alleyn, the celebrated actor, in 1619. Adjoining it are the college and masters' apartments, and a gallery containing a fine collection of portraits and pictures, chiefly of noted actors, poets, and literary celebrities, recently thrown open to the public through the generosity of the trustees. In the charter chest of the college are preserved the diary and account book of Philip Henslowe, one of the most valuable documents extant in illustration of the drama and stage in the time of Queen Elizabeth. Here too are preserved the Shakspeare documents, recently of such thrilling interest in connection with the Collier question. The chapels belonging to the Independents, Baptists, Wesleyan Methodists, and other Dissenters are numerous, and several of them handsome structures. Here are a grammar school, founded and endowed by Edward Wilson in 1618, a green-coat school, and several other endowed schools. The Surrey literary institution is in Union-row. The par. contains almshouses for 60 aged persons, and the Union poorhouse. The charitable endowments for the relief of the poor, consisting of bequests by Sir Edmund Bowyer, Abigail Bowles, and Harriet Smith, and the produce of the poor's land, amount to nearly £300 per annum. There are a savings-bank and police stations.—Among the interesting spots in Camberwell, are the house in which Sir Christopher Wren lived, situated in Camberwell-road; St. Thomas' Watering, where pilgrims used to rest on their way to the shrine of St. Thomas-à-Becket, at Canterbury; Oak of Honour Hill, where Queen Elizabeth is said to have once dined under an oak; the curious old manor-house at Denmark Hill, with its fine hall and painted apartments; Grove Hill, formerly the seat of the eminent physician, Dr. Lettsom; near which is the site of the old house in which lived the uncle of George Barnwell, the murderer, and hero of a once celebrated tragedy. The spring from which Camberwell derived its name is near Grove Hill, and in many places the ancient Ermine Street may be traced. Camberwell cemetery is on high ground near Oak of Honour Hill. It has two chapels, and is pleasantly laid out. The seat of Sir J. Key, Bart., is on Denmark Hill; and that of Lady de Crespigny at Champion Hill. A pleasure fair is held annually in August on Camberwell Green.

CAMBLESFORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Drax, and wap. of Barkstone-Ash, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N. of Snaith. It lies near the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, on which Snaith is a station. Here are a small endowed free school and six endowed almshouses. The tnshp. shares the benefit of the free school at Drax. The chief residence is Camblesforth Hall, the seat of Sir C. Blois, Bart.

CAMBO, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Hartburn, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 11 miles to the W. of Morpeth, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the Wansbeck river. The branch railway from Morpeth to meet the Border Counties section of the North British railway passes near this place. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £118, in the patron. of the vicar. There is a small endowed school. Brown, the landscape gardener, was a native of this village.

CAMBOIS, or CHAMBOIS, a tnshp. in the par. of Bedlington, Chester ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 7 miles to the E. of Morpeth. It is seated on the coast, at the mouth of the Wansbeck, and is joined to North Blyth.

CAMBORNE, a par. and market town in the hund. of Penwith, in the co. of Cornwall, 4 miles to the W. of Redruth, and 266 miles from London by road, or 315 miles by the Great Western, Cornwall and West Cornwall railways, on the latter of which it is a station. The par. lies near the sea-coast, in the centre of an important mining district, and contains the populous districts of Tuckingmill, Treslothan, and Penponds. Granite and slate are the principal rocks in the neighbourhood. The mines of copper and tin are in a range of granite hills, extending westward from Redruth to Crowan. Dolcoath was formerly a copper-mine, but it is now worked for tin, of which rich lodes are found underneath the copper. It is about 2 miles to the W. of the lofty Carnbrea Down, and is sunk to the depth of above 2,000 feet. The various passages of this mine extend above a mile in length, and 2,000 persons are employed in working it. Of the other mines, which have been long worked and are of great depth, may be mentioned the East Wheal Croft, Cook's Kitchen, Wheal Gons, and Great Wheal Prosper—the last being a tin-mine and also yielding china-clay. The town, which has 14,000 inhabitants, contains some good houses, and has a neat appearance. Scattered over the parish are many cottages of the miners, and the residences of the owners, and directors of the works. There is a market-house, built by Lord de Dunstanville. Petty sessions are held regularly in the town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, of the annual val. of £600, in the gift of J. F. Bassett, Esq. The church is a fine old granite edifice in the perpendicular style, dedicated to St. Martin, and has been recently restored. It contains a sculptured altar-piece of marble, a carved oak pulpit, and several monuments of the Pendarves family. The Norman font, which was some time since removed to Tehidy, the seat of the Bassetts, has been replaced by a handsome one of Cornish granite and serpentine. In addition to the mother church there are three district churches, situated respectively at Tuckingmill, Treslothan, and Penponds; the livings are all perpet. curs., val. from £130 to £200, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. There are also chapels belonging to the Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, Roman Catholics, Bible Christians, and others, and a free school for 20 children, founded and endowed by Grace Percival in 1763, the income of which is £21 per annum. The parochial charities, including another bequest for a school, amount to £70 a year. The principal seats in the neighbourhood are Tehidy, Rosewarne, Mendarva (the residence of the Bassetts), and Rudarnes. In the parish are a holy well and a cromlech. Richard Trevithick, the engineer, inventor of the locomotive steam-engine and various machines, was a native of Camborne. Saturday is the market day. Fairs for cattle are held on the 7th March, Whit Tuesday, the 29th June, and the 11th November.

CAMBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Slimbridge, hund. of Berkeley, in the co. of Gloucester, 3 miles to the N. of Dursley. It was the scene of a battle in the reign of Edward the Elder between the Saxons and the Danes.

CAMBRIDGE, the county town of Cambridgeshire, seat of a university, municipal and parliamentary borough, and market town, forming a hund. of itself, 51 miles to the N.N.E. of London, or 57½ miles by the Great Eastern railway, on which it is a chief station. A branch line from Hitchen, on the Great Northern railway, joins the Great Eastern line here. The town is connected by other branch lines with St. Ives and Huntingdon to the N.W., and with Newmarket, Bury St. Edmund's, and Ipswich to the E. The East Anglian, meeting the Great Eastern railway at Ely, connects Cambridge with Lynn Regis; and a branch line from Ely connects it, through March, with Peterborough.—Cambridge is a very ancient town, and is seated in a level country, on the banks of the river Cam, anciently called the Granta, a branch of the Ouse. It was the site of a Roman station—most probably that named Camboricum, on the Via Devana. Traces of old entrenchments exist in the northern part of the town. The Saxon name which appears in Domesday Book is Grantebrige, or Granta-brige. At that time the town contained 373 messuages. The river is still called the Granta above Cambridge. In 871 the town was burned by the Danes, who had a station on its site for about 30 years. It was again burnt by them in 1010. Within one or two years after the Conquest, while the Isle of Ely was held by the Saxon nobles and prelates, a castle was founded here by the Conqueror. The town and county were laid waste in 1088 during the dissensions relating to the cause of Robert (surnamed Curthose) Duke of Normandy. In 1207 King John granted the town a charter, authorising it to choose a provost or mayor. During the wars of the barons the town fell alternately into the possession of each party, and suffered much from both. It was taken by the barons in 1215, and the following year was held by the king, who was there in September, about a month before he died. The barons speedily recovered possession, and held a conference here with Louis the Dauphin. During the reign of Henry III. the town was several times attacked, and once pillaged, by the inhabitants of the Isle of Ely. There were numerous dissensions between the townsmen and the university during the 13th and 14th centuries, the first grave one occurring in 1249. The jealousy of the townsmen at the privileges and pre-eminence of the university occasioned a rising in 1381, when they burnt the charters and records of the university; in consequence of which, the king (Richard II.) deprived the burgesses for a time of their charter, and withdrew from them their privileges. In 1388 Richard II. held a parliament here. Cambridge was occupied by the Duke of Northumberland after the death of Edward VI. He was then Chancellor of the University, and after failing in his attempt to capture the Princess Mary, and secure the throne for Lady Jane Grey, he proclaimed Mary queen, but was immediately after arrested as a traitor. During the civil war in the reign of Charles I., Cambridge was garrisoned by Cromwell (1643), and held for the parliament. Cromwell had previously twice represented the borough in parliament.—From the flatness of its situation the town presents no picturesque features, but is seen to advantage from a distance. Visible on all sides are the tower of Great St. Mary's church, the lofty spire of Trinity church, and King's College chapel; and, internally, the buildings and grounds of the various colleges form the real attraction and beauty of the place. These extend along both banks of the Cam, encompassing the town on the W. and N. The two leading lines of street are Trumpington-street and Bridge-street, with its continuation through Sidney to Regent-street. These streets run nearly parallel with the river, and meet not far from the principal bridge. The town is above a mile in length from N. to S., a small part of it lying on the N.W. side of the river. Most of the streets are narrow, and the houses irregularly built, nevertheless there are many good hotels and shops of every description. Many improvements have been made during the last 30 years. The streets are paved and lighted with gas, and there is a good system of drainage. Near the centre of the town is the spacious market-place, now one of the best in the country, in which stands the guildhall, erected in 1717, and partly rebuilt in 1782. Here, too, is the old conduit, founded in 1614, by the renowned carrier, Thomas Hobson, by which a good supply of water is furnished from a distant spring. He likewise founded the spinning-house, and his tomb may be seen in St. Benet's church. On his death, in 1630, Milton wrote his epitaph on the Universities' carrier, "who died for heaviness that his cart went light." The household saying of "Hobson's choice," interpreted "that or none," originated from Hobson's rule to let the horses in his livery-stable in successive order without deviation. His stable is at the present day of great note. The borough gaol is a large octagonal building, with castellated front and gateway. It was erected in 1829, and has 57 solitary cells. The county gaol is near Castle Hill at the N. end of the town. In the same quarter is the handsome building for the county assizes court. The Fitzwilliam Museum is in Trumpington-street; but this with the colleges and other buildings connected with the university, will be described in the following article. —The Cam is crossed by many bridges, the principal public one being the iron bridge, of one arch, connecting Bridge-street with Ely-road. The river is navigable up to Cambridge, and there is a good carrying trade in corn, coals, timber, and other goods with the port of Lynn. There is a large trade in corn, butter, cheese, bacon, &c., for the supply of the university and the London markets. A peculiar custom prevails here of making up butter in pounds, each a yard in length. There are iron and brass foundries, brick and tile works, a tobacco manufactory, breweries, malting, and several extensive flour-mills. Cambridge is a borough by prescription. Charters and privileges were conferred on the townsmen by Henry I., John, Henry III., and other kings. The borough, first incorporated by Henry I., is now divided into five wards, and the government is invested in a mayor, 10 aldermen, and 30 councillors, with the style of the "mayor, bailiffs and burgesses of the borough of Cambridge." It has returned two members to parliament regularly since the reign of Edward I. The limits of the borough remain unchanged by the Reform Act. The mayor is the returning officer. The revenue of the borough is about £6,500 per annum, and its population, according to the census of 1861, 26,351, against 27,815 in 1851, showing a decrease in the decennial period, of 1,464, while the number of inhabited houses has increased from 5,194 to 5,411. The assizes and quarter sessions are held, and the county elections take place, in the town. Cambridge constitutes of itself a Poor-law Union, and is the he

f County Court and excise districts. Two newspapers, alled the Cambridge Independent and Cambridge Chronicle, re published weekly. Cambridge gives the title of uke to George, prince of the blood-royal.—The town s divided into 14 pars., all in the dioc. of Ely. The iving of All Saints is a vic., val. £130, in the patron. of he Master and Fellows of Jesus College. The church, neat stone edifice, with square embattled tower, tands in St. John's-lane, near Trinity and St. John's Colleges, and has a monument, by Chantrey, to the poet, Henry Kirke White, who died in St. John's College, nd was buried in this church. The living of St. Andrew the Great is a vic., worth £120, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Ely. The church, a handsome modern structure, is situated in St. Andrew-street, opposite Christ's College. It was partly rebuilt by Christopher Rose in 1643, and again rebuilt about 1845; it contains a cenotaph to Captain Cook and his three sons, and the grave of his widow, who died in 1835. The register dates from 1564. St. Andrew the Less is a perpet. cur., worth £48, in the gift of the trustees of the Rev. C. Perry. The church, which stands in the Newmarket-road, is a small structure, erected probably out of the ruins of the priory of Barnwell. Another church was built in Barnwell about the year 1830, dedicated to St. Paul, the living of which is a cur., worth £120, also in the gift of Perry's Trustees. The population of this suburb has vastly increased of late years, from 420 in 1811, to 9,000 in 1851. The living of St. Bene't (or Benedict) is a perpet. cur., val. £151, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Corpus Christi College. The church, which stands near that college, has an old Saxon tower, containing six bells, and a monumental brass of 1442. It has recently been enlarged and repaired. The register dates from 1539. The living of St. Botolph is a rect., val. £122, in the patron. of the President and Fellows of Queen's College. The church stands in Trumpington-street, S. of Corpus Christi College. It contains several old monuments, and was thoroughly repaired a few years ago. Over the communion table is a fine painting of the Crucifixion. St. Clement's is a vic., val. £56, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Jesus College. The church, which stands in Bridge-street, contains a monument to John de Helsyngham, Mayor of Cambridge, who died in 1329, and an octagonal font. The register dates from 1567. In 1821 a handsome tower and steeple were added by Granado Pigott, from the bequest of Mr. Cole, inscribed with his motto, "Deum cole;" and in 1855 the church was restored by public subscription, and a new organ built. St. Edward's is a perpet. cur., val. £66, in the gift of the Master and Fellows of Trinity Hall. The church, situated in Union-street, is built of stone, in the early English style, and contains a fine font, several monuments, and an altar-piece of Christ and the two disciples at Emmaus. Bishop Latimer preached here. The register chest contains documents as early as 1527. The living of St. Giles is a vic., val. with the perpet. cur. of St. Peter's united, £170, in the patron. of the Bishop of Ely. The two churches are in Castle-street, nearly opposite each other. St. Giles's, a very old building, but recently restored, contains a monument to Nicholas Carre, professor of Greek, who died in 1569. St. Peter's, which has a Norman entrance, has been long disused. It is only 29 feet long by 16 wide. The living of St. Mary the Great is a perpet. cur., val. £104, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Trinity College. This fine church, usually called the University Church, stands in the centre of the town; its western front forming one side of a square, the other sides of which are formed by King's College Chapel, the University Library, and the Senate House. It was rebuilt between the years 1478 and 1519, and is a spacious structure, in the perpendicular style of architecture, with a lofty and well-proportioned tower surmounted by octangular turrets, and forming a conspicuous object for many miles round. The tower, which contains a peal of twelve bells, was not erected till 1608. The interior of the church is light and beautiful, being 120 feet in length by 68 broad; it contains a fine organ, font, and register chest, with documents as early as 1535. The chancel has been recently restored. Queen Elizabeth was present at some disputations held in this church in 1564. The university sermons are still preached here, and there is a gallery at the E. end for the accommodation of the vice-chancellor, heads of colleges, noblemen, and doctors. Side-galleries were provided for the masters of arts and undergraduates, by a bequest of William Worts in 1709. There are two side chapels and several monuments. The remains of Martin Bucer, the reformer, were interred here, but were dug up in the reign of Queen Mary, and burnt with those of Fagius. The tomb was afterwards restored. This church is the point from which distances are measured. The living of St. Mary the Less is a perpet. cur., val. £95, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of St. Peter's College. The church, on the N. side of Peter House, in Trumpington-street, was erected in 1327, on the site of an older church, dedicated to St. Peter, and is in the perpendicular style. The east window is exquisitely enriched with tracery, and filled with ancient stained glass. It was used as a chapel to St. Peter's College until 1632. It contains a Norman font, and a register dating from 1558. The living of St. Michael is a perpet. cur., val. £95, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Trinity College. The church, situated in Trinity-street, opposite Caius College, was the burial-place of Fagius, and as such was laid under an interdict in 1556. After the burning of the remains of Bucer and Fagius at the Market Cross, the church was reconsecrated. In the church are a portrait of Charles I., with a Latin inscription, and the tomb of Dr. Conyers Middleton, principal librarian to the university, who died in 1750. This church was partly burnt down in 1849. The register chest contains documents dating from 1516. St. Sepulchre's is a vic., val. £123, in the gift of the parishioners. The church, which stands in Bridge-street, is a circular structure, erected in the reign of Henry I. in imitation of the church of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem. It was founded by the Knights Templars, and is said to be the most ancient of four similar churches still remaining in this country. It is 41 feet in diameter, and has a peristyle of eight very massive pillars, from which spring circular arches with zigzag mouldings. The whole was carefully restored in 1843, under the direction of the Camden Society. It has a handsome painted window over the altar, representing the Crucifixion. The living of Holy Trinity is a perpet. cur., val. £96, in the patron. of the Bishop of Ely. The church, situated at the S. end of Sidney-street, is a handsome cruciform edifice, in the Gothic style of architecture, with a western tower, surmounted by four turrets with pinnacles, and a good spire. It was probably erected about the time of Henry VI. on the site of a much older church, and was repaired a few years ago. It has several handsome windows of stained glass, a fine-toned organ, and register chest containing documents from 1566. Among the numerous monuments is an altar-tomb to Sir Robert Tabor, the first physician who administered bark in fever cases. He died in 1681. Here is also a monument to the young missionary, Henry Martyn, who died in the East in 1812. The cur. of Holy Trinity parish was held by the Rev. Charles Simeon. There are in Cambridge three chapels belonging to the Baptists, two to the Wesleyans, two to the Primitive Methodists, one to the Independents, one to the Roman Catholics, and one to the Society of Friends, which last is also used as a free library. There are several endowed free schools. The grammar school, founded in 1615 by Dr. Perse, senior fellow of Caius College, has an income from endowment of £450 per annum, and was rebuilt in 1842. It is for 100 scholars, and the parishes of Chesterton, Barnwell, and Trumpington share its advantages. The charity schools founded by William Whiston in 1703, and afterwards endowed by William Worts, have a revenue of about £60 per annum, and were long ago united with the National schools, founded in 1808. There are also British, industrial, infant, and ragged schools. A free library was founded in 1855, and a working men's college and reading-room have been more recently established. The lending library was opened in April, 1858, and received a munificent donation of books from the late lamented Prince Consort. The library is open daily from 12 to 4, and from 6 to 10 in the evening. A museum is attached to the library.—Among the numerous charitable institutions of the town, the principal is the general hospital, usually called from its founder, Addenbrooke's Hospital. It was founded by Dr. John Addenbrooke, and was opened for patients in 1766. Its governors are the chancellor, vice-chancellor, and two representatives of the university, the Bishop of Ely, the lord-lieutenant of the county, and several other official persons. The building, a handsome structure, faced with Roman cement, stands at the S. end of Trumpington-street. It was greatly enlarged after 1813, when John Botell bequeathed £7,000 for that purpose, and it is capable of accommodating 100 patients. Certificates of attendance on the lectures and practice of this hospital are admitted by the universities, the Royal Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons, and by the Society of Apothecaries. It is mainly supported by voluntary contributions. There are almshouses in various parts of the town, founded at different times, among which are those for widows of clergymen established by Captain Edward Story in 1692, with a revenue of about £800 per annum; Wray's almshouses, endowed with about £200 a year; besides Knight's, Perse's, Hobson's, &c. An asylum for infirm members of friendly societies was established in 1837. In the town are a mechanics' institute, a literary institution, a young men's Christian association, and a mendicity society, the object of which is to relieve deserving objects. The Union poorhouse, built in 1838 at the cost of £6,500, is in Mill-road, and is a plain brick building, capable of accommodating about 250 inmates.—The theatre is in Newmarket-road. It is a commodious building, and was re-decorated in 1854. The season usually commences at the end of August, and ends about the 10th October. Parker's Piece is a large cricket and pleasure-ground for the use of the public. The ground was laid out by Loudon, the botanist and landscape gardener. Near it is a spacious cemetery, recently formed, with an elegant chapel. The castle, situated at Castle Hill, from which there is a good view of the town, fell into decay at an early period, and there are now no ruins of it left; the gatehouse, which had been used as a prison, was taken down at the time of the erection of the County Court-house.—Cambridge was the site of nearly 80 religious houses, consisting of priories, convents, hostels, &c. Of these the most ancient was Barnwell Priory, founded by Picot, the sheriff, in 1092, for monks of the Augustine order, and afterwards enlarged by Payne Peveril, standard-bearer to Robert Duke of Normandy. At the Dissolution it had a revenue of £351. The remains of the priory are now used as farm buildings. Among the other religious houses were the Benedictine nunnery of St. Rhadegund, founded about 1130, and part of which forms the chapel of Jesus College; the Franciscan monastery, founded about 1225, on the site of which stands Sidney Sussex College; the Bethlemite friary, founded in 1257, and the only one of the order in England; the Dominican monastery, founded before 1275, on the site now occupied by Emmanuel College; the Augustine friary, founded about 1259; the Carmelite, or White Friars, in 1316, the site now forming the garden of King's College; the Gilbertine priory, about 1291; the friary de Sacco, St. Mary's friary, St. Anne's hospital, &c. In St. Giles's parish is a very curious old mansion called Merton Hall, or more commonly Pythagoras' School, erected in the 13th century, and now converted into a barn. The ancient custom of Plough Monday, with its begging and merry-making, is still observed by the peasantry of the neighbourhood.—The castle was occasionally a royal residence, and the town of Cambridge has frequently been honoured by royal visits. It was visited by Henry VII., Henry VIII., Queen Elizabeth, James I., Charles I., Charles II. (who was here on two occasions), William III., Queen Anne, George I., and George II. In 1843 it was visited by Queen Victoria and the late Prince Consort; and again in 1847, on the installation of Prince Albert as chancellor of the university. The British Association met here in 1833, and the Royal Agricultural Society in 1840.—Cambridge is the birthplace of several distinguished men; among whom are Sir John Cheke, tutor to Edward VI. (1514); Jeremy Taylor (1605); Richard Cumberland, the dramatist (1732); Orlando Gibbons, the organist and composer (1583); James Essex, the antiquary and architect (1723); Drake, author of a translation of Herodotus (1667); Bishops Goldsborowe, Thirlbye, and Townson; Thomas Bennett, a Protestant martyr, burnt at Exeter in 1530, &c.—Wednesday and Saturday are the principal market days, but markets are held daily. The corn exchange is a commodious building on St. Andrew's-hill, and is well attended on Saturday. The cattle market is at the back of St. Peter's-street, and is held on Saturday. There are two great annual fairs, the Midsummer, or Pot fair, and the Stourbridge fair. These are both held in the parish of Barnwell, and are proclaimed by the heads of the university and of the corporation. Midsummer fair commences on the 22nd June, and is for the sale of horses, cattle, pottery, &c.; Stourbridge fair, on the 8th September, for cattle, timber, wool, cheese, hops, &c.; it was formerly one of the greatest fairs in England, and lasted three weeks. The importance and duration of these fairs is considerably diminished. The races generally take place in July, on Midsummer Common.

Cambridge, The University of.—The foundation of this University, or of the school of learning out of which it ultimately grew, is a matter still involved in uncertainty. That in the 7th century a school on the model of some in France was established by Sigebert, King of the East Angles, is related by Bede in his "Ecclesiastical History." It has been conjectured that Cambridge was the seat of this school, and that Edward the Elder restored and extended it after the invasions of the Danes, building halls and appointing teachers. Although many students settled here at a very remote period, and had adopted the practice of living in community in inns or hostels, under the direction of a principal, it is believed that a systematic form was first given to their pursuits in 1109 by the learned monks sent to Cottenham by Joffred, Abbot of Croyland, the successor of Ingulph. These monks, four in number, going daily to Cambridge, at first taught in a barn, and when the number of their scholars became very great, began to give their instructions in different places, and at different hours. Such is the tradition. That the University was incorporated before 1231, the date commonly given, is inferred from the fact that its existence, with its chancellor and masters and various privileges, is recognised in royal letters of Henry III. of that year. The interference of the king was called for in consequence of the high rents demanded by the townsmen of the students for their lodgings. The same inconvenience had naturally arisen in other University towns, as at Naples and Bologna, and a similar remedy was resorted to in each case. By the king's letter it was appointed that the hostels, or students' lodgings, should be taxed by two masters of arts and two honest townsmen. This valuation was afterwards directed to be made every five years. Such was the origin of the taxors—officers till recently appointed, but with duties of another sort. The jealousies and contentions between "town and gown" showed themselves very early, and had to be suppressed by the civil power in 1249. In 1381 occurred the most serious outbreak between the townsmen and the University, excited by the increased and important privileges granted to the latter by Edward III. in 1333, and encouraged by the apparent success of Wat Tyler and his followers in the preceding year, 1380. It was on this occasion that the charters and records of the University were burnt. The riot was suppressed by the troops led by Spencer, the bishop militant of Norwich, and the town was for a time deprived of its charters. The exclusive ecclesiastical and spiritual jurisdiction of the University over its scholars was declared by Pope

Martin V. in 1430. The supremacy of the Pope was renounced by the University in 1534, and its charters were soon after surrendered to Henry VIII. They were restored in 1536. Of the numerous charters granted to the University, the earliest extant may be seen in Dyer's "Privileges of the University;" some of these, however, are certainly spurious. Preceding grants were confirmed by the great charter of Queen Elizabeth; in the 13th year of whose reign was passed the Act for the incorporation of both the Universities. Under this statute the style of this learned society is "The Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge." The elective franchise was first conferred by James I. in the first year of his reign, since which time the University has returned two members to parliament. The members of the Senate form the electoral body, and the vice-chancellor is the returning officer.—The University constitutes a literary federal republic, comprising 17 colleges or halls, each of which is a corporation governed by its own statutes, but bound also by the higher law of the University. The colleges, substitutes at first for the old hostels, are supported by the endowments of their founders and later benefactors. Each college has a share both in the legislative and executive department of the University. The place of assembly is the Senate House. All masters of arts and of laws, doctors in divinity, civil law, or medicine, whose names are on the college boards, or on the University Register, have votes in the Senate, to which belongs the supreme legislative authority. This body was till recently divided into two houses, or classes, denominated regents and non-regents. The former, or upper house, was composed of masters of arts of less than five years', and doctors of less than two years', standing, and was also called the white-hood house, from the white lining of the hoods worn by its members. The latter, or lower, also called the black-hood house, was composed of the masters of arts of above five years' standing. Liberty of voting in either house at pleasure was enjoyed by the doctors of more than two years' standing, and the public orator of the University. Now all members of the Senate vote as one body. An assembly of the Senate is called a congregation. There is a council, composed (under 19 & 20 Vict., c. 88) of the chancellor, vice-chancellor, 4 heads of colleges, 4 professors of the University, and 8 other members of the Senate. The business of the council is to consider and approve the graces, or projected laws, of the University, previous to their introduction to the Senate.—The executive body of the University consists of the following officers: the chancellor, usually a man of high rank, who presides over all cases relating to the University, and holds office for two years, or so much longer as shall be tacitly allowed; a high steward, to try cases of felony within the limits of the University, i.e. within 1 mile of the suburbs; a vice-chancellor, who (since the passing of the Act above mentioned) must be head of some college, and acts as magistrate for the University, town, and county; a commissary, who holds a court of record for all privileged persons and scholars under the degree of M.A.; an assessor, to assist the vice-chancellor; a public orator, the voice and pen of the Senate on all public occasions; two proctors, masters of arts of three years' standing, or bachelors of divinity, who attend to the discipline and behaviour of the students, and keep the peace of the University, in which they are assisted by two pro-proctors; a librarian; a registrary; two moderators, masters of arts, to superintend the general examinations for mathematical honours; three esquire bedells, who attend the vice-chancellor; a University marshal, and some other officers.—The University has a revenue of about £5,500 per annum, derived from various sources, including fees of the scholars, the profits of the University printing-press, the value of Burwell vicarage, Ovington rectory (in Norfolk), an estate at Barton, &c. The whole is managed by the vice-chancellor, and the accounts are examined by auditors annually appointed by the Senate.—The stipends of the professors are paid from the University chest, or by government, or from the estates with which the professorships have been endowed. These are the following: Lady Margaret's Professorship of Divinity, founded in 1502 by Margaret Countess of Richmond, mother of Henry VII., and foundress of St. John's College; the Regius Professorships of Divinity, Civil Law, Physic, Greek, and Hebrew, all founded in 1540 by Henry VIII.; the Professorship of Arabic, founded in 1632 by Sir T. Adams, Bart.; the Lord Almoner's Reader and Professorship of Arabic; the Lucasian Professorship of Mathematics, founded in 1663 by Henry Lucas, Esq.; the Professorship of Casuistry, or Moral Philosophy, founded in 1683 by Dr. Knightbridge; of Music, founded in 1684; of Chemistry, in 1702; of Astronomy and Experimental Philosophy, founded in 1704 by Archdeacon Plume; of Anatomy, in 1707; of Modern History, in 1724, by George I.; of Botany, in 1724; of Geology, in 1727, by Dr. Woodward; of Astronomy and Geometry, in 1749, by Thomas Lowndes, Esq.; the Norrisian Professorship of Divinity, founded in 1768 by John Norris, Esq.; the Professorship of Natural and Experimental Philosophy, founded in 1783 by the Rev. Richard Jackson; the Downing Professorships of Medicine and of the Laws of England, founded in 1800 by Sir George Downing, Bart.; the Professorship of Mineralogy, founded in 1808, and endowed by the government; that of Political Economy, in 1828; and the Disney Professorship of Archæology, founded in 1851 by John Disney, Esq. There are several endowed lectureships and preacherships, viz.:—Lady Margaret's Preachership, founded in 1503; the Rede Lecturer, who is annually appointed to deliver a single lecture in place of the Barnaby Lectureship in Mathematics, a very ancient foundation, and the Barnaby Lectureships in Philosophy, Rhetoric, and Logic, founded by Sir Robert Rede in 1524; the Sadlerian Lectureships in Algebra, 17 in number, founded about 1710 by Lady Sadler, which will shortly be amalgamated under a Sadlerian Professorship of Pure Mathematics; the Hulsean Christian Advocate and Lecturer—offices endowed in 1789 by the Rev. John Hulse, for the defence of the Christian religion and the illustration of Scripture, from which the Hulsean Professorship of Divinity, was established in 1850; and some others. Boards of the various studies were appointed in 1848, for the purpose of deliberating and reporting from year to year on the state of the studies and examinations in the University. The annual prizes of the University for the encouragement of learning amount to about £1,500; those of the separate colleges to about £800. Three-fourths of the former, and one half of the latter, are given for the classics and English composition. In addition to these there are the following:—two gold medals, worth 15 guineas each, given by the chancellor for the classics, and one for an English poem; four prizes of the same val. for Latin prose composition, given by the members for the University; three, worth 5 guineas each, for a Greek ode, a Latin ode, and epigrams, given by Sir Edward Browne, Knt.; the Porson prize, for a translation from English dramatists into Greek verse; two prizes, val. £25 each, for mathematics, &c., founded by Dr. Robert Smith; a gold medal, &c., val. £12, for an essay on some religious subject, given by John Norris, Esq.; a premium of £40 for a treatise on the truth of the Christian religion, given by the Rev. John Hulse; one of the same val. for an English poem, given by the Rev. Thomas Seaton; the prize for an essay on some mathematical subject, founded in honour of the astronomical discoveries of Mr. Adams, of St. John's; the Maitland, Le Bas, and Burney prizes.—The University scholarships are the following: five classical, founded by Lord Craven, the val. of which has been raised from £25 to £50; one classical, endowed by Dr. Battie, val. £40; one founded by Sir William Browne, val. £21; one classical, by Dr. Davies; eight scholarships for sons of poor clergymen, endowed in 1810 by Dr. Bell; the Pitt scholarship; six Hebrew (three at first), endowed in 1817 by the Rev. Robert Tyrwhitt, those of the first class val. £30, and those of the second, £20 each; and Crosse's scholarship for theology and Hebrew.—The University Terms, three in number, are fixed by invariable rules. October or Michaelmas Term begins on the 1st October, and ends on the 16th December; Lent or January Term extends from the 13th January to the Friday before Palm Sunday; and Easter or Midsummer Term from the Friday after Easter Sunday to the Friday after the last Tuesday but one in June.—The several orders in the colleges are the following: the Head, usually a D.D., and called Master in all the colleges except King's College and Queen's College, the head of the former being styled Provost, and of the latter, President; Fellows, usually doctors in one of the three faculties, M.A.s or B.A.s, in the various faculties; Fellow Commoners, who have the privilege of dining at the fellows' table; Pensioners, Scholars, and Sizars; the latter usually have free commons and various emoluments.—After entering the University every undergraduate must write his name in the University Register, which is called "matriculation," and the undergraduate of the first year is a "freshman;" in his second year he is called a "junior soph," and in his third year a "senior soph." No declaration or oath is now required previous to matriculation or taking a B.A. degree. The first University examination, called the "previous," or "little-go," takes place in the second Lent Term after the commencement of residence. The second examination for the degree of B.A., takes place in the January of the fourth year of residence, i.e. after ten terms for those who are candidates for honours. Those who take only the ordinary degree are called οἱ πόλλοι, or familiarly "the poll," and may pass their examinations in the previous June, i.e. in the ninth term after commencing residence. The lists of the successful candidates for honours are called "triposes." The classical tripos was founded in 1824, and confined to those who had already obtained mathematical honours; now, however, any undergraduate may be a candidate for classical honours, and may obtain his degree in the same manner as by the mathematical tripos. The same is now true of the moral and natural sciences triposes, which were established in 1851. In the mathematical tripos, three classes of merit are distinguished—the first, wranglers; the second, senior optimes; and the third, junior optimes. The "senior wrangler" is the foremost mathematician of his year. The last of the junior optimes is familiarly called the "wooden spoon." There are three classes also in the classical tripos. The terms of residence, examinations, and other academical regulations, will be found in the "Cambridge University Calendar," which is published annually. Honorary degrees were formerly conferred on privy councillors, bishops, and various classes of noblemen; but this practice was abolished by the Senate in 1826. Honorary degrees are, however, frequently conferred by the University on persons illustrious by their birth or their public services.

A brief account must now be given of the Colleges, seventeen in number, composing the University, and of the public buildings and institutions connected with it. The colleges, nearly all extra parochial, were first founded to take the place of the hostels in which the students used to lodge at their own charges. Magdalene College and the new part of St. John's are the only buildings on the W. side of the Cam. Sidney College, Christ's College, Jesus College, Emmanuel College, and Downing College, stand detached in other parts of the town. Each college has a master's lodge, apartments for the fellows and students, library, chapel, hall, and combination (business) room. The most ancient of the colleges is St. Peter's, or Peter House, founded by Hugh de Balsham, afterwards Bishop of Ely. Although made a residence for students about 1257, it was not constituted a college till 20 years later. This college has a master, 14 foundation and 10 bye-fellowships, and 62 scholarships. The buildings, situated on the E. side of Trumpington-street, consist of three courts, one of which was erected in 1826, out of a bequest by the Rev. Francis Gisborne; and a small handsome chapel, built in 1632. It has a fine E. window of stained glass, with a representation of the Crucifixion, after Rubens; and six other painted windows of Munich glass have recently been inserted by subscription—three on the N. side, representing Abraham offering up Isaac, St. John in the Wilderness, and the Wise Men from the East; and three on the S. side representing the Resurrection, Healing the Sick, and Paul pleading before Felix. Among the students of Peter House were Cardinal Beaufort, Colonel Hutchinson, the eminent republican officer during the Civil War, Bishop Walton, editor of the Polyglot Bible, the Poet Gray, and Lord Ellenborough.—Clare Hall, at first called University Hall, was founded by Dr. Richard Badew in 1326, and having been burnt down, was refounded by Elizabeth, sister of Gilbert Earl of Clare, in 1344. The society is composed of a master, 19 foundation and 3 bye-fellows, and about 50 scholars. The buildings stand near the river, on the W. side of the town, between King's and Caius colleges, and are connected with pleasant grounds on the opposite side by a stone bridge. They form a spacious court, 160 feet long by 111 broad, and were rebuilt of Ketton stone in 1638. The chapel was rebuilt about 1763, from designs by Sir James Burrough. The college possesses portraits of Lady Elizabeth Clare, the foundress, Holles, Duke of Newcastle, and Archbishop Tillotson. Hugh Latimer, Dr. Burnet, Ralph Cudworth, the philosopher, Parkhurst, the lexicographer, Whiston, translator of Josephus, and Nicholas Ferrar, the friend of George Herbert, were students of Clare Hall.—Pembroke College (or Hall) was founded by Mary de St. Paul, Countess of Pembroke, in 1343, in memory of her husband, who was accidentally slain at a tournament on the day of their nuptials. It was munificently endowed by Henry VI., and at present consists of a master, 14 foundation and 2 bye-fellows, and about 30 scholars. The college buildings, on the E. side of Trumpington-street, comprise two courts opening into each other through the hall which stands between them. The chapel, designed by Sir Christopher Wren, and built in 1665 at the expense of Dr. Wren, Bishop of Ely, is an elegant and well-proportioned structure. In the inner court is a detached building containing the hollow sphere, 18 feet in diameter, devised by Dr. Long, professor of astronomy, with representations in colours of the principal constellations of the northern hemisphere. It is fitted up as a lecture-room. The college contains portraits of the foundress, of the poets Spenser and Gray, Ridley, the martyr, and others. Among the distinguished men educated here were, besides those just named, the poets Crashaw and Mason, archbishops Grindall and Whitgift, Bishop Andrews, Edward Calamy, and the great statesman William Pitt.—Gonville or Caius College was founded by Edmund Gonville in 1348, and took from him at first the name of Gonville Hall; but being enlarged and refounded in 1557 by Dr. John Caius, physician to Queen Mary, received its present name. It is usually called Caius (pronounced Keys) College. The society includes a master, 29 fellows, and 50 scholars. The buildings stand between Trinity College and the Senate House, and consist of two courts, with three gates called the gates of Humility, Virtue, and Honour. The gate of Honour and the internal court of Caius College are particularly deserving of observation, as the work of Theodore Have, or Havenius, who divides with Giovanni di Padua the honour of having introduced classic art into England. The chapel, rebuilt at the beginning of the 18th century, contains a brass of a knight, and a monument to Dr. Caius, with the brief epitaph, "Fui Caius: vivit post funera Virtus." Here too, is interred Sir James Brough, who designed several of the University buildings, and died in 1774. The library has a good collection of works on Heraldry. The college has a large number of portraits, including those of Dr. Caius, and all the masters except one. Many eminent physicians have been educated at Caius College, among whom are Sir Charles Scarborough, and Harvey, the discoverer of the circulation of the blood. Sir Thomas Gresham, Jeremy Taylor, Jeremy Collier, Dr. Samuel Clarke, and Lord Chancellor Thurlow were lso educated here.—Trinity Hall was founded by William Bateman, Bishop of Norwich, in 1350, on the ite of an ancient hostel. It has a master, 12 fellows, nd 18 scholars, and is chiefly devoted to the study of he civil law. It stands near Clare Hall, on the banks f the Cam, behind the Public Library, and consists of wo courts, one of which is of modern date. The altar- iece of the chapel is a painting of the Presentation in he Temple. The chapel contains three monumental rasses. The hall has among its portraits those of Bishop ardiner, Archbishop Laud, and the Earl of Chester- ield, who studied here; as did also Bishop Horsley, homas Tusser, Bilney, the martyr, Sir Robert Naun- on, and Chief Justice de Grey.—Corpus Christi ollege, also called Bene't (Benedict) College, was ounded by the two guilds of Corpus Christi and the lessed Virgin Mary, in 1352. The society is composed f a master, 12 fellows, and 59 scholars. The buildings tand on the E. side of Trumpington-street, and com- rise two spacious courts, one of which is of modern rection. The front is 222 feet in length, with a fine entral gateway and lofty towers at each end. The new ortion of the college was erected about 1823, from esigns by Wilkins. The chapel, which has two ctagonal turrets, stained windows, and a fine west oorway, was built about 1579 by Lord-Keeper Bacon. The library contains a large and precious collection of ncient MSS., bequeathed by Archbishop Parker. Here re portraits of Erasmus, Cardinal Wolsey, Sir Thomas More, and Archbishop Parker. The latter, with arch- ishops Tenison and Herring, Lord-Keeper Bacon, Fletcher, the dramatist, Stukeley and Gough, the anti- quaries, were educated here.—King's College was founded by Henry VI. in 1441, as a small seminary, but was reconstituted in 1443 on a much larger scale, and made the greatest college of its time. The society consists of a provost and 70 fellows and scholars—the latter being supplied in regular succession from Eton College, which was also founded by Henry VI. about the same time. The college enjoys some peculiar privi- leges; the power of the provost being absolute within the precincts, and the proctors and other officers of the University having no authority within its walls. The buildings, which are on a grand scale, form a noble court between Trumpington-street and the river. On the S. side of the court are the provost's lodge, the library, the hall, and chambers for the fellows and scholars, present- ing a front of 509 feet. This range was built by Mr. Wilkins, and is in the perpendicular style of architec- ture. On the W. side are residences for the fellows, built by Gibbs in 1724; and the N. side is formed by the chapel. King's College Chapel is the glory of Cam- bridge, and the most magnificent and elaborately perfect example of the perpendicular style. The foundation stone was laid by Henry VI. in 1446, and the work was not completed till 1532, thus occupying nearly a century. It is built of blocks of stone of immense size, and is supported by eleven vast buttresses on each side, crowned with elegant pinnacles. Octagon towers, of exquisite proportions, rise from each corner of the chapel. Its ex- terior dimensions are—length, 316 feet; breadth, 84 feet; height to the battlements, 90 feet; to the pinnacles, 101 feet; and to the top of the towers, 146½ feet. The dimensions within are—length, 209 feet; breadth, 45⅓ feet; height, 76 feet. The roof, in 12 compartments, is of stone, vaulted and exquisitely carved, and unsup- ported by pillars. A splendid carved screen separates the choir from the ante-chapel, and on each side of the building are nine small chapels or chantries. The whole is lighted and delicately tinted by 24 lofty and magnificent stained windows, 12 on each side, a fine E. window also stained, and a plain one at the W. end. The height of the windows is nearly 50 feet. The whole vast structure is finely proportioned, light, aerial, and rich, being one of the finest pieces of ar- chitecture in the world. The chapel contains four monumental brasses, the earliest dated 1496. Among the distinguished men educated at King's College are bishops Aldrich, Pearson, and Fleetwood; Fryth, and other martyrs; Sir John Cheke, Sir Francis Walsingham, Sir William Temple, Sir Robert Wal- pole, Lord Walpole, Coxe, the biographer of Marl- borough, Jacob Bryant, and Edmund Waller, the poet. —Queens' College was founded by Queen Margaret of Anjou, wife of Henry VI., in 1448, and completed by Elizabeth Widville, consort of Edward IV., in 1465. The society is composed of a president, 20 fellows, and 21 scholars. The buildings, between Catharine Hall and the river, comprise three spacious courts, partly re- built about 30 years ago, with a tower, gateway, and cloisters in the inner court. A wooden bridge, built in 1746, leads to the beautiful grounds on the W. side of the river. In the chapel are four brasses, and in the hall are portraits of the second foundress of the college, of Erasmus, Sir Thomas Smith, General Monk, and others. Erasmus was student and afterwards professor of Greek here. Bishops Fisher and Patrick, Thomas Fuller, author of the "Church History" and "British Worthies;" Wallis, the mathematician; and Beaumont, the dramatist, were educated at this college.—Catharine Hall was founded by Dr. Woodlark, chancellor of the University, and provost of King's College, in 1475. It is composed of a master, 14 fellows, and 43 scholars. The buildings, on the W. side of Trumpington- street, form a spacious court, 180 feet long by 120 broad, open towards the street. It was rebuilt about 1700. The chapel contains monuments to Lady Dawes and Dr. John Addenbrooke, founder of the hospital named after him, who died in 1719. The college possesses portraits of the founder and of Bishop Sherlock, who fitted up the library and bequeathed his own books to it. Among the students of Catharine Hall were archbishops Sandys and Dawes, bishops Hoadley and Sherlock, Dr. Light- foot, the Orientalist, John Strype, the antiquary, and Ray, the naturalist.—Jesus College was founded by John Alcock, Bishop of Ely, in 1496, and endowed with the possessions of the nunnery of St. Rhadegund, on the site of which it was built. The society consists of a master, 16 fellows, and 49 scholars and exhibitioners. The buildings are pleasantly situated on the N.E. side of the town, and form two courts, with a S. front of 160 feet by 120 deep. The most interesting of them is the chapel, a cruciform structure, with large square tower, which was the conventual church of the nunnery. It has, however, been frequently altered, and was restored a few years ago. It has a good window of stained glass at the E. end, and contains the tombs of a nun, Berta Rosata, and of Prior John de Pykenham, and a monu- ment to Tobias Rustat, a benefactor to the college. Among the portraits in the college are those of Cran- mer, Archbishop Bancroft, the founder, Henry VIII., &c. Cranmer, Flamstead, the astronomer, Dr. Jortin, Lawrence Sterne, Hartley, the metaphysician, Dr. Clarke, the traveller, and Samuel Taylor Coleridge were students of Jesus College.—Christ's College, originally founded in the reign of Henry VI., under the name of "God's House," was refounded and en- dowed by Margaret Countess of Richmond and Derby, mother of Henry VII., in 1505, who changed its name to Christ's College. The college is chiefly for divinity, and the fellows are required to take priest's orders within a year after they have attained the proper age. It has a master, 15 fellows, and 53 scholars. The buildings consist of two courts, situated to the N. of Emmanuel College. In the chapel are two brasses, and in the E. window portraits of the foundress and Henry VII. At the N. end is a handsome monument of white marble and the grave of Ralph Cudworth, the philosopher. The gardens and grounds are extensive and beautiful, and contain a mulberry-tree planted by Milton, who was a student of this college. Other famous men educated here are Archbishop Sharp, Bishop Lati- mer, Henry More, the platonist, Dr. Paley, Dr. Thomas Burnet, and Francis Quarles.—St. John's College, which, with the exception of Trinity, is the largest col- lege in the University, was founded under the will of Margaret Countess of Richmond, the foundress of Christ's College, about 1511. It is for divinity, and is composed of a master, 60 fellows, and 114 scholars, with a very large number of exhibitions. The buildings consist of three courts on the E. side of the Cam, and a new one on the W. side, connected by a handsome covered stone bridge. The ancient courts, whose length from E. to W. is about 500 feet, are mostly of red brick, and the entrance from St. John's-street is by a noble tower gateway. The new court was erected about 1830 from designs by Rickman, and is partly in the perpendicular and partly in the Tudor styles. Cloisters extend from wing to wing. The library is spacious, and contains a very valuable collection of books, including those bequeathed by Prior, the poet. The chapel contains a canopied brass, and a monument to Baker, the antiquarian. The college possesses portraits of the foundress, Queen Elizabeth, Mary Queen of Scots, Lord Falkland, the Earl of Strafford, &c. The two last mentioned, with Roger Ascham, bishops Fisher, Watson, and Beveridge, Sir Kenelm Digby, Lord Burleigh, General Fairfax, Soame Jenyns, Horne Tooke, William Wilberforce, Ben Jonson, and the poets Herrick, Otway, Henry Kirke White, and William Wordsworth were students of St. John's.—Magdalene College was founded by Stafford Duke of Buckingham in 1519, and completed, after his attainder, by Thomas Baron Audley, lord chancellor, in 1542. It is composed of a master, 4 foundation and 13 bye-fellows, and 43 scholars. This college stands at the N.W. end of the town, on the site of an ancient hostel, and consists of two courts, in the second of which is the Pepysian library, containing a valuable collection of MSS. and prints, and a very large collection of English ballads. This library was the gift of Samuel Pepys, author of the now well-known "Memoirs," the original MS. of which is preserved here. Among the portraits possessed by this college are those of the founders, Chief Justice Wray, Samuel Pepys, &c.; and among the most eminent students were Archbishop Grindall, Bishop Cumberland, Pepys, and Dr. Waterland.—Trinity College, which is the largest and most important in the University of Cambridge, was founded by Henry VIII., in 1546, on the site of two ancient colleges, St. Michael's Hall and King's Hall, and several hostels. St. Michael's Hall was founded in 1324, and King's Hall in 1337, and their united endowments were given to Trinity, which was afterwards augmented by Queen Mary. The society is composed of a master, 60 fellows, and 72 scholars. The mastership is in the gift of the crown. The college buildings are of great extent, situated between St. John's on the N., and Caius College on the S., filling the space between Trumpington-street and the river. They consist of three great courts, the first of which, nearly square, is about 1,900 feet in circuit, the largest quadrangle either at Cambridge or Oxford. The principal entrance to this college is from Trinity-street by a fine old turreted gateway. In this court are the chapel, the hall, and the master's lodge. The chapel, 200 feet in length, was built partly by Queen Mary and partly by Queen Elizabeth. It is in the perpendicular style, and contains an altar-piece by Benjamin West; statues of Sir Isaac Newton, by Roubiliac; of Barrow, by Noble, of Professor Porson, by Chantrey, and of Bacon, copied from that at St. Alban's; besides busts of Professor Porson, Dobree, and others. The ante-chapel contains also several good memorial windows of stained glass, one of them to Dr. Mill. The hall is a noble building, in the Tudor style, 100 feet in length and about 50 feet high, adorned with a very large number of portraits of eminent scholars. The master's lodge contains several spacious apartments, and is the residence of the sovereign on all royal visits to Cambridge. The second, or Neville's Court, is an elegant range of buildings, and includes the library, cloisters, and residences for the fellows and students. The library, built from a design by Sir Christopher Wren, is a magnificent apartment, containing, besides a large collection of books and highly interesting MSS., many busts and portraits. The MSS. include some of Milton's poems and many of Newton's letters respecting Principia. The busts of Newton, Bacon, Ray, and Willoughby are by Roubiliac. Here, too, is the fine statue of Lord Byron, by Thorwaldsen. The third, or King's Court, erected about 1825 from designs by Wilkins, is a noble quadrangle in the early English style of architecture, fronting the river and the gardens. It has a fine tower gateway. A new court has been recently built by Dr. Whewell, the present master, opposite the great gateway. Among the portraits in this college are those of the Earl of Essex, Sir Isaac Newton, Shakspeare, Cowley, Dryden, Isaac Barrow, &c.; all of whom, except Shakspeare, were students of Trinity, as were also the following eminent men: Lord Bacon, Sir Edward Coke, Sir Robert Cotton, Dr. Conyers Middleton, Professor Porson, Professor Dobree, and Dr. Mill; the poets Donne, George Herbert, George Crabbe, Andrew Marvell, Lord Byron, and Vincent Bourne.—Emmanuel College was founded in 1584 by Sir Walter Mildmay, privy councillor to Queen Elizabeth, on the site of a Dominican priory established about 1280. It consists of a master, 15 fellows, and about 100 scholars and exhibitioners. The buildings are pleasantly situated in St. Andrew-street, and command a good view over the country to the S.E. They are chiefly of modern date, and form two courts with spacious and pleasant gardens. The present library was formerly the chapel. The present chapel, designed by Archbishop Sancroft, was completed in 1677. Archbishop Sancroft, bishops Hall, Bedell, and Hurd, Matthew Poole, the commentator, Dr. Wallis, Dr. Farmer, the poet Akenside, and Dr. Parr, were educated at Emmanuel College.—Sidney Sussex College was founded by Frances Sydney, Countess of Sussex, who, by her will in 1588, left property for that purpose. It is for divinity, and consists of a master, 12 fellows, and 26 scholars. The buildings, in Sidney-street, occupy the site of the monastery of Grey Friars founded about the time of Henry III., and comprise two courts. They were completed in 1598. The chapel, which has an altar-piece painted by Francesco Pittoni, and the library were rebuilt in 1780, and the college was restored under the direction of Wyatt ille about 1830. Among the portraits are those of the foundress, Oliver Cromwell (by Cooper), and William Wollaston. Bernini's bust of Cromwell, from a cast taken soon after death, is in the library. Cromwell was a student of Sidney College.—Downing College, the most recent, was founded pursuant to the will of Sir George Downing, of Gamlingay Park, Cambridgeshire, dated 1717. The erection of the buildings was commenced in 1807, and the college was opened in 1821. It is for a master, 2 professors of Law and Medicine, 16 fellows, and 6 scholars. The buildings will form a very large quadrangle, of which two sides are completed from designs by Wilkins. The library contains the books, MSS., antiquities, &c., bequeathed by John Bowtell.—The various colleges hold the patronage of a very large number of livings in England and Wales, and have also the appointment to the masterships of several public schools. The different ranks of members of the University, and the several classes of students, wear a distinctive dress. The costume differs slightly also for each college.

The principal public buildings belonging to the University are:—the Senate House, the Public Schools and Library, the Pitt Press, the Fitzwilliam Museum, the Anatomical Museum, and the Observatory. The Senate House, a large and handsome stone building of the Corinthian order, was erected between 1722 and 1766, from a design by Sir James Burrough. The interior is 101 feet in length and 82 feet high. It has galleries of oak, and contains statues of George I. and George II., the Duke of Somerset and William Pitt. The Public Schools, where disputations are held and exercises performed, were commenced in 1443, and form a small court, and also the W. side of a great quadrangle, which has the Senate House on the N., Great St. Mary's Church on the E., and King's College Chapel on the S. The apartments over the schools form the library, which was rebuilt in 1775. The large and valuable collection of books and MSS. belonging to the University is partly kept here, and partly in the new building, erected in 1837 from a design by Cockerell,

In the latter is the collection of minerals presented to the University by Dr. John Woodward in 1727, by whom also the Professorship of Geology was founded. The Pitt Press, in Trumpington-street, was erected in 1833. It is in the perpendicular style, with a fine tower, and was designed by Blore. The Fitzwilliam Museum, the finest modern building in Cambridge, was founded by Richard Viscount Fitzwilliam, who, in 1816, bequeathed £100,000, and his fine collection of books, pictures, &c., for that purpose. The building was completed in 1847, having been commenced in 1837. Mr. G. Basevi had the direction of the work, and on his death it was carried on by Mr. Cockerell. The museum is a noble structure of the Corinthian order, 160 feet square, with a splendid portico, and contains a spacious and richly decorated hall, 100 feet long and 70 wide, and five apartments for the pictures, &c. The general management is directed by a syndicate, composed of the vice-chancellor and eight other members of the senate. It is open free to members of the University daily, and to the public on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, between the hours of 12 a.m. and 4 p.m.—The Observatory, built in 1822—1824, is pleasantly situated on rising ground on the road to Madingley. It is in the Grecian style, and was erected from the designs of J. Mead in 1825, at a cost of £20,000. The great telescope, made by Cauchoix, of nearly 12 inches aperture, and 20 feet focal length, was presented to the University by the Duke of Northumberland in 1835, and is placed under a revolving dome 27 feet in diameter. The other instruments possessed by the observatory are a transit instrument, 10 feet focal length, a mural circle of 8 feet diameter, an equatorial of 5 feet focal length, a declination circle, an hour circle, and a transit clock. The observatory is open every day but Saturday, from 12 to half-past 1, to members of the University and their friends. There are also Philosophical and Antiquarian societies; the former, occupying a spacious brick building in All Saints'-passage, was established in 1819, and incorporated by royal charter in 1832; the latter was established in 1840. The University Pitt Club, held at 74, Bridge-street, and supplied with all the London newspapers, is confined to members of the University, and is open daily from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. The Cambridge Free Library is situated in Jesus-lane, and was opened in June, 1855, under Mr. Ewart's Public Libraries Act. The Lending Library was instituted in April, 1858, and received a munificent donation of books from his late Royal Highness the Prince Consort, who was elected Chancellor of the University of Cambridge in 1847. The library is open daily between the hours of 12 to 4 and 6 to 10 p.m.—The Botanical Gardens were originally instituted by Dr. Richard Walker, vice-master of Trinity, but have been lately removed to a more commodious position on the S.E. side of the town. They now cover an area of about 21 acres, between the Hill's-road and the Trumpington-road. The garden is very rich in rare trees and plants from Australia and the Pacific Islands, and has several commodious hot-houses. The management is under the direction of a syndicate, of which the Vice-Chancellor of the University is the head. The gardens are open free to the public every day except Sunday, and the hothouses between 1 and 4 o'clock p.m.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE, an inland co. of England, lying in the S.E. part of the island. It is situated between 52° 2′ and 52° 45′ N. lat., and between 0° 30′ E. and 0° 16′ W. long. It is bounded on the N. by Lincolnshire; on the E. by the cos. of Norfolk and Suffolk; on the S. by Essex and Hertfordshire; and on the W. by the cos. of Bedford, Huntingdon, and Northampton. In form it approaches an oblong, and extends in length from N. to S. about 50 miles, and in breadth in the southern part about 30 miles. It is about 200 miles in circuit, and comprises an area of 818 square miles, or about 523,861 statute acres, including within its limits 37,677 houses, inhabited by a population of 175,950 according to the census of 1861, against 185,405 in 1851, showing a decrease of no less than 9,455 in the decennial period, while the inhabited houses have augmented by 451, marking a progressive amelioration in the social condition of the people.—In the earliest period of our history this district belonged to the Iberians, and afterwards formed part of the British kingdom of the Iceni, which comprised also Norfolk, Suffolk, and Huntingdonshire. Under the Roman dominion it was included in that division of the island which was named Flavia Cæsariensis, and the Romans had a settlement near the site of the modern town of Cambridge, named Camboricum. The whole county is traversed by ancient roads, many of which are of Roman origin. After the withdrawal of the Romans the county became part of the kingdom of the East Angles, and subsequently of the district called the Danelagh. It was ravaged by the Danes in 870, who burnt the town of Cambridge, and destroyed several religious houses. The Isle of Ely, which early formed a district by itself, fell into their power, and Cambridge was long one of their military stations. In 921 the Danish army surrendered at Cambridge to Edward the Elder. The Isle of Ely was afterwards united to the kingdom of Mercia. In 1010 the county was again laid waste, and Cambridge burnt by the Danes. After the Norman Conquest the Fens of Cambridgeshire became the stronghold of the Anglo-Saxons, and the scene of a long and stout resistance to the Conqueror. The report of wrongs to his family and estates brought back the brave and banished Hereward le Wake from Flanders, to join in and direct the hostilities against the Normans. For seven years he held his ground in the Isle of Ely, where he erected a castle, against all the forces and all the attempts of William to defeat and drive him thence, till betrayed by the monks of Ely, who feared to lose the broad lands belonging to them, lying beyond the limits of the isle itself. The hero of the defence was afterwards reconciled to the Conqueror, and had his possessions restored to him. This county did not escape fearful sufferings during the war between Stephen and the Empress Maud, the horrors of famine and pestilence accompanying those of war. During the barons' wars in the reign of John, the Isle of Ely was wasted both by the baronial and the royal forces. Similar ravages were made in the succeeding reign, and the isle, after being some time held by the barons, was retaken for the king about 1266. In the civil war of the 17th century, Cambridgeshire heartily espoused the popular cause. The University of Cambridge, however, took the king's side, and testified its devotion by giving up its plate for the royal service. Cromwell was twice sent down with an army into this county: in 1643 to take possession of Cambridge, which was thenceforth held for the parliament; and in 1645 to secure the Isle of Ely. Two years later, the village of Kennett, near Newmarket, was made the head-quarters of the army under Fairfax. In June, 1647, the king, then at Childerley, was visited by Cromwell and Fairfax, and was soon after removed to Newmarket.—Cambridgeshire is for the most part a dead flat of fen land. The whole N. part of the county is included in the great district called the Bedford Level, and is crossed by an immense number of canals and ditches, which sometimes extend for many miles in a straight line. Trees and hedgerows are rarely seen, but scattered over the surface are numberless small windmills and some steam-engines, used for drawing off the water. Long lines of pollard willows, and occasional osier beds, break the monotony of the landscape. Large tracts here and there remain uncultivated, and yield only sedges and reeds for matting and thatching, and peat for fuel. [For a notice of the various attempts to drain the fens, see BEDFORD LEVEL.] The S. and S.E. quarters of the county present a different scene. Here are a range of low chalk hills, part of the extensive formation to which the Chiltern hills belong. The highest ground is at the Gogmagog hills, near Cambridge, on the S.E., which, in some places, rise to the height of 300 feet, and command extensive prospects. There is some woodland on the border of Suffolk, and agreeable scenery along the course of the Cam, or Granta.—The principal rivers of Cambridgeshire are the Ouse, which is navigable for shipping up to Ely; with its tributary the Cam, navigable to Cambridge; and the Nen. The latter in its original course crossed the northern part of the county in a north-easterly direction from Benwick, on the edge of Huntingdonshire, to Outwell, there entering Norfolk. It has now two other channels, north of the old one: one called Morton's Leam, passing from Peterborough, nearly in a direct line, to Wisbeach and the Wash; the other, from Peterborough, along the N.W. border of the county, and falling with the former into the Wash. The latter channel is called the Catswater and the Shire Drain. The Ouse retains its ancient name, like the Nen, Thame, Dour, and Dee, being a very common epithet given to rivers by the Celts. There is an Ouse in Cambridgeshire, Buckinghamshire, Sussex, and Yorkshire, an Oise in France, and Auser and Æsar in Italy, and an Æolis in Greece. The Ouse forms the southern and south-eastern boundary of the Isle of Ely. It enters the county a few miles below St. Ives, at Hermitage Sluice, in the parish of Haddenham, whence it flows first to the S.E. and then N.N.E. past Ely into Norfolk. The New Bedford river is a navigable canal, cut right across the Isle of Ely from the Hermitage Sluice to Denver Sluice in Norfolk, where, with the Old Nen, it joins the Ouse. The Cam is formed by the union of several streams, one of which, the Rhee, rises near Ashwell in the S.W. corner of the county, and another in Essex. They join near Grantchester, and running northward through Cambridge, and thence north-eastward to Upware, fall into the Ouse. The Lark, a small river of Suffolk, navigable from Bury, skirts the county for a few miles and falls into the Ouse below Ely. The Wisbeach canal, cut in 1794, joins the Old Nen at Outwell, thus connecting the navigation of the Nen and the Ouse.—The climate of Cambridgeshire has become much more healthy than it was formerly by reason of the drainage of the fens and the increased extent of cultivated ground. Agues and fevers, once so common, are comparatively rare. The soil is various; but the greater part of the land is very fertile. In the fens a soft, rich, black mud is found with a very large proportion of vegetable matter. When properly treated, it produces immense crops of wheat, barley, oats, potatoes, and hay. Ely is particularly renowned for its asparagus and osiers. In the upland districts of the S. and S.E. the soil consists of clay, chalk, loam, &c., and yields good crops of wheat, beans, and turnips; the Burwell wheat bears a high reputation as seed. Beneath the chalk in this part of the county is found the stiff blue clay called "galt," in beds 200 feet thick. The hilly ground on which the city of Ely stands is of this formation. At Burwell and Isleham is found the so-called "clunch," a substance similar to but harder than chalk, and of which part of the cathedral of Ely is built. In the centre of the county, from Chatteris to Soham, Cottenham, Waterbeach, and Swavesey, is a large tract of valuable dairy land, famous for its butter and cheese; but the produce of Cottenham cheese has lately much diminished. The farms are generally of small size, and held from year to year, or on very short leases. Horses, cattle, and sheep are reared in large numbers in the fens. Hemp and flax are grown extensively in the district between Wisbeach and Wilney.—Cambridgeshire, or Grantbridgeshire, as it is named in the Domesday Survey, virtually includes two shires or separate jurisdictions—the shire proper and Ely. It is divided for civil purposes into 18 hunds., besides the borough of Cambridge and the city of Ely, the names and limits of which are but slightly changed since the Norman Survey, in which, however, the Isle of Ely was reckoned as two; but now comprehends the four hunds. of Ely, Wisbeach North and South, and Witchford, which are under the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Ely, who is custos rotulorum, and appoints a chief justice, who holds a session of pleas above 40s., under the bishop's commission, and a session of oyer and terminer and jail delivery, under the queen's commission. The isle has also a bailiff, who acts as sheriff, a deputy-bailiff, and two coroners. The hunds. in Cambridgeshire proper are Royston, or Armingford (so called from the ford of Ermine Street), Chesterton, Cheveley (including Newmarket), Chilford, Flendish, Long Stow, North Stow, Papworth, Radfield, Staine, Staploe (anciently Stapleton), Triplow, Wetherley, and Whittlesford. The co. contains about 165 pars., and is almost wholly in the archdeac. of Ely, in the dioc. of Canterbury. It has 10 market towns, viz.: Cambridge, the county town and seat of a university; Ely, a city, and seat of a dioc.; Wisbeach, a shipping port, supplying a great part of the district with coals and timber; March, an ancient town and important railway station; Chatteris, in the Isle of Ely; also Linton, Thorney, Soham, Whittlesea, and Newmarket (the latter is partly in Suffolk), and Royston, more properly included in Hertfordshire. The markets of Whittlesea and Soham have long been disused. The county is divided into nine poor-law unions, viz., those of Cambridge, Caxton and Arrington, Chesterton, Ely, Linton, Newmarket, North Witchford, Whittlesea, and Wisbeach. There are six County Court districts: Cambridge, Ely, March, Newmarket, Soham, and Wisbeach. The county is in the Norfolk circuit, and the county and isle in the jurisdiction of the London Bankruptcy Court. The assizes and quarter sessions for the county are held at Cambridge, those for the Isle of Ely, at Ely and Wisbeach alternately. Cambridgeshire is joined with Huntingdonshire in the shrievalty. Three representatives are returned to parliament by the county, two by the university, and two by the borough of Cambridge. The county election takes place at Cambridge. The local government is vested in a lord-lieutenant, deputy-lieutenant, high sheriff, and about 50 magistrates. The university has separate jurisdiction over its own members and also exercises a superiority over the town of Cambridge, which has a separate court of quarter sessions.—Cambridgeshire is not the seat of any important manufactures and has no weaving trades. In some districts baskets and reed mats are made; but the chief occupations of the inhabitants are agriculture, cattle rearing, brewing, and malting. Brick-making is carried on to a considerable extent, the county being deficient of stone for building; and there are a considerable number of ship, boat, and barge builders, also millers, tanners, currriers, and shoemakers, who manufacture not only for home consumption but for exportation. There are paper-mills, parchment works, a needle factory, ball-cotton factory, and large printing establishments, chiefly at Cambridge, employing above 300 persons; a great number of erudite books being annually printed at the University press.—Cambridge is a grand railway centre, as are also Ely and March in this county. The lines mostly belong to the Great Eastern and Great Northern systems, including two trunk lines to London and a great East and West line. The Great Eastern railway, which enters the county from the S., near Chesterford, runs northward to Cambridge and Ely, and thence eastward into Suffolk and Norfolk. A branch line runs from Cambridge south-westward through Royston, to meet the Great Northern railway at Hitchin. Other branches run from Cambridge through St. Ives, in Huntingdonshire, re-entering the county near Chatteris, and thence passing to March and Wisbeach; and from Cambridge eastward to Newmarket and Bury St. Edmund's. It is connected with Peterborough by a direct line of 5 miles, through March and Whittlesea, and with Lynn, in Norfolk, by the East Anglian railway, of which only about 9 miles are in this county.—The principal roads are the great N. road from London, which crosses Cambridgeshire on the S.W. side from Royston to Papworth St. Agnes; the Cambridge road, which branches off at Royston to Cambridge, and through Newmarket to Norwich. From Cambridge the principal roads are those to St. Neot's, about 17 miles long; to St. Ives and Huntingdon, 16 miles; to Ely, 15 miles, and thence to Downham, in Norfolk; and to Newmarket and Bury St. Edmund's. A road connected with the great N. road at Papworth St. Agnes, after crossing the E. side of Huntingdonshire, enters Cambridgeshire near Chatteris, and runs to March and Wisbeach, quitting the county near Tyd St. Giles. The principal canals are those formed for drainage and navigation in the Bedford Level. Vermuydens canal, or the Forty Foot, extends from Ramsey Moor to the Old Bedford river. There are several short cuts, besides the Wisbeach canal, previously mentioned, and one from Peterborough to the old course of the Nen.—The county contained eight or nine baronial castles, but no ruins of them are now left, the gateway of Cambridge Castle, the last relic, having been taken down. Earthworks at Ely and other places mark the site of former fortresses. The principal ancient roads were Icknield Street, Ermine Street, and the Via Devana, the great Roman road from Colchester to Chester. Icknield Street, which crossed the county from Newmarket to Royston, is traceable at several points. Ermine Street ran from Royston nearly in the line of the great N. road to Godmanchester, near Huntingdon. The Via Devana passed from Withersfield, in Suffolk, westward to Cambridge, and thence to Godmanchester, and is still traceable. One of the most remarkable earthworks is the Devil's Ditch, near Newmarket, several miles in length, and, including the ditch and rampart, about 100 feet broad. About 6 miles off, and parallel to it, is another great trench, called the Fleam Dyke. There are two other works, similar but smaller, near Linton and Foulmire. There is a large circular camp called Vandlebury on Gogmagog hills, which is probably of British origin, though apparently occupied once by the Romans. Arbury, Great Shelford, and Willingham are also sites of ancient camps. Roman coins, urns, and other remains have been discovered at Cambridge, Soham, Chatteris, Ely, and other places. The religious houses of Cambridgeshire were about 36 in number, including 4 abbeys, 11 priories, 2 houses of the Knights Templars, 2 of the Knights Hospitallers, and 9 hospitals. The most important monastic remains are at Ely, Cambridge, Thorney, Denny, Barham, and Isleham. Cambridgeshire is rich in examples of church architecture, for instance Ely Cathedral and King's College Chapel. Among the lesser churches, many of which have Norman entrances, may be named those at Sutton, Duxford, Swaffham, Thorney, and Whittlesea.—The seats of the nobility and gentry in this county are not numerous, the following are the most deserving of attention: Cheveley Park, the seat of the Duke of Rutland; Wimpole Hall, the seat of the Earl of Hardwicke; Gog-Magog Hills, that of Lord Godolphin; and Wratting Park, of Sir C. Watson, Bart.

CAMBUS, a vil. in the par. of Alloa, in the co. of Clackmannan, Scotland, 2 miles to the W. of Alloa, at the junction of the Forth and the Devon.

CAMBUS, AULD. See COCKBURNSPATH, Berwickshire.

CAMBUS-BARRON, a vil. in the par. of St. Ninian's, in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, 1½ mile S.W. of Stirling. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in wool spinning and tartan shawl weaving.

CAMBUS-KENNETH. See ABBEY DISTRICT, Clackmannanshire.

CAMBUSLANG, a par. in Middle ward, co. of Lanark, Scotland, 4 miles to the S.E. of Glasgow. It is situated in a pleasantly undulating and highly cultivated country on the S.W. bank of the Clyde. The Calder Water forms the eastern boundary of the parish, and falls into the Clyde about 3 miles N.E. of the village, which consists of the upper and lower town. The former has two districts—Kirkhill and Vicarland; and the latter three, viz. Chapelton, Bushyhill, and Cullochburn. East Cotes, West Cotes, Silverbanks, and Ridleywood are mining villages; besides which there are the weaving villages of Deans and Lightburn. The highest grounds are at Dechmont and Turnlaw Hills, the former rising 700 feet above the level of the sea, and commanding a magnificent prospect over parts of thirteen counties. Coal and freestone are abundant, and marble and iron are also found. Muslin weaving was formerly carried on extensively, but the numbers engaged in that trade are gradually decreasing. The living, val. £360, is in the presb. of Hamilton, and in the patron. of the Duke of Hamilton. Here was formerly a chapel, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and a hospital which, before the Reformation, belonged to the prebend of Glasgow Cathedral. Cambuslang was the scene, in 1742, of a great religious revival, which is popularly designated the "Camb'slang wark." This parish was the birthplace (1783) of the distinguished botanist and landscape gardener, J. Loudon, as also of Dr. Claudius Buchanan, noted for his Asiatic researches. The par. is about 3⅛ miles in length and the same in breadth.

CAMBUSNETHAN, or CAMNETHAN, a par. in the Middle ward of the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 4 miles to the E. of Hamilton. It is situated in a pleasant and fertile country to the N.E. of the Clyde, which bounds it on the W., and includes the vils. of Bonkle, Stane, Stewarton, Cambusnethan, and Wishawton. There are many good orchards and beautiful plantations. Coal, ironstone, and freestone are obtained in abundance. The inhabitants are employed chiefly in the iron and coal-works. There is a large distillery at Wishawton; and at Coltness and Wishaw there are tile-works. The living, val. £350, is in the presb. of Hamilton. There are, besides the parish church, a quoad sacra church, a chapel of ease, a Free church, United and Reformed Presbyterian churches, and a Congregational chapel. The par. extends about 12 miles in length and 3 in breadth.

CAMBUS-WALLACE, a vil. in the par. of Kilmadock, in the co. of Perth, 1 mile to the N.W. of Doune. It is seated on the banks of the river Teith. The chief residences are Doune House, a seat of the Earl of Moray, and Cambusmore House.

CAMDEN TOWN, a suburban district in the par. of St. Pancras, and borough of Marylebone, in the co. of Middlesex, 3 miles to the N.W. of St. Paul's. It is situated on the E. side of Regent's Park, forming part of the north-western suburbs of London. Here is a station of the London and North-Western railway, and a very extensive depôt, with stationary engines, great ranges of workshops, coke-ovens, &c., covering more than 30 acres. Camden Town has two stations, one at Chalk Farm and the other at Camden-road, on the North London and Hampstead Junction railways, which meet here. It took its present name, about the end of the last century, from Marquis Camden, who held the manor of Cantelows, within which it stands. It contains now many spacious and regularly built streets, paved and lighted with gas, and is gradually spreading northwards towards Holloway. Camden-road extends above a mile between the Hampstead and Holloway roads, and contains a great number of handsome and pleasant villa residences, some of which have views towards Hampstead and Highgate hills. The inhabitants are supplied with water by the New River Company. In College-street is the Royal Veterinary College, instituted in 1791, and comprising a lecture-hall, school-room, museum, and infirmary. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of London, val. £260, in the patron. of the Vicar of St. Pancras. The church, which stands in Camden-street, was built in 1828, and has an Ionic portico at the W. end. An elegant new church has been erected in Camden-square, dedicated to St. Paul. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £350, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. In Camden-street are the cemetery and chapel and nine almshouses belonging to the parish of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields. There are also almshouses for 70 persons, founded and endowed by the late Mr. Cotterill, the revenue of which exceeds £1,700 per annum. There are chapels for Independents and Wesleyans, and large National schools. St. Martin's cemetery is the burial-place of Charles Dibden and Sir J. Barrow. Elm Lodge, near King's-road, is the seat of the Agars, by whom Agar Town was founded.

CAMELFORD, an ancient borough and market town in the par. of Lanteglos, hund. of Lesnewth, in the co. of Cornwall, 12 miles N.E. of Bodmin, 16 miles to the W. of Launceston, and 228 miles from London. It is situated in a dreary country, near lofty hills, on the banks of the river Camel, or Alan, and was formerly a free borough, under a charter of Richard Earl of Cornwall, confirmed by Henry III. The present charter, granted by Charles II., places the borough under the government of nine aldermen, one of whom is annually elected mayor. It returned two members to parliament from the reign of Edward VI. till the passing of the Reform Act in 1832, by which it was disfranchised. The streets are broad and paved, and there is a town-hall, with a market-house built by the Duke of Bedford, about 1806. The town has of late years been considerably improved by new buildings. Camelford is the seat of a Poor-law Union, the head of a County Court district, and one of the polling places for the county elections. Petty sessions are held in the town. There are chapels for the Wesleyans, Association Reformers, and Bible Christians. In 1679 a free school was founded by Sir James Smyth, one of the members for the borough, which has an income of £40 per annum. In this school-house, which was rebuilt in 1854, Divine service is performed every Sunday evening, as the parish church is more than a mile distant from the town. There was formerly a chantry chapel, erected in 1311, and suppressed at the Reformation. There are no vestiges of it remaining. The neighbourhood of this town is supposed to have been the scene of the famous and fatal battle between King Arthur and his nephew Modred, in which both fell. A battle between the Cornish men and the Saxons under Egbert, in 823, is also supposed to have been fought here. The Pitts, of Boconnoc, took the title of baron from this place. Friday is the market day. Fairs, chiefly for cattle, are held on the Friday after the 10th March, the 26th May, the 17th July, and the 6th September.

CAMELON, a vil. in the par. of Falkirk, in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, 1 mile W. of Falkirk. It is seated on the N. side of the Forth and Clyde canal, not far from the Scottish Central railway. The nail manufacture is carried on here to a considerable extent. Old Camelon, situated a short distance N.W. of the village, was a Roman town, and a seaport at the eastern end of the wall of Antoninus. In 1707 an anchor was found here, and there is other evidence that the sea within the historical period reached to Falkirk.

CAMEL, QUEEN, a par. in the hund. of Catsash, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles to the E. of Ilchester, its post town. It is situated on the small river Camel, a branch of the Yeo, and is crossed by the Somerset and Weymouth section of the Great Western railway. It was formerly a market town, and a place of some importance. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £222, in the patron. of P. St. J. Mildmay, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Barnabas. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village. The parochial charities are worth about £10 a year. Near the village is a hill commanding a fine view over the rich surrounding country, including about 40 towns and villages. Close to the river is a sulphureous spring. Two annual fairs are held on Trinity Tuesday and the 25th October.

CAMEL, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Somerton, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the E. of Ilchester, its post town. It is in a flat country, on a branch of the Ivel, near the Great Western railway, and contains the hmlts. of Downhead, Sterthill, and Urgashay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £275, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There are some charities of small value.

CAMELY, a par. in the hund. of Chewton, in the co. of Somerset, 8 miles to the N. of Wells. Bath is its post town. Here are some quarries of flagstone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £256, in the patron. of J. Hippesley, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities amount to £6 a year.

CAMERON, a vil. in the par. of Markinch, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, on the river Leven. It is near the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railway, on which Markinch is a station.

CAMERON, a par. in St. Andrew's district, in the co. of Fife, Scotland, reaching to within 1 mile of St. Andrew's. The surface is partly moorland and partly cultivated. Coal, limestone, sandstone, and whinstone are worked and quarried in the neighbourhood. The living, worth £200, is in the presb. of St. Andrew's, and in the gift of the crown. There is also an United Presbyterian church at Lathones. Prior to 1645 this parish was united to that of St. Andrew's.

CAMERON BRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Liberton, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 2 miles from Edinburgh, on the road to Dalkeith.

CAMERTON, a par. in the hund. of Wellow, in the co. of Somerset, 6 miles to the S.W. of Bath, its post town. The Radford canal crosses the parish. Coal is found here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £481, in the patron. of J. Jarrett, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is partly covered with ivy, and stands in a churchyard very prettily laid out and planted. The Wesleyans and Baptists have chapels in the village. Camerton Park is the seat of the Jarrett family.

CAMERTON. See CAMMERTON, Cumberland.

CAMERTON, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ryhill, par. of Burstwick, and wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the S.E. of Hedon.

CAMES-ASH, a tythg. in the par. of Bishops Lydeard, hund. of Kingsbury, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles to the N.E. of Milverton.

CAM-HOUSES, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Hebden Lunds, tnshp. of High Abbotside, par. of Aysgarth, in the wap. of Hang, North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N.W. of Hawes. It is seated at the foot of Cam Fell, which rises to the height of 1,920 feet.

CAMLACHIE, a vil. and quoad sacra par., in the par. of Barony, Glasgow, in the co. of Lanark, Scotland, 1 mile from Glasgow. It forms part of the eastern suburbs, and adjoins the village of Parkhead. Here is an Extension church, the living of which is in the gift of the Church Building Society. There is also a Free church.

CAMLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Mallwyd, hund. of Talybont and Mowddwy, in the co. of Merioneth, North Wales, 2 miles from Dinas-Mowddwy. It is situated in a mountainous district on the river Dyfi.

CAMLIN, a par. in the bar. of Upper Massareene, in the co. of Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles to the S. of Antrim. It lies in a fertile and cultivated country, on the banks of the small river Camlin, which falls into Lough Neagh. The par. includes the vil. of Crumlin, and part of the vil. of Glenavy. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, and in the linen and cotton manufactures. Limestone is obtained in the parish. The living is a vic. united with that of Glenavy, in the dioc. of Down, Connor, and Dromore. The church is decayed. The principal mansions are Glendaragh and Cherry Valley.

CAMLOUGH, a par. in the bar. of Upper Orior, in the co. of Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles to the W. of Newry, which is a station on the Dublin and Belfast Junction railway. It lies in a fertile district, partly mountainous, on the Cam Lough, and belongs to Viscount Mandeville. Some of the inhabitants are employed in spinning and bleaching. A police force is stationed here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Armagh and Clogher, val. £146, in the gift of the Rector of Killery. The church was built in 1774, at the cost of Primate Robinson. The parish contains a remarkable cairn. The chief residence is Divernagh House.

CAMMERINGHAM, a par. in the western div. of the wap. of Aslacoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 7 miles to the N. of Lincoln, its post town. It was the site of an alien priory, founded in the reign of Henry II. Limestone is quarried in the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £160, in the patron. of Lord Monson. The church is dedicated to St Michael, and is of modern date.

CAMMERTON, or CAMERTON, a par. in the wap of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 5 miles to the W. of Cockermouth. Workington is its post town. It is a station on the Cockermouth and Workington railway. The par. is situated on the coast of the Solway Frith, on the N. bank of the river Derwent, which is here crossed by a handsome stone bridge of three arches. It contains the tnshps. of Camerton and Seaton. The inhabitants are employed in brick-making and in the collieries, also in the extensive works of the Derwent Tin Plate Company, and the Seaton Hematite Iron-works, which are both situated near the village of Seaton. There is an excellent fishery at Salmon Hall, in the tnshp. of Seaton, belonging to the Earl of Lonsdale. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £106, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church was rebuilt in 1794. It contains a curious monument to Black Tom of the North, who lived at Burrah Walls, and was buried at Shap Abbey in 1157. The chief residence is Cammerton Hall.

CAMMON, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Llanfyllin, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, not far from Llanfyllin.

CAMOLIN, a vil. in the par. of Tomb, and bar. of Scarawalsh, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N.E. of Ferns. It is seated on the river Bann, and was the site of a monastery, of which there are some vestiges. Camolin Park is the seat of the Earl of Mountnorris. Fairs are held on the 9th February, the 4th April, the 9th June, the 28th September, and the 9th November.

CAMP, a hmlt. in the par. of Miserden, hund. of Bisley, in the co. of Gloucester, 5 miles to the N.E. of Stroud.

CAMPBELTON, or CAMPBELLTOWN, a vil. in the pars. of Arderseir and Petty, in the co. of Inverness, 10 miles to the N.E. of Inverness. It is seated on the coast of the Moray Frith, not far from Fort George. The Earl of Cawdor, from whose family name the village is named, owned the land on which the village is built. That part of the village in the parish of Petty is sometimes called Stuarton. Here is an United Presbyterian church, and on a neighbouring eminence the remains of a British fort, Here is also a chalybeate spring, and the village is frequented as a watering-place.

CAMPBELTOWN, a par. and market town, royal and parliamentary borough, in the Kintyre district of the co. of Argyle, Scotland, 65 miles to the S.W. of Glasgow, and 116 miles from Edinburgh viâ Ayr. It lies on the sea-coast, near the southern extremity of the peninsula of Cantire, and is interesting as the spot where the Scots first settled under Fergus, their first king. The ancient name of the town was Dalruadhain, a name which is pronounced Dalaruan, and still remains as the designation of a village or district near the modern town. This place continued to be a royal residence for several centuries, and it retained its ancient name till about 1700, when, on being raised to the rank of a royal burgh, it took its present name in compliment to the Duke of Argyle, on whose property it stood. The surrounding district is hilly and bleak, but there is some very fertile and well-cultivated land in the neighbourhood. Its braes are celebrated in the Scotch song, "Annie Laurie,"—"Campbeltown braes are bonnie."—The town is very pleasantly situated at the head of a bay or loch, formerly called Kilkerran, about 2 miles long and 1 broad, which is almost land-locked, the Island of Devar lying at its entrance. It forms a spacious and safe harbour, with quays on each side, and a lighthouse on the island, which was built in 1855. The herring fishery was formerly the staple trade of Campbeltown, but it has considerably declined. A new fishing company has just been formed, which promises to give a fresh impetus to this branch of trade. There are numerous distilleries in the town, and the production and export of whisky now forms the principal business of the place. There are several malthouses, two woollen factories, a net manufactory, and a tannery. The town has one principal and several smaller streets, which are lighted with gas. It contains a large townhall, with a spire, a market-house, custom-house, Union poorhouse, savings-bank, and three branch banks. The number of vessels belonging to the port is about 50, now chiefly engaged in the coasting trade. Islay and Tarbert are subordinate ports. Besides whisky, the exports are potatoes, wool, cattle, and dairy produce; the imports are timber, barley, iron goods, &c. There is regular communication by steam with Glasgow, Greenock, and Ayr. Coal, of poor quality, is found in the parish, and was, till within a few years, brought by canal to the town, but the canal is now dried up.—The government of the burgh is vested in a provost and 17 councillors. The burgh is contributory with Ayr, Irvine, Inverary, and Oban, in returning one member to the imperial parliament. Campbeltown is the head-quarters of the county militia.—There are two parish churches in the town, one of which is called the Castle Hill Church, and the other the Gaelic Church. The former was built about 1780, and stands on the site of the ancient castle. The latter was built in 1807, and occupies a commanding position to the S. of the town. The livings are collegiate charges in the presb. of Kintyre, each of the val. of £147, with manse and glebe, and both in the patron. of the Duke of Argyle. There are places of worship belonging to the Free Church, the United Presbyterians, Roman Catholics, Episcopalians, and Independents. The Roman Catholic chapel was built in 1849, and has a handsome stone font, with pinnacles. There are parochial, industrial, and endowed schools, and a school of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. There is a large and spirited body of volunteers, forming an artillery and a rifle corps. Many pretty residences of the gentry are built along the shores of the loch. In the principal street stands an ancient stone cross, with a Latin inscription in Saxon characters, and various sculptures. It bears no date, and is said to be a relic from Iona. Remains of ancient forts and chapels exist in the parish.—Thursday is the market day. Annual fairs are held in February, May, August, October, and November. The parish is about 16 miles in length, and varies in breadth from 6 to 10 miles, having an area of 90 square miles. Population of the town in 1861 was 6,042, inhabiting 802 houses; of the children, 1,104 attended school.

CAMPDEN, BROAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Chipping Campden, hund. of Kiftsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 1 mile from Chipping Campden.

CAMPDEN, CHIPPING, a par. and market town in the upper div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, in the co. of Gloucester, 28 miles to the N.E. of Gloucester, and 90 miles to the W. of London. It is a station on the West Midland railway. The parish is situated in a beautiful country, and contains the hmlts. of Broad Campden, Berrington, and Westington-with-Combe. The town is very ancient, and the traditional place of meeting of the Saxon kings who in 687 held a conference about the war with the Britons. It was made a staple town for wool in the 14th century, and carried on a good trade with Flanders. Campden was a nominal borough, under a charter granted or renewed by James I., which has been long forfeited. It is at present governed by 2 bailiffs, 24 burgesses, and 1 steward. The town, consisting of one long street, is seated in a valley between wooded hills, and contains many interesting ancient houses, a court-house, and market-house. Some of the workpeople were formerly employed in the silk manufacture, and in knitting hosiery, but these branches of industry are discontinued. Campden is one of the polling places for the eastern div. of the co.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £640, in the patron. of the Earl of Gainsborough. The church, which stands at Berrington, is dedicated to St. James. It was built about the end of the 14th century, chiefly at the cost of William Grevel, woolstapler, and is a noble edifice in the decorated style, with an embattled tower, 120 feet high, supported by massive buttresses, and crowned by 12 crocketed pinnacles. It has two side chapels, in one of which is a splendid monument to Sir Baptist Hicks, first Viscount Campden, who died in 1629, and his lady. In the same chapel is one to the second viscount and his lady. The church contains also monuments to the Noel family, and four brasses, the earliest bearing date 1401, in memory of William Grevel, reputed founder of the church, and his wife. The Baptists and Wesleyans have chapels in the town. There is a grammar school, founded in 1487, and endowed by John Verbey with a revenue of £170 per annum, and a scholarship in Pembroke College, Oxford, endowed by George Townshend. A girls' free school was founded by James Thynne, which has an income of £130 a year. There are almshouses for 12 aged persons, endowed by the first Viscount Campden, the annual revenue of which is £140, and some other small charities. —The manor of Chipping Camden belongs to the Earl of Gainsborough, who takes from the town the title of Viscount. A splendid mansion was erected near the church by Sir Baptist Hicks, which was destroyed during the Civil War to prevent its falling into the hands of the parliament. Campden House, Kensington, was also built by Sir B. Hicks. Campden was the birthplace of the Saxon scholar, George Ballard, who died in 1755. Dover Hill, not far from the town, was the place of celebration of the games instituted by Robert Dover in the reign of James I., and soon after suppressed. Wednesday is the market day. Fairs are held on Ash Wednesday, the 23rd April, the 25th July, and the 30th November.

CAMPILE, a vil. in the bar. of Shelburne, in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N. of Arthurstown.

CAMPMUIR, a vil. in the par. of Kettins, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 11 miles to the N.W. of Dundee. The Newtyle branch of the Dundee, Perth, and Aberdeen Junction railway passes by it.

CAMPSALL, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 8 miles to the N. of Doncaster, its post town. It is crossed by the Great Northern railway, on which Askerne, one of its tnshps., is a station. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Askerne, Campsall, Fenwick, Moss, Norton, and Sutton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £140, in the patron. of G. C. Yarborough, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. In addition to the parish church there are two district churches, one at Askerne, the other at Fenwick; the livings of which are perpet. curs., of the joint val. of £125, in the patron. of the Archbishop of York. Campsall Hall is the seat of the Frank family, one of whom was the antiquary, Richard Frank, Esq., F.R.S., who made a collection of documents for the history of the West Riding. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to about £12 a year.

CAMPSEY-ASH, a par. in the hund. of Loes, in the co. of Suffolk, 2½ miles to the E. of Wickham Market, its post town, which is a station on the Framlingham Junction of the East Suffolk railway. The par. lies on the E. side of the river Deben, and was the site of a nunnery of the order of St. Clare, founded in the latter part of the 12th century by Theobald de Valoines, and to which a chantry was attached by Maud de Lancaster. The nunnery, of which there are some remains, had a revenue at the Dissolution of £182 9s., and was given to Sir William Willoughby. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £350, in the gift of Lord Rendlesham. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and is a structure of comparatively modern date, with an ancient tower, repaired in 1792. The register dates from the year 1559. The parish estate for the benefit of the poor is worth £10 a year. Ash High House was built about 1600 for the Duke of Norfolk, but came into the possession of the Sheppard family before 1648. It stands in a large and finely-wooded park abounding in deer.

CAMPSIE, a par. in the co. of Stirling, Scotland, 4 miles to the N. of Glasgow. A branch of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway has its terminus at Lennoxtown, the largest village in this parish. The par. is situated in the district called the Lennox, on the northern banks of Kelvin Water, and contains the vils. of Lennoxtown, Milton, and Torrance, with part of Clachan. The surface is hilly, rising at Campsie Fells to the height of 1,500 feet. These fells form the central and loftiest part of a detached range of hills extending through Stirlingshire in a south-westerly direction into Dumbartonshire, the extremities of the range being marked by the castles of Stirling and Dumbarton. Coal, limestone, and ironstone are found in the parish. Alum, copperas, Prussian blue, and prussiate of potash are manufactured here. The inhabitants are employed in the mines and print-works. The chief buildings are—Lennox Castle, a fine modern specimen of the baronial Gothic; the parish church, an elegant and spacious edifice, seated for nearly 2,000 hearers; and the Oswald school, a pretty cruciform building, belonging to the kirk session. The living, worth £400, is in the presb. of Glasgow, and in the patron. of the crown. There are also places of worship belonging to the Roman Catholics and the United Presbyterians. There are remains of two ancient forts. The par. extends about 6 miles in length and the same in breadth.

CAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Clifton, in the co. of Bedford, 7 miles to the S.W. of Biggleswade, its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Ivel, and contains the tnshp. of Shefford, which is a station on the Midland (South-East branch) railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. with the perpet. cur. of Shefford annexed, £374, in the patron. of Sir G. Osborne, Bart. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and contains monuments to the Osbornes, and a brass of the year 1489. Here, too, lie the remains of Robert Bloomfield, the poet, who spent his last days here, and died in August, 1823. The old manor-house is now used as a school-house. The parochial charities consist chiefly of the Feoffment Estate, which produces about £140 per annum. The par. now forms part of the honour of Ampthill.

CAMROSE, or CAMRHOS, a par. in the hund. of Roose, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 3 miles to the N. of Haverfordwest, its post town. It is watered by a small stream, a branch of the river Cleddy, and contains the vil. of Keston. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £80, in the patron. of H. W. Bowen, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Ismael. The Independents have two chapels here. The chief residence is Camrose House. An annual fair is held on the 13th February.

CAMUS, a par. in the bar. of Strabane, in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 16 miles to the N. of Omagh. It is situated in a hilly and moorland country, on the banks of the river Mourne, and contains part of the vil. of Strabane. The Marquis of Abercorn is the chief proprietor. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry and Raphoe, val. £697, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected about 1620. The Presbyterians, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels in the village. There are parochial, National, and endowed schools. Milltown is the principal seat.

CAMUS-TOWN, a vil. in the par. of Monikie, in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 8 miles to the S.E. of Forfar. A battle took place here in 1010, in which Camus, the Dane, fell. His grave is said to be marked by the monument known as Camus Cross.

CAMVELIN, a vil. in the par. of Llangan, hund. of Derllys, in the co. of Carmarthen, 5 miles to the N.E. of Narberth.

CAMWORTH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Garrycastle, King's County, in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile to the N.E. of Ferbane.

CANAMOLLAGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Corcomroe, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N.W. of Ennistymon.

CANDLESBY, a par. in the Wold div. of the wap. of Candleshoe, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles to the E. of Spilsby, its post town. The Boston and Grimsby section of the Great Northern railway passes near it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, worth £200, in the gift of the President and Fellows of Magdalene College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Benedict. Candlesby Hall is the principal residence.

CANDLESHOE WAPENTAKE, one of the 17 waps. or subdivisions of the parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, situated in the northern parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the hund. of Calceworth, on the E. by the German Ocean, on the S. by the wap. of Skirbeck, and on the W. by the hund. of Hill and the soke of Bolingbroke. It is in two divs. The Marsh div. contains the pars. of Addlethorpe, Burgh-in-the-Marsh, Croft, Friskney, Ingoldmells, Northolme, Orby, Skegness, Wainfleet (All Saints), Wainfleet (St. Mary), and Winthorpe. The Wold div. contains the pars. of Ashby, Braytoft, Candlesby, Dalby, Driby, Firsby, Gunby, Irby-in-the-Marsh, Partney, Scremby, Skendleby, Great Steeping, Sutterby, and Welton-in-the-Marsh. The entire wap. spreads over an area of about 51,000 acres.

CANDOVER, BROWN, a par. in the hund. of Mainsborough, Winchester div. of the co. of Southampton, 5½ miles to the N. of New Alresford, and about 4 miles from Mitcheldever, its post town, which is a station on the London and South-Western railway. It is situated on the river Itchen. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with that of Chilton Candover annexed, £497, in the patron. of Lord Ashburton. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a spacious edifice in the Tudor style, erected in 1845, chiefly at the expense of Lord Ashburton, who is lord of the manor. There is a National school.

CANDOVER, CHILTON, a par. in the hund. of Mainsborough, Winchester div. of the co. of Southampton, 1 mile to the E. of Brown Candover, and 12 N. of Winchester. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Brown Candover, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small ancient structure, recently repaired.

CANDOVER, PRESTON, a par. in the hund. of Lower Bermondspit, Basingstoke div. of the co. of Southampton, 6 miles to the N.E. of New Alresford. Andover is its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the perpet. cur. of Nutley annexed, £228, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a small bequest for a school.

CANEWDON, a par. in the hund. of Rochford, in the co. of Essex, 3 miles to the N. of Rochford, its post town. It is situated in a marshy country, on the S. side of the river Crouch, and is the site of a large ancient camp, covering six acres. This camp is thought to be of Danish origin, and tradition fixes here the seat of Canute. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, worth £495, in the patron. of the Bishop of Peterborough. The church is a spacious building in the perpendicular style, with a massive tower, and is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The charitable endowments, consisting chiefly of the income derived from the poor's land, amount to about £130 per annum.

CANFIELD, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, in the co. of Essex, 3 miles to the S.W. of Great Dunmow, its post town. It lies on the banks of the river Roding, a feeder of the Thames, and was the site of a castle founded by the De Veres, of which the moat and the mount on which the keep stood still remain. Hence this place was anciently called Canfield ad Castrum. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £140, in the patron. of J. M. Wilson, Esq. In the church are monumental brasses to the Wiseman family, one of whom, John Wiseman, was auditor to Henry VIII. Some of these brasses are very ancient, commencing with the 12th century. The register dates from 1538. The parochial school is a convenient structure, with residence for the mistress, built by subscription in 1858. Canfield Hall was formerly the seat of the Wiseman family.

CANFIELD, LITTLE, or CHILDER CANFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, in the co. of Essex, 2 miles to the N. of Great Canfield. The river Roding runs through it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £327, in the gift of the Master and Fellows of Christ's College, Cambridge. The church, the name of which is unknown, has recently been restored, and in part reconstructed, by the present rector, who has judiciously preserved the elegant decorated windows of the nave, and the exterior of the old Norman doorway. The church, which has a tower and spire, contains a handsomely carved oak screen, separating the chancel from the nave, and several richly painted windows. There is an elaborately carved monument to the mother of the present rector, and several other sculptured monuments in the chancel. The register dates from 1561. The parochial school is chiefly supported by Lord Maynard.

CANFORD, GREAT, or CANFORD MAGNA, a par. in the hund. of Cogdean, East Shaston div. of the co. of Dorset, 6 miles to the N.E. of Poole, and 2 to the S.E. of Wimborne Minster, its post town, which has a station on the London and South-Western railway. It is situated near the sea-coast, on the banks of the navigable river Stour, here crossed by a bridge, and includes the chplry. of Kingstone or Kinson, and the hmlts. of Knighton, Moreton, and Oakley. The ancient chplries. of Longfleet and Parkstone have been recently constituted distinct pars., with their own churches and schools. In the village, which is of considerable extent, is an iron foundry, and at a short distance from the church is the beautiful seat of Sir Ivor Bertie Guest, Bart., formerly a nunnery. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £450, in the patron. of Sir Ivor Bertie Guest, Bart., who is lord of the manor. The church is small, with a tower on the N. side, partly covered with ivy; the interior has several monuments and brasses. In the village are the Exeter almshouses, endowed with about £15 a year. There are other charities producing about £7 a year. The principal seats are Canford House and Canford Lodge—the former the residence of the Hon. W. F. Ponsonby, incumbent. To the S. of the village is a great heath or down, on which there are several barrows, known as Figbury, Hakesbury, Lush, &c.

CANFORD, LITTLE, a vil. in the hund. of Cogdean, in the co. of Dorset, 2 miles from Great Canford.

CANICE, ST., a par. in the city and co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles to the N.W. of Kilkenny.

CANISBAY, or CANUTE'S BAY, a par. in the co. of Caithness, Scotland. It is situated in a heathy district on the coast of the Pentland Frith, and includes the neighbouring island of Stroma. Duncansby Head and John o'Groat's house are at the north-eastern extremity of this parish. The coast is rocky, and limestone is abundant. The inhabitants are engaged in agriculture and the fisheries. The living, worth £206, is in the presb. of Caithness, in the gift of the Sinclairs. There is a Free church, and the Independents have a place of worship at Freswick, and the Baptists one at the Mull of Mey. In this parish are Barrogill and Brabster castles—the former the seat of the Earl of Caithness. There are several ruins of forts and chapels. The par. extends about 10 miles in length and 5 in breadth.

CANKLOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Whiston, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the S. of Rotherham.

CANLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Stoneleigh, hund. of Knightlow, in the co. of Warwick, 2 miles from Coventry.

CANN, or SHASTON, ST. RUMBOLD, a par. in the hund. of Sixpenny-Handley, West Shaston div. of the co. of Dorset, 1 mile to the S.E. of Shaftesbury, its post town. It lies on the border of Wiltshire. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £196, in the patron. of the Earl of Shaftesbury.

CANNA MILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of West Newton, and par. of Kirk Newton, ward of Glendale, in the co. of Northumberland, 6 miles to the W. of Wooler.

CANNAWAY, a par. in the bar. of East Muskerry, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles to the S.E. of Macroom. It lies on the banks of the river Lee, over which there are two bridges. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cork, Ross, and Cloyne, val. £203, in the patron. of the bishop. The chief residence is Nettleville Hall.

CANNESBURN, a hmlt. in the par. of New Kilpatrick, in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland. It is on the N. bank of the Clyde.

CANNING NEW TOWN, a district of Plaistow ward, in the par. of West Ham, and hund. of Becontree, in the co. of Essex. It is a tract of rich marsh land, extending S. towards the banks of the Thames. The Great Eastern branch line to North Woolwich steamboat station has a station on the Barking Road.

CANNINGS, ALL. See ALLCANNINGS.

CANNINGTON HUNDRED, one of the 40 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Somerset, situated in the western parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the Bristol Channel; on the E. by the hund. of North Petherton; on the S. by the hunds. of Andersfield and Taunton Dean; and on the W. by the hund. of Williton. It contains the pars. of Aisholt, Cannington, Charlinch, Fiddington, Otterhampton, Spaxton, Stockland-Bristol, Stogursey, Over Stowey, and Stringston. The hund. comprises an area of about 25,480 acres.

CANNINGTON, a par. in the hund. of the same name, in the co. of Somerset, 3 miles to the N.W. of Bridgwater, its post town. It lies on the W. side of the navigable river Parret, and contains the hmlts. of Edstock and Beer. The Saxon name of this very ancient and once important place was Caningan-maersees. It was the site of a Benedictine nunnery, founded by Robert de Courcy about 1140, which was valued at the Dissolution at about £40. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £371, in the patron. of Lord Clifford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is in the perpendicular style, and has some monuments to the Cliffords, who anciently resided here. The poor have the benefit of a valuable endowment, founded by Mr. Rogers, and producing about £330 per annum, which is partly applied to the support of almshouses. There are other charities amounting to about £30 a year. The manor of Cannington is held by Lord Clifford.

CANNOCK, a par. in the eastern div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, in the co. of Stafford, 4 miles to the S.E. of Penkridge. Stafford is its post town. It is a station on the Rugeley and Walsall branch of the South Staffordshire railway. The par., which is of great extent, embracing an area of about 10,775 acres, has recently been divided for ecclesiastical purposes into two districts, Cannock and Great Wyrley. It comprises the tnshps. of Cannock Wood, Hednesford with Leacroft, Huntington, and the ancient chplry. of Great Wyrley. Cannock Chase, formerly a vast forest, covering about 25,000 acres of ground, in which the Mercian, and afterwards the Norman kings had a castle, is now a heath, with little wood except on the northern edge. From the higher grounds, especially Castle Hill, there are extensive and beautiful prospects. Castle Hill is the site of an old camp, and near it was Radnor Abbey, founded by Queen Maud in 1140, but soon after removed to Stoneleigh. Coal and Cannock stone (a species of ironstone) are obtained here. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of edged tools. Public rooms have lately been erected, comprising a spacious lecture or concert-hall, a smaller room underneath used for magistrates' meetings, a reading-room, and a branch of the Manchester and Liverpool District bank. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £180, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Luke, or, according to others, to St. Michael. The living of Great Wyrley is a perpet. cur.,* val. £130, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Cannock. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels in the town. There are a flourishing middle-class grammar school, with from 30 to 40 boarders, and a National school at Cannock, and another National school recently built at Hednesford. The curacy of Cannock was held by the noted Dr. Sacheverell. Within Cannock Chase is Beaudesert Park, the ancient seat of the Marquis of Anglesea. The mansion, partly rebuilt in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, stands on a hillside, sheltered by hills and woods, and commands a view over nine counties. The marquis takes the title of baron from this place. Annual fairs are held in the town on the 8th May, the 24th August, and the 6th October, chiefly for the sale of cattle.

CANNOCK WOOD, a tnshp. late in the par. of Cannock, hund. of Cuttlestone, in the co. of Stafford. It is now severed from Cannock and included in the district of Gentleshaw.

CANN OFFICE, a vil. in the par. of Llangadvan, hund. of Mathraval, in the co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 6 miles to the N.W. of Llanfair.

CANNON-FEE, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Crediton, in the co. of Devon.

CANNONHOLD, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Melksham, in the co. of Wilts.

CANOL, a vil. in the tnshp. of Trefeirig, par. of Llanbadarnfawr, and hund. of Geneu'r-Glyn, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, not far from Aberystwith.

CANONBIE, or CANOBY, a par. in the S.E. of the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, containing a vil. of the same name, 6 miles to the S. of Langholm. It has a station on the Langholm branch of the Border Counties railway. The parish is situated on the English border, in a fertile and beautiful country, on the banks of the Esk, where the Liddle falls into that river. The parish took its name from a small monastery or canonry, founded by Turgot de Rossedal, in the reign of David I., which, with its endowments, was afterwards given to the monks of Jedburgh. This monastery was frequently attacked during the border wars, and was pillaged and laid in ruins by the English in 1542, after the defeat of the Scottish army at Solway Moss. Some slight remains of the monastery exist at Halgreen, half a mile E. of the parish church. The old church perished at the same time. The district is well wooded, especially on the banks of the Esk, which present, for a continuance of 12 miles from Longtown to Langholm, some of the most beautifully picturesque scenery in Scotland. It contains abundance of coal, limestone, and freestone. The living, val. £400, is in the presb. of Langholm, in the patron. of the Duke of Buccleuch. A handsome modern church stands on the E. side of the Esk. There is also a Free church, and a handsome school-house. There are numerous remains of ancient entrenchments and fortresses in the parish, including Johnnie Armstrong's tower, and other mementoes of the mutual incursions of the English and Scottish borderers. The par., extending about 9 miles in length and 7 in breadth, is the property of the Duke of Buccleuch, who is sole heritor of the parish.

CANONBY-CROSS, or CANNONBY-CROSS, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 2 miles to the N.E. of Maryport, its post town. It is situated on the coast of the Solway Frith, on the N. bank of the river Ellen, and includes the tnshps. of Birkby, Canonby-Cross, and Crosby, with the flourishing seaport town of Maryport. Coal is found, and freestone is quarried here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, of the val. of £150, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle. The church is dedicated to St. John. It is partly in the Norman style, and contains several monuments of the Senhouse family, one of whom, Richard Senhouse, was Bishop of Carlisle in the 17th century. The town of Maryport, locally situated in this parish, was a mere fishing village till a century ago; it is now a thriving seaport, with a large export trade in coal, and has several shipyards, coarse linen and cotton factories, &c., employing a population of 6,000. For ecclesiastical purposes Maryport forms a distinct parish, with its own church and schools. The living is a perpet. cur.,* val. £166, in the patron. of J. P. Senhouse, Esq.

CANON-FROME, a par. in the hund. of Radlow, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles to the N.W. of Ledbury, its post town. It is watered by the river Frome. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £220, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Hopton, incumbent.

CANONGATE, a par. and suburb of the city of Edinburgh, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, comprising within its limits the eastern part of the Old Town. Being a vassalage to Edinburgh, it is governed by a baron baillie and two resident magistrates, who are chosen annually by the town council of that city. Their jurisdiction extends beyond the bounds of the parish, to the E. side of "The Pleasants," and to the town of North Leith; they are ex-officio justices of peace in the county of Mid-Lothian. There is a foundation grammar school, under the patron. of the magistrates and kirk session. While Edinburgh was the seat of royalty, the Canongate was the place of residence of the noble families who attended the court, and there are several old houses which retain the names of the noble owners; but it is now chiefly inhabited by the small tradespeople. On the place where the Canongate is at present situated anciently stood the town of Herbergare, at the eastern end of which David I., in 1128, founded the Abbey of Holyrood House, at which time the old name of Herbergare was changed for the present appellation of Canongate, so called from the houses of the canons.

CANONGATE, a tnshp. in the par. of Alnwick, ward of Coquetdale, in the co. of Northumberland.

CANON-MILLS, an old suburb of Edinburgh, now adjoining the north of the New Town, in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland. It is seated on Leith Water, near the Granton branch railway. Here are large flour-mills and tanneries, and the engine-houses of the Edinburgh and Northern railway.

CANON-PYON, or CANON-PION, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, in the co. of Hereford, 4 miles to the S.E. of Weobly. Hereford is its post town. Hops are cultivated in the district. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, and in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. It is in the early English style, and contains a fine screen and an ancient font.

CANTELOFF, once a separate par., but now joined to the par. of Hethersett, in the hund. of Humbleyard, in the co. of Norfolk.

CANTERBURY, a cathedral city, being the seat of the primacy of England, a municipal and parliamentary borough, and a county of itself, locally situated in the hund. of Bridge and Petham, lathe of St. Augustine, in the co. of Kent, but exercising an independent jurisdiction. It is 16 miles distant from Dover and Margate respectively, and $55\frac{1}{4}$ miles S.E. from London, or 65 miles by the London, Chatham, and Dover railway, on which it is a station. It is also a station on the Ramsgate branch of the South-Eastern railway. Another branch of the same railway connects the city with the port of Whitstable, which is 6 miles off on the Thames side; while Fordwich, 3 miles below on the Stour, serves as its river port, though now but little used.—Canterbury is a very ancient city, and was a place of importance even before the Roman invasion. It was called by the ancient Britons, Durwhern; which name it continued to bear under the Latinised form of Durovernum, after it became an important Roman station. It was a station on Watling Street, which commenced at Richborough, and was a point of meeting of several other great Roman roads, including those to Dover, Lympne, and Reculver. The town was early occupied by the Saxons, by whom it was named Cantwara-byrig, or "town of the Kentish men;" and was made the capital of the Saxon kingdom of Kent, and a royal residence. At the same period the abbey was founded by the Roman missionary, St. Augustine, and his royal convert, King Ethelbert. Canterbury was then made the seat of the metropolitan see, and Augustine the first Archbishop of Canterbury, a dignity which it has ever since retained. The cathedral was commenced, but not completed, in his lifetime. The city suffered severely and repeatedly from the attacks of the Danes, and especially in the year 1011, when, after a siege of several weeks, they stormed it, slaughtering immense numbers of the inhabitants, and carrying off many prisoners; among the latter was St. Alphage, the archbishop, whom they afterwards murdered at their camp on Blackheath. The city owed its restoration to Canute. At the period of the Norman Conquest it was a large and flourishing place, and it is called in Domesday Book, Civitas Cantuariæ. The castle, of which the keep still remains, was probably erected by William the Conqueror. The city was several times nearly destroyed by fire. In 1170 the cathedral was the scene of the murder of Thomas à Becket, then archbishop, who was afterwards canonised, and had a splendid shrine erected to his honour. From that time Canterbury attracted pilgrims in large numbers from all parts of Christendom, and their rich offerings contributed greatly both to the prosperity of the city and the wealth of the church. A more durable result of these famous pilgrimages we still possess in the "Canterbury Tales" of Chaucer. Henry II. made a pilgrimage to the tomb of the saint, and submitted to a scourging at the hands of the monks. Richard I. and Richard II. visited the city. A jubilee or festival of the Translation of St. Thomas was instituted, which was celebrated by an incredible number of pilgrims. The festival was held for the last time in 1520. Henry VIII. occasionally resided here, part of the monastery being converted into a royal palace, in which he entertained the Emperor Charles V. for three days, in 1519. In 1573 Queen Elizabeth held her court and kept her birthday here. In 1625, the marriage of Charles I. with Henrietta Maria of France was celebrated at this city, and the royal visitors were entertained by the Wottons, to whom the abbey then belonged. Charles II. held his court at Canterbury in 1660, on occasion of his restoration to the throne. After the dissolution of the monasteries by Henry VIII. the wealth and importance of the city, mostly dependent on its religious foundations, began to decline. It now exists by its ancient foundations and its traffic as the capital of East Kent, which its natural situation ensures to it. Measured by the test of population, the condition of the city is at present prosperous, showing an increase of no less than 2,925 in the decennial period, the population in 1851 being 18,398, and in 1861, 21,323.—Canterbury is situated in a picturesque and fertile country on the banks of the Stour, which here forms several islands. The city is about a mile in length and the same in breadth, standing on its original site, and portions of the old wall built by the Romans are still standing. Westgate is the only one of the city gates now remaining; it is built of squared stones, and the upper part is used as a gaol. The Stour, which runs here in two channels, is crossed by several stone bridges; but its navigation is much impeded by the mills on its banks. In the town there are several streets of modern date; but many of the houses are ancient and timber-framed, with projecting upper stories, an interesting example of which will be found in Mercery-lane, where there is an old-fashioned house, formerly an inn, affording a genuine specimen of hostelry of olden times, such as Chaucer so graphically describes in his "Canterbury Tales." The streets are paved and lighted with gas, and there is a good supply of water. The gas-works and water-works, established soon after 1820, are situated near the ruins of the castle.—The principal buildings are the ancient guildhall, situated in High-street, rebuilt in the reign of Queen Anne, which contains some ancient portraits and armour; the corn and hop exchange, in St. George's-street, a handsome edifice, fronted with stone, and erected about 1830; beneath it is the public meat office. In Burgate-street are the poultry and butter markets, and in St. Margaret's-street the fish market. Without St. George's-gate is a spacious cattle market, which is held every Saturday; and in the Sturry-road are extensive cavalry, infantry, and artillery barracks, established at the close of the last century, with new barracks, erected in 1811; the latter capable of accommodating 99 officers, 1,841 non-commissioned officers and privates, and 481 horses. In the rear of the barracks is the military infirmary. The Philosophical Institution, situated in Guildhall-street, was founded in 1826; it is a handsome structure with an Ionic portico, and contains a museum; the Literary and Scientific Institution also requires to be mentioned. The sessions-house and county gaol is near St. George's and the Kent hospitals. The theatre, built in 1861, is situated in Guildhall-street. The public assembly-rooms are in St. Margaret's-street. The Mint, which is situated within the precincts, once belonged to the Knights Templars. It is an extra-parochial place, under the jurisdiction of the Board of Green Cloth.—Canterbury is not the seat of any manufacture or important branch of industry, but carries on a steady trade, especially in wool and corn. Soap, candles, whiting, tobacco-pipes, bricks and ropes, are made in various establishments. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth silk-weaving was introduced by the persecuted Walloons, who settled here, and at a later date the manufacture of the fabric called "Chamberry" muslin, a mixture of silk and cotton, was carried on extensively. At present the workpeople are chiefly employed in agriculture. There are numerous hop-grounds in the neighbourhood, and many flour-mills on the river. Canterbury brawn is in high repute, and is largely exported.—Previously to the reign of Henry III., the city, being a royal demesne, was governed by a prefect, or provost, appointed by the crown. That monarch conferred on the citizens the privilege of electing two bailiffs for themselves. Henry VI. granted them further privileges, and a mayor was chosen in place of the bailiffs. Edward IV. confirmed previous charters, and constituted the city a county of itself. Various charters were granted by later sovereigns. Under the Reform Act the borough comprises the 13 parishes composing the city, with several precincts and extra-parochial districts, part of Holy Cross, and the borough of Longport. It was formerly divided into six wards, named after the six ancient gates, but is now divided into three. The municipal government is vested in a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, bearing the style of the "mayor and commonalty of the city of Canterbury," and they have the right of electing the sheriff. The citizens first received the elective franchise from Edward I., since whose reign the city has regularly returned two members to the imperial parliament. The borough has a revenue of about £3,700, and contains within its municipal and parliamentary limits, which are co-extensive, 3,250 acres, and 3,919 inhabited houses. The city forms a Poor-law Union of itself, and although under the jurisdiction of the Poor Law Commissioners, is exempt from the provisions of the New Poor Law Act as regards the election of its guardians, who are chosen by a majority of the ratepayers, and not by the property qualification. It is the headquarters of the East Kent militia, and the head of County Court and Excise districts. Quarter sessions are held by the recorder, and petty sessions regularly once a month by the commission of peace for the city, consisting of eight justices. Assizes are held for the county of the city, which is included within the Home circuit. The elections for the eastern division of the county of Kent take place on Barham Downs, at a short distance out of the town.—In its ecclesiastical relations, Canterbury is the seat of the metropolitan see of England, the head of a diocese, of an archdeaconry, and a deanery. The primacy conferred on the archbishop by the Pope was not finally established without considerable opposition, both on the part of the prelates and the archbishops of York. The primate ranks as first peer of the realm after the royal family, and at the coronation places the crown on the head of the sovereign. He is a privy councillor, and has an income of £15,000 per annum. He holds the patronage of about 150 livings, and has seats at Lambeth and Addington Place, in Surrey. The province of Canterbury includes 21 episcopal sees, viz., those of St. Asaph, Bangor, Bath and Wells, Canterbury, Chichester, St. David's, Ely, Exeter, Gloucester and Bristol, Hereford, Lichfield, Lincoln, Llandaff, London, Norwich, Oxford, Peterborough, Rochester, Salisbury, Winchester, and Worcester. The diocese of Canterbury comprises the greater part of the county of Kent.—The cathedral, sometimes called Christ Church, is one of the largest and most magnificent ecclesiastical structures in England. It is said to have been erected on the site of the palace of King Ethelbert, and of a still older church. After being burnt by the Danes, it was restored in 1023 by Canute; and being again burnt, was rebuilt shortly after the Norman Conquest by Archbishop Lanfranc and his successor, Anselm, partly under the direction of Prior Conrad. It was subsequently enlarged, and frequently improved and enriched by succeeding archbishops. Hence it exhibits an extraordinary diversity of architectural styles, from the earliest Norman to the latest perpendicular. It forms a splendid object in the view of the city from every side. The whole structure is so finely proportioned, and its parts so exquisitely disposed and combined, that, notwithstanding the great variety of styles exhibited, the impression produced is harmonious and grand. The building has the form of a double cross, with a lofty, massive, yet elegant tower arising from the intersection of the nave and the western transepts, and two smaller towers at the west end. The following are its dimensions:—Length from E. to W., 514 feet; length of the choir, 180 feet; height of the choir, 71 feet; breadth through the eastern transept, 154, and through the western, 124 feet; breadth of the nave, 94, and length, 178 feet; height of the central tower, 235; of the western towers, 130 feet. The nave, western transepts, and central tower are in the perpendicular style, and the tower, called Bell Harry Tower, is one of the finest specimens of that style existing in England. It is crowned with a pierced parapet and four beautiful turrets. The Norman style is seen in the western towers and the choir; the latter, however, being partly early English. A fine screen, in the decorated style, separates the nave from the choir. The roof, both of the nave and choir, is groined, that of the former very richly. At the E. end is Becket's Crown—which part of the cathedral is circular in form, and was completed in the lifetime of Becket. Here was kept the ancient throne of wood for the archbishops, the place of which is now filled by one of grey marble. The S.W. porch, the work of Prior Goldstone, is a singularly beautiful example of the perpendicular style, richly ornamented, and with a groined roof. It forms the principal entrance to the cathedral. From the eastern part of the nave are the approaches to numerous chapels, among which, especially interesting and beautiful, are the Lady Chapel erected by Prior Goldstone, and those of Holy Trinity, Henry IV., and St. Michael. Trinity Chapel is in the N.E. transept, and formerly contained the splendid shrine of St. Thomas-à-Becket. In St. Andrew's Chapel are kept the ancient charters and grants of lands, some of them signed with a cross by the Saxon kings a thousand years ago. Here are no less than ten tombs of archbishops, one of them the original tomb of St. Thomas, to which Henry II. came barefoot to do penance, and where Louis VII. of France, afterwards canonised as St. Louis, watched a whole night. The cathedral has many fine stained windows; those in the eastern part being of very great antiquity and complicated in design, those in the transepts of later date, and that at the W. end the largest and most admired. The great S. window is a patchwork of ancient glass, but magnificent in effect. The monuments of the archbishops and other illustrious persons interred in the cathedral are very numerous. Among the most splendid and interesting are those of the Black Prince, a canopied effigy, recumbent and in armour; of Henry IV. and his queen, and Archbishop Courteney, in Trinity Chapel; those of archbishops Chicheley and Bourchier in the choir; that of Dean Wotton in the Lady Chapel; and those of the Earl of Somerset and the Duke of Clarence in St. Michael's Chapel. In Becket's Crown is the tomb of Cardinal Pole, the last archbishop interred in the cathedral. The crypt, or undercroft, is the finest in England, extending under the whole building, and having a vaulted roof supported by columns. It contained a chapel of the Virgin, with several others, and numerous monuments. The western part of the crypt was appropriated by Queen Elizabeth, in 1568, to the use of the Walloon congregation, for whose benefit Divine service was there performed in the French language, whence it acquired the name of the French hurch. The cathedral was thoroughly repaired and estored a few years ago. The precincts, comprising an rea about three quarters of a mile in circuit, contain any venerable remains of ancient architecture. The eautiful gateway built by Prior Goldstone in 1517, in he perpendicular style, consisting of two archways lanked by octangular towers, now covered with ivy, orms the chief entrance to the precincts. Within are he cloisters, the chapter-house, the library, or prior's hapel, the remains of the old palace of the archbishops, he treasury, the grammar school, &c. The cloisters are n the N. side of the cathedral, and form a large quadangle 134 feet square, with beautiful windows, and a roined roof ornamented with nearly 700 shields. The loisters have been restored. The chapter-house is an legant building, partly in the early English and artly in the perpendicular style, with panelled oak oof, richly ornamented windows, and stone seats. It is 92 feet long, 37 broad, and 54 high. In the ibrary, which contains the MSS. of Isaac Casaubon, Rooke, and others, are a curious marble table, inlaid with mythological figures, and an ancient copy of he charter of Archbishop Dunstan. The treasury has a curious Norman staircase in very good preservaion. In the Green Court is the deanery, formerly the priory, containing portraits of the deans of Canterbury.—The city comprises 13 pars., the livings being all in the dioc. of Canterbury. The living of All Saints is a rect. consolidated with those of St. Mary-in-the-Castle and St. Mildred, val. £150, in the gift of the lord chancellor. The church of St. Mildred is partly in the perpendicular style, and contains several old monuments. The church of All Saints has been rebuilt. St. Alphage's is a rect.* united with the vic. of St. Mary Northgate, val. £189, in the gift of the archbishop. St. Andrew's is a rect.* united with that of St. Mary's Bredman, which now form but one par., val. £223, in the patron. of the archbishop for two turns, and of the dean and chapter for one. The church was rebuilt in 1764. St. George the Martyr is a rect.* united with that of St. Mary Magdalene, val. £140, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. St. George the Great is a perpet. cur. The church, which is a Norman building, was restored a few years ago. It has a wooden tower, and contains an ancient font and a monumental brass of the year 1531. St. Margaret's is a rect.,* val. £120, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Canterbury. The church possesses a brass of 1479, and a monument to Somner, author of the "Antiquities of Canterbury." St. Martin's is a rect. united with the vic. of St. Paul's, val. £300, in the patron. of the archbishop and the dean and chapter alternately. The church of St. Martin is the most interesting of the old churches in Canterbury, and, according to tradition, is the most ancient in England. It was here that St. Augustine first preached Christianity, before the cathedral was built. In it Bertha, the pious queen of Ethelbert, was both baptised and buried. The present structure stands on a hill without the city, on the site of the one erected in the time of St. Augustine, or earlier, having been first built about A.D. 187. It is a small plain structure, with a tower covered with ivy. It contains a very old font, three monumental brasses, and windows of stained glass, and has been carefully restored. Roman bricks are observable in the walls of the chancel, which is probably the most ancient portion. The churchyard commands a good view, and is adorned with yew trees. The church of St. Paul is in the early English style, and contains the tomb of Admiral Rooke, a font supported by pillars, and two monumental brasses. The living of St. Mary Bredin is a vic., val. £149, in the patron. of the Rev. H. L. Warner. The church is very ancient and has a wooden tower. St. Peter's is a rect.* united with the vic. of Holy Cross, val. £120, in the patron. of the archbishop and the dean and chapter alternately. The church of the Holy Cross is a cruciform edifice of great antiquity, and had once a chantry attached to it. St. Dunstan's is a vic., val. £120, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, which stands without the walls of the city, is a very ancient building, with a western tower and a semicircular tower close to it. It has been much altered, and has lost part of its original character. It contains an old font, a piscina, and the vault of the Roper family, where was deposited the head of the Lord Chancellor Sir Thomas More by his daughter, Mary Roper. The head was discovered, during some repairs in 1835, in a leaden box in the vault. Two chantries were formerly attached to this church. Besides these churches the city contains nine chapels, of which three belong to the Baptists, and the others to the Independents, Quakers, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, Walloons, and Lady Huntingdon's Connexion. There is also a Jewish synagogue. The grammar school, called the King's School, was founded at the close of the 7th century, and refounded by Henry VIII. for 50 scholars. It has one annual exhibition, tenable for four years at Oxford and Cambridge alternately, and two smaller ones for descendants of particular families. The boys in the school are divided thus:—5 senior scholars, £30 per annum; 15 junior, £15; 30 probationers, £10; and about 35 commoners. The remains of the old buildings were pulled down in 1863, to be replaced by modern structures. The building is within the cathedral precincts, and occupies the site of the almonry. Harvey, who discovered the circulation of the blood, and Tenterden, lord chief justice of England, were educated at this school. The blue-coat school was founded in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, on the foundation of a very old hospital for poor priests endowed by Simon de Langton. It is for 16 boys, who are clothed, maintained, educated, and afterwards apprenticed. The revenue of the school is about £500 per annum. There are also grey-coat, Sunday, National, British, and infant schools. The hospitals, almshouses, and other institutions for charitable purposes are numerous. Jesus Hospital, founded by Sir John Boys in 1596, has an endowment of about £600 a year, part of which is applied to the education and clothing of 20 children. Eastridge Hospital, said to have been founded by Archbishop Lanfranc, has a revenue of £510, and a school annexed to it founded by Archbishop Whitgift. Maynard's Hospital was established by Maynard le Rich about the beginning of the 14th century, and has an income from endowment of about £240 a year; Cotton's Hospital is united with it. St. John's Hospital, also founded by Lanfranc, for infirm and blind men and women, has a revenue of nearly £500. There are several other almshouses. A missionary college, in connection with the Church of England, has been established on the site of the ancient abbey, which was sold by the Wottons to Mr. Beresford-Hope in 1844, and by him given to the archbishop for that purpose. The college was incorporated in 1848, and is built in the form of a quadrangle. It comprises apartments for 45 students, rooms for the fellows, chapel, cloister, library, and crypt. Twenty exhibitions are already endowed in connection with it. As far as was practicable the remains of the abbey have been preserved. The annual value of the charitable endowments of the city is about £5,000.—The monastery of St. Augustine was the most important of the religious foundations anciently existing at Canterbury. It was founded in 597 by St. Augustine for monks of the Benedictine order, and rose to the dignity of a mitred abbey. It was enlarged and enriched by the gifts of kings and nobles, holding 12,000 acres of land in various parts of England, and was valued at the Dissolution at £1,432. The abbey and its precincts occupied about 16 acres of ground on the eastern side of the city, and many kings and archbishops were buried in it. The remains consist chiefly of the beautiful gateway, which has been repaired, part of St. Ethelbert's tower, and the remains of the chapel of St. Pancras, said to have been built before the time of King Ethelbert I. They are now rescued from the vile uses to which they had once been appropriated, and no longer serve for a public-house, a brewery, or a cockpit. Among the other ancient remains are those of St. Lawrence's hospital for lepers, and the Dominican and Franciscan priories. The remains of St. Gregory's priory have been taken down. Only the wall and an archway remain of the once sumptuous palace of the archbishops in Palace-street. To the S.E. of the city, near Oatenhill, was the nunnery of St. Sepulchre, founded about 1100 by Archbishop Anselm. One of the nuns was Elizabeth Barton, the "holy maid of Kent," who was hung at Tyburn for her denunciations of Henry VIII. on account of his meditated divorce of his queen. The remains of the castle are in Castle-street, on the S.W. side of the city, near the gas and water-works. A fine Roman arch formerly stood at Worth-gate, but was removed some time since to Lee Priory. South of the city is the Dane John, or Donjon field, containing a large artificial mound, laid out in public walks and terraces, tastefully planted. A pillar is erected in memory of Alderman Simmons, to whom the city is indebted for the promenade. There are some highly esteemed mineral springs in the large nursery-grounds near the city.—The newspapers published in Canterbury are the Canterbury Journal, Kentish Gazette, Kentish Observer, and Kent Herald. Saturday is the market day for corn, hops, meat, and cattle, but provision markets are held daily. An annual pleasure fair, called "Jack and Joan fair," commences on the 10th October and lasts nearly a fortnight; another fair is held on the 4th May, and there are several minor fairs. Races are held on Barham Downs in April and August.

CANTERTON, a tythg. in the par. of Minstead, hund. of Redbridge, in the co. of Southampton, 8 miles to the S.W. of Romsey.

CANTFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Tunstall, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 5 miles to the S. of Kirkby Lonsdale. It is situated near the river Greta.

CANTLEY, a par. in the hund. of Blofield, in the co. of Norfolk, 4 miles to the N. of Loddon. Norwich is its post town. It is situated on the river Yare, near the Great Eastern and Norfolk railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £203, in the patron. of W. A. Gilbert, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. There is a charity school in the village.

CANTLEY, a par. in the southern div. of the wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the S.E. of Doncaster, its post town. It includes the hmlts. of Bessecar, Branton, High Ellers, Low Ellers, and Gatewood. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £233, in the patron. of J. W. Childers, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Wilfrid. Cantley House is the principal residence.

CANTON, a district par. in the par. of Llandaff, hund. of Kibbor, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 2 miles from Cardiff, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £140, in the patron. of the bishop.

CANTREFF, a par. in the hund. of Penkelly, in the co. of Brecknock, South Wales, 3 miles to the S. of Brecknock, its post town. It lies in a mountainous district, at the foot of the Brecknock Beacons, on a small stream which runs northward to the river Usk. Its ancient name was Cynnedd. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, in the patron. of the Rev. T. Powell, incumbent. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is situated on a wooded hill by the river, and the churchyard commands a fine view. The par. is of large extent, comprising about 20,000 acres, and includes the district par. of Nantddu, which has its own church. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £60, in the gift of the vicar.

CANTY BAY, a vil. in the co. of Haddington, Scotland, 2 miles from North Berwick. It is seated on the sea-coast, opposite the Bass Rock, at the boundary of the pars. of North Berwick and Whitekirk.

CANVEY ISLAND, a chplry. partly in the hund. of Barstable, and partly in that of Rochford, in the co. of Essex, 6 miles to the W. of Leigh, its post town, and 7 from Southend. It is situated in the river Thames, opposite Benfleet, and consists chiefly of marshy pasture lands, defended by high banks all round, constructed in the reign of James I., but still subject to inundation by very high tides. The island is about 6 miles in length and 2 in breadth, containing 3,600 acres. On these rich pastures numerous oxen and sheep are fattened for the London market. It is approached at low water by a footway over the strand, and there is a bridge connecting it with the neighbouring village of South Benfleet. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the fishery, the rest in grazing. The island is divided between 8 or 9 different parishes. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £58, in the patron. of the Bishop of London. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is small. Here is a coastguard station, and a fair is held on the 25th June.

CANWELL, an ext. par. district in the southern div. of the hund. of Offlow, in the co. of Stafford, 5 miles to the S.W. of Tamworth. It lies on the border of Warwickshire, and was the site of a Benedictine priory, founded in the middle of the 12th century by Geva Ridel, daughter of Hugh Lupus, Earl of Chester. In 1525 this priory, which had greatly declined, was given to Cardinal Wolsey. Canwell Hall is the seat of the Lawleys. There is a mineral spring in the vicinity. The lib. contains about 260 acres.

CANWICK, a par. in the lib. of the city of Lincoln, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 2 miles from Lincoln, its post town. It lies near the rivers Witham and Brant. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £231, in the patron. of the Master and Wardens of the Mercers' Company. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There are charitable endowments worth about £12 a year. Canwick House was the seat of Colonel Sibthorpe, M.P.

CAPAS-HEIGHT, a hmlt. in the tnshp. and par. of Batley, wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the N.W. of Wakefield.

CAPEL, a vil. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Ystrad, hund. of Moyddyn, in the co. of Cardigan, 6 miles to the S.E. of Aberaeron.

CAPEL, a par. in the second div. of the hund of Wotton, in the co. of Surrey, 6 miles to the S. of Dorking, its post town. The par. contains extensive moors. A curious circumstance, as related by Gough in his Additions to Camden, occurred here in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, which materially affected the nature of the soil: a large mound of peat earth on the moors suddenly glided down and covered over the lower lands, carrying with it hedges and fences until it stopped at a farm. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £84, in the patron. of the trustees of the Duke of Norfolk. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is in the early English style of architecture. In addition to the parish church there is a district church at Cold Harbour, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £150, in the patron. of J. Labouchere, Esq. The Society of Friends have a meeting-house here. The charities are of small value, amounting to £15 per annum.

CAPEL, a par. in the hund. of Wilford, in the co. of Suffolk, 6 miles to the E. of Woodbridge, its post town. It is situated on the river Butley. The living is a perpet. cur.* united with that of Butley, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has long been in decay. The parochial charities amount to £6 a year, being the value of the town lands.

CAPEL-BANGOR. See BANGOR, Cardiganshire.

CAPEL-BETTWS. See PEN-PONT, Brecknockshire.

CAPEL-CALLWEN. See GLYNTAWE, Brecknockshire.

CAPEL-COELBREN, a chplry. in the par. of Ystrad-Gynlais, hund. of Devynnock, in the co. of Brecknock, South Wales, 11 miles to the N. of Neath. It is situated in a rich mineral district, on the banks of the river Tawe, near the ancient way called the Sarn Helen. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £45, in the patron. of F. Gough, Esq.

CAPEL-COLMAN, a district par. in the co. of Pembroke, near Cardigan. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £72, in the patron. of Miss Jones.

CAPEL-CURIG, a chplry. in the par. of Llandegai, hund. of Uchaf, in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales, 5 miles to the S.W. of Llanrwst. It is situated at the foot of Mount Siabod, in the vicinity of Snowdon, and is much frequented by tourists on their way to that mountain. The district is rich in minerals, containing much lead, copper, and calamine. The hard rock called serpentine is found here. The village is one of the polling places for the county elections. In the neighbourhood are the fine waterfall of Rhaiadr-y-Wenol, Lake Ogwen, and the castle of Dolwyddelan. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £89, in the gift of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Cung, is a very ancient building. Remains of an ancient edifice, probably Roman, exist at Bryn Gwalian. A large sheep fair is held here on the 28th September.

CAPEL-CYNON, a chplry. in the par. of Upper and Lower Llandisilio-Gogo, hund. of Moyddyn, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 10 miles to the S. of Aberaeron. It was at this place that the Earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII., encamped shortly before the decisive battle of Bosworth, in August, 1485. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £57, in the patron. of the vicar.

CAPEL-DDEWI, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandyssil, hund. of Moyddyn, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 6 miles to the E. of Newcastle-Emlyn. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Llandyssil, in the dioc. of St. David's.

CAPEL-EVAN, a vil. in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 3 miles from Newcastle-Emlyn.

CAPEL-GARMON. See GARTH-GARMON, Denbighshire.

CAPEL-IFAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanelly, hund. of Carnwallon, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, not far from Llanelly. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's.

CAPEL-LE-FERNE, a par. in the hund. of Folkstone, lathe of Shepway, in the co. of Kent, 4 miles to the W. of Dover. The South-Eastern railway passes near it. The living is a perpet cur. annexed to the vic. of Alkham, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and possesses a monumental brass of the year 1526.

CAPEL-LLANDURY, a chplry. in the par. of Pembrey, hund. of Carnwallon, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 2 miles from Kidwelly.

CAPEL, ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Samford, in the co. of Suffolk, 5 miles to the S.E. of Hadleigh, 7 S.W. of Ipswich, and 64¾ from London. It is a station on the Hadleigh branch of the Great Eastern and Eastern Union railway. It is situated in a sheltered spot on a branch of the river Stour. The living is a rect. with that of Little Wenham consolidated, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £682, in the patron. of the Rev. J. Tweed. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a neat building with a tower, which was formerly surmounted by a spire, but the latter was taken down in 1818. The register dates from the year 1532. The tithes were commuted in 1838 for a yearly modus of £528. It comprises three manors.

CAPENHURST, or CAPPENHURST, a district par. and tnshp. in the par. of Shotwick, hund. of Wirrall, in the co. palatine of Chester, 5 miles to the N. of Chester. The Chester and Birkenhead railway passes by it. In the vil. is Capenhurst Hall. The church has been recently erected. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £120, in the patron. of the Rev. R. Richardson, incumbent.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE, a vil. in the hund. of Stottesden, in the co. of Salop, near Kinlet.

CAPERNWRAY, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Over Kellet, and par. of Bolton-le-Sands, hund. of Lonsdale, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 3 miles to the S. of Burton-in-Kendal.

CAPESTHORNE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, in the co. palatine of Chester, 4 miles to the W. of Macclesfield. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £76, in the patron. of Mrs. Davenport. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. Capesthorne Hall, the seat of the Davenports, pleasantly situated in a spacious and beautiful park, on the bank of a small lake or mere, was burnt down in September, 1861.

CAPHEATON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkwhelpington, Tindale ward, in the co. of Northumberland, 12 miles to the W. of Morpeth. Capheaton Castle, originally founded in the 13th century, has been for many generations the seat of the Swinburne family. The present mansion was built about 1670, and was afterwards enlarged. The grounds, which are extensive and wooded, contain a lake covering about 80 acres. About 1750 some Roman coins and silver vessels were dug up in the neighbourhood.

CAPLAND, a tythg. in the par. of Broadway, hund. of Abdick and Bulstone, in the co. of Somerset, 2 miles to the N.W. of Ilminster.

CAPLE, or CAPEL, a par. in the hund. of Washlingstone, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 3 miles to the S.E. of Tunbridge. The living is a vic. united with that of Tudeley, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church is dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket.

CAPLE-CROSS, a hmlt. in the par. of Horsemonden, hund. of Brenchley and Horsemonden, lathe of Aylesford, in the co. of Kent, 8 miles to the S.E. of Tunbridge.

CAPPACLOUGH, a vil. in the par. of Kilgobban, bar. of Corkaguiney, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles from Castle Gregory. Near it are ruins of a castle and a chapel.

CAPPAGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Killian, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 10 miles to the N.E. of Newtown-Bellew.

CAPPAGH, a par. in the bar. of Lower Connello, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the W. of Adare. It was the site of a castle, an old seat of the Geraldines, built in the reign of King John, of which there are interesting ruins. The living is a rect. united with that of St. Mary's, Limerick, in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe. A police force is stationed here. The chief residence is Cappagh House, which stands near the remains of the castle.

CAPPAGH, a par. in the bars. of Strabane and Omagh, in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles to the N.E. of Omagh. It is situated in a mountainous country, and contains large tracts of bog. Partly in this parish are the lofty hills called Bessie Bell and Mary Gray, and not far off is Cairntogher, the highest mountain in Tyrone. There are stone-quarries, and some of the people are employed in weaving and spinning. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry and Raphoe, val. £1,423, in the patron. of the Provost and Fellows of Trinity College, Dublin. The Roman Catholics, Baptists, and Presbyterians have chapels in the parish, and there are numerous schools. There are several seats of the gentry in the neighbourhood, among which are Mountjoy Cottage, Mount Pleasant, and Facary Lodge. The par. is very extensive, comprising an area of 37,670 acres.

CAPPAGH-WHITE, a vil. in the par. of Toom, bar. of Kilnamanagh, in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles to the N. of Tipperary. There is a police station in the village. Fairs are held on the 4th June, the 27th July, the 29th September, the 16th November, and the 21st December.

CAPPALUSK, a hmlt. in the bar. of Tiaguin, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 9 miles to the N.E. of Athenry.

CAPPAMORE, a vil. in the par. of Tuogh, bar. of Owneybeg, in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 12 miles to the S.E. of Limerick. It is seated near the river Mulkern, a branch of the Shannon. The river is crossed by a stone bridge. Cattle fairs are held here on the 20th April, the 1st July, the 20th September, and the 12th December.

CAPPAMORE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Glenarought, in the co. of Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N. of Kenmare.

CAPPANANAGH, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Tulla, in the co. of Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles to the E. of Six-mile-Bridge.

CAPPEEN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Carbery West, in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 11 miles to the N.W. of Bandon.

CAPPOGE, or KIPPOGUE, a par. in the bar. of Ardee, in the co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, not far from Dunleer. The living is a rect. forming part of the union of Dunleer, in the dioc. of Armagh and Clogher.

CAPPOQUIN, a vil. or small market town in the par. of Lismore, bar. of Coshmore, in the co. of Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 27 miles to the W. of Waterford, and 124 miles from Dublin. It is seated in a pleasant country on the banks of the river Blackwater, here crossed by a bridge, and is a very old town. It had formerly a castle, built at a very early period. Here is a police station, and petty sessions are held regularly. A monastery of the Trappist order is established at Mount Melleray, in connection with which schools are established. The principal residence is Cappoquin House, the seat of Sir R. Keane, Bart., who gave the site for the monastery. Fairs are held on the 17th March, the 31st May, the 5th July, the 20th September, and the 14th October.

CAPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Dittisham, hund. of Coleridge, in the co. of Devon, 3 miles to the N. of Dartmouth. It is seated in a beautiful country near the river Dart.

CAPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Stogumber, hund. of Williton, in the co. of Somerset, 5 miles to the S. of Watchet. It is seated near the Quantock hills.

CAPUTH, a par. for the most part in the co. of Perth, but partly in that of Forfar, Scotland. It is situated in a pleasant hilly district in Stormont, on the banks of the river Tay, where the Isla joins it, and includes the vils. of Caputh Wester, Craigie, Fungarth, Kincarnie Meikleour, and Spittalfield. There are numerous lakes in the parish, abounding in fish. Clay-slate is found in the hills, and is extensively quarried for roofing purposes; limestone is also abundant. The living, val. £233, is in the presb. of Dunkeld, in the patron. of the crown. The church was repaired and improved about 1840, and contains a small brass font. Two miles E. of the church is Inchtuthill, an oblong table-land, 60 feet in height, the traditional site of a Pictish town. The Romans had a camp here, of which the traces have almost disappeared. Inchtuthill is said to have been part of the land granted to the Hays by Kenneth III. about the close of the 10th century. There are several cairns in the par. Amongst the seats of the gentry are Delvine House, Meikleour House, Stenton House, &c. The par. extends about 13 miles in length, and varies in breadth from 2 to 7 miles.

CARALDSTON. See CAREESTON, Forfarshire.

CARBECK, a tythg. in the tnshp. of Lunedale, par. of Romaldkirk, and wap. of Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 9 miles to the N.W. of Barnard Castle.

CARBERY (EAST) BARONY, one of the 23 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, situated in the southern part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the bar. of West Muskerry, on the E. by the bar. of Kinalmeaky, on the S. by St. George's Channel, and on the W. by the bar. of West Carbery. It is separated into two parts. The eastern part of the bar. contains the pars. of Ballymoney, Kilbrittain, Kilmaloda, Kilnagross, Rathclarin, and Templeregan, with parts of the pars. of Ballinadee, Ballymodan, Brinny, Desert, Desertserges, Innishannon, Island Kilgarriff, Ringrone, Templequinlan, Templetrine, and Timoleague. The western part contains the pars. of Fanlobbus, Kilfaughnabeg, and Kinneigh, with parts of those of Castleventry, Drimagh, Inchigeelagh, Kilkerranmore, Kilmacabea, Kilmichael, Kilmocomoge, Murragh, Rathbarry, and Ross. The entire bar. extends over an area of about 173,000 acres.

CARBERY (WEST) BARONY, one of the 23 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Cork, in the prov. of Munster, Ireland, situated in the south-western part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the bar. of Bantry, on the E. by the bar. of East Carbery, on the S. by St. George's Channel, and on the N.W. by Bantry Bay. It is in two parts. The eastern part of the bar. contains the pars. of Abbeystrowry, Aghadown, Castlehaven, Clear Island, Creagh, Dromdaleague, Myross, and Tullagh, with part of the pars. of Caheragh, Drimagle, and Kilmacabea. The western part contains the pars. of Kilcoe, Kilcrohane, Kilmoe, and Skull, with parts of those of Caheragh, Durrus, and Kilmocomoge. The entire bar., which gives the title of baron to the family of Evans of Castle Freke, extends over an area of about 187,200 acres.

CARBOST, a post-office station in the Isle of Skye, in the co. of Inverness, Scotland, 18 miles to the W. of Broadford.

CARBROOK, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Attercliffe-cum-Darnal, in the par. and borough of Sheffield, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the N.E. of Sheffield.

CARBROOKE, a par. in the hund. of Wayland, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the E. of Watton, its post-town. A small stream runs through the village and falls into the river Wissey, a branch of the Ouse. This place was the site of a preceptory of the Knights Templars, founded about the middle of the 12th century by Roger Earl of Clare, and afterwards endowed and given by his widow Maud to the Knights Hospitallers. It had a chapel attached, and a revenue at the Dissolution of £67. There are no remains of the buildings, which stood near the church. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £170, in the gift of R. Dewing, Esq. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. It is in the perpendicular style, with a lofty tower, and contains 1 stalls and several ancient monuments. The charitable endowments of the par. amount to £70 per annum. Carbrooke Hall is the principal mansion.

CARBURTON, a chplry. in the par. of Edwinstowe, wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 4 miles to the S. of Worksop. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Edwinstowe, in the dioc. of Lincoln. Dr. Aldrich resided at Carburton Lodge.

CARBURY, or CASTLE-CARBURY, a par. in the bar. of Carbury, in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, 8 miles to the N.W. of Robertstown. It is situated in a fertile district near the Bog of Allen, at the source of the river Boyne, and was the site of an old castle, founded by the Berminghams, and afterwards belonging to the Wellesleys. Remains of it still exist. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, the head of a union embracing eight benefices, val. £225, in the patron. of Viscount Haberton and the Hon. G. Colley. The manor of Carbury belongs to Viscount Haberton. Annual fairs are held in the village on the 26th May and the 2nd October.

CARBURY BARONY, one of the 14 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Kildare, in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland, situated in the N.W. part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the co. of Meath, on the E. by the bars. of Ikeathy with Oughterany, and Clare, on the S. by the bars. of Connell and East Ophaly, and on the W. by King's County and Meath. It contains the pars. of Ardkill, Ballynadrumma, Cadamstown, Carbury, Carrick, Dunfort, Kilpatrick, Kilmore, Kilrainy, Mylerstown, and Nurney. The bar., within which lies part of the Bog of Allen, comprises an area of about 48,280 acres.

CARBURY BARONY, one of the 6 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Sligo, in the prov. of Connaught, Ireland, situated in the northern part of the co., and bounded on the E. by the co. of Leitrim, on the S. by the bar. of Tirerill, and on the W. and N.W. by Sligo Bay and the Atlantic Ocean. It contains the pars. of Ahamlish, Calry, Drumcliff, Killaspugbrone, Kilmacowen, and St. John's, with part of the par. of Rossinver. It extends over an area of about 79,000 acres.

CAR-COLSTON, a par. in the northern div. of the wap. of Bingham, in the co. of Nottingham, 3 miles to the N. of Bingham, which is a station on the Nottingham and Grantham branch of the Great Northern railway. Newark is its post town. It is situated near the great ancient ca. or drain called the Car Dyke, which once connected the river Welland with the Witham, and was probably constructed by the Romans. This dyke now extends about 20 miles in length, from Bourn to the Sleaford canal

The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £203, in the patron. of the Rev. J. C. Girardot, incumbent. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel, and there are charitable bequests for the poor, producing about £18 a year.

CARCROFT, a hmlt. in the par. of Owston, wap. of Upper Osgoldcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N. of Doncaster. It is near the Great Northern railway.

CARDEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Tilston, hund. of Broxton, in the co. palatine of Chester, 4 miles to the N. of Malpas. It is situated near the Broxton Hills. Carden Hall, an old mansion, the seat of the Leche family, was attacked and pillaged by the parliamentary troops in 1643.

CARDESTON. See CARDISTON, Salop.

CARDIFF, a seaport, market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, 170 miles to the W. of London. It was formerly the county town, a distinction now shared with Swansea. It is a principal station on the South Wales railway, and is the terminus of the Taff Vale and Aberdare and Rhymney railways.—The town is situated on a level spot near the coast of the Bristol Channel, on the E. bank of the river Taff, or Tâf, 2 miles above its opening, in common with the Ely, under the headland and roadstead of Penarth, and is a place of considerable antiquity. Its name is derived either from Caer-Taf, which signifies the "fort on the Taff;" or from Caer-didi, signifying the "fortress of Didius." The Welsh form of its name is Caerdydd, which is supposed to lend support to the conjecture that a fort was erected here by Aulus Didius, the Roman general. The native princes of Morganwg had their seat here from the time of their leaving Caerleon till after the Norman Conquest, when Robert Fitzhamon made himself master of the district, and built the castle, portions of which still remain, forming part of the mansion of the Marquis of Bute. Two monasteries were founded here by the earls of Clare in the 13th century.—Cardiff derives its present importance from its port, and its proximity to the rich coal and mineral districts of Aberdare and the Taff Valley, and the great iron-works of Merthyr Tydvil. The construction of the Glamorganshire canal, the Taff Vale and Aberdare railway, and the Bute Dock, with the ship canal, have very greatly promoted the trade and prosperity of the town. Its population increased eighteenfold during the first half of the present century—from 1,018 in 1801 to 18,351 in 1851; and has nearly doubled in the last decennial period, from 1851 to 1861. The canal, 25 miles long, extending from Merthyr Tydvil to the sea, was formed about 1795. The Taff Vale railway, of the same length, was completed in 1840, and runs in a parallel course with the canal. The Bute Docks, projected by the Marquis of Bute, were formed at a cost of above £1,000,000; and though opened in 1839, were not completed till 1859. The West Dock, that first opened, has sea-gates of 45 ft. opening; depth on the sill at springs, 28 ft. 8½ in.; at neaps, 18 ft. 7½ in., and a lock 152 ft. long by 36 ft. broad; the area of the basin is upwards of 20 acres, and the length of quays 8,000 ft. The East Dock has gates of 55 ft. opening; depths on sill, 31 ft. 8½ in. and 21 ft. 7 in.; with an outer lock 220 ft. by 55 ft., and an inner lock 200 ft. by 50 ft. The area of this basin is 46 acres; depth, 25 ft.; breadth, 300 ft. to 500 ft.; and length of quays, 9,100 ft. The dock-gates open upon a broad and deep channel cut in the mud, and flooded by the Taff. Fostered by the success of the Bute Docks, a company has undertaken the improvement of Penarth Harbour, and the construction of rival docks at the mouth of the Ely, which are near completion. These works are connected with the Taff Vale railway near Pentyrch by a short branch line. The harbour is one of the best on the coast, and steamers ply daily to Bristol, according to tides; also to Burnham, on the opposite coast, and to Cork in alternation with Newport. Aberthan and Barry are subports to Cardiff. The tonnage of the port in 1857 was 6,839 vessels, with a register of 1,081,080 tons. Besides the coasting trade there is a considerable colonial and foreign traffic. During the month of February, 1863, 331 ships cleared for foreign ports, carrying 115,890 tons of coals, chiefly the produce of the collieries of Aberdare, 632 tons of coke, 1,911 tons of patent fuel, and 12,669 tons of iron from the great works at Merthyr Tydvil. Corn and provisions are also exported.—Cardiff received its first charter of incorporation from Edward III., in 1338. The borough is divided into two wards, and is governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, bearing the style of the "bailiffs, aldermen, and burgesses of the town of Cardiff." The revenue of the corporation is about £2,450, and the limits of the municipal borough include 4,666 houses, inhabited, according to the census of 1861, by a population of 32,421, against 18,351, in 1851, showing an increase of no less than 14,070, in the decennial period. The town, part of which is of modern erection, has several spacious streets. The principal one is that in the line of the great road from London, which is crossed by another good street at right angles. The streets are paved and lighted with gas. The principal public buildings are the guildhall, which stands in one of the chief streets, and in which the Eisteddvodd, or "Congress of Bards," was held in 1850; the market-house, erected in 1835; the county gaol and house of correction, the theatre, the custom-house, the infirmary (founded by Daniel Jones, Esq.), and the Union poorhouse, W. of the town. The suburbs are now almost as extensive as the town itself, consisting of large masses of buildings around the docks and railway stations, and scattered villas and lines of houses towards Roath and Maindy, at Penarth, Canton, and along the road to Llandaff. The management of the local affairs is entrusted to a numerous body of commissioners appointed under an Act passed in 1837. The town first received the elective franchise in the reign of Henry VIII., since which time it has returned, with Cowbridge and Llantrissent (its contributory boroughs), one member to the imperial parliament. The sanitary interests of the town are provided for by a Local Board of Health. The assizes and quarter sessions are held at Cardiff, and polling for the county elections also takes place here. Cardiff is the head of a Poor-law Union, and of County Court and excise districts. It is the headquarters of the county militia. A weekly newspaper, called the Cardiff Guardian, is published in the town.—Cardiff comprises the two pars. of St. John the Baptist and St. Mary. The living of St. John is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £260, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester. The church is a large and handsome edifice, partly in the early English and partly in the perpendicular style, with a fine embattled tower surmounted by pinnacles. It contains two altar-tombs, with effigies and canopies, in memory of Sir William and Sir John Herbert; the ruins of whose seat are still seen in the castle garden. The living of St. Mary is a vic. in the same dioc., val. £200, in the patron. of the Marquis of Bute. The church was erected about 1845. The old church of St. Mary was destroyed by a flood at the beginning of the 17th century. The Wesleyans, Roman Catholics, Independents, and Baptists have chapels in the town. The charitable endowments, which include a bequest by Cradock Wells for educational purposes, producing about £70 a year, and the income (£25) of the free school founded and endowed by the Herberts, amount altogether to about £140 per annum. There are several large schools in the town, a dispensary, and other charitable institutions.—The castle, which stands on the W. side of the town, consists of a spacious quadrangular court, enclosed on three sides by a lofty earthwork, erected by the exterior wall and buttress towers. The fourth side, towards the river, is defended by a lofty wall, and includes the inhabited buildings, which constitute but a small portion of this ancient fortress. A fine tower flanks the western front, which is new. On a mound are still standing ruins of the keep, 75 feet high, commanding an extensive view over the flat neighbourhood. It was in this castle that Robert Duke of Normandy, surnamed Curthose, suffered an imprisonment of nearly 30 years, and died in 1135. During the civil war in the reign of Charles I. the castle was first garrisoned for the king, but afterwards fell into the hands of Cromwell. It contains numerous portraits of the Bute family, and other pictures, including works by Vandyck, Kneller, and others. A short distance E. of the castle are the scanty remains of the ancient friary. A garden and walks have been made on the W. side of the river, just across the bridge, by Lady Bute, who permits the public to enjoy them. The Taff is crossed by a bridge. Cardiff gives the title of baron to the Marquis of Bute, who holds the manor.—Wednesday and Saturday are the market days. Fairs are held on the second Wednesday in March, April, and May, the 29th June, the 19th September, and the 30th November for the sale of cattle, &c.

CARDIGAN, or ABERTEIFY, a par., market town, seaport, municipal and parliamentary borough, and the county town of Cardiganshire, South Wales, about 240 miles to the W. of London. The nearest station on the South Wales railway is Narberth Road, which is about 18 miles from Cardigan. Two coaches run daily to the station. The town is situated 3 miles from the coast of Cardigan Bay, on the edge of Pembrokeshire, into which the borough extends, and on the banks of the Teify, or Teifi. Its Welsh name is Aberteifi, which denotes its position near the mouth of the Teifi. It is an ancient town, and was probably founded before the Norman Conquest. A castle was erected here by the Normans, the possession of which, a post of no little importance as commanding the river, was frequently and fiercely contested by the Welsh and the Normans during the 12th and 13th centuries. The Welsh princes finally lost it about 1240, when it was captured by the English, and fortifications were erected by Gilbert Marshall, Earl of Pembroke. Edward I. made the castle his residence while organising the government of South Wales. It was given, with the lordship, by Henry VII. to Catherine of Arragon, on her marriage with Prince Arthur. During the civil war of the 17th century, the castle was first garrisoned for the king, but was taken in 1654 by the parliamentary forces under General Laugharne.—Cardigan, although the county town, possessing about 3,000 inhabitants, is rather behindhand with the rest of the world, as yet not even being lighted with gas; and from its inconvenient position as regards the rest of the county much of the public business has been transferred to Aberaeron. It has one principal street. The public buildings are—the shirehall, a handsome structure erected in 1764; the county gaol, erected from a design by Nash in 1793; the market-house, and the Union poorhouse. The Teifi is crossed by an ancient bridge of seven arches.—The pursuits of the inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. Some are employed in the coasting trade, and in the salmon and herring fisheries. Aberaeron, Aberporth, Fishguard, Newport, and New Quay are subports to Cardigan. There are about 230 vessels belonging to the port, mostly of small burthen. The entrance to the harbour is obstructed by a bar, so that large vessels can only approach the town at spring tides. The principal exports are corn, slate, butter, and bark; and the imports, coal, limestone, timber, &c. The river abounds in good salmon.—Cardigan is a very old borough, and claims to be such by prescription. Under the Reform Act it is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the style of the "mayor, common council, and burgesses of the town and borough of Cardigan." The limits of the borough comprise, besides the par. of Cardigan, the hmlts. of Abbey and Bridge End, in the par. of St. Dogmell's, in Pembrokeshire. As the head of a parliamentary district, Cardigan, with the contributory boroughs of Aberystwith, Adpar, and Lampeter, returns one member to the imperial parliament. It is the seat of a Poor-law Union, the head of a County Court district, and a polling-place for the county elections. The assizes and quarter sessions are held here.—Cardigan is the seat of an archdeac. in the dioc. of St. David's. The living is a vic.* in the same dioc., of the val. of £153, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is a large and ancient edifice in the decorated and perpendicular styles, with a fine tower at the W. end. It contains an old octagonal font adorned with sculpture, and a good canopied piscina. The chancel is the oldest part of the building, and has recently been restored. There are four chapels in the town, belonging to the Independents, Baptists, Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar school was founded and endowed by Lady Letitia Cornwallis in 1653, and has an income of about £20 a year. A handsome building, in the early English style, was erected in 1848 for the National school, in which divine service is also occasionally performed. There is also a free school for girls.—A small Dominican priory anciently existed here, which was a cell to Chertsey Abbey. On its site now stands the mansion called the Priory, formerly the seat of the Pryse family. The ruins of the castle, consisting of part of the walls and towers, are situated by the river, near the ancient bridge, and are now converted into a modern dwelling, except the keep, which still retains its underground passages and dungeons, used as cellars. There are no remains of the town walls. Hên Castell is a small ancient camp near the town; and 1 mile nearer the mouth of the Teify are the scanty ruins of the once famous Abbey of St. Dogmells, which was only second in size and importance to Strata-Florida.—Cardigan gives the title of earl to the Brudenell family. Saturday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 13th February, the 5th April, the 8th September, and the 19th December.

CARDIGANSHIRE, a maritime co. of South Wales, is bounded on the N. and N.E. by the cos. of Merioneth and Montgomery; on the E. by Radnorshire and Brecknockshire; on the S. by Carmarthenshire and Pembrokeshire; and on the W. by the Irish Sea. It extends in length from N.E. to S.W. 45 miles, and varies in breadth from 12 to 20 miles. In form it approaches a crescent, concave towards the sea, with a regular coast-line of about 45 miles. Its circuit is about 150 miles, and it comprises an area of 443,387 acres. The co. is situated between 52° 2′ and 52° 38′ N. lat., and between 3° 40′ and 4° 43′ W. long. Under the dominion of the Romans this district was included in that division of the island called Britannia Secunda, and was occupied by the tribe called Demetæ. It was crossed by the great road called Via Occidentalis, on which was the station Loventium. The present name of the county is a corruption of the early Welsh name Caredigion, signifying "Caredig's country," which was applied to that part of South Wales given to Caredig for a lordship, in the 5th century. Rhodri Mawr, or Roderick the Great, became possessed of Cardigan in the 9th century, and on his death it was assigned to his son Cadell. The lordship at that period included, besides Cardiganshire, the greater part of Carmarthenshire; and Dynevor, in the latter county, was made the seat of government. The possession of the district was fiercely disputed between the princes of North and South Wales during the 10th century; and the devastations thus occasioned were increased in 98, by an inroad of the Danes, who only retired for a time on receiving a tribute from Meredydd, then King of Wales. The Normans made unsuccessful attempts to possess themselves of this part of Wales in 1068 and 1071, but it was not till 1092 that they effected a settlement here. Cardigan Castle was founded at that time by Roger de Montgomery, who did homage to William Rufus for the province. There were frequent conflicts with varying results, between the Norman settlers and the Welsh princes, and in 1097 the former were driven out of the country by Cadwgan ap Bleddyn. Cadwgan was soon after deprived of the territory by Gilbert de Clare, who was empowered by Henry I. to seize it. A few years later Gruffyd ap Rhys made a vigorous attempt to possess himself of Cardiganshire, and was warmly supported by the native chieftains and the inhabitants. But his attempt had a disastrous ending, his army being at last checked and cut to piece before Aberystwith Castle. The province was several times invaded and laid waste in 1135 and following years by Owain Gwynedd and Cadwalader, princes of North Wales. On one of these occasions Aberystwith and several other Norman castles were burnt down. About 1170 the territory of Cardigan was granted by Henry II. to Rhys ap Gruffyd. This prince held a great festival in Cardigan Castle at Christmas, in the year 1176, at which all the bards attended, besides a large number of English and Normans. Fresh disputes arose after the death of Rhys, in 1196, whose son and successor Gruffyd was attacked and made prisoner by his brother Maelgwyn, the latter taking possession of the whole territory. Early in the following century it was taken from Maelgwyn by Llewellyn ap Iorwerth, who, with other chieftains, were compelled to do homage to King John in 1212. After the death of Llewellyn, Cardigan Castle was taken by Gilbert Marshal Earl of Pembroke. About 1250 Llewellyn ap Gruffyd, Prince of North Wales, entered the district, and recovered possession of the estates which Prince Edward (afterwards Edward I.) had taken from the chieftains. The final subjugation of Wales was effected about 1280 by Edward I., who soon after divided it into counties, and annexed it to England. During the revolt of the Welsh under Owain Glyndwr, at the beginning of the 15th century, Aberystwith Castle was taken and held for several years by that chieftain. In the civil war of the 17th century, the castles of Cardigan and Aberystwith were at first held for the king, but were soon taken by the parliament. No other important conflicts took place in this county.—Cardiganshire is for the most part a mountainous country, having Plinlimmon at the north-eastern extremity, from which lofty chains of hills extend westward and southward. The sea-coast is elevated, except at the northern and southern extremities, and at the mouths of the rivers. The only considerable tract of level ground is in the south-western quarter. The highest points in the county are at Plinlimmon, rising to the height of 2,463 feet; Tregaron Down, 1,747 feet; Talsarn, 1,142 feet; and Capel Cynon, 1,046 feet. The aspect of the hilly regions is rugged and dreary, generally unrelieved by woods, and a very large extent of the surface is unenclosed, being incapable of cultivation. There is, however, some fine scenery along the courses of the rivers: these are the Teify, the Rheidol, the Ystwith, the Aëron, and other smaller streams. The Teify has its source in Llyn Teify, on the border of Radnorshire, and running south-westward, past Tregaron to Lampeter, forms thence the S. boundary of the county, and passing by Newcastle-Emlyn, falls into the sea at Cardigan. The Ystwith and Rheidol rise on the border of Montgomeryshire, and running westward fall into the sea at Aberystwith. The river Towy skirts the county on the S.E. There are a great number of small lakes in Cardiganshire, of which the principal are Llyn Teify, Llyn Cynon, Llyn Egnant, and Llyn Ruddon Vawr, forming, with others, a cluster at the head of the river Teify. There is a remarkable waterfall at the Devil's Bridge, where the small river Mynach runs over a series of precipices into the Rheidol.—The rocks, which are mostly slate, belong to the transition series, and contain no fossil remains. Grey mountain stone is quarried in some places for building purposes, but there is no limestone nor coal. Lead and zinc are found, and the former contains a large proportion of silver. The mines were profitably worked after the middle of the 16th century, under a patent granted by Queen Elizabeth, and after being for some time neglected have been reopened with good success. The Mines Royal were leased to Sir Hugh Myddelton by the original corporation, and from the working of them he realised his immense fortune. Thomas Bushel, a subsequent lessee of the mines, had a license from Charles I. to establish a mint at Aberystwith. Cwm Synlog was one of the most valuable of these mines. The rich mine at Esgair Hir, the property of the Pryses, was discovered in 1690. The quantity of silver obtained varies from 40 to 80 ounces for every ton of lead; and in the mine at Llanvair, the proportion has been known to rise to 100 ounces per ton.—The climate of this mountainous district is cold, wet, and stormy. The snow lies late on the hills, and the harvest begins late. Along the coast the temperature is more equable, and during the summer and autumn the air is dry and healthful. The soil is generally poor and meagre, being only a thin covering to the slate and shale, which form the substratum of nearly the whole county, except in the river valleys, where good loam occurs. The valleys of the Ystwith, Teify, and Aeron are well cultivated, and yield good crops. Wheat is grown in some parts, but the chief crops are barley, black oats, and rye. Peas, beans, and potatoes are also cultivated. Lime, brought from Pembrokeshire, and seaweed, washed up in immense quantities after a gale, are largely used for manure. The farms are mostly of small size, varying from 50 to 150 acres, and the methods and implements of the farmer, as well as the dwellings of the labourer, though less rude than formerly, still need improvement. Cardiganshire has a breed of small, hardy, black cattle, and a breed of very small mountain sheep, the fleece of which weighs about two pounds. Other breeds of sheep are also reared. A considerable quantity of butter is made, and pigs are exported in great numbers. The fuel most commonly used is peat, of which there are some beds of great thickness. Cors Goch is said to yield the best, and it has been there dug to the depth of 20 feet.—For the purposes of civil government the co. is divided into 5 hunds., the names of which are—Geneu'r Glyn, Ilar, Moyddyn, Penarth, and Troedyraur. It was anciently divided into 3 cantrefs. The co. contains 68 pars., of which 5 are market towns, viz., Cardigan (the county town), Aberystwith, Aberaeron, Lampeter, and Tregaron; these are all, except Aberaeron, corporate towns. One member is returned to parliament for the co. and one for Cardigan conjointly with the other boroughs. Cardigan is the place of election both for the co. and the boroughs, and a polling-place, with Aberystwith, Lampeter, and Tregaron. The co. is divided into 5 Poor-law Unions: those of Aberaeron, Aberystwith, Cardigan, Lampeter, and Tregaron; and into 5 County Court districts: those of Aberaeron, Aberystwith, Cardigan, Lampeter, and Llandeilofawr. Cardiganshire is included in the South Wales Circuit, and in the Home military district. Cardigan is the assize town. The quarter sessions are held there, or at Aberystwith, except at Easter, when they are held at Lampeter. The local government is vested in a lord-lieutenant, high sheriff, and a body of about 50 magistrates. For ecclesiastical purposes the co. is in the dioc. of St. David's, in the prov. of Canterbury, and constitutes, with parts of the cos. of Carmarthen and Pembroke, the archdeac. of Cardigan.—No important manufactures are carried on in this county, the pursuits of the inhabitants being chiefly agricultural. A small number of persons are employed in the manufacture of flannel and coarse hosiery, hats, and gloves. Many are employed in the mines, and others in the coasting trade and in the fisheries.—The antiquities of Cardiganshire consist chiefly of the remains of fortresses and military works, which are numerous. Among them are those of the Roman station at Llanio, presumed to be the ancient Loventium; camps at Lampeter and Llanwenog, and traces of the great Via Occidentalis, now called the Sarn Helen (originally Sarn Lleon, signifying "Way of Legions"); remains of two British encampments near Llandysilio-Gogo; one with a triple rampart at Llanfihangel Penbryn, and several others. The principal ruins of castles are those of Aberystwith, Cardigan, Castel-Gwalter, and Ystrad Meirig. There are traces of others at Aberaeron, Lampeter, Llandyssil, Blaenporth, and other places. The ecclesiastical remains are few and unimportant, consisting of those of the abbey at Ystrad-Flur, or Strata Florida, and the priory at Lampeter. Remains of primitive stone circles are found in several places, and there are many cairns. The former are at Yspytty Cynvyn, Carrog, near Llanwchairn, and Alltgoch, near Lampeter. The principal cairn is the Bedd Taliesin, "grave of Taliesin," the famous bard. It is situated on a mountain in the parish of Llanfihangel Genau'r Glyn, and consists of six large stones, five upright forming a chest, and the sixth covering them. Around it are two circles of stones, the outer one being about 30 feet in diameter.—There are several handsome seats, as Gogerddan House, near Aberystwith; Crosswood, formerly the seat of the Earl of Lisburne; Blaenpant, Coedmore, Mabus, Hafod, Nantcos, Tyglyn, &c.—At present there is no railway or canal in Cardiganshire; but a line is projected in connection with the Oswestry, Newton, and Llanidloes railway, which will enter the county from Llanidloes, on the N.E., and passing by Devil's Bridge, run down the valley of the Teify to Newcastle-Emlyn. The principal roads, which have been materially improved, are those from Cardigan, northward by the coast, to Aberaeron and Aberystwith, and thence to Machynlleth or Aberdovey; and from the same place westward to Newcastle-Emlyn and Lampeter; thence northward to Tregaron. There are cross roads from Aberaeron to Lampeter, and from Aberystwith into Radnorshire and Montgomeryshire.

CARDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Wixamtree, in the co. of Bedford, 3 miles to the S.E. of Bedford, its post town. It is situated on the S. side of the river Ouse, and is a station on the Midland (South-East branch) railway. The par. includes the chplry. of East Cotts. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £245, in the patron. of the Master and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It contains two monumental brasses, a fine monument, by Bacon, to Samuel Whitbread, the great brewer, and a tablet to the memory of John Howard, the philanthropist, who resided some time at the manor-house in this parish, and died at Cherson in 1796. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists. The parochial charities amount to about £28 per annum. The manor-house is the seat of the Whitbreads, who settled at Cardington about 1650.

CARDINGTON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Munslow, in the co. of Salop, 4 miles to the E. of Church Stretton. Shrewsbury is its post town. It is situated in a district abounding in clay and quartz fit for the use of the potteries. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Broom, Chatwall, Comley, Holt-Preen, Lydley-Hayes, and Willstone. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £287, in the patron. of R. Hunt, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. James. There is a free school with an income from endowment of £25 a year. The other parochial charities are worth about £50 per annum.

CARDINHAM, a par. in the hund. of West, in the co. of Cornwall, 3 miles to the E. of Bodmin, its post town. It is situated on the river Fowey, and was the site of a castle which belonged, in the reign of Richard I., to Robert de Cardinham, whose descendants were called the Dinhams. The honour of Cardinham was at that period of extensive jurisdiction. There are no ruins of the castle. Robert de Cardinham was the founder of the priory of Tywardreath. Granite and slate are abundant in the neighbourhood. St. Bellarmine's Torr is a granite rock in the N.E. part of the parish. The custom of free bench anciently prevailed in the manor of Cardinham. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £524, lately in the patron. of J. T. Vivian, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Mewbred, and contains a monumental brass of a priest. There are remains of an ancient chapel at Holywell. Near the village is Glynn, the seat of Lord Vivian.

CARDISTON, or CARDESTON, a par. in the hund. of Ford, in the co. of Salop, 6 miles to the W. of Shrewsbury. It is situated near the river Severn, in a district containing coal and limestone, and includes the tnshp. of Wattlesborough. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £274, in the patron. of Sir B. Leighton, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

CARDROSS, a par. in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland, containing a suburb of Dumbarton. It is pleasantly situated in a wooded country on the N. bank of the Frith of Clyde and on the river Leven, and has a station on the Dumbartonshire railway. The par. includes the vils. of Cardross, Bridgend, Geilston Bridge, and Renton. About a mile from Dumbarton formerly stood the castle, a seat of Robert Bruce, and in which he died on the 7th June, 1329, aged 55. At Renton are extensive print-works and bleach-fields, in which many of the inhabitants are employed. Others are engaged in the fisheries. The living, val. £255, is in the presb. of Dumbarton, in the patron. of the crown. There are two Free churches, one at Cardross and the other at Renton; also a chapel at Renton in connection with the Church of Scotland, and a Reformed Presbyterian church, besides an United Presbyterian church and Scotch Episcopal chapel at Bridgend. Dalquhurn House, near Renton, was the birthplace (1720) of Tobias Smollett, the novelist, in honour of whom a pillar has been erected. There are several seats of the gentry, among which are Camis-Eshary, Keppoch, Drumhead, and Bloomhill. The grandfather of Lord Macaulay was the minister of this parish, and is buried in the churchyard. The par. of Cardross extends in length about 7 miles, and in breadth 3 miles.

CAREBY, a par. in the wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 6 miles to the S.W. of Bourn. Stamford is its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Glen, close to the Great Northern railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. with the perpet. curs. of Aunby and Holywell annexed, £400, in the patron. of G. B. Reynardson, Esq. who is lord of the manor. The church is dedicated to St. Stephen.

CAREGRINA. See CREGRINA, Radnorshire.

CARESTON, or CARALDSTON, a par. in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 4 miles to the W. of Brechin, its post town, which is a station on the Scottish North-Eastern railway. It is situated in a fertile district on the bank of the South Esk, where the Noran rivulet falls into it. The living, val. £158, is in the presb. of Brechin, in the patron. of the Earl of Fife, who owns the estate of Careston, and whose seat is Careston Castle, a noble edifice chiefly built in the beginning of the 15th century. In the parish is a cairn in memory of one of the heroes of Ossian.

CARESWELL. See CAVERSWALL, Staffordshire.

CAREW, or CAREY, a par. in the hund. of Narberth, in the co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 4 miles to the E. of Pembroke. It is pleasantly situated near the eastern extremity of Milford Haven. A stately castle was erected here in the reign of Henry I., by Gerald of Windsor, which was enlarged by Rhys ab Thomas in the reign of Henry VII. It was in the form of a quadrangle with round towers at the angles; the older part of the pile being in the Norman, the newer in the perpendicular style. The festival of St. George's Day was kept at this castle by Sir Rhys, who entertained a very large number of the nobility and gentry with great splendour and hospitality for a week. Among the extensive and beautiful ruins of the castle are the great hall about 100 feet long and 30 wide, several noble apartments, and the chapel. The towers command good views over the haven and the surrounding country. The estate is now held by the Carews of Crocombe, in Somersetshire. The parish contains abundance of good limestone and some coal. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £152, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. John. It is a large ancient edifice in the early English style, with an embattled tower, and contains several monuments, among which are an altar-tomb of Sir John Carew and his lady, of the year 1637, and figures of a crusader and a priest, with a small infantine figure. An old building stands near the church, which was probably the rectory. Near the village is a stone cross, the shaft of which, 14 feet high, is adorned with sculpture. The ancient chplry. of Redbarth has now its own district church, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £56, the gift of the bishop.

CARFAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandewi-Brefi, hu of Penarth, in the co. of Cardigan, South Wales, 3 miles to the S.W. of Tregaron.

CARGILL, a par. in the co. of Perth, Scotland. It is a station on the Scottish Midland railway. It is situated in a pleasant and cultivated district in Strathmore, between the rivers Tay and Isla, and the Sidlaw hills, and contains the vils. of Cargill, Burrelton, Woodside, and Wolfhill. The surface is agreeably diversified with hill, plain, and woodland. It rises gently from the Tay, and forms a fine plain, several miles broad, at the foot of the Sidlaw hills. The Tay here runs over a dyke of basalt which crosses its bed, and forms the Linn of Campsie. The parish contains freestone, limestone, and rock-marl, which are quarried. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the valuable salmon fisheries of the Tay, and in the linen trade. The living, worth £225, is in the presb. of Dunkeld, and in the patron. of the crown. There is also a Free church. Near the confluence of the Tay and Isla is Castlehill, the site of a Roman camp, of which there are remains. The parish is crossed by a Roman road. Ruins of a small monastery, a cell to the Abbey of Dupar, stand on a rock near the Linn of Campsie. Stobhall, an old mansion on the banks of the Tay, now belonging to Lord Willoughby D'Eresby, was the seat of the Drummonds from the middle of the 14th century, and the birthplace of Annabella, consort of Robert III., and mother of James I. of Scotland, thus ancestress of the Stuarts. There are several tumuli and stone circles in the neighbourhood. The par. extends about 5 miles in length from E. to W., and 4 miles in breadth from N. to S.

CARGIN, or CARGAN, a par. in the bar. of Clare, in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1 mile from Headford. It is situated in a boggy district, on the E. side of Lough Corrib. The living is a vic. forming part of the union of Headford, in the dioc. of Tuam, Killala and Achonry.

CARGO, or CRAGHOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Stanwix, in the ward and co. of Cumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Carlisle. It is seated on the banks of the river Eden.

CARHAM, a par. in the western div. of the ward of Glendale, in the co. of Northumberland, 3 miles to the W. of Coldstream, and 4 miles to the N.E. of Kelso. It is situated on the borders of Scotland, on the S. bank of the river Tweed, and has a station on the Tweedmouth and Kelso branch of the North-Eastern railway. The par. contains the hmlts. of Wark (or Werk), Learmouth, Cornhirdrim, and several others now of little importance. Near the village, on the S. side, is Shidlaw (anciently Shield-law), a lofty hill commanding an extensive prospect. Two important battles were fought here between the Scotch and the English, one in 1048 and the other in 1378, in both of which the English were defeated with great loss, and in the latter the English general, Sir John Lilburn, was made prisoner. Wark Castle was a celebrated fortress in the border wars, and the object of frequent contention. A small Dominican priory was early founded in this parish as a cell to the Priory of Kirkham. It was burnt about 1295 by the Scots under William Wallace. Near its site is Campfield, the spot on which the Scots on that occasion encamped. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £330, in the patron. of the heirs of A. Compton, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, was built in 1791, and repaired in 1839. It is situated in a commanding position, close to the bank of the river Tweed, and near the streamlet called the March Burn, which here falls into the Tweed, and forms, for a short distance, the line of demarcation between the two kingdoms.

CARHAMPTON HUNDRED, one of the 40 hunds. or subdivisions of the co. of Somerset, situated in the western parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. by the sea, on the E. and S. by the hund. of Williton Freemanors, and on the W. by Devonshire. It contains the pars. of Carhampton, Culbone, Cutcombe, Dunster, Exford, Luckham, Luxborough, Minehead, Oare, Porlock, Selworthy, Stoke-Pero, Timberscombe, Treborough, Withycombe, and Wootton-Courtenay. The hund. extends over an area of about 60,350 acres.

CARHAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of the same name, in the co. of Somerset, 1 mile from Dunster, its post town. It is situated on the S. coast of the Bristol Channel, and contains the hmlt. of Rodhuish. It is a very ancient place, and has given name to the hund. Its Saxon name was Carumtune. Petty sessions are held in the village. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £182, in the patron. of J. F. Luttrell, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. There is a small bequest by Richard Escott for education.

CARHAYES-BARTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Carhayes St. Michael, hund. of Powder, in the co. of Cornwall, 3 miles to the S.E. of Tregony. It is on the seacoast, and has the seat of Colonel Trevanion, a mansion in the Gothic style of architecture.

CARHAYES ST. MICHAEL. See MICHAEL, ST., CARHAYES, Cornwall.

CARINGTON. See CARRINGTON, Edinburgh.

CARISBROOKE, a par. in the lib. of West Medina, Isle of Wight, in the co. of Southampton, 1 mile to the S.W. of Newport. The village, seated in a picturesque wooded dell under the hill on which the castle stands, was formerly a market town, and the capital of the island. In Domesday Book it is called Boncombe, a name still retained by the manor. The par. includes the lib. of Parkhurst Forest, the hmlt. of Bowcombe, and part of the tythg. of Chillerton. — Carisbrooke Castle, from which the place derived its importance, is one of the oldest in England, and is chiefly a Norman structure, although most probably erected on the site, and even embracing some portions, of a much more ancient fortress. Its erection is attributed to William Fitz-Osborne, who became lord of the island soon after the Norman Conquest. The original walls enclosed a square area of 1½ acres. It was enlarged in the reigns of Richard II. and Edward IV., and in the reign of Queen Elizabeth extensive additions were made, the walls then erected by Genebella, an Italian engineer, enclosed an area of 20 acres. The remains include the keep, the Mountjoy Tower, the fine western gateway, flanked by round towers, the barracks, chapel, and two very deep wells. The keep stands on a mound considerably higher than the general level of the fortress, and is entered by a flight of 74 steps. The ancient well in the keep is about 150 feet deep, and the water is drawn up by means of a tread-wheel turned by an ass. One ass is recorded to have performed this service for 40 years. The other well is in the castle-yard, and is 200 feet deep. The walls of the Mountjoy Tower are in one part 18 feet thick. The chapel was rebuilt by George II., in 1738. The view from the keep is remarkably fine, embracing the village immediately below, with its pretty church and steeple; and beyond, the waters of the Solent and the coast of Hampshire; to the E., Newport, the river Medina, Cowes; the sea; to the S., St. Catherine's Hill. Carisbrooke Castle was chosen by the parliament as the place of confinement for Charles I. The window is shown by which he attempted unsuccessfully to escape in 1648. After the death of the king, his children, the Duke of Gloucester and the Princess Elizabeth, were confined here; the latter soon after died in the castle, and was interred at Newport. The castle was afterwards made a state prison, and among its inmates was Sir William Davenant, the poet. It is now the seat of the governor of the island. Here was anciently a priory for monks of the Cistercian order, which owed its origin to Fitz-Osborne, founder of the castle. It stood near the church, and was given with the latter to the Norman abbey of Lyra, and subsequently to the monastery of Sheen, in Surrey. The remains of the conventual buildings are insignificant, and have been converted into farm-buildings.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. with the perpet. cur. of Northwood annexed, £900, in the patron. of the Provost and Fellows of Queen's College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is an interesting old edifice, partly Norman, and contains several ancient monuments. The castle chapel is dedicated to St. Nicholas, and the cur., worth £24, is in the gift of the governor. There is another church, dedicated to St. John, the living of which is a cur.* in the patron. of the Rev. R. Hastings. The charitable endowments of the parish amount to £20 a year. Near Carlton-le-Moorland are the great Government prison or reformatory of Parkhurst, the Albany Barracks, founded in 1778, and the House of Industry for the blind. In 1849 a Roman villa was discovered on the S. slope of the hill adjacent to the new workings. The remains of the villa, which are exposed to view, are the most considerable memorial of the Roman occupation that have been discovered in the island, and occupy a space of about 120 feet by 50. The apartments are paved with tessera or fragments of reeding tile; the chief room is floored with a rich mosaic pavement. Attached to the villa are the remains of a semicircular bath and hypocaust.

CARKIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Forcett, wap. of West Gilling, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 7 miles to the N. of Richmond.

CARLANSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Kilbeg, and bar. of Lower Kells, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles to the N.E. of Kells. Here is the seat of H. Meredyth, Esq., the proprietor of the district. Annual fairs are held in the village on the 12th March, the 1st May, the 6th August, and the 19th November.

CARLATTON, an ext. par. lib. in the ward of Eskdale, in the co. of Cumberland, 9 miles to the E. of Carlisle. It has an area of about 1,800 acres, which are rated at £1,000, and belong to the Earl of Carlisle. There are corn and saw-mills, but no church or village. The last incumbent was Richard Hogge, who is entered in the bishop's register in 1780.

CARLAVEROCK. See CAERLAVEROCK, Dumfriesshire.

CARLBURY, a hmlt. in the par. of Coniscliffe, ward of Darlington, in the co. palatine of Durham, 6 miles to the W. of Darlington. It is seated near the river Tees, and the Barnard Castle branch of the North-Eastern railway. Limestone is quarried here, and some of the workpeople are employed in lime-burning.

CARLBY, a par. in the wap. of Ness, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles to the S. of Bourn. Stamford is its post town. It is situated on the banks of the river Glen, not far from the Great Northern railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £165, in the patron. of the Marquis of Exeter and Sir E. Smith, Bart., alternately. The church is dedicated to St. Stephen. There are charitable endowments worth about £7 a year.

CARLCOATES, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Thurlstone, par. of Penistone, in the wap. of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 1 mile from Penistone. The Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway, on which Penistone is a station, passes by it.

CARLESTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Upper Navan, in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, not far from Trim.

CARLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Drigg, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, in the co. of Cumberland, 2 miles to the N. of Ravenglass. It is near the Whitehaven and Furness Junction railway, on which Drigg is a station.

CARLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Cuthbert's, ward and co. of Cumberland, 2 miles to the S.E. of Carlisle. It is near the Carlisle and Lancaster railway.

CARLETON, a hmlt. in the par. of Penrith, Leath ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 1 mile from Penrith, which is a station on the Lancaster and Carlisle railway. This hmlt. is seated on the river Eamont, and contains the old hall, which was the seat of the Carleton family from the 12th to the beginning of the 18th century.

CARLETON, a chplry. in the par. of Redmarshall, ward of Stockton, in the co. palatine of Durham, 3 miles to the N.W. of Stockton-upon-Tees. The Clarence railway passes near it.

CARLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Poulton-le-Fylde, hund. of Amounderness, in the co. palatine of Lancaster, 1 mile from Poulton. It is near the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway (western division). There is a free school in the village, endowed by Eamonn Wilson in 1667.

CARLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Pontefract, wap. of Osgoldcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the S. of Pontefract. It is situated near the Great Northern railway. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was erected in 1850. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon.

CARLETON, a chplry. in the par. of Snaith, wap. of Osgoldcross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N. of Snaith. It is situated in a fertile country near the river Aire. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £168, in the patron. of Messrs. Day and Cave. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are charitable endowments for the poor producing £25 per annum. Carleton Hall is the seat of Lady Thackeray.

CARLETON, a par. in the hund. of Loddon, in the co. of Norfolk, 2 miles S. of Buckenham railway station, and 8 miles to the S.E. of Norwich, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with that of Ashby united, £294, in the patron. of Sir W. Proctor and Sir C. H. Rich, Barts. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is small, with a square tower. The register dates from the year 1511.

CARLETON. See CARLTON, Yorkshire.

CARLETON-FOREHOE, a par. in the hund. of Forehoe, in the co. of Norfolk, 3 miles to the N.W. of Wymondham railway station, and 118¼ N.E. of London. The Dereham, Fakenham, and Wells branch of the Great Eastern and Norfolk railway passes near it. The court for the hundred was formerly held at Forehoe Hall, one of four hills in this parish presumed to be artificial. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. [illegible], in the patron. of Lord Wodehouse. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small neat structure in the perpendicular style, with a square tower. It was entirely repaired in 1839, when a new organ and gallery were added. The register dates from the year 1696. There is a school supported by Lord Wodehouse, who is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The charitable endowments amount to £25 per annum.

CARLETON, ST. MARY. See CARLTON, East, Norfolk.

CARLFORD HUNDRED, one of the 21 hunds. or sub-divisions of the co. of Suffolk, situated in the east parliamentary div. of the co., and bounded on the N. and N.W. by the hund. of Bosmere and Claydon; on the E. by the hunds. of Loes and Wilford; on the S. by the hund. of Colneis; and on the W. by the lib. of Ipswich. It contains the pars. of Great Bealings, Little Bealings, Brightwell, Burgh, Clopton, Culpho, Foxhall, Grundisburgh, Hasketon, Kesgrave, Martlesham, Newbourn, Otley, Playford, Tuddenham, Waldringfield, and Witnesham, and part of the par. of Rushmere. The hundred extends over an area of about 22,500 acres.

CARLINGCOTT, a hmlt. partly in the par. of Berkerton, and partly in that of Camerton, hund. of Wellow, in the co. of Somerset, 4 miles to the S.W. of Bath.

CARLINGFORD, a par. and market town in the bar. of Lower Dundalk, in the co. of Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 9 miles to the N.E. of Dundalk, 19 miles S. of Newry, and 75 miles to the N. of Dublin. The par., which is very extensive, comprising an area of near 20,000 acres, is situated in a hilly country on the S.W. shore of Carlingford Lough, and includes the vils. of Ratheor and Whitestown. The climate and scenery are magnificent, which causes it to be resorted to in summer as a watering-place. The land lets from £2 to £3 per acre, and is most productive in oats, barley, and potatoes. A castle was erected on this spot early in the 13th century, probably by the De Courcys, around which the town gradually grew up, and became, from its position on the border of the pale, a place of some importance. A monastery of the Dominican order was founded here by Richard de Burgo about 1300. In the middle of the following century an Act was passed for establishing a mint in the town. In 1642 the town partly burnt by the insurgents under Sir Phelim O'Nial, and it was again damaged in a similar manner by the followers of James II. in 1689. Carlingford was raised to the rank of a market town by Edward III. in 1358. It was recognised as a borough at a still earlier time, and before the Union returned two members to the Irish parliament.—The town contains about 1,600 inhabitants, and seems neither to have increased nor diminished as to its orignal proportions. The corporation is virtually extinct. The inhabitants carry on a small coasting trade, and are employed in the fishery in the bay, which yields oysters of excellent quality. At present neither factories nor railways exist in the parish, but there are two railway bills this session before parliament; one to connect the point of Greenore with Dundalk, the other to connect Greenore with Newry; both are likely to be completed, as Greenore is the nearest point to Liverpool, and has fine anchorage in 60-feet water close up to the land, with no obstructions. Large docks are projected, and it is thought this will become a first-rate depôt for merchandise of all kinds. Limestone is abundant in the parish, and there are quarries near the town.—Carlingford bay, or lough, is about 8 miles long and from 2 to 4 broad, and forms a fine and safe haven, though the entrance is obstructed by a bar, shoals, and sunken rocks. At its head is the mouth of the Newry river, up which the tide runs as far as Newry. There are several lighthouses and coastguard stations on the coast of the bay. Of the two lighthouses at the entrance of the lough, one is a fixed light built upon a rock in the sea at Cranfield Point, on the county of Down side, called the Bar Lighthouse, where signals are exhibited to signify the state of the tide, when vessels may safely cross the bar; the other is a revolving light at Greenore Point, on the mainland, in the county of Louth and parish of Carlingford. North of the bay are the Mourne mountains, and there is much striking and picturesque scenery along the coast. Carlingford Mountain rises to the height of 1,935 feet above the level of the sea, and being immediately W. of the town causes an early sunset. Carlingford has chief police and coastguard stations, and petty sessions are held fortnightly. There are three churches, one in the town and one at each end of the parish, ministered to by the vicar and two curates. There are four Roman Catholic chapels, and one very small Presbyterian meeting-house in the town; the congregation of this last has been nearly absorbed in the Protestant churches, but the minister receives £75 per annum from the Regium Donum fund. The primate is the rector, and presents to the vicarage. The rectorial tithes have been long alienated by a Primate Robinson, by Act of Parliament, for the endowment of the observatory at Armagh. The vicar's income is only £228 per annum, with a good glebe house and 8 acres of land, subject to a rent of £10 per annum. There are five National schools in the parish, under the control of the Roman priests, and four Scriptural schools under the care of the Protestant vicar.—The ruins of the castle, usually called King John's Castle, stand close by the bay and by a very narrow pass between the mountains and the sea. The walls are in some parts 11 feet thick. At the opposite end of the town are the picturesque remains of a monastery, now covered with ivy, and consisting chiefly of the walls and tower of the church. There are some other remains of ancient buildings. In the neighbourhood are several seats; the principal are, Nootka Lodge, The Grange, Monksland House, Castleview, &c. Carlingford gives the title of viscount to the Earl of Tyrconnel. The Marquis of Anglesea formerly possessed the manor, with a property of about £5,000 per annum. This was all sold a few years since in the Encumbered Estates Court to different purchasers in various lots: Lord Claremont purchased the town lot, with the royalties and anchorage of the lough.—The market is on Saturday. Fairs are held on the first Saturday of each month and on the 29th September.

CARLINGHOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Guisbrough, and lib. of Langbaurgh, in the North Riding of the co. of York, not far from Guisbrough.

CARLINGHOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Batley, and wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the N.W. of Wakefield.

CARLISLE, a city, bonding port, municipal and parliamentary borough, locally in Cumberland ward, in the co. of Cumberland, 301 miles to the N.N.W. of London, 101 from Edinburgh, 195 from Birmingham, and 261 from Aberdeen. It is an important centre of railway communication on the W. border of Scotland, being the terminus of the Caledonian, Glasgow, and South-Western, and of the Lancaster and Carlisle section of the London and North-Western. The North British railway was completed in 1862, and is a distinct line to Edinburgh, running E. of the Caledonian. The Newcastle and Carlisle railway is now amalgamated with the North-Eastern. Another line of 28 miles runs to Maryport, meeting there the Whitehaven Junction railway, and a short line connects the city with Silloth and Port Carlisle on the Solway Frith. Carlisle is the county town of Cumberland.—The name of this ancient city appears to be a corruption of Caer-Leol, the name of a town existing on this site before the Roman invasion. It is believed to have been a Roman station, probably that called Lugovallum, and to have been rebuilt and fortified by the Romans in the time of Agricola. It was again rebuilt by Egfrid, King of Northumbria, by whom it was united to the see of Lindisfarne. The town was attacked and destroyed by the Danes about 880, and was not restored till 1092, when William Rufus founded the castle. About 1135, David I., King of Scotland, gained possession of the town, which he held for nearly 20 years. It was given up by his successor, Malcolm IV., in 1157, to Henry II., together with the counties of Cumberland and Northumberland. William the Lion made an unsuccessful attempt in 1173 to regain the town. His successor renewed the attempt and retook it, but it was soon given up again. About the end of the 12th century a large part of the city, including the church, was destroyed by a terrible fire. A parliament was held at Carlisle by Edward I. after the battle of Falkirk, and it was the place of assembly for the army collected in 1306 for the invasion of Scotland. In the following year Edward I. kept his last birthday here. The city was besieged in 1315 by Robert Bruce, who, however, failed to take it. In consequence of its important position as a border town, Carlisle was the scene of frequent attacks and conflicts throughout the period of the border wars, and down to the union of the two kingdoms. In 1568 Mary Queen of Scots, after the battle of Langside, sought refuge at the castle, and was imprisoned in it for some time. When the Civil War broke out, Carlisle took the side of the king; but in 1645 the city was besieged and taken by General Lesley for the parliament. The royalists retook it in 1648. In 1745, Charles Stuart, the Pretender, besieged and took it, the keys of the city being presented to him by the mayor and corporation on their knees. They afterwards proclaimed him king of Great Britain. But the Duke of Cumberland having soon after recovered possession of the city, many of the leaders of the rebellion were executed, some here and some at London.—Carlisle is situated in a pleasant and fertile district on the S. side of the river Eden, at the confluence of the Caldew and Petteril with it, the former skirting the city on the W. and the latter on the E. side. It stands on rising ground, and contains several good streets, the four principal ones meeting in the market-place. They are well paved and lighted with gas. There are many handsome modern buildings and residences in the town. The Eden, which is the largest river of the northern counties, is crossed by a very fine stone bridge of five arches, erected about 1812 from a design by Smirke, at a cost of £70,000. Each arch has a span of 65 feet. The bridge is just beneath the walls of the old castle, and is connected with the town by an arched causeway. The Petterit is crossed by a bridge of three arches built about 1830, and the Caldew by two bridges of a single arch, built about 1820.—The principal public buildings are the following: the courthouses, occupying the site of the ancient citadel, and consisting of two noble circular towers, erected in 1810 at a cost of £100,000; the county gaol, a handsome structure, standing on the site of an ancient monastery of the Black Friars, and built about 1827; the public library and newsroom, a fine stone building in the decorated style, erected from a design by Rickman about 1830; the two spacious railway stations; the custom-house, academy of arts, mechanics' institute, fish-market, old townhall, moot-hall, temperance-hall, including working men's reading-room, and old gaol. There are also a theatre, a temporary wooden structure, and assembly rooms. The Cumberland Infirmary is a handsome building, and stands on an eminence half a mile N.W. of the town, from which an imposing view of the city is obtained.—The trade of Carlisle consists chiefly of the manufacture of cotton goods and ginghams, which is carried on to a great extent, cotton spinning and printing, and other branches of industry connected with the cotton trade. There are several large iron foundries, manufactories of hats, carpets, and whips, besides several tanyards and breweries. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the fisheries and in the coasting trade. A ship canal formerly connected the city with Bowness, on the Solway Frith, a distance of 10 miles. The new and rising port Silloth, which has almost destroyed the trade at Port Carlisle, has regular communication by steam with Liverpool twice a week.—The city was first incorporated by a charter of Richard I., which was confirmed by Charles I. Under the Municipal Corporation Act of 1835, the limits of the municipal and parliamentary boroughs are the same, comprising an area of 6,700 acres. Besides the old borough, Carlisle includes the tnshps. of Rickergate, Botchergate, and part of Caldewgate, and is divided into five wards. The corporation consists of a mayor, 10 aldermen, and 30 councillors, bearing the style of "mayor, aldermen, and bailiffs of the city of Carlisle." The city received the elective franchise in the reign of Edward I., and has since regularly returned two members to the imperial parliament. The mayor is the returning officer, and the £10 householders, with about 300 freemen, the electors. The borough has a revenue of £3,500, and comprises within its limits 4,878 houses, occupied by a population of 29,436 according to the census of 1861, against 26,310 in 1851, showing an increase of 3,126 in the decennial period. There are eight trading companies or guilds in Carlisle. The assizes for the county are regularly held here, and the quarter sessions at Easter and Midsummer. Carlisle is the place of election for the eastern division of Cumberland. It is the seat of a Poor-law Union and the head of a County Court district. Three weekly newspapers, called the Carlisle Journal, Carlisle Express, a penny paper, and Carlisle Patriot, are published. The Carlisle Examiner appears twice a week, and the Carlisle Observer and Carlisle Gleaner monthly.—Carlisle is the seat of a diocese, and the head of an archdeaconry and a deanery, in the province of York. The see was founded about 1130 by Henry I. Before that time Carlisle was included in the dioc. of Lindisfarne. The first bishop was Athelwald, prior of the Augustine monastery. The bishop's seat is Rose Castle, an ancient mansion finely situated in the wooded valley of the Caldew, 6 miles to the S. of Carlisle. It was founded before the 14th century, and having been enlarged by several bishops, forms a complete quadrangle. The only portions remaining of the ancient building are the keep called Strickland's Tower, the gatehouse, and a square tower. This mansion was restored by Bishop Percy, after designs by Rickman. The bishop has a fixed income of £4,500 per annum, and holds the patronage of above 40 livings. The cathedral, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient cruciform structure of comparatively small size, originally part of a priory founded in the reign of William Rufus. Standing on some of the highest ground in the city, it forms, like the ancient castle, a conspicuous object in the landscape all round. The western part of the nave was destroyed during the civil war of the 17th century. The remaining part and the S. transept are in the Norman style, with massive pillars and round arches. The early English and decorated styles are exhibited in the choir and aisles. The E. window is the most remarkable feature of the cathedral; it is nearly 50 feet high and 30 wide, presenting an exquisitely beautiful example of the decorated style, and is pronounced by some to surpass even the magnificent W. window of York Minster. The following are the dimensions of the building: length, 242 feet; length of the choir, 135 feet; height, 75 feet; length of the transepts, 124 feet; breadth, 28 feet. The cathedral contains monuments to several bishops, including a fine canopied brass to Bishop Bell, who died in 1496; and another monumental brass to Bishop Robinson, who died in 1616. Here is also a monument to Dr. Paley, the great theologian, who was Archdeacon of Carlisle, and died here in 1805. The deanery, built in 1507, and the refectory, a much older part of the monastic buildings, are within the cathedral precincts. The latter serves as the chapter-house, the original chapter-house and the cloisters having been destroyed.—Carlisle anciently comprised the two parishes of St. Mary and St. Cuthbert, but several new districts have recently been formed. The livings of all are perpet. curs.* varying in val. from £80 to £170, and in the gift of the dean and chapter, with the exception of Holy Trinity. The par. of St. Mary has for its parish church part of the nave of the cathedral. The church of St. Cuthbert was rebuilt about 1780, and stands on the site of a very ancient one. The churches of Holy Trinity and Christ Church are handsome modern structures in the early English style, each with a tower and spire. There are also two other district churches, one at Upperby, and the other at Wreay. In the town are also places of worship belonging to the Church of Scotland, Free Church of Scotland, United Presbyterians, Independents (who have three), Baptists, Society of Friends, Wesleyan Methodists (two), Wesleyan Association, Primitive Methodists, and Roman Catholics. There is a grammar school founded by Henry VIII., which has an income from endowment of about £100 per annum. Among its pupils were Bishop Thomas, and the distinguished Orientalist, Dean Carlyle, who was a native of the city. The free school for girls was established in 1717, and has a revenue of about £40, derived from several benefactions. The city has also National, British, infant, and industrial schools, besides St. Patrick's schools, founded about 1825, and the Fawcett schools, founded about 1850. Among the charitable institutions of Carlisle are the county infirmary, erected in 1835; the fever hospital in 1820; and the dispensary, in 1782. There are also almshouses and a savings-bank.—The castle, situate on somewhat elevated ground at the N.W. corner of the city, commands an extensive view over the broad fertile valley of the Eden, a large part of the county, the Solway, and part of the coast of Scotland. The keep is still standing, and in very good preservation, forming a striking feature in the landscape. It is used as an armoury. The old armoury in the outer ward is now converted into barracks. The greater part of the present walls and buildings are of later date. Some portions of the old city walls, said to have been erected by the Romans, still remain. There are no traces left of the hospital for lepers, which was founded before the end of the 13th century, and stood near the city. The Newcastle railway passes over its site. Various Roman antiquities have been found here, including an altar, inscriptions, and coins.—Carlisle gives the title of earl to the Howard of Naworth. The earldom was created soon after the Conquest.—Wednesday and Saturday are the market days. Fairs for the sale of cattle and horses are held on the 26th August and fifteen following days, on the 19th September, and every Saturday between Old Michaelmas and Christmas. Races are held annually in July.

CARLOPS, a vil. in the par. of West Linton, on the northern boundary of the co. of Peebles, Scotland, 5 miles to the N.E. of Linton. It is seated on the right bank of the North Esk, 14 miles S. of Edinburgh, and is chiefly inhabited by weavers. The village was founded not long before the close of the 18th century, and took its name from the so-called Carlin's Loups in the vicinity. James Forrest, a Scottish poet, and a weaver by trade, died here in 1818, aged 43.

CARLOW, an inland co. of the prov. of Leinster, Ireland, bounded on the N. by the cos. of Kildare and Wicklow, on the E. by the cos. of Wicklow and Wexford, on the S. by Wexford, and on the W. by Kilkenny and Queen's County. It is about 30 miles in length from N. to S., and 20 miles in breadth at the southern extremity. In form it approaches a triangle, and comprises an area of 346 square miles, or 221,342 acres, of which about 184,000 are under cultivation, the remainder consisting of mountain, bog, plantation, and water. The county is situated between 52° 28′ and 52° 53′ N. lat., and between 6° 30′ and 7° 10′ W. long. The population of the county in 1861 was 57,232, distributed into 11,318 families, occupying 10,254 houses, against 68,078 in 1851, showing a decrease in the decennial period of 10,846, or 15·93 per cent. The great bulk of the population are Roman Catholics, as shown by the government returns, viz. 50,613 Roman Catholics, 6,241 Established Church, 107 Presbyterians, 182 Methodists, 43 Society of Friends, and 46 of all other persuasions. This district, anciently called Catherlogh, formed part of the territory of Hy-Kinsellagh, and comprised the two divisions called Hy-Drone and Hy-Cavanagh, belonging to the MacMurroughs, kings of Leinster. The earliest historical fact in connection with the county is the holding of a synod at Old Leighlin, in 630, for the settlement of the dispute as to the time for the celebration of Easter. The county was ravaged in the 9th and 10th centuries by the Danes, who plundered the abbey of Achadfinglass about 865, and that of St. Mullins in the following century. At the period of the English expedition under Strongbow, in the 12th century, Dermot MacMurrough, who had invited him, was King of Leinster. William Earl Marshal having married Eva, daughter of Strongbow, succeeded in her right to nearly the whole of Leinster; and in 1216, a few years before his death, Carlow was made by King John a shire within the Pale. On the death of William Earl Marshal, and the division of the principality between his five daughters, the lordship of Carlow passed to Maud, his eldest daughter, who brought it by marriage to Roger Bigod, Earl of Norfolk. It came subsequently to the Howards, and was forfeited to the crown in the reign of Henry VIII. The annals of the period are full of stories of predatory invasions, depredations, outrages, and struggles between the natives and the settlers of the Pale. In 1394, Carlow with other districts having revolted and fallen into the hands of the Irish chieftains, Richard II. made an attempt to recover possession of them; and on that occasion the Irish chiefs did homage and swore fealty to him at Ballygorey, near Carlow. The revolt was renewed, and the king made a second attempt to subdue the country, in 1399, but without success. About a century later Carlow Castle was seized by the Fitzgeralds, and held by them till 1537, when Lord Thomas Fitzgerald headed a rebellion, and the lordship was resumed by the crown. In 1567 it was claimed by Sir Peter Carew, a descendant of Sir John Carew, lord of Idrone. He succeeded in obtaining possession of the lordship, and by energy and courtesy did much to promote the settlement and progress of the district. Fresh insurrections occurred on the part of the Kavanaghs and O'Byrnes, which were suppressed about 1600. During the civil war in the reign of Charles I., the English garrison in Carlow Castle was besieged by the Irish, who were attacked in 1642 by the Duke of Ormond, and compelled to raise the siege. The town of Carlow was attacked by the rebels in May, 1798. Other places in the county were attacked by them, among which were Hacketstown, Borris, and Bagenalstown.—The surface of the county is mostly level, with gentle undulations. The southern part, however, is hilly and rugged, lying between the Wexford range called Mount Leinster and Blackstairs mountains on the E., and some lofty hills skirting the valley of the Barrow on the W. Mount Leinster a granite ridge, rises to the height of 2,604 feet, and Blackstairs, also granite, to the height of 2,400 feet. The county is well watered, having the navigable river Barrow on the S., and the Slaney, also navigable, in the N. part. The Barrow touches the county a little to the W. of Carlow, where the Burren joins it, flows along the S. border to Cloydagh, whence it crosses by Leighlin Bridge and Bagenalstown, to Goresbridge, again forming the boundary. The Slaney enters near Rathvilly, runs S.E. to Tullow, receives the Durreen at Aghade, and flows eastward to Newtown-Barry. The prevailing rock in the S. part of the county is granite. Limestone appears along the course of the Barrow, and slate on the N.E. side. The granite is easily split, and is much used for paling. The limestone is firm, dark-coloured, and takes a polish like marble. The Castlecomer coal-beds extend into this county.—The climate is mild and healthy, and the soil remarkably fertile, except in the hilly districts. There is a considerable extent of good pasture-land, with numerous dairy-farms, on which large quantities of butter are made for exportation. Carlow has long ranked high as a farming district; a reputation due not only to its rich soil, but its energetic and resident landowners, who have introduced improved methods and implements of agriculture. Wheat, oats, potatoes, barley, and turnips are cultivated. There are a great number of extensive flour-mills along the Barrow. Much cattle is reared and fattened for the market.—For civil purposes the co. is divided into 7 bars., viz., those of Carlow, Idrone East, Idrone West, Forth, St. Mullin's Upper, St. Mullin's Lower, and Rathvilly. It contains 35 pars., with parts of several others, 1 corporate borough, and 5 market towns. Carlow is the county town. The other market towns are Tullow, Bagenalstown, Leighlin Bridge, and Hacketstown. Carlow is the seat of a Poor-law Union, the assize town, and the headquarters of the county police, of which the four districts are Carlow, Tullow, Bagenalstown, and Borris. Quarter sessions are held at the first three of these towns. The county returns two members, and the borough of Carlow one, to the imperial parliament. The county is included in the Home circuit and in the military district of Kilkenny. The local government is entrusted to a lord-lieutenant, high sheriff, 8 deputy-lieutenants, and a body of about 50 magistrates. —Carlow has no manufactures. The pursuits of agriculture, malting, and various branches of the provision trade, are the main employments of the inhabitants. —The remains of antiquity are chiefly military, comprising castles at Carlow (founded, it is believed, by the De Lacys), Leighlin Bridge, Clogrenan (the seat of the Ormonds), Clonmore, near Hacketstown, Clonmullen, and some others. Large cromlechs exist near Carlow and Tobinstown. The principal ecclesiastical remains are at Old Leighlin, St. Mullin's, Tullow, and Achadfinglass. Among the seats of the nobility and gentry are Garrihill, the seat of Viscount Duncannon; Ballintemple, that of Sir T. Butler, Bart.; Borris Castle, of T. Kavanagh, Esq., a descendant of the MacMurroughs; Erin Dale, Castlemore, and Moyle. A branch of the Great Southern and Western railway enters the county on the N., and passes by Carlow to Bagenalstown, whence it is continued to Wexford, and westward to Kilkenny. The chief roads are from Carlow south-westward along the valley of the Barrow to Leighlin Bridge, Bagenalstown, and Goresbridge; north-eastward to Grangeford and Tullow, and thence to Clonegal; and northward to Hacketstown. Another road runs from Bagenalstown to Myshall and Clonegal.

CARLOW, a par., market town, and parliamentary borough, in the bar. and co. of Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 55 miles to the S.W. of Dublin. It is situated on the border of Queen's County, in a fertile and pleasant country, on the E. bank of the navigable river Barrow, and is a station on a branch of the Great Southern and Western railway. Its former name was Catherlogh. The castle, around which the town grew up, was founded about 1180, probably by one of the De Lacys. Fortifications were erected about the middle of the 14th century, when the exchequer was established here by Lionel Duke of Clarence. The castle was taken in 1494 by James Fitzgerald, brother of the Earl of Kildare, who, however, soon surrendered it to Sir Edward Poynings. After the rebellion of the 17th century, it was besieged by the insurgent Irish, who burnt the town and fled on the approach of the English forces. In 1650 the castle was besieged by Ireton, and after a short but destructive cannonade, it was surrendered to Sir Hardress Waller. The town was the scene of a sharp conflict during the rebellion of 1798.—Carlow is a very old place, but its general appearance is that of a clean and pleasant modern town. It has many good streets, the two principal ones crossing each other at right angles about the centre of the town. One of them runs N. and S., parallel with the course of the Barrow; the other is carried across that river on a handsome bridge of four arches, and leads to the suburb of Graigue, in Queen's County. A small river called the Burren runs through the town and falls into the Barrow. It is crossed by an iron bridge. The streets are paved and lighted with gas. In the town is a handsome court-house, built of stone, with an Ionic portico, and approached by a lofty flight of steps. Here are also the county gaol; barracks for cavalry and infantry; the District Lunatic Asylum, a spacious and handsome stone edifice, erected about 1830, and capable of accommodating 100 patients; two convents, and the Union poorhouse. On the S.E. side of the town is a handsome railway station.—The chief business of the town is in corn, flour, and malt. Large quantities of butter are shipped here for Dublin, London, and other places.—Carlow received a charter of incorporation from James I., which was confirmed by Charles II. Under the charter of Charles II. the borough was governed by a sovereign, 12 burgesses, and a commonalty. But this body is extinct, and the town is now under the jurisdiction of the county magistrates. The elective franchise was conferred by James I., and the borough returned two members to the Irish parliament. It now returns one member to the imperial parliament. The limits of the borough include the suburb of Graigue, and according to the census of 1861 contained 1,460 houses, inhabited by a population of 8,204, of whom 7,049 were Roman Catholics and 1,004 Established Church. Carlow is the seat of a Poor-law Union, and the headquarters of the county militia and police. The assizes and quarter sessions are held here.—The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, val. £245, in the patron. of the crown. The church, which is of modern date, has a beautiful spire, rising to the height of 195 feet, and surmounted by a cross, the gift of the ladies of Carlow. On the E. side of the town is the Roman Catholic cathedral, a handsome structure in the form of a cross, and in the perpendicular style of architecture, with a lofty octagonal tower and elegant lanthorn, 150 feet high. It was completed in 1834, at a cost of £18,000, and forms one of the chief ornaments of the town. It contains a fine statue of Bishop Doyle, by Hogan. Near the cathedral is St. Patrick's College, which was founded about 1795, and subsequently enlarged so as to accommodate 200 students. It is under the management of a president, assisted by professors of theology, Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and modern languages, natural and moral philosophy, mathematics, &c., and is now, by royal charter, connected with the University of London. There are chapels belonging to the Presbyterians, Wesleyan Methodists, and the Society of Friends. The Roman Catholics have a chapel at Graigue. There are diocesan and parochial schools, one connected with the convent, and several connected with the Established Church. The town also contains an infirmary, a fever hospital, and a dispensary.—The ruins of the castle stand on an elevated spot on the E. bank of the Barrow, where the Burren falls into it, and consist of one side of the original structure, which formed a quadrangle of 105 feet, and two of the massive circular towers at the angles, 65 feet in height. The whole pile stood little decayed till 1814, when a foolish attempt being made to thin the walls and enlarge the windows by means of gunpowder, so as to fit it for a modern dwelling, great part of it was destroyed. An abbey and a friary formerly stood near Carlow. On the site of the former, called St. Kieran's Abbey, is Browne's Hill, the residence of R. C. Browne, Esq. Near Browne's Hill is a very large cromlech, the horizontal stone of which is 23 feet long and 19 broad. The other seats are Oak Park to the N., and Clogrenan to the S. of the town.—Carlow supports a weekly newspaper, called the Carlow Sentinel. The Earl of Portarlington takes from this place the title of viscount.—Monday and Thursday are the market days. Fairs are held on the 4th May, the 22nd June, the 26th August, and the 8th November.

CARLOW BARONY, one of the 7 bars. or subdivisions of the co. of Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, situated in the N.W. part of the co., and bounded on the N. by the co. of Kildare; on the E. by the bars. of Rathvilly and Forth; on the S. by the bar. of Idrone East; and on the W. by the bar. of Idrone West, and Queen's County. It contains the pars. of Ballinacarrig, Ballycrogue, Carlow, Clonmelsk, Grangeford, Killerig, and Urglin, with parts of the pars. of Cloydagle, Kellystown, Nurney, Painstown, and Tullowmagimma. The bar. extends over an area of about 31,300 acres.

CARLTON, a par. in the hund. of Willey, in the co. of Bedford, 1 mile from Harrold. Olney is its post town. It lies near the river Ouse. The living is a rect. consolidated with that of Chellington, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £370, in the patron. of Lord Dynevor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

CARLTON, a chplry. in the par. of Market Bosworth, hund. of Sparkenhoe, in the co. of Leicester, 1 mile to the N.W. of Market Bosworth. Hinckley is its post town. The Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal passes by it. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Market Bosworth, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

CARLTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Gedling, wap. of Thurgarton, in the co. of Nottingham, 3 miles to the E. of Nottingham, and 19 from Derby. It is a station on the Midland (east branch) railway. The manufacture of hosiery is carried on to a great extent in this village, and some hands are employed in lace-making. There are also several brick-fields and two corn-mills. The hmlt. forms part of the honour of Tutbury, in the duchy of Lancaster. The Wesleyan Methodists, Reformed Wesleyans, Baptists, and New Testament Disciples have chapels here. In the vicinity is Colwich Hall. Earl Manvers is lord of the manor, and holds a court-leet in October, but the greater part of the land belongs to the Earl of Chesterfield, who holds his court-leet in April.

CARLTON, a par. in the hund. of Hoxne, in the co. of Suffolk, close to Saxmundham, its post town, and near the East Suffolk railway, on which Saxmundham is a station. It was the site of a chantry founded about the middle of the 14th century. The living is a rect. consolidated with that of Kelsale, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Peter, and possesses two monumental brasses. The charitable endowments, consisting of the town estate and several bequests for the poor, produce about £60 per annum. The principal mansion is Carlton Hall.

CARLTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Aldbrough, wap. of Holderness, in the East Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the S. of Hornsea.

CARLTON, a par. in the western div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the S. of Stokesley, its post town. Large and important alum-works were once carried on at this place. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £56, in the patron. of C. Reeve, Esq. There is a chapel belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists. The parochial charities produce about £25 a year.

CARLTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Coverham, wap. of West Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the S.W. of Leyburn.

CARLTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Helmsley, wap. of Ryedale, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the N. of Helmsley.

CARLTON, a chplry. in the par. of Redmarshall, south-western div. of Stockton ward, in the co. of Durham, 4 miles W. of Stockton.

CARLTON, a chplry. in the par. of Snaith, Lower div. of the wap. of Barkstone-Ash, West Riding of the co. of York, 19 miles S. of York. It is situated near the river Aire and the Midland Counties railway.

CARLTON, a par. in the eastern div. of the wap. of Staincliff, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the S.W. of Skipton, its post town. It is situated on the river Aire, near the Skipton and Colne branch of the Midland railway, and contains the hmlt of Lothersdale. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £400, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Christ Church College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. An almshouse for 12 women was founded about 1700, by Ferrand Spence, which has a revenue from endowment of £280 per annum. A chapel and garden are attached to the almshouse. Here is also an endowed free school for boys, founded by Elizabeth Wilkinson in 1709, the income of which is £120 a year.

CARLTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Guiseley, wap. of Skyrack, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the S.E. of Otley.

CARLTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Rothwell, wap. of Agbrigg, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 4 miles to the N. of Wakefield. It is a joint tnshp. with Lofthouse, and the seat of a Poor-law incorporation.

CARLTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Roystone, wap. of Staincross, in the West Riding of the co. of York, 3 miles to the N. of Barnsley. The Barnsley canal passes by this place.

CARLTON, CASTLE, a par. in the Marsh div. of the hund. of Louth Eske, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 6 miles to the S.E. of Louth, its post town. It is situated on the Wolds, near the Boston and Grimsby section of the Great Northern railway, and was once a market town of some importance. Near the village stood a castle, the seat of the Bardolphs, the site of which is marked by several mounds. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £69, in the patron. of John Forster, Esq. The church is dedicated to the Holy Cross.

CARLTON-COLVILLE, a par. in the hund. of Mutford and Lothingland, in the co. of Suffolk, 3½ miles to the S.W. of Lowestoft, its post town, and 137 from London by rail, or 110 by road. It is pleasantly situated on a height near the sea-coast, on the S. side of the river Waveney, and is about 1½ mile from the Mutford station on the East Suffolk railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £345, in the patron. of W. Andrews, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Peter, and is an ancient edifice with square embattled tower and south porch. The organ was built by subscription in 1852. The old register was destroyed by fire, so that the earliest date is about 1715. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village, and a National school was erected in 1843. Sir Samuel Morton Peto, Bart., is lord of the manor.

CARLTON-CUM-WILLINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Radfield, in the co. of Cambridge, 8 miles to the S. of Newmarket, its post town, and 5 miles S.E. from the Six-mile Bottom and Dullingham stations, both on the Cambridge and Newmarket railway. It is situated in a beautiful country on the border of Suffolk. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, of the val. with the perpet. cur. of Willingham annexed, of £287, in the patron. of the trustees of the late Rev. W. S. P. Wilder. The church, which is a small ancient building, is dedicated to St. Peter, and contains a monument to Sir Thomas Elliott, who died in 1546. The parochial charities are of small value, and there is an infants' school with an endowment of £3 per annum. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here. Lord Dacre is lord of the manor.

CARLTON-CURLIEU, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, in the co. of Leicester, 9 miles to the S.E. of Leicester. Market Harborough is its post town. It is included in the duchy of Lancaster, and contains part of the chplry. of Illston-on-the-Hill. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £242, in the patron. of Sir J. H. Palmer, Bart. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains some old monuments. Carlton Curlieu Hall, the old manor-house and seat of the Palmers, stands on high ground, and is built of stone in the Elizabethan style.

CARLTON, EAST, or ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard, in the co. of Norfolk, 2 miles N.W. of Swainthorpe railway station, and 5 miles to the S.W. of Norwich, its post town. It lies near the Great Eastern and Norfolk railway, and comprises the two pars. of St. Mary and St. Peter, which are now united for parochial, but separate for ecclesiastical, purposes. The living of St. Mary is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £176, in the patron. of the Norwich Charity Trustees, who are lords of the manor. That of St. Peter is a sinecure rect., val. £188, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church of St. Peter has been in decay since 1550. That of St. Mary is a neat building, with a low tower and wooden spire.

CARLTON, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Corby, in the co. of Northampton, 3 miles to the S.W. of Rockingham, its post town. It lies near the border of Leicestershire. The Stamford and Rugby branch of the London and North-Western railway passes near the village, and has a station at Rockingham. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £108, in the patron. of Sir J. H. Palmer, Bart. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a modern structure, and has a tower. There are some endowed almshouses in the village. Carlton House is a seat of Sir J. H. Palmer, who is lord of the manor.

CARLTON, GREAT, a par. in the Marsh div. of the hund. of Louth Eske, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 6 miles to the S.E. of Louth, its post town. It is on the E. side of the Wolds. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £509, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. There are in the village a chapel belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists, and an endowed free school founded by Sir Edward Smith, Bart., in 1716, the income of which is about £25 per annum.

CARLTON-HIGHDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Coverham, wap. of West Hang, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 6 miles to the S. of Leyburn. It is situated in the moors, and contains the chplry. of Horsehouse, and several hmlts.

CARLTON-HUSTHWAITE, a chplry. in the par. of Husthwaite, wap. of Birdforth, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 5 miles to the N. of Easingwold.

CARLTON-IN-LINDRICK, a par. in the Hatfield div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, in the co. of Nottingham, 3 miles to the N. of Worksop, its post town. It is situated on the border of Yorkshire, near the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway, and comprises the tnshps. of North Carlton and South Carlton. This is a very ancient village, and was a place of some importance before the Norman Conquest. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, of the annual val. of £576, in the patron. of the Archbishop of York. The church, a spacious building, partly in the Norman style, with a lofty square tower, is dedicated to St. John. The Wesleyans have a chapel at North Carlton. There are charitable endowments for the poor worth £6 a year. Carlton Hall is the residence of Robert Ramsden, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

CARLTON-ISLEBECK. See CARLTON-MINIOTT, Yorkshire.

CARLTON-LE-MOORLAND, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Boothby-Graffo, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 7 miles to the E. of Newark, its post town. It is situated near the border of Nottingham, between the river Witham and its tributary the Brant. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. with the vic. of Stapleford annexed, £158, in the patron. of Lord Middleton. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a chapel belonging to the Baptists. The charitable endowments for the poor are worth £10 a year.

CARLTON, LITTLE, a par. in the Marsh div. of the hund. of Louth Eske, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 5 miles to the S.E. of Louth, its post town. It is close to Great Carlton, and not far from the Great Northern railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £159, in the patron. of John Forster, Esq. The church is dedicated to St. Edith.

CARLTON, LITTLE, or CARLTON, SOUTH, a hmlt. in the par. of South Muskham, wap. of Thurgarton, in the co. of Nottingham, 3 miles to the N.W. of Newark. It is seated on the W. bank of the river Trent, near the Great Northern railway.

CARLTON-MINIOTT, or CARLTON-ISLEBECK, a chplry. in the par. of Thirsk, and wap. of Birdforth, in the North Riding of the co. of York, 2 miles to the W. of Thirsk, its post town. It is situated near the North-Eastern railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £125, in the patron. of the archbishop.

CARLTON, NORTH, a par. in the wap. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 4 miles to the N. of Lincoln. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £35, in the patron. of the lessee. The poor children of this parish share in the benefit of the free school in the neighbouring village of Burton-by-Lincoln.

CARLTON-ON-TRENT, a vil. and chplry. in the par. of Norwell, wap. of Thurgarton, in the co. of Nottingham, 6 miles to the N. of Newark, its post town. It is situated on the W. bank of the river Trent, on the Great North Road, and is a station on the Great Northern railway. There is a ferry over the Trent near the village. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Norwell, in the dioc. of Lincoln. About ten years ago a handsome new church, in the early English style, containing 250 sittings, half of which are free, was erected here on the site of the old chapel. It has a lofty spire at the W. end and several painted windows. Carlton House is the residence of John Vere, Esq., who is lord of the manor and chief landholder.

CARLTON-RODE, a par. and scattered vil. in the hund. of Depwade, in the co. of Norfolk, 2 miles to the N.E. of New Buckenham, 4 miles N.W. of Tivetshall railway station, and 14 S.S.W. of Norwich. Attleburgh is its post town. The affix to the name of this village has been explained as referring either to an ancient lord of the manor, Walter de Rode, or to a rood or cross that formerly stood by the wayside. By an ancient custom of the manor the lord had to furnish the king at the beginning of the herring season with a hundred herrings in twenty-four pies, Yarmouth being under the obligation to supply them. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £850, in the patron. of Sir R. I. Buxton, Bart. The church, which was repaired early in the 18th century, is dedicated to All Saints, and is a neat building with a thatched roof and tower. The Baptists have a chapel in the village, and there are a National school and charitable endowments for the poor, producing about £70 per annum. Some ancient British implements were found here in 1844.

CARLTON-SCROOP, a par. in the wap. of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, in the co. of Lincoln, 6 miles to the N. of Grantham, its post town. It lies near the river Witham. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £386, in the patron. of Earl Brownlow, Sir R. Bromley, and G. White, Esq., alternately. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The parochial charities amount to about £12 per annum.

CARLTON, SOUTH, a par. in the wap. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, in the co. of Lincoln, 3 miles to the N. of Lincoln, its post town. Here was formerly a seat of the Monson family, one of whom was Sir W. Monson, an admiral in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £200, in the patron. of the bishop. In the village is a free school, established and endowed by the Monsons.

CARLTON, SOUTH. See CARLTON, LITTLE, Nottinghamshire.

CARLUKE, a par., with a post town of the same name, in the upper ward of the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It is a station on the Caledonian railway. The par. is situated in a hilly but cultivated country on the N.E. bank of the river Clyde, and contains the vils. of Braidwood and Kilcadgow. The name of this place is formed from "car" signifying castle, and "Luke" the name of the evangelist to whom the old church was dedicated. The town of Carluke is a burgh of barony, and was given by Robert I. to the monks of Kelso. The district is rich in coal, limestone, and ironstone, all of excellent quality. About a mile from the town are the extensive works of the Shotts Iron Company, which were established about 1836. Some of the workpeople are employed in the cotton manufacture; but the chief business of the place is connected with the mines. Along the banks of the Clyde are extensive orchards long famed for the abundance and excellence of their apples and pears. There are two flour-mills worked by steam. The town has considerably increased during the present century, and now contains many handsome buildings, and is lighted with gas. The living, worth £232, is in the presb. of Lanark, and in the patron. of Sir M. N. Lockhart, Bart. The church is not of ancient date, having been built in place of the old church, which fell into decay before the Reformation. There are in the town a Free church; chapels belonging to the Original Seceders, United Presbyterians, Congregationalists, and Roman Catholics; parochial and other schools, and a savings-bank. Carluke was the birthplace of Major-General Roy, a distinguished mathematician and antiquary. The neighbourhood has some beautiful scenery, and many seats of the gentry adorn the banks of the Clyde. Traces of Watling Street, which crossed the parish, still remain, and many Roman relics have been found. Cairns exist on the hills. The par. is about 7 miles long and 4 broad.

CARMARTHEN, or CAERMARTHEN, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough forming a county of itself, but locally in the hunds. of Elvet and Derllys, in the co. of Carmarthen, South Wales, 218 miles to the W. of London, or 245 miles by railway. It is a station on the South Wales railway which meets the Great Western at Gloucester. A town has existed on this spot from a very remote period, as was called by the Welsh Caer-fyrddin, and by the Romans Maridunum. It was the point of meeting of the two great roads called the Via Julia Maritima and the Via Julia Montana, and traces of Roman camps and various Roman antiquities have been found. Under the rule of the native princes it was the chief town of South Wales and the seat of the prince till near the close of the 9th century, when the seat of government was transferred to Dynevor. The castle was erected by the Norman lords, and became the object of endless contention and struggles both between the native princes themselves and between them and the Normans. In 1113 the castle was besieged and captured by the Welsh under Gruffyd ab Rhys, the prince to whom Henry I. soon after ceded the greater part of the kingdom or principality of Dynevor. The Welsh again seized it about 1140. After repeated changes of possession it was taken by the Earl of Pembroke in 1223, and remained in possession of the English till the great insurrection, under Owain Glyndwr, when it fell into the hands of the French supporters. During the civil war of the 17th century it was first held for the king, but was taken by order of the parliament, and soon after dismantled. Carmarthen stands on very hilly and irregular ground on the N. bank of the river Towy, about 9 miles above its mouth. The river, which is navigable to this place, is crossed by a bridge of seven arches, over which the Swansea road passes. The scenery of the neighbourhood is remarkably beautiful, and the aspect of the town is pleasing and picturesque. There are several good streets, but the old part of the town is irregularly built and the streets narrow. They are mostly paved and lighted with gas. In the middle of the town is the guildhall, a modern structure supported on columns, the lower part serving as a market-house. There is a market-pla outside the town. The county gaol stands on part of the site of the old castle; and in the parish of Llanllwch is a lunatic asylum erected in 1863, on a grand scale, for the counties of Carmarthen, Cardigan, and Pembroke. There are a custom-house, gas-works, water-works, and a fish-market. Carmarthen is the seat of a thriving trade, chiefly in connection with the port, which is subordinate to the port of Llanelly. Vessels of 150 tons burthen can approach the quay. They are for the most part engaged in the coasting trade, timber, slates, marble, lead ore, oats, and some provisions being exported. The salmon fishery is carried on to a great extent, and with considerable profit. The primitive light boat called the coracle is still in use among the fishermen on the Towy as well as on the Teify. Shipbuilding employs some of the inhabitants. In the vicinity are tin-works and iron foundries.—The town was incorporated by a charter of Henry VIII. Under the Municipal Act the borough is divided into wards, and the corporation consists of a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, bearing the style of the "mayor, burgesses, and commonalty of the town and borough of Carmarthen." With the contributory borough of Llanelly it returns one member to the imperial parliament. The revenue of the corporation is about £1,900 per annum. Carmarthen is the seat of a Poor-law Union, the head of a County Court district, the chief place for the county election, and the headquarters of the Carmarthenshire militia. The assizes and quarter sessions are held here, except at Midsummer, when the latter are held at Llandeilovawr. Two weekly newspapers, called the Welshman and the Carmarthen Journal, are published here.—Carmarthen is the head of an archdeac. and a deanery in the dioc. of St. David's. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, of the val. of £130, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. It is a very ancient building in the early English style, with a square tower, but has been disfigured by modern alterations. It is said to have been of the form of a cross, but there is now no transept on the N. side. Although in the middle of the present town, this church stood outside the old walls. It contains several very interesting old monuments, foremost among which is the altar-tomb, with recumbent effigies of Sir Rhys ab Thomas and his lady. Sir Rhys was made a knight of the Garter on Bosworth Field, in recognition of his services to the Earl of Richmond (Henry VII). Here are also monuments to Lady Vaughan and the Scurlock family, and the grave of Sir Richard Steele, who married a Scurlock and died in this town. There are two district churches. The living of Llanllwch is a perpet. cur., val. £120, in the gift of the Bishop of St. David's; and that of St. David's is a perpet. cur.,* val. £190, in the gift of the Vicar of Carmarthen. There are two chapels belonging to the Independents, two to the Baptists, two each to the Wesleyan and Calvinistic Methodists, and one to the Unitarians. Carmarthen has several important educational establishments. The grammar school was founded and endowed by Dr. Morgan Owen, Bishop of Llandaff, about the middle of the 17th century. It has an income of £20 a year, and an exhibition at Cambridge University, besides the preference to two exhibitions at Oxford, open to the county. The Presbyterian College is for the education and training of young men for the ministry. In 1847 was founded here the South Wales Diocesan Training School for 60 pupils. The buildings, which comprise dwellings for the masters and scholars, chapel, lecture-rooms, &c., occupy 10 acres of ground, and have a handsome front in the Gothic style. There are National, British, infant, and other schools, and a literary institution. Almshouses for six aged men were founded in 1687 by Charles Powell; and a hospital, or almshouse, in St. Peter's-street, has an endowment of £25 per annum, the gift of Sir Rice Rudd, Bart., about 1640. The charitable endowments of the parish are worth about £180 per annum.—The remains of antiquity in Carmarthen consist of portions of the old town walls, and some inconsiderable remains of the castle, of St. Mary's church, of the priory of St. John, and of the Grey Friary, the latter of which was a cell to the abbey of St. Augustine, Bristol. The famous enchanter, Merlin, is said to have been a native of Carmarthen or its neighbourhood. This town was the birthplace of Dr. Bailey, Bishop of Bangor, General Sir Thomas Picton, and General Lord Nott. There is a monument to Picton on a hill near the town.—An Eistedfodd, or "Assembly of the Bards," was held at Carmarthen in 1450. The town was several times visited by the plague during the first half of the 17th century. The drainage and water-supply of the town are reported to be seriously defective. Carmarthen gives the title of marquis to the Osbornes, dukes of Leeds.—Saturday is the market day. Fairs are held on the 12th March, the 16th May, the 12th August, the 20th September, and the 5th December, chiefly for the sale of cattle. The par. extends about 5 miles in length and 4 in breadth.

CARMARTHENSHIRE, a maritime co. of South Wales, bounded on the N. by Cardiganshire, on the E. by Brecknockshire, on the S. by the Bristol Channel, and on the W. by Pembrokeshire. It extends in length from N.E. to S.W. about 50 miles, and its greatest breadth is about 33 miles. It has a coast line of 35 miles. The entire circuit of the co. is about 160 miles, being the largest co. in the principality. It has an area of 972 square miles, or 606,331 acres. It is situated between 51° 4′ and 52° 8′ N. lat., and between 3° 4′ and 4° 50′ W. long.—Under the Roman dominion this county formed part of that division of the island called Britannia Secunda, and was occupied, like the neighbouring counties of Pembroke and Cardigan, by the tribe named Demetæ. The Romans constructed several military roads across it, the principal of which were the Via Julia Maritima and the Via Julia Montana. After the withdrawal of the Romans, this county, with Cardigan and other parts of South Wales, formed the territory of Caredigion (Cardigan), and with the rest of Wales fell under the dominion of Rhodri Mawr (Roderick the Great), in the 9th century. On his death this district fell to the lot of his son Cadell, who had his palace and seat of government at Dynevor. Disputes and armed conflicts occurred between him and his brothers, and the country was ravaged by war. The successor of Cadell, in 907, in the sovereignty of South Wales was the illustrious Hywel Dda (Hywel the Good), who obtained afterwards the sovereignty of North Wales, and compiled the celebrated code which bears his name, and remained in force for centuries. Partitions and bloody contests followed the death of Hywel, and before the close of the century the district was invaded and wasted by the Danes. In 1015 Llewellyn, by the defeat of Aedan, made himself master of both North and South Wales. His position was strengthened by another victory obtained five years later over Rhun, a Scottish adventurer, at Abergwili. Llewellyn fell in a battle fought near Carmarthen the following year (1021), in which, however, his rivals, and the Irish and Scotch forces supporting them, were defeated. From that time to the close of the 11th century, the same tale is repeated of ambitious princes, rivalries, contentions, and arbitrament of the sword. The Normans made their appearance in South Wales about 1080, when the native princes did homage to the Conqueror. After a few years the ancient kingdom of Dynevor began to decline, till it comprehended no more than Cardiganshire and Carmarthenshire. Norman castles were founded, and a new series of troubles and conflicts began. For a few years Henry I. held the sovereignty of South Wales. It was claimed by Gruffydd ab Rhys, and after the unsuccessful but harassing struggles of several years, the king made peace with this prince, about 1120, and gave up to him the greater part of Dynevor. A century and a half had yet to elapse before these petty wars of prince with prince, and of both with Norman lords, were brought to a close by the complete subjugation of the principality by Edward I. After that event, and the passing of the Statutes of Rhuddlan for the future government of Wales, Carmarthen was made the seat of the courts of law. A revolt was headed

